GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE.

A Large Congregation at Grace Church Last Night.

A large congregation was present last night at the Good Friday services in Grace church. After the singing of a hymn and responsive reading, the services concluded with "Meditations on Words from the Cross.

First Word—"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."..... Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D

Second Word—"Verily, I say unto thee, to-day shalt thou be with me in paradise."..... Rev. E. M. Scudder

Third Word—"Behold thy son, behold thy mother!"..... Rev. C. L. Goodrich

Fourth Word—"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"..... Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, D.D.

Fifth Word—"I thirst."..... Rev. J. W. Richardson

Sixth Word—"It is finished."..... Rev. J. W. Schenck

Seventh Word—"Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit"..... Rev. C. E. Herring

His Trip Postponed.

Michael O'Neil came to Plainfield from Bound Brook yesterday on his way to Springfield. He was compelled to wait until this morning to resume his journey, when he only went as far as Elizabeth, where he will rest for thirty days before starting for his destination. This change in his programme was brought about by his imbibing too freely while here yesterday, resulting in his being locked up by Officer Gorse, and owing to the decision of Judge Coddington this morning.

Gwynett's Goods in the Sheriff's Possession.

Deputy Sheriff Amos Moffett yesterday served a writ of replevin on Mr. J. M. C. Marsh, at Westfield, who held the attached Gwynett goods. Marsh must now turn the goods over to Sheriff Hicks of Elizabeth. Four attachments were issued by Justice Nash against Gwynett.

Bowden's Goods Released.

Mr. Bowden, whose goods were attached yesterday, by Constable Moffett, for debt, gave security to-day for the money, and his goods were released.

More Talk of Enjoining the Trolley.

There is considerable talk among residents along Somerset street about applying to the courts for an injunction against having the proposed trolley street railway run through that thoroughfare.

One prominent citizen expressed himself very freely on the subject this morning.

Said he: "Just look at the condition of Front street since the trolley has monopolized it. The company agreed to keep the tracks in proper repair alongside the tracks. Instead of doing so, it is full of hollows, so that some wheel of a conveyance is almost sure to get caught, and the wheel wrenched off. Look at the long list of vehicles that have had wheels broken in this way, yet the company does nothing to remedy the difficulty.

"Now they want to come on Somerset street, along which probably ten heavily loaded vehicles run for every one on Front street. Over sixteen hundred vehicles have passed a given point on Somerset street in a single day by actual count.

"The company proposes to lay a different kind of track on Somerset street to avoid wrenching off wheels, but no guarantee is given to keep the street free of holes and ruts which are sure to form alongside of the track.

"Somerset street is the only road from the farming country west of Plainfield, from which there is considerable traffic and country trade, and this the railway will be almost certain to injure if not drive away.

"Besides it will not be so good for the road. If it went in one direction through the proposed new street, and then down, say Grove street, it would reach more people, make more money and do some good. But if residents must walk even a few blocks to Somerset street, to get the cars, they will prefer to walk the remaining short distance to the depot."

Made him Get a License.

A junkman from Berkley Heights was arrested in the borough this morning, by Marshal Pangborn, for doing business without a license. He was given the choice of paying a $20.00 fine or taking out a $1.50 license for the day. He chose the latter.

Grace Church Election.

The parish meeting of the congregation of Grace church, to elect wardens, vestrymen and delegates to the convention and convocation, will be held in the church Monday night, after the evening prayer service.

THE DUCKWORTH CHILDREN.

The Matter of Guardianship Still in the Courts.

Chancellor McGill heard testimony at Jersey City, Thursday, in the contest for the guardianship of Alfred John and Lilly Duckworth, children of John Duckwork, who died in this city in January, 1891. Duckworth was a Protestant and his wife a Catholic. The first and third child were baptized in the Catholic Church with their father's consent and in his presence. The second was not baptized because the mother was very sick for a long time.

It will be remembered that Mrs. Mary Ann Keating, of Elizabeth, the children's aunt on their mother's side, made application to be appointed their guardian, and Mrs. Emma Cosner, their father's sister, made a similar application. The question whether the children shall be brought up as Catholics or Protestants is at the bottom of the controversy. Mrs. Keating says she is entitled to the guardianship because the children were baptized and brought up in the Roman Catholic faith with the knowledge and consent of their father.

The testimony of several witnesses was produced in behalf of Mrs. Cosner to show that after his wife's death Mr. Duckworth was heard to say that he wanted his sister to take care of the children. The chancellor reserved decision.

BREVITIES.

—All Fools' Day.

—To-night a song service will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

—The Saturday half-holiday at Pond Machine Tool Works began to-day.

—The mountain fires last night looked, at a distance, like long snakes of fire.

—Wednesday afternoon the Ladies' Cycle Club will meet in the Bi-Club house.

—The next meeting of the New Jersey Trap Shooters' League will be held in this city.

—The forty hours' devotion will commence to-morrow in the Roman Catholic churches.

—Four "pale faces" were adopted last night by Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M.

—The petit jurors for the May term of the Union county courts will be drawn next Tuesday.

—The rails for the Somerset street railway have arrived and are being laid along that thoroughfare.

—The civil suit of Hetfield vs. Kiloran, landlord and tenant, is returnable in Justice Nash's court Thursday, April 6th.

—Special Easter services will be held in St. Mary's church to-morrow. In the evening the Rev. Father O'Connor will officiate.

—The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club will be held on Tuesday evening, April 4th, at eight p. m.

—There was a very large attendance at the union services in Grace Church last evening. Most of the city pastors took part in the services.

—The store on Park avenue recently vacated by M. C. M. Fire has been rented by Mr. M. C. Dobbins the North avenue tobacconist, who took possession to-day.

—The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal church expects to hold its anniversary on Wednesday evening, April 12. Mrs. Clinton B. Fisk will be the speaker.

—The Essex-Hudson Light and Heat Co., was incorporated at Trenton, recently, the capital being $3,000,000. The object of the corporation is the absorption of gas and electric plants.

—One of A. M. Griffen's tinners, residing in the borough, moved yesterday afternoon, and last night, returning home from his work, he deliberately walked to the vacated house. He had forgotten the change.

—A petition is being circulated and signed by the residents of Greenbrook road, for the improvement of that thoroughfare, between Grove and Somerset streets. It will be presented to the new Council at their next meeting.

—A petition has been issued by Mrs. J. H. Knowles, secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society for the Newark Conference, of which Plainfield forms a part. It states that there are "at least three hundred millions of women in the world who have never yet heard the name of Jesus" Aid is asked for to send missionaries to teach the heathen Christianity.

—Plainfielders made good scores in the second tournament of the New Jersey Trap Shooters' league, Thursday, at Maplewood. Neaf Apgar scored 23 and Thomas Kellar 20 on the Boiling Springs team, while Charles Smith scored 21 for the Unions. The score of the Independent Gun club of this city was: A. Soper, 16; R. Manning, 18; R. H. Rushton, 13; T. Brantingham, 24; D. Terry, 20. Total, 69.

The Two Johns.

The farcical scenes of "The Two Johns" furnished a great deal of merriment at the Grand Opera house. One might suppose that this piece, having long since ceased to be a novelty, had lost its hold upon theatre-goers, but the reception accorded it yesterday was calculated to upset any theory of that kind. The public likes to be amused, and, the distinctively critical among an audience will always find "The Two Johns" all that can be desired, there are many persons, nevertheless, to whom such a production appeals much more forcibly than would the finest high comedy.—Public Ledger. Next Wednesday night the "Two Johns" will be at Music Hall.

A New Postmaster.

One of the first fourth-class postmasters appointed under the new administration is Charles C. Ackens, of Liberty Corner. Chas. Conckling, an ex-Chosen Freeholder, was also a candidate for the place, but Ackens got the start of him. Henry DeMott, the former postmaster, resigned some time ago to North Plainfield, leaving the office in Ackens's care.—Chronicle.

THE CAUSE OF THE COLLAPSE.

There were Only Three Walls to the Old Stable.

The collapse of the brick building, formerly used as a stable for Engine Company No. 1, houses, was due to the sinking into the soft earth of the timber under one corner of it. It was being moved to a rear lot. It was half of the original building, therefore there were only three walls to hold it together. The moment one corner sank the whole structure collapsed.

Men were working around it at the time, but they were alarmed by a shout of warning from a mason at work on the new building.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Walt Whitman and Lincoln.

A year ago, on the 26th of March, 1892, Walt Whitman died. It will be observed by those who note such things that he went from life near the same time of year when, in 1865, President Lincoln was assassinated. That assassination Whitman witnessed with his own eyes and never recovered from the horror of it. He loved Lincoln probably more than he ever did any other human being except his mother. He seems to have comprehended with a poet's intuition the greatness of Lincoln's character before the rest of the world understood it.

Of the scene in the theater he wrote that it "transpired with the quietness and simplicity of an everyday occurrence. The confusion, the terror, noise and despair came later, and of this Whitman writes, "In the midst of it the lifeblood from those veins, the best and sweetest in the land, dripped slowly down." After Walt had in some measure recovered his calm he wrote the poem about Lincoln which he named "Captain, My Captain." Whatever views critics and readers may entertain about Whitman's other poetic productions, there is only one judgment of high appreciation for this one.

Whitman said that all the portraits he had seen of Lincoln were failures, most of them caricatures. "Of technical beauty the countenance had nothing, but to the eye of a master painter it furnished a rare study, a feast and a fascination." He studied Lincoln's face and said once, "When he bows and smiles, I notice in his eyes the latent sadness that is always there." Our readers will like to read again the poem, "Captain, My Captain!"

O captain! my captain! our fearful trip is done;
The ship has weathered every rack, the prize we sought is won;
The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,
While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring.
But, O heart! heart! heart!
O the bleeding drops of red,
Where on the deck my captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead!

O captain! my captain! rise up and hear the bells;
Rise up—for you the flag is flung, for you the bugle trills;
For you bouquets and ribboned wreaths, for you the shores a-crowding;
For you they call, the swaying mass, the eager faces turning;
Here, captain! dear father!
This arm beneath your head;
It is some dream that on the deck
You've fallen cold and dead.

My captain does not answer; his lips are pale and still;
My father does not feel my arm; he has nor pulse nor will;
The ship is anchored safe and sound, its voyage closed and done;
From fearful trip the victor ship comes in with object won.
Exult, O shores, and ring, O bells!
But I, with mournful tread,
Walk the deck where my captain lies
Fallen cold and dead.

St. Joan.

French Catholics rejoice that Pope Leo has resolved to signalize his jubilee year by the beatification of Joan of Arc. But this will not be equivalent to making a saint of the Maid of Domremy. The process will be completed only by the canonization of the Maid. The beatification is the second step toward sainthip. It must be proved clearly that besides the requisites of a saintly life and religious devotion, the candidate for beatification must have performed at least two miracles. If after ceremonial investigation into the minutest particulars of the candidate's life he or she is pronounced worthy, the candidate is then declared beatified, or in the state of blessedness. The investigation before the beatification extends over a number of years. The honor itself cannot now be conferred before the person has been dead at least 50 years.

After beatification comes canonization. Preparatory to this are other ceremonial tests and trials in which what is called in church parlance the devil's advocate appears to recount all the evil deeds that can be traced to the candidate. It must be proved, too, that since his or her beatification the candidate has performed at least two additional miracles by intercession. If all is satisfactory, the canonization then takes place, and the name of the candidate is formally placed in the list of saints of the church.

Joan of Arc, when she finally attains canonization, ought to stand as the patron saint of the French republic, since she is the one who makes France an independent nation. She should also be the saint of all ladies who go in for the emancipation of woman.

"Any degree of success may be attained here by men of enterprising character and of dauntless determination to achieve their purpose," said Delcommune, director of the society of the Upper Congo. Delcommune was a picturesque and fascinating character. He developed the trade of the Upper Congo. He launched nearly all of the 14 steamers and established every one of the trading posts where they made landings. He achieved remarkable financial success personally for so young a man. He was only 31 when he died. He had perfect faith in the great future of the Upper Congo and said once, "The trade that can be developed in the Upper Congo is almost incalculable." To an enthusiasm that seemed all flame and fire he added an energy that never tired or rested. Perhaps that was what made him die so young.

TROUBLES AT THE FAIR

The Eskimos Said to Be Kept as Prisoners.

TORTURED IN HEAVY SEALSKINS

The Company Which Brought Them to the Fair Sued for Damages—The Dedication of the Picturesque Ho-Oden of the Japanese—A Railroad Accident Damages Exhibits.

CHICAGO, April 1.—Trouble threatens to disrupt the Eskimo village at the World's Fair. Peter Meiner, who represents at least five of the Eskimos in the village, has made application in the circuit court for a writ of habeas corpus to release certain residents of the village, who allege that they are being detained against their will and are not being well treated.

Some time ago one of the Icelanders named Zacharis was arraigned before Magistrate Porter, charged with assaulting an official of the Eskimo Village company. Superintendent Daniels of the Village company wanted Zacharis locked up for three weeks, but this the magistrate refused to order.

Since then the Eskimos have made the magistrate their confidant. The result is that he made an investigation. As a consequence he will soon begin suit in the United States court here on behalf of certain Eskimo families seeking heavy damages from the company that brought these people to this country.

Furs Too Warm For Summer.

"It is an outrage the way these poor men have been treated," said the magistrate. "The whole trouble grows out of refusal of certain of these Eskimos to wear their heavy sealskin fur clothing on warm days. Some days ago one of the guards, a fellow known as Tom Deer, escaped from the village and ran away, claiming that he was badly treated and did not get enough to eat. He secured work as a carpenter on one of the buildings and is now so employed.

"One of the chief causes of Deers' complaint is that he was compelled to wear his heavy furs on warm days. In the meantime the dissatisfaction was spreading. On the 16th of February two brothers, Tom and Peter Pallocier, came out of their huts attired in duck and jean goods, leaving their fur habitments behind them. Daniels ordered them to don the latter. They promptly refused. Then he ordered them back into their huts and told them to stay there until they could obey his orders. Daniels told the Columbian guards who were on watch in the village to see that the disobedient men did not come out until they were attired in their furs. The Columbian guards obeyed orders until I saw Colonel Rice and told him that the action of his guards would involve the exposition company in a suit for damages that might be instituted. Accordingly Rice had the guards take away. Since then a big 6-footer named Meyers has been on guard and kept the men in the house.

"The poor Eskimos are virtually in jail and have been kept prisoners for weeks all because they would not wear furs on warm days.

"But this is not all. On March 1 Jonos Pallocier and John Lutz refused to wear their sealskins on account of the weather being so warm. Peter is down with a violent case of the measles and is a very sick man indeed. I believe illness is mainly due to his being locked up in that close, stuffy hut. I propose to see that they get justice."

Mr. Porter says that the contract with these people, which was made on foreign shores, is illegal. The contract is one for common labor and provides that for the entire three years the Eskimos are under contract. Each head of a family is to receive $100 in cash and $100 worth of supplies.

Mr. Daniels of the Eskimo company denies the stories of ill treatment and says none of his charges has been locked up.

Japan's picturesque ho-oden was dedicated to the World's Columbian exposition. The quaint Japanese ceremony was followed from beginning to end. Nearly all the World's fair people were present, including Director General Davis and his staff, the chiefs of departments and Director of Works Burnham and his lieutenants. The ho-oden is a tripple summer house to represent the body and wings of the phenix bird. This costly edifice, made of woods brought from Japan, now becomes a permanent attraction in Jackson park.

Dancing girls from the sultan of Solo, a huge orang outang, yelling and howling in fear in his wooden prison and five carloads of terrified Javanese were in a collision at Mongona, a little station just west of Boone, Ia. There were two serious injuries.

No Passover Wines In Boston.

BOSTON, April 1.—The Jews cannot have their wines in time for the celebration of the Passover. Such is Judge Ely's decision, as he could find no authority to order the wines returned before May, when the warrant is made returnable.

An Old Family Feud.

LAMONT, Ills., April 1.—Seth J. C. Luther filed a suit against John Elsey for $75,000 for damages for false imprisonment. Luther and Elsey are brothers-in-law and each over 70 years old. The suit is the outcome of a family feud of long standing.

Probably Fatal Fight of Boys.

PATERSON, N. J., April 1.—James Rose, a bootblack, 13 years of age, and William Nogel, a baker's helper of the same age, quarreled. Nogel fractured the bootblack's skull with a club, and he is in a dying condition.

Fire Wiped Out a Town.

GALENA, Md., April 1.—About 200 houses were totally destroyed and several persons severely burned while fighting a fire here. No lives were lost.

Grip Victim Kills Himself.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., April 1.—John Scanlon dropped dead in his bathtub while insane from grip.

CONSPIRACY UNDER MORTON LAW.

The Prompt Action of the Government Stops It In Bud a Revolution.

PANAMA, April 1.—A conspiracy to bring about a revolution was discovered in Costa Rica on March 27 and was suppressed. It appears that the conspirators planned to make an attack upon the treasury, or quarters where were the military stores, and with the arms and ammunition found there equip the enemies of the government and inaugurate a general revolution. The leader in the conspiracy was Gutierrez, who recently returned from exile.

The authorities were fully aware of the intentions of the rebels. The conspirators made their attack on the quartel and secured the arms and ammunition. At this time they were taken by surprise by the government troops and captured. In order to prevent any further disturbance the country was placed under martial law.

ATTEMPT AT TRAIN WRECKING.

The True Heroism of a Laborer Saved Many Lives.

PORTLAND, Or., April 1.—An attempt was made to wreck the new through passenger train on the Southern Pacific road. A rail was found missing from the track by George Richardson, a laborer. Five men suddenly attacked Richardson and overpowering him bound him securely. They then pushed him off the bridge 25 feet below, where he lay unconscious for over an hour. He crawled out of the gulch and made his way slowly down the track where he met the overland train and stopped it. The passengers made up a purse of $100 for him. Many think the object was purposes other not robbery, but revenge on the railroad company for the discharge of white section hands and the employing of Japanese.

Did Shepard Have Bright's Disease?

NEW YORK, April 1.—Concerning the mysterious death of Colonel Elliott F. Shepard, it is claimed that he had symptoms of Bright's disease. It is said that during the spring of 1890 Colonel Shepard endeavored to borrow $100,000 of Hilt Ireland, and that the examination by the physicians resulted in the discovery of almost certain indications of the disease. One insurance company found no such indications, and he obtained a policy for $100,000.

Prison Officials Censured.

JACKSON, Mich., April 1.—The testimony in the inquest upon the death of George W. Haight, night gatekeeper, at the prison Monday morning, was concluded at 11 a. m. The jury was out until 1 p. m. The jury's verdict is that George W. Haight came to his death by prussic acid at the hands of B. Irving Latimer. The jury censure G. Major Talbot, clerk, and Night Captain Morris F. Gill.

Asked Time to Pray.

CHICAGO, April 1.—While Robert Gedney of Philadelphia and George Doyle of Chicago were viewing the city from the roof of the Great Northern hotel, Gedney became suddenly insane and attempted to throw his companion to the ground, 250 feet below. Doyle saved his life by asking for time to pray. This the maniac granted, and as he stepped back Doyle made a dash for the scuttle and darted down stairs.

The Impeachment Bogus.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 1.—The joint convention of the legislature, by a vote of 127 to 4, adopted the resolution of impeachment against Attorney General Hastings, Secretary of State Allen, Commissioner Humphrey and ex-Treasurer Hill. A committee was appointed to draft articles of impeachment and prosecute them before the supreme court.

Litigation Over a Child.

BUFFALO, April 1.—Little 6-year-old Adelina Patti Galliano in the supreme court, with childish innocence and interest, watched the legal fighting of a struggle between her parents for possession of her. Justice Green granted an order turning the child over to matron Mrs. Anna Gordon to be cared for till Monday.

Sentenced to Forty Years.

CHICAGO, April 1.—William Blunck, aged 14, and Thomas Luvienne, aged 15, were sentenced to 40 years in the penitentiary for murder. The crime was committed on the night of May 15, 1892, when the youthful criminals shot Albert Eckroth through the heart and robbed the body of a watch.

Rolling Stock Burned.

KEITHSBURG, Ills., April 1.—Fire destroyed the Central Iowa depot, dispatcher's office, roundhouse and pumping works, together with three locomotives, two stationary engines, several freight cars, pile drivers and derricks and a large quantity of material and supplies. Loss, $50,000.

Drafted the President's Son.

Troops Ordered to Preserve Peace In the Cherokee Nation—An Offensive Partisan Pointed Out—No Excuses to Be Allowed on the Cherokee Strip.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Colonel R. J. Murphy, whose enthusiastic efforts as the agent of the United States to introduce corn foods into northern Europe has made him known all over the country as the "Cornmeal Murphy," has been ordered to return to the United States by Secretary Morton for the purpose of a conference between the secretary and Colonel Murphy in order that the former may learn fully what has been done, and may go over the programme for the future with our agent. It is unlikely that Secretary Morton will cease to continue the efforts begun by Secretary Rusk, but it is regarded as more likely that there will be an extension of the efforts and that other articles will be brought to the attention of the people of Europe. Colonel Murphy is now at Copenhagen.

Troops Ordered to Austere.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The Indian office thinks there is occasion for alarm over the situation in the Chocton country and fears further bloodshed. As a result it is stated a conflict was decided on, and after a conference between Secretaries Smith and Lamont the general of the army directed the commander of the troops nearest the scene of threatened trouble to ascertain at once the true status of affairs and do whatever in his judgment was best to preserve the peace.

An "Offensive Partisan" Editor.

Representative Meredith of Virginia has demanded of the district commissioners the removal of Yeardley T. Brown, a $1,400 clerk under the district government and also Editor of the London (Va.) Telephone, on the ground of "offensive partisanship," in transcribing to that paper articles bitterly attacking the president and the Democratic party during the campaign.

Capital Happenings In Brief.

Assistant Secretary Bussey of the interior department has rendered a decision holding that in claims under the act of June 27, 1890, for increase of pension on the ground of new disabilities the attorney's fee shall not exceed $2. The fee has been $10. It is said that the decision will affect over 300,000 claims.

The regulations governing the opening of the Cherokee strip have not yet been perfected, but it can be stated that priority resulting from physical seizure of lands will be done away with.

Fourth assistant postmaster General Maxwell's list shows 129 fourth class postmasters appointed, of whom 39 were to vacancies caused by removal.

The position of assistant meteorological observer outside of Washington has been placed in the civil service.

Secretary Carlisle wishes the fact announced that no one who has been discharged in the treasury department will be restored.

The new Columbian postage stamps were placed on sale.

A Kansas girl applies for a position as stamp seller at the World's fair postoffice. She says she is 24 years old and weighs 427 pounds. A photograph accompanies the application and represents a girl of mammoth proportions.

It is stated on good authority that an investigation of the expenditures of the Behring sea arbitration commission is quietly in progress. It is charged that some of the allowances made to members are extravagant and should be discontinued.

The Cholera Appears.

VIENNA, April 1.—A Vienna physician sent to Southeastern Hungary to report on the progress of the cholera, says that the epidemic is spreading rapidly in that region. Cases in Galicia and Zaltzy and Kudrynge in Galicia have been isolated. Several cases of cholera have been reported in the suburbs of St. Petersburg.

Connecticut's Fast Day.

HARTFORD, April 1.—Fast day was generally observed as a holiday all over the state, in accordance with the proclamation of Governor Morris. Special services were held in all the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches. The stores, shops and factories were closed. There were performances at the theaters and some outdoor sports.

Murder Followed the Suit.

DENVER, April 1.—Mrs. Elizabeth Irwin was shot and fatally wounded by William Nesbitt in her room. Four shots were fired, all of which took effect. The woman will die. Nesbitt was placed under arrest. The cause of the shooting seems to have been the defeat of Nesbitt in a law suit.

Cows Talls Paralyzed.

ST. LOUIS, April 1.—A peculiar cow disease has broken out in St. Louis county which is giving the farmers much concern. The disease makes its appearance in the cow's tail and causes a sort of paralysis which if not promptly handled results disastrously to the animal.

THROUGH A TRESTLE.

Passenger Cars Fall a Distance of Fifty Feet—Many Injured—One Dead.

ATLANTA, April 1.—A special just received from Jug Tavern says a train on the Georgia and Florida railway went through a trestle a few miles from here and was totally wrecked. The engineer remained on the engine. Eight freight and two passenger cars fell a distance of 50 feet. They were torn into splinters. The injured are: Conductor C. F. Moss, cut over right eye and badly bruised; Judge Windham, mail clerk, cut head and thigh broken and bruised internally; J. O. Lay, express messenger, slightly cut and bruised; Rev. J. H. Wood of Jug Tavern, badly mashed upon the head and body and internally bruised; Miss Williamson of Social Circle, dangerously hurt, not expected to live; Mrs. Atticus Worrell of Hoschton, slightly bruised; George Lyon (colored), train hand, badly hurt; Steve Thomas (colored), train hand, has just died.

The First April Fool Joke.

NEW YORK, April 1.—This 1st of April joke was perpetrated on night editors throughout the country: "Cincinnati, March 31.—A telephone message from Kennedy Junction says a train is burning up near there on the Pennsylvania road, and from the drinks and accounts it is thought there has been a great disaster. Point is 10 miles out." Later the bulletin was declared a "fake."

A Church War Settled.

OTTAWA, Ills., April 1.—The decision of Judge Shepherd in the evangelical church case of Schweiker vs. Husser was affirmed by the supreme court. This practically settles the evangelical war which has been going on for several years in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and other states. The Eberites have won a decided victory.

Dead In the Wilderness.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 1.—A man of the name of Drummond, who arrived here from Chilkoten, says that the Indians have found the skeletons of two men there. They are supposed to be the skeletons of the two surveyors, Braden and Clark, who left here a year ago for that district, and were deserted by their Indian guides.

Mrs. Harrison's Narrow Escape.

NEW YORK, April 1.—The World publishes a story to the effect that Mrs. Russell B. Harrison, daughter-in-law of the ex-president, was knocked down by a truck on Broadway, and with her child narrowly escaped being killed. Mrs. Harrison, the report says, was but little injured and the baby not at all.

Bloody Prize Fight.

WETUMKA, Ala., April 1.—Frank Ray of Boston and Mike Dooley of Savannah fought one of the bloodiest prize fights ever known in this state. Twenty-four rounds were fought. Ray winning. Dooley was unconscious five minutes and suffered a broken wrist. No arrests have been made.

Shot the Chief of Police.

HAVANA, April 1.—The chief of police caught three burglars, and tried to arrest them. They fired three shots and ran. The chief fell with two wounds in his body. One burglar was shot dead by policemen and another gave himself up. The third one escaped.

Condemned Half a Town.

CARMEL, N. Y., April 1.—Commissioner Daly has decided that New York city should acquire a strip of land at least 100 feet all around Lake Glenedier, which is 1¾ miles in circumference. If this plan is carried through one-half the village will be wiped out.

Sutton Arrested at Last.

LOCKE AND HIS PARTY FORTIFIED

He Says He Will Not Disband His Forces Until the Militia Is Disarmed—Agent Bennett Threatens to Send Troops and Starts For the Scene.

ANTLERS, I. T., April 1.—The situation here is a problem. There may be a patched up peace. The war may go on. If it is peace, it will be forced and unsatisfactory. Both parties want to wipe out their differences in blood. Active preparations for war have been going on all day. Both factions have been sending messages throughout the country for men, and their friends have freely responded. Arms and munitions of war and all camp supplies have been obtained in large quantities. Locke is acting strictly on the offensive. The militia seems chary of making an attack. They are not so confident as they were before Tuesday's battle. It was thought that Governor Jones would arrive at the militia camp at Goodland and that some decisive action would be taken. He failed to reach Paris and no one knows his whereabouts.

There were 125 militia at Goodland at noon, but about 80 of them under command of Captain Key Durant left, saying they were going about 10 miles northeast of Goodland. Locke, who was at his fort east of the Kiamitia river, was kept advised of every movement of the militia. His position is an exceptionally strong one. At 5 p m Locke had 74 men in the fort with 225 pounds of ammunition each, besides several days' supplies of food. In a short time 10 more men reached him, and he was looking for another big force. His men were eager to fight and wanted to go out and hunt the militia. However, it looks as if the strong hand of the government would be laid upon them, and they would be compelled to desist. In response to a telegram, Commissioner Gibbons received the following this morning:

Do everything to preserve peace. Advise and induce as far as possible all United States citizens to obey the law. If anything happens wire me at Ardmore. C. R. BENNETT.

Mr. Gibbons also received the following, which came in response to repeated and urgent telegrams:

MUSKOGEE, I. T., March 31.

To John C. Gibbons, United States Commissioner, Antlers, I. T.:

Please wire situation today, giving full particulars. LEE BENNETT, Indian Agent.

To this Mr. Gibbons replied as follows:

Opposing forces in camp a few miles apart preparing for conflict. Bound to have bloodshed unless relief is had. Hope United States citizens will not be involved. Am afraid they will. Will do all I can to prevent. I believe your presence necessary. J. C. GIBBONS.

In a short time he received the following, which caused relief to many:

Please notify leaders that unless they forthwith disband I will bring military aid and enforce peace. I start for Antlers on first train. BENNETT, Agent.

He immediately wired copies of these to federal authorities at Paris, Tex.; to the commanders of the militia, and sent a copy to Locke. He went to Goodland at once, and Captain Durant, who had been sent for, came in with his men, who said he would hold up until he could hear from Jones. Locke says positively he will not disband until the militia have done so and gone away. It is the opinion of many that one party or the other will attack before Bennett reaches here. Those who have lived here for years and know the spirit that dominates the factions do not believe it will be settled until they fight to a finish. If a pitched battle is prevented, a long guerilla warfare will ensue. The leaders of both factions are doomed.

The Coaler Took Fire.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 1.—Particulars of the loss of the British ship Homeside, coal laden, from Liverpool for San Francisco, were received here from Captain Brooks of the ship Stronia, which picked up the crew of the Homeside and took them to Valparaiso. They had been fighting fire for a week and had to abandon the vessel.

AN ILLICIT RUM DISTILLERY.

The Largest Ever Unearthed Found In the Heart of Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, April 1.—Internal Revenue Collector Brooks has seized the brewery of Phillip Klein & Son, 2,509-11 Wallace street, as a result of a discovery that an illicit molasses rum distillery of 1,500 gallons capacity was being conducted therein. A small quantity of warm rum spirits was found, and it was evident that a larger quantity had been run into a sewer through a rubber hose. The plant is valued at $25,000, and the illegal distillery is one of the largest ever unearthed. Phillip Klein, Jr., the son, was held in $1,500 bail by United States Commissioner Bell for a further hearing.

Called Back the Russian Treaty.

SUPERB CRYSTALS.

A Mammoth Mass of Prisms of Selenite In Southern Utah.

A writer in Science reports a deposit of selenite in southern Utah which is remarkable for the size, perfection and variety of its crystals. It is situated in the county of Wayne, in what is locally known as the Smith Wash, which is connected with the canyon of the Fremont river.

MOUND OF SELENITE.

The crystals occur in a cave, and this is inclosed by a thick shell forming a mound, which stands in relief on the side of a hill. Of this formation a good idea may be obtained from the first of two cuts here reproduced from the journal mentioned. The mound is somewhat of an egg shape, 35 feet in length east and west, 10 feet in breadth and of an average height of 20 feet from the ground on the lower side, all outside measurements. The mound consists entirely of selenite, the outside having a somewhat battered and roughened appearance from the action of the wind driven sand, yet the whole exterior is made up of the exposed ends and sides of crystals, and in the sunlight the formation glistens with indescribable beauty.

The floor of the cavern consists mostly of sand. Projecting out of it are the terminations of many superb crystals. Looking upward from the bottom of the cavern one sees a mass of mammoth prisms, suggesting but for their singular beauty, the heavy timbers of a mine. The entire deposit is a colossal group of crystals, the like of which is seldom to be seen.

Prisms of perfect form and varying in length from 1 to 5 feet and in weight from 10 to 100 pounds are of frequent occurrence. A magnificent group weighing over 600 pounds has been removed from the floor of the cavern, set up on the outside and photographed. (See second cut.)

A COLOSSAL GROUP OF CRYSTALS

Some of the crystals are of perfect transparency. Sometimes the prisms inclose sand and clay, which are so distributed as to add to their beauty in the eyes of all save chrismologists. Dr. J. E. Talmage of Salt Lake City, whose interesting narrative supplies the facts here presented, states that some of the finest specimens will probably be on exhibition at Chicago.

The Latest in Wheels.

Great as has been the achievements of the pneumatic tire, indications point to the possibility of its being overshadowed by the air wheel, a recent invention patented by a London company, of which The Industrial World says: "The new wheel consists of a large chamber of compressed air, no rims or spokes being required. It looks like a circular rubber bag, with a hole in the center through which the axle runs. Two flat circular plates with outwardly curved edges, are fitted to the axle. When the bag is inflated, it bulges out at the edges and is compressed in the middle by the circular plate. It is claimed that this invention will mark a revolution in wheel construction, and that the speed to be attained will astonish those who are surprised by the accomplishments of the pneumatic tire."

An Illustration of "Mirage."

A beautiful and instructive lecture experiment, originally given in a French work as illustrative of the conditions of the heated atmosphere which give rise to the mirage, is described by Popular Science News. "Water is poured into a long rectangular trough with glass sides and covered with a layer of alcohol about two centimeters thick, containing a trace of fluorescence. After a few hours, during which the alcohol diffuses slowly through the water, a flat beam of light is sent through the mixture at a very slight inclination of the horizon. Under these conditions a kind of garland of light is seen to traverse the liquid, due to a series of curvilinear deflections or 'mirages' in the less highly refractive water below and total reflections at the upper surface of the alcohol."

Florida Phosphate Deposits.

According to Professor E. T. Cox, the beds of phosphate are not continuous, but are interrupted by protruding masses of underlying eocene rocks. The Florida phosphates exist in two forms—first, what is called the rock phosphate, which exists in beds or layers and is mined like ordinary stone, and, second, pebble phosphate, consisting of pebbles or phosphatic materials which have been disintegrated by the action of water and are found lying in the beds of streams. This stratum of pebble formation, where it has been cut by the streams, is said to be from 8 to 30 feet in thickness. In some localities the pebbles form fully 50 per cent of the whole mass, and the soft clay matrix in which they are imbedded contains a high percentage of phosphoric acid.

Copper as a Conductor of Electricity.

"Copper, considered commercially, physically and chemically, offers advantages which when taken together make it superior to all other metals as a conductor for the transmission of electrical energy." To this expression of opinion The Popular Electric Monthly adds: "A dollar's worth of copper can conduct more electricity a certain distance, with a certain expenditure of energy, than any other conducting material known. Copper is ductile, and is made into wire which is both tough and flexible. The chemical action of the atmosphere does not affect it."

GOOD HEALTH

THE COUCH IN A COZY ROOM.

A Narcotic That Clears the Sight, Steadies the Nerves, Lightens the Heart.

A room without a couch of some sort is only half furnished. Life is full of ups and downs, and all that saves the sanity of the mentally jaded and physically exhausted fortune fighter is the periodical good cry and momentary loss of consciousness on the up stairs lounge or the old sofa in the sitting room. There are times when so many of the things that distract us could be straightened out, and the way made clear if one only had a long, comfortable couch on whose soft bosom he could throw himself, boots and brains, stretch his weary frame, unmindful of tidies and tapestry, close his tired eyes, relax the tension of his muscles and give his harassed mind a chance. Ten minutes of this soothing narcotic, when the head throbs, the soul yearns for endless, dreamless, eternal rest, would make the vision clear, the nerves steady, the heart light and the star of hope shine again.

There is no doubt that the longing to die is mistaken for the need of a nap. Instead of the immortality of the soul business men and working women want regular and systematic doses of dozing, and after a mossy bank in the shade of an old oak that succeeding seasons have converted into a tenement of song birds there is nothing that can approach a big sofa or a low, long couch placed in the corner, where tired nature can turn her face to the wall and sleep and dose away the gloom, says Hall's Journal of Health.

To Keep the Feet Comfortable, Etc.

Few things are more refreshing and invigorating after a long walk or getting the feet wet than a tepid bath, clean stockings and a pair of easy shoes. Being so much confined to boots and shoes the feet require frequent and regular bathing, also on account of freely perspiring.

If you are troubled with too much color in your face and nose, The Housekeeper advises bathing the feet in hot water in which borax has been added, to draw the blood downward. After bathing in this water pare the toe nails. If you are troubled with burning, aching feet, nothing relieves them so quickly as a plunge in cold water, as cold as you can possibly endure. A handful of coarse salt added is excellent.

Wear good stockings and easy, well fitting boots. Frequent bathing of the feet in a strong solution of alum water will prevent the coming of chilblains and swelling of the feet. The toe nails, on account of being so much confined, are more liable to irregularity of growth than the finger nails. They should be pared at least every two weeks. The nail on the big toe has a greater tendency to grow into the quick than any other. To avoid this, pare the nail toward the center and cut out in the shape of a V. It is always well to have plenty of footwear, as frequently changing the shoes keeps the foot healthier and less inclined to swell or heat.

The Color of Teeth.

Dentists say that a great difficulty they meet with in their work is the matching of false teeth with the natural teeth of their customers. The tooth factories supply dentists with sample teeth that run all the way from nearly white to a shade that is almost olive. Some of these usually match the patient's teeth, and at any rate enable the dentist to match them by application to the factory.

The Best Way to Begin Dinner.

A doctor says that the proper commencement of dinner should be the old fashioned dish of good soup, and for the reason that it is necessary that the first food taken at dinner should be quickly absorbed, so as to differentiate the nervous system and give tone to the stomach.

A ROOM OF CEREMONY.

Social Laws and Good Forms That Make the Library an Inviting Retreat.

To the inmates of that charming sanctum, the home library, Mrs. Oliver Bell Bunce offers, in Good Housekeeping, the following words of sound advice: "It should be acknowledged by every well regulated family that there are times for conversation, and that the library is a room granted to be a room of ceremony, where intellectual desire should be treated with respect. Every guest should observe the propriety of silence. There is a time to talk and a time to keep silent. No visitor should feel so intimate as to run the risk of disturbing the occupants of the library while compelling them for the sake of politeness to neglect duties in a direction that proves in many cases annoying and irritating. No guest should be on such familiar footing as to consider his host's writing desk his own. This is an unwarrantable liberty. Ceremony is one of the good forms of social life. It is the true spirit of good breeding. Well bred people, when visiting, provide for themselves writing materials and use them.

It is not form for a guest to ask to look books from the bookcases without permission. In many instances they remain in the guest chamber, to be replaced by some member of the family who requires them for immediate use. Magazines, periodicals, papers, are for the library and should be left there. Order and consideration for the desires of all are among the immutable laws of society. The best seat by the cheerful blaze should be for the invalid or elderly person. Age and sickness demand courtesy that should be on all occasions extended to them. It is their prerogative. Don't fail in proper attention to elderly people. Don't stand before the fire to the exclusion of the scents from others. Don't fail in good manners in anything.

There are three articles that should be studied to the library table—the paper cutter, scissors and pencils for family use. It is the displacing of these little instruments of usefulness that disturb the disposition, irritate the temper and are among the causes of the hasty word and the unkind thought.

"The borrowed book." What a text for a sermon, said a clever author. If books are borrowed, mar them not; neither turn down the leaves, and, above all, be careful to return them in as good a state of preservation as when borrowed. To write on the margins is unpardonable, vulgar, ill bred. And so the library has its etiquette, social laws and good form. In this inviting place the inmates enjoy the calm repose, the new books, the firelight's sparkle. Here they pen the loving words, and in this sanctum our intellectual life grows, spreads and digests.

To Cross the Ocean In a Viking Ship and Visit the Fair.

Just in time for the Chicago World's fair, so apropos as to seem like a providence, an original viking ship, feet long and 16½ feet wide, has been unearthed. The discovery is an antiquarian romance in itself. From early days there has been a tradition that a noted viking or Norse sea king was buried long ago in a sand mound near Sandefjord, a small port of Norway, and that his ship was buried with him. The learned, however, decided that the mound was natural, and only sailors and peasants believed in the old saga tale. In the winter of 1879-80, however, a sailor in Sandefjord declared his belief in the story, and that he would prove it true. He began sinking a shaft, as miners say, and in a few feet struck solid oak planks, as the surface of the mound had weathered away considerably, and he was fortunate enough to begin at the right spot.

The discovery was hailed with delight in all Scandinavia, and now the hardy sailors of Norway purpose to prove that Leif Ericsson could have crossed the Atlantic in such a vessel 1,000 years ago by doing the same thing in May, 1893. The original vessel was found to be remarkably well preserved when the mound was cleared away in 1880, and in it was the skeleton of a man with arms and armor complete. These were shown to be the kind in use in the year 1,000 or thereabouts. The relic is preserved by the University of Christiania, but a perfect reproduction of it has been made, and Captain Magnus Anderson, with 20 men, is to bring it to Chicago. There names as many sailors volunteered as were needed, though the voyage will be no light task, as there must be a good deal of rowing done. The new vessel has no deck and is only 17 feet long. Its success'ul, it will remain some time in New York and then go to Chicago by the St. Lawrence and Welland canal.

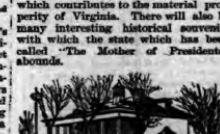
Virginia's World's Fair Building.

The Old Dominion State will be represented at the World's fair in characteristic fashion. Her building will partake largely of the antique, and the observant visitor may trace a close resemblance between it and the residence at Mount Vernon. There is the same broad porch and massive square pillars. The structure is low, being but two full stories in height, with an attic and a small cupola, from which an excellent view of the busy scene on the World's fair grounds may be obtained. The exhibit will include every product, mineral and vegetable, which contributes to the material prosperity of Virginia. There will also be many interesting historical souvenirs with which the state which has been called "The Mother of Presidents" abounds.



THE VIRGINIA BUILDING.

It is believed that the World's fair will have the effect of presenting Virginia in an attractive light as a field for the investment of northern and foreign capital. The state has made wonderful strides forward in recent years, and many flourishing towns and villages now stand where but a short time ago there was nothing but unoccupied land which was regarded as worth next to nothing. The Virginians intend to remove the impression that they are standing still, and to judge by the manner in which they have set about their task they bid fair to be successful.

The Fisheries Exhibit.

Enthusiastic pisciculturists declare that the fisheries exhibit at Chicago will be a world's fair in itself. The building is admirably arranged to display the fishy tribes to the best advantage, and marine plants, shells and artificial rockwork will add realism to the glass sided tanks through which visitors will behold the watery wonders. Adequate provision has been made for supplies of both salt and fresh water, and great care has been taken to preserve the life and health of the fish. For illuminating the various aquaria at night 750 incandescent lamps will be used. Nearly all the light in the building will come through the water in the tanks, and as the bulbs above the tanks will not be visible the effect will be beautiful. With the exception of deep sea monsters, whales and others whose bulk or habits make their transportation impossible, almost every sort of creatures living in the waters will be represented.

What Was the Good of It?

Willie is six years old, with a brother and sister two and four years older, and these two were recently invited by Mrs. Blank to a little party, much to the discomfiture of Willie, who was slighted. When the other two children had gone, Willie's mother was doing what she could to smooth his ruffled feelings.

"I heard Mrs. Blank talking about you, Willie, the other day," she said, "and she said you were the handsomest boy in all this town."

Willie didn't say anything for a moment, and then he lifted his big, brown, tearstained eyes to his mother's face.

"Well, mamma," he half sobbed, "what's the good of being beautiful if a fellow don't git invited to no parties?"—Buffalo News.

A Misunderstanding.

"Maria," said Mr. Fortuney, "I wish, dear, you'd go down town with me tomorrow, and we'll select a new hat."

"Of course," said Mrs. Fortuney, "I've been noticing the new styles myself. We must pick out something recent."

"Yes, something from London."

"With a fine shape."

"Bell crowned, eh?"

"No. Trimmed with roses."

"Rose," said Mr. Fortuney, "what are you talking about?"

"Why, my new hat; weren't you?"

"Of course not," said Mr. Fortuney, glaring; "I was talking about my new hat."—Chicago News-Record.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," MONDAY APRIL 3, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

INJUNCTION GRANTED

BY CHIEF JUSTICE BEASLEY ON SATRUDAY.

Stopping the Plainfield Street Railway from Extending its Road on Somerset Street, from Front Street to the Brook.

THE NEWS stated on Saturday that an injunction would probably be asked for to prevent the Plainfield Street Railway Company destroying Somerset street with its tracks.

On Saturday Chief Justice Beasley of the Supreme Court granted Lawyer W. K. McClure a writ of certiorari in the suit of Mr. P. M. French against the city of Plainfield and the Plainfield Street Railway Company ordering them to surrender before April 20th, the ordinance locating the street railway tracks on Somerset street, between Front street and the brook. This writ will serve as an injunction preventing the laying of the tracks until further orders from the Court.

The ground on which the writ was granted is that the company never secured the consent of the land owners.

A gentleman who resides in North Plainfield and has been heartily in favor of the railway to-day examined the rails being deposited on the sides of the street preparatory for use. He says that they are not the same as the company's representative exhibited at the Council chamber, which met with general approval, as it was seen such rails would not damage vehicles. This, however, is not the case with the rails to be used, which in his judgment and the judgment of others will be sure to wrench of carriage wheels.

LOCOMOTIVE SPARKS.

Set Fire to a Trestle and a Barn Yesterday.

Sparks from a locomotive set fire, yesterday morning, to a trestle at Loomis & Rice's coal and lumber yard, on Broadway. It was discovered by Charles McGinley, who extinguished the burning ties before an alarm was given.

In the afternoon a barn at the Potter Press Works was set on fire in a similar manner. A resident in that vicinity noted the part of freeman in this instance and the blaze was "nipped in the bud."

BREVITIES.

—Council meeting to-night.

—"Robin Hood" is the next attraction advertised at Music Hall. See adv. on second page.

—The regular meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will be held at the Library to morning at eleven o'clock.

—The gypsies, who annually encamp near Campbell's club house, passed through here this afternoon.

—The Philadelphia Herald gave an account of a suicide by a man because a Plainfield girl would not marry him.

—The United Tea & Coffee Growers' Association to-day advises its patrons to take advantage of its offer to sell goods below cost.

—Judgment was rendered to-day in favor of the plaintiff in the suit of the Central Railroad Company vs. Roll, demand for premises.

—George Harling, colored, was fined $5 by Justice Crossley, this morning, for assaulting another colored man named Cruse, on Somerset street, Saturday night.

—A hackman's vehicle collided with a bicyclist on Front street, near Sandford avenue, Saturday afternoon. The rider was slightly injured and his wheel partly broken.

—A piece of furniture, on which naptha had been used, caught fire at Mrs. Debaud's house on East Front street, Saturday afternoon. It was taken outdoors and the flames extinguished.

—Train No. 522 was delayed about ten minutes at the North avenue station yesterday. Fire was discovered in the forward end of the baggage car, between the floor which are double. A portion of the floor was cut open and flooded with water.

—"A word or two" about dress goods is the heading of Edsall's new advertisement to-day. He says he feels confident of those in need of these goods will look over his large and handsome assortment, they will have no desire to go to the "City" to purchase.

Attempt to Burn the Children's Home

About a month ago an attempt was made to burn the Children's Home by setting fire to a small outbuilding in the rear. The fire was discovered in time to frustrate the attempt.

The matter was reported to Marshal Vaughorn, who has kept a close watch in that vicinity up to a night or two ago.

Last night the attempt was repeated but with the same result, as it was seen by the matron, who says she saw a man stealing away along the fence, just before she discovered the fire.

Blew Out a Cylinder Head.

Engine No. 879 of train 20, leaving the North avenue station at 7.20 for New York blew out a cylinder head at Westwood, this morning, causing a delay of a half hour. East-bound trains were run on track No. 3 as far as Westfield, where they were switched to the main track.

The Baptist Parish Meeting.

The parish meeting, of the congregation of the First Baptist church, for the election of two trustees for three years, will be held to-morrow night in the church. The terms of Messrs. Martin I. Cooley and Jeremiah Manning expires.

EASTER SUNDAY.

SUITABLY OBSERVED AT ALL THE CHURCHES YESTERDAY.

Flowers and Special Music, New Bonnets and New Gowns—The Usual Celebration of a Day which Seems to be the Commencement of Summer Life.

Easter Sunday was a glorious Spring day. The air was balmy and the sun bright. The churches were made beautiful with a profusion of flowers. New bonnets and gowns were of bewildering number, style and beauty. In almost all the homes eggs were plenty. There were eggs in all colors and all ways of cooking.

The origin of the custom of eggs on Easter Sunday is very old.

The egg has always been held as a symbol of creation. According to the Hindoo the world existed as a huge egg with the power of creation within it.

The Chinese believed that the world was formed by the separation of an egg. From the centre of it stepped out a human being, who, by a wave of his hand, formed the heavens out of the upper half of the shell and the earth out of the lower half.

The Japanese held that the egg included the germ of all things, a sort of modern evolution theory. When the egg burst what was pure ascended and formed the heavens and what was impure descended and formed the earth.

Egyptian temples were filled with eggs.

With the dawn of the Christian era the egg became a symbol of the Resurrection. Hence Easter eggs.

Easter and Spring seem synonymous.

Holy Cross Church.

The festival of the Resurrection was ushered in with very impressive ceremonies at the Church of the Holy Cross yesterday morning. In and about the chancel there was a profusion of lillies, while exquisitely wrought emblems in the shape of crosses and crowns decorated the lectern and pulpit. The musical part of the service was of a very high order and was rendered by the vested choir. The rector, Rev. T. Logan Murphy, preached a very convincing and logical sermon from the 15th chapter of 1st Corinthians and the 20th verse—"But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept." The communion service followed, a large number partaking of the sacrament.

The Easter festival of the Sunday-school took place in the afternoon. The exercises were much of the same nature as those of former occasions, the choir heading the scholars, who formed in line in the robing room, and marching down the side aisle singing a processional and up the main aisle to their allotted places. Each class carried a banner bearing the name of a Scriptural character and was led by its teacher. The programme was then carried out in its entirety, the singing of the carols by the young people forming no mean part of it. The address of the rector, which followed, was very happily conceived, and full of the joy, hope and warmth befitting the occasion. After the choir had sung the anthem "Christ is Risen from the Dead" and the benediction pronounced, the Sunday-school and choir moved out of the church in nearly the same order as they had entered, "Alleluia! Christ is Risen," forming the recessional.

At St. Mary's Catholic Church.

The Easter festival was celebrated at St. Mary's church with all the solemnity of the Roman Ritual. The sanctuary had been tastefully decorated for the occasion, the main altar was covered with banks of lilies and was ablaze with its myriads of lights. High above the altar shone the Easter motto, "He is risen, alleluia!" The solemn mass was begun at 10.45. Mercadante's mass was excellently rendered by the quartette choir, supported by a full chorus. The day was made more solemn to the worshipers by the "Forty Hours' Adoration" which was begun at the last mass.

In the evening an eloquent sermon on the feast of the day, was delivered by the Very Rev. Jno. J. O'Connor, the Vicar General of the Newark Diocese.

The "Forty Hours" devotion will be continued this evening. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Father Stafford, formerly stationed at St. Mary's Church.

Crescent Avenue Church.

The Easter decorations in the Crescent Avenue church were probably the most elaborate of any, the entire pulpit platform being hidden by masses of Easter and calla lillies, heliotrope, a large and extraordinary variety of begonias, and also some beautiful pink flowers. The potted plants were furnished by Mrs. J. E. Myers and Mrs. Howard Wadsworth, and the cut flowers were procured from Jersey City. There was special music both morning and evening. The morning sermon by the pastor, Rev. William R. Richards, D. D., was from Matthew 28—5: "Fear not Ye," and in the evening he preached from Mark 16—7: "Before you into Galilee." A collection for benevolent work in Plainfield was taken up in the evening.

All Souls' Church.

There was special music at All Souls' church, and an appropriate sermon by the pastor, Rev. Hobart Clarke. The following was the musical programme:

A. M.

Voluntary.....Rev. M. Read
Prof. A. G. Carpenter, Organist.
Hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul"
Hymn, "Mercy" by Bortniofski.
Hymn, "Rock of Ages".....Mason
Offertory, St. Cecilia Melodia (Organ.)
Vocal selection from Thalberg—"Go not my soul in search of Him, thou will not find Him"
Chorus.
Postlude.....Carpenter

P. M.

Prelude Reverie by Renard, arranged for organ by Carpenter.
Vocal selection.....Francis Joseph Haydn
Vocal selection.....Chas. Zeuner.
Postlude.....Lemmens-Salter

The vocal music was rendered by a male quartette in the morning and a trio of male voices in the evening.

Possibly Joyous for Trinity.

The Easter festival was made doubly joyful to the Trinity Reformed church congregation. Besides an appropriate celebration of the day, they also celebrated the event of being clear from debt by raising $230 in the morning, $31 in the afternoon and $25 in the evening to pay off a debt of $600. The altar was beautifully decorated with Easter and calla lilies, marguerites and potted plants. The service in the evening was by the Sunday-school. A beautiful feature was the crowning of a cross with flowers by little girls.

Grace Church.

A choir of thirty-eight voices rendered special Easter music at Grace church. The beautiful decorations was the work of the altar society. The lilies and roses were loaned by Mrs. Edgerton. There were two memorials. One was presented by Mr. Brown of Albany in memory of his wife, formerly Miss Harriet Thomas of this city. The other was the work of the society. The Rev. E. M. Rodman preached from John 12: 13—"If I be lifted up from the earth."

At the Methodist Episcopal Church.

At the Methodist church yesterday Dr. Hurlbut occupied the pulpit both morning and evening. The floral decorations consisted of large roses, lilies and palms and were very beautiful. Special music was rendered by a chorus of girls.

In the evening Dr. Hurlbut gave the last of a series of illustrated sermons. His subject was "From Calvary to Olivet." There were no vacant pews.

First Baptist Church.

The special Easter service at the First Baptist church was held in the afternoon by the Sunday-school. It consisted of responsive reading, reports, Easter carols and an address. The decorations were elaborate and beautiful. A special sermon was preached in the morning by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Yerkes, from John. There was no evening service.

Grace M. E. Church.

The Grace M. E. Church Sunday-school celebrated Easter in the afternoon. The programme consisted of recitations and singing. There was a duet by the Misses Alice and Grace Carroll and singing by a male quartette, comprising Messrs. L. A. Hummer, Ezra Loomis, W. H. Griffen and C. M. Hummer. Dr. Carroll preached a special sermon in the evening.

Congregational Church.

The decorations at the Congregational church consisted of lilies and palms, and potted plants from the pastor's class. A choir consisting of Messrs. Horace C. Martin and William Runyon, and Misses Carroll and Underwood rendered Easter music. Mrs. Horace Wells presided at the organ. An appropriate sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Goodrich.

First Presbyterian Church.

In the First Presbyterian Church the Easter service consisted of responsive readings and special hymns by the Sunday school and congregation. An Easter address was made by the pastor, Rev. Charles E. Herring. The pulpit was decorated with Easter lillies.

Park Avenue Baptist.

Special services were held at the Park Avenue Baptist church. The pastor, the Rev. J. W. Richardson, preached sermons appropriate to the occasion and the choir rendered beautiful Easter music.

At the Chapels.

At the Monroe avenue chapel, besides the Easter celebration anniversary, exercises were held. Warren Mission chapel also observed the day by special exercises.

Masonic.

A pleasing and commendable feature at a special communication, held by Jerusalem Lodge, No. 36, F. and A. M., Saturday evening, was the conferring of the E. A. Degree on two candidates by Senior Warden, C. P. Leggett, and Junior Warden D. C. Dunham, by special invitation from W. M., C. H. Riggs. As this was not generally known to the members the work rendered excellently by both. P. M., W. J. Ford gave the lecture.

A special communication will be held to-morrow evening, April 4th, when the F. C. Degree will be worked.

THREE ALARMS OF FIRE

TWO IN THE CITY AND ONE IN THE BOROUGH SATURDAY NIGHT.

A Lamp Explosion was Accountable for One, and the Ludlum Ice House the Cause of the Other Two.

Residents of the city and borough were startled Saturday night by three alarms of fires within an hour. Two were sounded in the city and one in the borough. The first alarm was given about eight o'clock from box 16, corner of Front and Richmond streets. The fire was in a house on East Third street, owned by Mr. Thorn and occupied by a family named Richter. A lamp exploded, setting fire to some of the small articles in the room. The flames were extinguished before the engine arrived and without much damage being done.

The second fire only burn in the house a short time after returning from the Richter fire, when another alarm was sent in from the same box. This time the fire was one that the firemen thought they had extinguished Thursday morning. It was in the house on the Ludlum property on East Front street, which was partly burned at the time the Hyde mill was destroyed, again broke out.

Water was taken from the race and the flames put out after a half-hours work.

The alarm in the borough was for the same fire, it being in their district.

The ice house was filled in with sawdust, and this, the firemen say, must be the cause of the fire, since Thursday morning, the stiff breeze blowing Saturday night fanning it to a blaze.

Mr. Hyde is of the opinion that it was the work of an incendiary. He says the two buildings were burning last week at the same time, although there was a high board fence and a barn between the mill and the ice house. He was one of the first on the scene each time, and he says he thinks the building was set on fire both times.

IN THE CITY COURT.

Those Who Spent Easter in the City Jail.

Four persons spent their Easter in the city jail. They were Albert G. Cook, William Keaney, William Mowery and John Scudder.

When the two first named were arraigned to plead to the charge of drunk and disorderly the judge remarked: "Never been here before, I suppose." "Lots of times," was the reply in unison. "Sixty days," said his Honor, and they marched back to the cells they knew so well.

The next was William Mowery. "Rock and tick" was the cause of his downfall, but "rock" occasioned his arrest, as he was preparing to hit a man with one when captured by Policeman Cooney. He had been fighting in a saloon on Park avenue and having been put out into the street with his companion he was going to finish his man with a rock. His fines cost him $10.

For fighting, Saturday night, John Scudder, colored, was taken in. He was fined $5.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Clinton V. Ianson of East Third street is ill with tonsilitis.

The Leal Cadet subscription dance will take place at the Casino to-night.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carpenter moved to-day from Broadway to 82 Manning avenue.

The marriage of Mr. John Leal and Miss Way will be solemnized at five o'clock to-day. The Rev. W. R. Richards will officiate.

The quartette announced to sing patriotic songs in connection with Sergeant Sprague's lecture on Thursday evening, will not be able to do so on account of the illness of Mr. David Titsworth.

Mrs. Henry Irving died Saturday, at her home in Brooklyn, of consumption. She formerly lived here, and the remains were brought to this city this morning for interment. Service was held in St. Mary's church.

Mrs. Redcliffe and daughter of New Haven, Conn., moved into Plainfield on Saturday. They have secured the residence formerly occupied by Dr. Field on Watchung avenue, and will be Redcliffe's daughters is the wife of the enterprising Front street merchant, Mr. J. C. Allen, who will reside with them with his wife and child.

Mrs. Gable Gets a Divorce.

A decree of absolute divorce has just been obtained by Mrs. John B. Gable, whose husband eloped with Mrs. W. B. Avery nearly two years ago. Mrs. Gable gets the custody of her three children, and the lawyers' fees are to be paid by the defendant. W. B. Avery was the steward of the New York Custom house, who lived in Westerveit avenue. His wife became enamored of J. B. Gable, an upholsterer. The two fled, Gable leaving behind three children in destitute circumstances. Avery at once applied for a divorce on the statutory grounds, and as obtained it in November, 1891.

Broke the Fifth Wheel.

Saturday night Mr. Smalley of Randolph road, who had been visiting with his wife and children as a friend of Mrs. Gable, at the residence of Mr. Gable, on East Fourth street, started to drive home. He drove into the gutter near Park avenue, when one of the wheels of the carriage was smashed and the fifth wheel was broken. The wheel was repaired by a passing wagon, and the end of a passenger, and the family resumed their journey homeward.

HAZLETON, Pa., April 3, (Special.)—Another mine disaster has occurred. Thirty miners are entombed.

ELIZABETH OPERA HOUSE BURNED.

Assistant Chief Brown Narrowly Escapes Death.

The temple Opera House in Elizabeth was destroyed by fire last night. The loss is $50,000, partly insured. The cause was the explosion of gasoline stored underneath the stage.

The fire was discovered at a quarter to nine, but had probably been smouldering since half-past seven. When it finally burst into flame the entire building was ablaze.

Assistant Chief Engineer Brown, who was first on the spot, turned in a general alarm, but the efforts of the firemen were useless to extinguish the fire. The building, which was of wood, was thickly surrounded by tenements and for a short time it looked as if the entire section surrounding the building would be destroyed.

The inmates of the tenements rushed out pell mell without having time to collect any of their valuables.

Assistant Chief Brown had a narrow escape from death. He was directing his men on the Broad street side of the building when a large timber suddenly fell, just grazing his head and crushing his right foot.

The manager, A. H. Simonds, at the risk of his life rushed into the office and secured the money in the safe. The building was the only one of its kind in the city. It was built at a cost of $35,000 and was remodeled in 1891 at an additional cost of $20,000.

Senator C. J. Marsh, Mayor J. C. Rankin and P. J. Gilhooly were the heaviest stockholders.

A new building will be erected on the site to cost $75,000.

RACING IN UNION COUNTY.

The Elizabeth Council Grants a License to the Jockey Club.

The Elizabeth City Council Saturday night, by a vote of 13 to 11, granted to the New Jersey Jockey Club a license for five years, the club to pay into the City Treasury $5,000 a year.

The City Hall was packed by the race-track men and "anti's" and the warm discussion upon the proposition to license was frequently interrupted by applause. Mayor Rankin took the floor and spoke against granting the license.

A number of amendments were offered to the resolution to grant a license by the anti-race track members, but all of them were voted down.

The race-track men held a caucus Friday night, at which it was decided to put a license resolution through Saturday night, and every one of the thirteen pledged himself to vote for the license.

As charges had been made that boodle was being used, a motion was offered to call upon Councilman Cantwell, who, it was said, had made them, to explain, but the motion was defeated by a vote of 19 to 5.

"Aye, but science's the thing!"

Half the people are foolish enough to suppose that H-O is a package of ordinary oats partially cut or rolled, and nothing more. There is as much difference between H-O and ordinary oatmeal as between cake and dough. H-O is a strictly scientific preparation, retaining the valuable and indestructible properties of the most nourishing cereal known.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Those Royal Aztecs.

We have become so accustomed to think of the Aztecs as a magnificent race of people who knew more about civilization than even Boston does now that it sounds like a wicked heresy in any one to say the story is not true. It is like shaking our belief in the story of William Tell or George Washington's little hatchet.

Yet a traveler there is, Newton H. Chittenden, who declares all this story of splendid Aztec civilization is a fairy tale, nothing else. He finds that the former inhabitants of Paragoona in southern Utah and the region southwestward were simply the ancestors of the Moquis and Zunis of the present day, lived in the same way as these tribes do now and were civilized to the same extent, no more and no less. The prehistoric royal palaces were only the many compartmented structures of stone and adobe in which the southern Indians dwell today. The ruins show this. The reason that they are ruins is not that a population of many millions once inhabited the spot where the remains now are, but only that such inhabitants as there were were driven from time to time out of their towns in a hurry by surrounding savage tribes. They would not on the order of their going, but went in a hurry under those circumstances and left their dinner sets behind them. In the modern history of the Moqui tribe alone there have been seven such removals well authenticated.

Mr. Chittenden's proposition sounds reasonable and in accordance with common sense. Besides that, it is the easiest and simplest explanation of the ruins in Montezuma valley and elsewhere; therefore it is probably the true one.

Where Chinese Are Wanted.

For some time the company that is building the railroad from the lower Congo to Stanley pool, in the Congo Free State, has been desirous of securing Chinese laborers to do the work. The Chinese government would not permit them to go at first on account of the frightful stories of mortality among white men there. But with the increase in the number of trading white men sanitary regulations were enforced, mortality among the whites of the Free State diminished one-half, and at length the Chinese were allowed by their government to go and work on the railroad. One Chinaman can do as much work as four of the native Africans, who were all the company had to depend on at first, and the work of opening up the Congo country will progress more rapidly.

In the Congo Free State are now over 1,000 white people, mostly Belgians, but there is a good representation of other European nations, with only about 30 Americans. The first batch of Chinese who went to the state as laborers numbered 540. It remains to be seen whether they can withstand the climate, as they give promise of doing. If so, there will be room in Africa for all the Chinese that want work in foreign lands for the next 20 years. The civilization of the dark continent is the greatest contract the twentieth century will have on its hands, and the greatest means to that end will be willing workers and plenty of them. As to the native Africans, it is not hard to foretell their fate. If white men can live and thrive in Africa, they are doomed. They will learn the white man's vices rather than his virtues and exterminate themselves.

The most valuable American abroad at this time is Colonel J. P. Murphy, known in Germany as "Cornmeal Murphy." Colonel Cornmeal Murphy has been in Europe for some time past endeavoring to familiarize the benighted inhabitants of that continent with the delicious articles of food that may be made from corn and cornmeal. His custom is to arrange a menu in which every article shall be some preparation of corn. He has the best cooks prepare the dinner. Every form of corn food, from Italian polenta and roasted green corn to cornstarch pudding, johnny cake and hominy and cream, has its place at one or another of these feasts. To the dinners are invited rich merchants and influential statesmen, again perhaps leading bakers and farmers. One and all proclaim themselves delighted with American corn dishes. In European cities the sale of cornmeal bread is increasing so rapidly that in some cases the demand outruns the supply. Colonel Murphy's latest corn feast was given in Constantinople. The report says that 50 scientific men and prominent agriculturists were present. One is pleased to learn from this that turkey has scientific men. It is news to most of us.

The schoolmaster is evidently badly wanted in Washington among the enrolling clerks of the United States senate. Senator Eugene Hale reports that he has discovered no less than 80 errors of spelling and punctuation in the appropriation bills alone. How about those civil service examinations? We are pleased to know, however, that there is a United States senator who is so well capable of detecting at sight all these errors in spelling.

Within the past few years articles of luxury have been imported to the United States in immense quantity. Nearly all of diamonds from the new African mines have been sold in this country.

TO SHUT OUT CHOLERA.

Quarantine Cordon to Be Completed All Along the Coast.

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN IN EUROPE.

Easter Sunday In the Capital—The President Stayed at Home—What the Senate Proposes to Do This Week—Tillmanites Ask For Patronage.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—For the first time there will be a complete cordon this year on the Atlantic and gulf coasts, against the introduction of cholera or other contagious disease into the United States from foreign countries. Canada, it is said by the head officers of that government, will be efficiently quarantined, so that the dread of the introduction of cholera over our northern border need not be apprehended seriously as heretofore. Harmony of action between state, municipal and national quarantine officers also seems assured under a law giving the federal government fuller plenary powers than heretofore. The quarantine service has also been strengthened and $900,000 more is at the hands of the Marine hospital service this year than last.

There is also for the first time practically a quarantine system at the port of departure of immigrants to this country under the supervision of the American consuls. The executive officers of the Marine hospital service say that if this foreign inspection had been in vogue last year it is doubtful if a single case of cholera would have appeared at the port of New York. These precautions and the awakening felt on the subject in all parts of the country, officers of the service believe will be effectual in preventing any serious cholera outbreak in this country during the coming summer.

Easter Sunday in the Capital.

Mgr. Satolli celebrated mass at St. Matthews, the fashionable Catholic church of the city. It was packed with people, including many members of the legation and others well known in social circles. The president did not go to church, but remained at home while Mrs. Cleveland attended, divine she accompanied by Private Secretary Thurber.

Plan of the Week's Work.

The senate will probably resume the debate on the question of seating Mantle, Beckwith and Allen, the three governor appointed senators from the states of Montana, Wyoming and Washington respectively. There may be some relieved discussion during the week of the proposed investigations into the charges against Senator Roach of North Dakota and Power of Montana. The Democrats, however, have resolved not to investigate the allegations against Senator Roach, so it is almost certain the matter will in the end be dropped.

Considerable time will be spent in confirming President Cleveland's nominations. Thus far the president has had no difficulty in securing the confirmation of all his nominees, and there are no indications of any serious trouble over appointments to delay final adjournment of the session, which it seems probable will occur week after next.

Brevities of Washington News.

Concerning the "allowances" made to the American attaches of the Behring sea arbitration commission, Secretary Gresham in a cablegram to the consul general at Paris, says the commission will have the support of the administration, and that neither the state department nor the treasury department are responsible for the publications.

Senator Irby of South Carolina and the representatives in congress of the Tillman wing of the democracy have united in a long manifesto to President Cleveland, asking whether or not it is the purpose of the administration to recognize them as representatives of the Democratic party of South Carolina, or to treat them as a third party men not entitled to patronage.

The military information division of the war department has just issued a report on the physical features, posts of landing, supplies, climate, diseases, etc., of the Hawaiian islands.

Representative Hooker, who was thrown from a cable car and severely injured, is improving, and is now said to be out of danger.

Mr. Robert P. Porter, the superintendent of the census, said that he had not resigned as reported, nor had he any intimation that his resignation was desired.

It is stated that President Cleveland expects to be present at the opening of the World's fair.

Fatal Negro Row.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 3.—Thomas Wesley (colored), living on North Lexington avenue, refused to admit to his house John Jackson, another colored man. Jackson battered in the door with a pole, as it once inside the house began slashing inmates with a knife. When he attacked Wesley the latter caught up an ax and smashed in his skull. Wesley and four other colored persons were arrested. Jackson will not recover.

Hills to Save Murderers.

ALBANY, April 3.—The remainder of the work of the legislature will largely be confined to the daily sessions. Senator Smith's bill providing for the abolition of capital punishment is a special order in the senate for Wednesday, while in the assembly Mr. Sullivan has given notice that he will move to pass his bill, which is similar to that of Senator Smith's, out of its order.

Marshal Needed, but None There.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 3.—The United States marshalship of the western district is now vacant, and the necessity of an immediate appointment is very urgent, as the active service of a large number of deputy marshals on the lower Rio Grande border in pursuit of Mexican outlaws is needed just at this time.

Fifth Avenue's Easter Parade.

NEW YORK, April 3.—Easter Sunday in New York was an almost ideal spring day. The Easter parade on Fifth avenue was brilliant before and after church services, and during the afternoon the avenue was the scene of a bewildering exhibition of beauty and style.

The Mystery Not Cleared.

UTICA, N. Y., April 3.—The body of Mrs. John Lorett, who disappeared from her home in Newport, Herkimer county, on December 3 last, was found in the West Canada creek near Herkimer. An investigation will be made.

Both Lovers Dead Now.

CHICAGO, April 3.—Ross Smith, the murderer of pretty Effie Clark, died in the police station at Evanston. He never recovered consciousness after saying that he had shot the girl because she would not become his wife.

FOREST FIRES IN NEW JERSEY.

The Pine Woods Are Blazing In Many Sections and Forests Is Endangered.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., April 3.—Three destructive forest fires are raging within 10 miles of this town.

PLEASANTVILLE, N. J., April 3.—Forest fires have been burning in this neighborhood since Friday among the pines. At 5 o'clock today it looked as if part of this borough would be destroyed. On the west side of the town the dwellings were saved by the common sand chimneys pouring water on the walls and roofs of the houses while the men fought the flames. In West Pleasantville two houses were destroyed. Another fire is said to be approaching from the direction of Absecon. No estimate of the loss has been made.

WATERFORD, N. J., April 3.—Three of the seven forest fires in this vicinity are still raging, and it is estimated that during the past 20 hours $25,000 worth of property has been destroyed. At Pennsgrove the fire spread in two branches, but it is hoped to save the most valuable property by back firing.

HER COACHMAN HUSBAND.

Mrs. Hiller Marries Him For the Second Time With Great Ceremony.

WOBURN, Mass., April 3.—In the little church of St. Thomas at Winchester, Mrs. Frances Hiller, the wealthy, eccentric woman, and Henry Hiller were married by the Rev. J. J. Ryan, and now they have been doubly wedded.

The midnight marriage a few weeks ago of Mrs. Hiller and her coachman, after he had adopted her name, by a minister in the city, was not at all to the liking of the husband's friends.

The bride was dressed in white satin. There were seven bridesmaids, for whom were, as the gift of the bride, a badge of ribbon fastened with a pin made from a 5-dollar gold piece.

After the ceremony the couple held a reception for the townspeople. There were no wedding presents, the bride having expressed a desire that there should be none. The interest in the affair was extraordinary. More than 1,000 people could not gain admission to the church.

Death of Mary Learned Bartlett.

HANOVER, N. H., April 3.—Mary Learned Bartlett, wife of ex-President Bartlett of Dartmouth college, died suddenly at 10 o'clock this morning. She was the first president of the Woman's Board of Missions for the interior. Her children are Professor Edwin J. Bartlett of Dartmouth college; Allen, the wife of Rev. P. A. Stinson, D. D., of New York, recently of St. Louis; Rev. William A. Bartlett of Chicago, and Samuel C. Bartlett, Jr., of Andover seminary, recently of the Japan mission.

A Steamship Line at Auction.

NEW YORK, April 3.—The steamship Seguranca of the United States and Brazilian Mail Steamship line was seized at her dock in Brooklyn on judgments recovered by several firms that furnished them with provisions. Today the steamer, together with her sister ships of the same line, the Alliance, Advance and Vigilancia, will be sold at public auction.

Their Engine Crashed After Them.

WINNIPEG, Man., April 3.—In a wreck on the Canadian Pacific, a few miles east of Harrison, four lives were lost. Am ng the killed is Engineer Wyrie. The engine jumped the track overlooking the Frazer river. The engineer and fireman jumped into the deep gorge, and the engine at the same moment went down the perpendicular embankment.

"Crow's Nest" to Be Rebuilt.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., April 3.—The scene of the fatal fire was visited by hundreds of people. A search was instituted for the body of Ellen McGrath, but no trace was found. Jefferson will rebuild on the same site and will this season occupy the Whittier cottage, which is on the Buzzard's bay shore, near Gray Gables.

Lost a Lot of Diamonds.

CHICAGO, April 3.—The wife of W. J. Knight of Dubuque, Ia., general solicitor of the Illinois Central road, lost $4,000 worth of diamonds while walking on Michigan boulevard with her husband. She was afraid to leave the diamonds in her room and put them in the pocket of her cloak.

Fled After the Accident.

HACKENSACK, N. J., April 3.—Valentine Lorucenie, 35 years old, an Italian laborer at Little Ferry, was accidentally shot through the left lung by Felmore Russell, a Susquehanna railroad laborer. Russell fled into the woods after the shooting and cannot be found.

War Canoe For the Fair.

VICTORIA, B. C., April 3.—The last of the collection of Indian, Indian curios and implements for the World's fair contains, among other things a large war canoe, a native house from Nahwitty and totem poles from other places.

Went Back After His Son.

ST. PAUL, April 3.—At sunset St. Paul Joseph Hattermack and his 12-year-old son were drowned while out hunting. Mr. Hattermack had reached solid land safely and went back to save his son, but both were drowned.

The Natural Gas Leaked.

DETROIT, April 3.—A terrific explosion, resulting in the almost total destruction of the new 6-story Cleland building, occurred at 4:10 a. m. The cause of the disaster was a leakage of natural gas.

Fatal Ax Blow.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., April 3.—Michael Kane, a laborer, 30 years old, had his skull fractured by a blow from an ax in the hands of John Hoben, another laborer. Kane will probably die.

Swinging From a Limb.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., April 3.—The body of a colored man, 40 years old and apparently a German, was found hanging from the limb of a tree in the woods at North Beach.

Georgia Railroad Matters.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 3.—The hearing of the application for a separate receiver for the Savannah and Western railroad of the Central Georgia system has been postponed.

A Tragedy In Public.

CRADDOCK, Neb., April 3.—In a street crowded with people Jesse Wooten of Beaver Valley shot and instantly killed his wife and fired a bullet through his own heart.

Conductor Charged With Bigamy.

PATERSON, N. J., April 3.—James E. Pine, a conductor on the Erie railway, was committed to the county jail here on a charge of bigamy.

STRIKERS DEFIANT YET.

Engineers and Firemen Will Strike In Spite of the Court.

THEY WILL STAND BY THEIR CHIEFS

The Boycott on the Ann Arbor Road Not to Be Taken Off—A Crisis In the Great Fight Against the Use of the Boycott. Sargent to Meet Ashley.

TOLEDO, April 3.—At meetings of engineers and firemen held in this city it was decided to stand by the Ann Arbor strikers, no matter what the decision of the court, expected to be handed down today, may be.

When asked what action would be taken in case the decision is adverse to the men, the leaders say that Ann Arbor freight will not be touched under any conditions.

The suggestion that this could not be done with respect to the law in case the courts decide all boycotts illegal, brought out the following statement:

Will Quit Without Orders.

"The injunctions have been sought to prevent Chief Arthur from ordering the engineers on roads connecting with the Ann Arbor to refuse to handle the freight and cars of that road because there is a strike there. The injunctions will be worthless. We have no doubt that the preliminary injunction granted by Judge Ricks will be made perpetual. That plans not prevent the men quitting work, does it?

"The fact is Chief Arthur has not the power to order a boycott or strike anyway. The members of the brotherhood simply quit without orders from any one, and it will be a task for the courts to reach the power which causes boycotts by means of injunctions. We shall simply resign from the service of our employers when we are asked to do Ann Arbor business."

Judge Ricks opened court at 9:30 o'clock this morning and will give his decision in the cases of the engineers who are charged with contempt of his mandatory order issued on March 11, in Cleveland. He will also read the decision reached by himself and Judge Taft on the application for the perpetuation of the order restraining Chief Arthur from ordering a boycott on the Ann Arbor road or a strike on roads handling Ann Arbor business.

Talk of Adjustment.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 3.—Grand Master Sargent of the Brotherhood of Firemen, has received a letter from the attorney of the Ann Arbor railroad, saying that President Ashley is anxious to have the trouble with the firemen settled. No direct overtures for a meeting to that end is made, however. Mr. Sargent leaves today for Toledo, where there will be a meeting will be held of the executive officers of various brotherhoods of railway employees. Reports will be made on the progress of the plan of the new federation, for which there is a provision in both the engineer's and firemen's constitution.

THE TOBACCO FACTORY BURNED.

But the Six Hundred Girls Will Be Shipped to Other Cities.

NEW YORK, April 3.—The 7-story brick building occupied by the American Tobacco company was destroyed by fire. Loss about $400,000, wholly covered by insurance. Between 500 and 600 girls were employed in the building, but arrangements were made to ship them all to Baltimore, where they will find temporary work in the factory of Gale, Ax & Co. The employees will leave for Baltimore today.

Almost Five Millions From Gambling.

NICE, April 3.—The receipts of the Monte Carlo casino during the year which ended on Friday were larger than in any other year of its existence. They amounted to 26,000,000 francs and warranted the announcement of a dividend of 225 francs per share, the largest dividend yet declared.

To Review the Election.

TRENTON, April 3.—A writ has been granted by Justice Van Cyck of the supreme court, directing a review of the recent election held to procure the incorporation of Barnegat Park, as a borough, upon a petition presented by the Holland Trust company of New York city.

A Long Horseback Ride.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 3.—John Rose Whipple of Boston and William H. Sellers of Haverhill, Mass., aged 22 and 20 years respectively, reached San Antonio on horseback, having made the entire journey from Boston in that manner.

Committed Suicide at Sea.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 3.—The Pacific Mail steamer City of New York reports the suicide of J. W. Simmons, a cabin passenger from New York, on the morning of Feb. 23, who is supposed to have thrown himself into the sea.

A London Leader For the Symphony.

BOSTON, April 3.—It is said here on the best of authority that the conductor of Herr Nikisch, in the leadership of the Symphony orchestra will be Henry Richter of London, the leader of the great orchestra of that city.

One Foot Burned Off.

BELLAIRE, O., April 3.—William Parks, a blacksmith, aged 35 years, single and living alone, dropped dead from heart disease. He fell with one foot in the grate, and it was burned off before he was found.

English Colony In Mexico.

VICTORIA, Mex., April 3.—In the state of Tampaulipas 500,000 acres of land will be colonized with English people, and the cultivation of sugar and other fruits will be undertaken on an extensive scale.

Colorless, Emaciated, Helpless

A Complete Cure by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is from Mr. D M. Jordan, a retired farmer, and one of the most respected citizens of Otsego Co., N. Y.

"Fourteen years ago I had an attack of the grand, and have since been troubled with my

gradually growing worse. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite, and what I ate distressed me terribly. I was totally discouraged and had no faith in medicine. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It was a benefit from the first dose I took. Before I had taken all the first bottle I noticed that I felt better, suffered less pain, and my appetite began to return. As I progressed, the color began to return to my face, and I began to feel strongly. After I had taken three bottles I was able to work without hurting me. Why, I got so hungry that I had to eat a piece a day. I have now fully recovered, thanks to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I feel very glad to tell all who know me what it has done for me."—D. M. JORDAN.

FROM HEAD TO FOOT.

That's what's the matter with the most of us. What's the reason? Poor circulation of the blood. The cause? The neglect of the feet. We have known severe cases of so called rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, weak joints, backache, so familiar to tortured sleepers in a short time by the use of Anti-Tire. Get up good circulation, healthy action, and how quick your pains and aches will vanish. One foot bath of Anti-Tire will do it. Trial size, 15c. Family size, 25c. A Clew, Perhaps, to a Robbery.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 3.—James Chambers of Lexington, Va., who was a beekeman on the C. and O. railroad, was found dead near here by a white tramp, who has been captured, and one or more negroes, whom he will not name. A package of 5-cent Columbian stamps was found on Jones and is thought to be a clew to the postoffice robbery in Charlottesville, Va., some time ago.

Chess Playing For Big Stakes.

KOKOMO, Ind., April 3.—The great chess contest between Lasker, the English champion, and Jackson W. Showalter, American's pride, will begin in this city on next Wednesday afternoon, and will consist of a series of 10 games up for a purse of $2,000 and the championship. The contest is expected to consume from four to six weeks.

A Fortunate Young Woman.

CHICAGO, April 3.—Marguerite P. Canfield, 22 years of age, has just received news that she is heiress to one-fourth interest in estates in the south and in Europe valued at something over $1,000,000. Miss Canfield has on three former occasions inherited an aggregate of $80,000.

Cattlemen Will Meet.

OGDEN, Utah, April 3.—The chairman of the executive committee of the Transmissisippi congress, to be held April 24, has received letters from 8 governors and 40 congressmen, all declaring their intention to attend. This convention will consider all subjects relative to cattle interests.

A Western Boy's Tragedy.

RAPID CITY, S. D., April 3.—Allie Boutwell, a 12-year-old boy, shot and instantly killed Emory Stucker, a 7-year-old boy, at a ranch near this city. The boys were playing hunter. Crazed by fear and regret, he is now wandering somewhere on the prairies.

Preached, Then Tried Suicide.

LYNN, Mass., April 3.—P. I. Kelly, a religious lunatic from Portsmouth, N. H., hatless and minus shoes and stockings, was arrested while attempting to conduct a religious service in the railway stations. He afterward made an attempt to commit suicide.

Sold His Children.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., April 3.—The wife of Ostrum Boright, a drunken laborer, died, leaving seven little children. Boright disposed of them to married couples at the rate of $5 for each child. The authorities threaten to prosecute the father.

PLOT TO KILL A PRINCE.

Ferdinand of Bulgaria Selected as the Victim of Dynamite.

FRESH NEWS FROM ALL OF EUROPE

Suitable Quarters Wanted For the American Embassy—Fear of Child Kidnaping Causes a Queer Superstition — Bullet Proof Cloth For the German Army.

BERLIN, April 3.—Three railway officials and four officers have been arrested for having plotted to kill Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria. Their plan is said to have been that they should blow up with dynamite the train which will carry him this week to Viareggio, where he will be married to Princess Marie Louise, daughter of the Duke of Parma.

Offices For the Embassy.

LONDON, April 3.—The appointment of Mr. Bayard to the new dignity of American ambassador at the court of St. James is received with general approval by the English press. The natural consequence of raising the diplomatic rank of the American representative is the renewal of the argument that the embassy should be adequately housed. The present quarters in Victoria street are small, dingy, almost shabby. Not one of even the little South American republics is so poorly provided for.

Military authorities throughout Europe continue to discuss the alleged invention of bullet proof cloth. It is announced that the Austrian minister of war has accepted cloth somewhat different from that of Herr Dowe, made by an officer named Sylander.

Germany is testing Dowe's invention, and the suddenly famous tailor, who was so poor he had to borrow a revolver to test his invention last fall, has been summoned before the emperor.

A Queer Indian Superstition.

A superstitious scare in a district of India, where a railway is being built, has had serious consequences. The rumor had gone abroad that 100 children were required for sacrifice in connection with building a bridge. The idea, which is an old one, prevails that children's heads are necessary for the foundation of bridges.

The villagers have taken extraordinary precautions to prevent their children being kidnaped. In one recent case several Afghan traders were killed by a mob, who suspected them of being kidnapers.

One of the quaint old customs of Easter time has come to have an unlooked for sequel. One day before Good Friday there is distributed in Westminster abbey one of Queen Anne's charities, known as the Royal Maundy. This consists of purses of coin given to deserving persons of exactly the same age as her majesty. This year the women in the group received the equivalent of $63 and the men $35 apiece, and much of the money is in silver pennies, now an obsolete coin. No sooner are the purses distributed than the waiting crowd of curiosity seekers pounce on the fortunate receivers of the queen's bounty and buy the coins for about three times their legal tender value.

Socialists Are Active.

BRUSSELS, April 3.—The socialists met in convention in Ghent to determine the attitude of their party in case universal suffrage should be refused them. A thousand French socialists led by the mayor of Roubaix marched in a body to the Convention hall. On all sides they were greeted with the cry, "Long Live the Revolution." No general strike was decided upon.

In Aid of Irish Exiles.

NEW YORK, April 3.—Representatives of several Irish societies of this city met to organize and arrange plans for a big annual meeting to be held in this city in the near future. The purpose of the meeting will be to urge this government to demand of England the freedom of the Irishmen now incarcerated in English prisons, charged with being concerned in the dynamite explosions in London nearly 10 years ago. It will also be demanded that the ban of exile be removed from Irishmen now living in America.

The Northwest Filling Up.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., April 3.—Reports from 50 towns in South Dakota give details of the immigration just now pouring into the state. Every village reports from 1 to 10 families from Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois or Wisconsin as having arrived during the week and settled on farms. Every railroad is running extra trains, carrying immigrant goods exclusively.

Washouts Along the Union Pacific.

PORTLAND, Or., April 3.—The first train over the Union Pacific railroad since Thursday arrived here at noon. There have been washouts along Snake river in eastern Oregon and Idaho, and big land slides in the mountains on this side of the Dalles have wiped out a half mile or more of track.

Passed the Sugar Bill.

FREDERICTON, N. B., April 3.—The sugar refinery amalgamation bill, which is similar to the one now before the legislature of Nova Scotia, has been passed by the legislature of New Brunswick without a dissenting vote.

Statue of Columbus Coming.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—One of the Spanish ships of war coming over to this country will bring to New York Sunole's statue of Columbus, which is to be erected in Central park.

Only One Store Left.

MACOMB, Ills., April 3.—In the village of Bardolph, seven miles northeast of this city, fire consumed the business part of the town with the exception of one store.

SHE SAVED HER BOY.

But In Doing So the Unknown Heroine Lost Her Own Life.

CHICAGO, April 3.—A neatly dressed woman was crossing the Grand Trunk tracks with a little boy at Twenty-sixth street. A locomotive came down on her. She picked up her child and managed to throw him clear of the track. The mother's body, thrown high in the air, fell again upon the track and was run over and ground up by the locomotive. The boy is 4 years old, and though he talks plainly he could only tell that he "Lived with mamma." He is in ignorance of his mother's fate.

White Cappers Shot.

JOSEPHINE, Ark., April 3.—At 1 a. m. a band of white caps went to the house of George Black, a colored tenant on the Krewson fruit farm, to whip him for settling in the neighborhood. Black fired on the foremost man with an old army musket. Black then ran, and one of the gang shot him with a Winchester rifle. Both men were brought to town by their friends. The man whom Black shot is Mr. Hilton Metcalf, a well to do carpenter. Black will get well. Metcalf is dying.

A Long Murder Trial.

CLEVELAND, April 3.—After a month's trial the jury in the case of Patrick Moran, charged with the murder of Theodore Blake-lee and James Fox, returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree.

Indian Tribe Disappears.

VICTORIA, B. C., April 3.—At Fort Rupert only about 30 persons remain of the once numerous tribe of Indians said to have consisted, within the memory of persons now living, of over 1,000.

THE NEW SPRING MANTLES.

With Huge Sleeves, Wide, but Not High Grows a Popular Colors.

If dresses prepared for the forthcoming season are elegant and costly, as they certainly are, the mantles are quite worthy in their variety and decided novelty to accompany them. The sleeves in every case are large, and few of them come much below the elbow, describing one huge puff with a lace frilling below. Capes formed like a double pointed shawl, reaching just to the waist and embroidered round, are new. They are generally made in velvet or cloth. Other capes are double and have two wide rows of black lace insertion, displaying a great deal of lace plaited into a front jabot. Indeed the new mantles would seem to

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE MOCKING BIRD.

A Capricious Little Mimic That Borrows Songs From the Whole Feathered Choir.

The capricious little bird depicted in the present cut possesses not only musical notes of its own, but it can at will assume the tone of every other bird, from the little humming bird to the mighty eagle. Some have been known to mimic the cat, the wolf and the raven, and one of them in a cage has taken off the creaking of a signpost in high winds. The mocking bird seems to like to lead other birds astray, at one time alluring the smaller birds with the call of their mates, and when they come near terrifying them by screaming like an eagle. At other times, sitting on the roof or chimney of a farmhouse, he pours forth the sweetest and most varied notes.

The Mexicans call him, in consequence, "the bird of 400 tongues." So excited do these birds become at times with their own music that they may be said even to dance. They gradually raise themselves from where they stand, and with wings extended whirl around as if to accompany themselves with their melody.

In the southern states the mocking bird sings from March to August, beginning with his own compositions and finishing up by borrowing from those of the whole feathered choir. He repeats his tunes with such artful sweetness as to excite both pleasure and surprise. Mocking birds often build their nests in bushes or fruit trees, but are so shy that if a person only look at the nest they forsake it. The young ones may be brought up in a cage and tamed, but only with great difficulty.

A Remarkable Midget.

To the list of tiny people including the famous Tom Thumb and Lucia Zarate must be added the "Princess" Topaze, who is just now delighting English children and their parents. The princess was born in Buenos Ayres of French parentage and is now 16 years of age, 15 pounds in weight and 20 inches high. Unlike the majority of dwarfs, she is perfectly well formed.

She stopped growing when 9 years old, and it is not likely that the process will be recommenced. "Princess Topaze," to quote a description given of her, "partakes of food precisely as do ordinary individuals. She is nervous, rather irritable and of incredible vivacity, has a passion for music and plays and dances with correctness." Her receptions are attended by Lyska, a Russian young lady who is 14 years old, 7 feet 8 inches in height and weighs 280 pounds. Lyska wears on her third finger a ring four inches round.

Chinese Dwarf Trees.

The Chinese have some peculiar practices. They not only cramp their women's feet and keep them from attaining a natural size, but they grow dwarf pine and oak trees in flower pots. They dwarf the growth of these naturally large trees by attaching the point of vigorous growth—the root. This they weaken all they can without absolutely killing the tree. They take a young seedling tree when only two or three inches high, cut off its tap root as soon as it has other rootlets to live upon and replant it in an earthen pot or pan. The end of the tap root is generally made to rest on a stone within it. Alluvial clay is then put into the pot, much of it is bits the size of beans, and just enough in kind and quantity to furnish a scanty nourishment to the plant.

A Composition on Boys.

A number of entertaining "compositions on girls" have been in print, and now here is one on boys that is given as the work essay of a little Buffalo girl: "The boy is not an animal, yet they can be heard to a considerable distance. When a boy bollers, he opens his big mouth like frogs, but girls hold their tongue till they are spoke to, and then they answer respectable and tell just how it was. A boy thinks his self clever because he can wade where it is deep, but God made the dry land for every living thing and rested on the seventh day. When the boy grows up, he is called a husband, and then he stops wading and stays out at nights, but the grewup girl is a widow and keeps house."

Money Makes the Mare Go.

The above proverb is so old that its origin probably has never been correctly dated. Like many other pithy ancient sayings, it seems to have had its origin in facts of human nature too self evident to be constructed. In a collection of very old "Glees and Catches," published in England probably as early as the sixteenth century, and even at that date old in the memory of those who used them, occur the following lines:

"Will you lend me your mare to go a mile?"
"No, she is lame, leaping over a stile."
"But if you will lend to me your mare,
You shall have money for your mare."
"Oh, fie, say you so?
Money will make the mare to go."

Grammar In Rhyme.

Nouns are names of things or men.
As John and William, ink and pen.
Pronouns take the place of names,
As she for Mary, he for James.
An adjective describes a thing,
The quiet country, bubbling spring.
Verbs can tell us what is done,
We read and write, and walk and run.
Adverbs tell us how, when or where,
Now, answer truly, what sons there?
Interjections leap right out
Before you think, as "Oh!" No doubt!"
Conjunctions fasten words together,
As "Clear and cold but pleasant weather."
Prepositions fasten words together,
And show their bearings, "Wings on birds."

TYPICAL OF CALIFORNIA.

A Colossal Statue to Be Exhibited at the World's Fair.

California's state building at the Chicago World's fair stands near the Fifty-ninth street entrance and is a reproduction of one of the old Dominican mission chapels of southern California. The architect departed from the original only to interject enough of the more ornate Moorish style to relieve the somber effect. The building is a clear story, with a great flat dome as a crowning feature, and the semitropical appearance will be heightened by roof gardens. The measurements of the structure are 300 by 110 feet, and the elevation of the dome is 80 feet. In this building Schmidt's colossal figure, typical of California, will be a feature. It was recently exhibited in San Francisco, where it created much favorable comment.

CALIFORNIA.

The statue only suggests, of course, the general characteristics of the state, as it was impossible to do more, especially with a state of such remarkably varied climates, products and characteristics as California. In every one of the main buildings California will have exhibits, but will excel, of course, in the departments of fruits and flowers, minerals and semitropical productions generally. A particularly interesting display will be that of the relics, where all the history of mining will be shown, from the pan and the rocker to the days when individual miners gave place to large companies.

A Queer World's Fair Visitor.

A couple of years ago Herman Zeitung, an Austrian tailor, created a wild sensation in Europe by having himself nailed in a box and shipped from Vienna to ZEITUNG IN HIS BOX.

Paris. Since then he has traveled in his peculiar way to all of the large European capitals. In St. Petersburg he had a narrow escape from being sent to minerals. The police mistook him for a dangerous anarchist, and it was only by the intervention of the American consul that he was at last released. His experience does not seem to have frightened him much, however, for on his release some one suggested that he ought to go to Chicago to the World's fair, and he immediately hustled himself bound up and expressed to Paris, whence he expects to reach the seacoast in some way or other, and there secure transportation to this side of the Atlantic. Zeitung is a harmless creature about 35 years of age. He made considerable money after his first trip by exhibiting himself in Paris, and he will probably adopt the same plan at the World's fair to recompense him for the inconvenience and discomfort of his queer trip to Chicago.

Manitoba's World's Fair Building.

The province of Manitoba consists of one vast valley of about 50,000 square miles of the most fertile land in the world, besides a large tract of pasture and wild lands. The province is traversed by two important railway lines. The population of Manitoba is about 175,000, of whom 10,000 are thrifty, hardy and honest Icelanders. Besides a few Mennonites, Indians and half breeds, the rest of the inhabitants are native Canadians and Englishmen. It is only natural that such a prosperous community should desire to be properly represented at the World's fair, and therefore when the Dominion of Canada devoted the space assigned to it by the commissioners to a building which is very little more than a clubhouse the Manitobans promptly arranged to put up a building of their own just outside the World's fair grounds. The structure will be four stories in height and 90 by 40 feet in dimensions, with a square tower in the center. It is an exhibition hall and a hotel combined, with capacity to entertain at least 500 people and exhibition room for many specimens of everything produced in the province. Wheat and other small grains, grasses, native and cultivated, fish, furs and game will be the chief articles exhibited, but the Winnipeg Historical society will have a fine display of relics. Hon. James A. Smart, Manitoba commissioner for the fair, is a young man of great energy, and having held the office of commissioner of public works for the province he is thoroughly informed and enthusiastic in regard to its possibilities.

CALLING TALK.

The Two Dear Friends Have a Lovely and Interesting Talk.

"Why, is it really you?"
"Looks like me, doesn't it?"
"So glad to see you."
"Thanks."
"I haven't seen you for an age. Where have you kept yourself?"
"Why, I don't know. I've been awfully busy for one thing, but I've been intending to come and see you for ever so long."
"Well, I'm awfully glad to see you now. Do take off your wrap and stay a long time, do."
"No, I can't; I can't, really. I've set out to make half a dozen calls this afternoon. I can't stay but a few minutes."
"And you haven't been to see me for so long! I think you ought to stay at least three hours."
"Oh, mercy! I couldn't think of it. But I will just throw back my wrap."
"Do, or you won't feel it when you go out. Lovely weather, isn't it?"
"Lovely!"
"Haven't we had a beautiful autumn?"
"Beautiful!"
"How late the leaves staid on the trees!"
"Didn't they, though?"
"And it seems to me I never saw them so beautiful as this fall, did you?"
"No, I don't believe I ever did."
"I think autumn is the loveliest season of the year anyhow."
"So do I. But the springtime's lovely too."
"Yes, it is."
"And I really enjoy the long winter evenings."
"They are lovely."
"But then the days are so short when the evenings are long."
"Yes, that's true and—what, you're not going?"
"Oh, I must."
"Why, you've hardly got here yet."
"Oh, I've made a long, long call."
"A long call. Well, what do you call a short call then? Do sit down."
"Oh, I must go."
"Really?"
"Yes, truly."
"I hate to have you."
"But I must."
"It's too bad; just when I'm enjoying your call so much and when I'm so glad to see you."
"Oh, thanks; I'll stay longer next time."
"Yes, you must."
"I will."
And after the ten minutes of "goodbys" the interesting and profitable call comes to an end.—Detroit Free Press.

Her Work.

"I am delighted to make your acquaintance, Miss Quickstep," exclaimed the professor eagerly. "I am no stranger to the excellence of your newspaper work. In my younger days I was proud to be a journalist myself. You are still connected with The Daily Bread of course?"
"Yes," replied the young woman modestly, "but I fear you overrate my ability, professor."
"Not at all," he rejoined with enthusiasm. "You have a power of description, combined with a felicity of expression, vigor of thought and wealth of metaphor possessed by few persons in your position. The range of your vocabulary and the force and originality of your similes have often struck me as remarkable."
"You flatter me, professor."
"Not at all, Miss Quickstep. The position of reporter on a great daily paper is a trying one. For a young lady to fill that position as successfully as you do is not only a vindication of your sex but a signal triumph. It fails to your lot often, does it not, to report events that are in themselves dull, commonplace and uninteresting?"
"Oh, yes."
"Of course it does! And you invest them with a descriptive charm that lends interest to the most ordinary everyday happening. Has your fair sex ever complained when there is some great event calling into requisition the services of a dozen reporters, into whose hands must be given the routine work, each attending to his own particular assignment, while to you is confided the task of giving to their disjointed and fragmentary portions of the report the appearance of a symmetrical whole by prefixing a carefully written introduction—a preliminary exhibition of vivid word painting, as it were. Is it not so?"
"Oh, yes, professor," assented the young woman somewhat wearily. "In writhings of that sort I generally do the introductory guff."—Chicago Tribune.

Looking for That Collateral.

John Allen, of Mississippi, tells a story of an elegant southern gentleman, unused to the ways of the world, who came to him one day, and with profuse apologies that he knew nothing about such matters and with some stammering, asked, "Ah, Mr. Allen, can you tell me how a gentleman should go about getting a little loan—a few hundred dollars, say—from the bank?"
"Certainly, colonel," said Mr. Allen; "I am only too happy to be at your service. It is quite an easy matter. All you have to do is to go to the bank and sign a note and give your collateral. The bank hands the money over to you."
The old gentleman thanked Mr. Allen most earnestly. He said he understood it now perfectly, and felt ashamed that he should be so ignorant in business affairs. He went away.
"About half an hour afterward I met the colonel again," said Mr. Allen. "He came up to me with a pained expression on his countenance and he asked: 'Ah, Mr. Allen, can you tell me where I can get that collateral?'"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

MUCH BUSINESS TRANSACTED AT LAST NIGHT'S SESSION.

Numerous Petitions Presented—The Finance Committee Report that the Sewerage Question Must be Settled by Petitions—Councilman Case Resigns and Mr. George H. Frost Elected—The Tax Budget Fixed for 1893—New Ordinances Presented and Adopted—Other Business.

The regular monthly meeting of the City Common Council was held last evening, with the following members present: Bird, Erickson, Fisk, Frazee, Gluns, Marsh, Millington, See and Weber. Mr. George Odlorne acted as Clerk pro tem. City Clerk Runyon was present but was indisposed.

The minutes of the March meetings were approved as read.

William Lee petitioned Council for a wholesale license to sell liquor at 25 Lee place. Referred to Committee on Licenses.

William C. Kelly, in a petition, asked permission to move a frame house from Union street and Westervelt avenue through Grange street to Elm place. Referred to Committee on Fire and Buildings and Street Committees.

Permission to move a two-story frame house from Westervelt avenue to Elm place was petitioned for by Levi Bunton. Referred to Committee on Fire and Buildings.

The petition of J. Kelly to move house from North avenue to Midway avenue, was referred to the same committee.

W. J. Tunison petitioned Council for permission to erect a frame awning in front of his store at 65 Broadway. Referred to Fire Committee, with power.

Permission to root the house corner Second street and Madison avenue with slate was granted Mr. E. H. Holmes.

Chas. M. Braeder's petition to erect a wagon shed corner Arlington and Union avenues was referred to the Fire and Building Committee.

Mr. Seely Edsall and others petitioned Council to lay a cross-walk across Front street at Sandford avenue. Referred to the Street Committee.

A petition was read from City Clerk Runyon, asking for a leave of absence for a month as his health had not been good of late and his physician had advised him to leave Plainfield for a month. The request was granted.

Mr. C. B. Clifton petitioned Council to grant him permission to move the house corner Park avenue and Fourth street, opposite Church. The request was granted.

Mrs. Mary A. Thickstun petitioned for permission to erect an addition to house No. 38 Central avenue. Referred to the Fire and Buildings Committee.

The residents of Belvidere avenue petioned Council to report that thoroughfare with macadam plank. Referred to the Committee on Streets.

The application of P. Worsner for a re-adjustment of her taxes was referred to the Finance Committee.

The pastor and members of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, in a communication, stated that the action of the Council in granting a license to sell liquor at the corner of Liberty and Third streets, near their church, was an insult to them. On motion the communication was returned.

Commander M. C. Dobbins and J. F. Hubbard of the two G. A. R. Posts, in a communication, asked the Council to make an appropriation to defray the Decoration Day expenses. Referred to Finance Committee.

The resignation of Councilman Rufus K. Case was presented by President Gluns, stating that he did so with regret, but Mr. Case's private duties compelled him to withdraw as he must either neglect one or the other if he continued in office. Mr. Fisk moved that the resignation be accepted, and said: I think I voice the feeling of the rest of the members, when I state that we regret our loss of so efficient a member. He was an earnest and hard worker both in the Council and on the committee. We accept it with deep regret."

Those who filed objections to the widening of Peace street, begged leave to withdraw them. The request was granted.

The reports of City Treasurer and Collector were read and referred to Finance Committee.

The Finance Committee made the following report in regard to the special election:

Hon. Common Council of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey:

In pursuance of the resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Council, held Monday, March 20th, 1893, viz:

Resolved, That it is the judgment of the Common Council that the Commissioners Filtration System of Sewerage, as recommended by the Committee of Citizens to the Common Council in their report submitted March 6, 1893, should be adopted for the city of Plainfield, and that measures should be taken to put in operation without delay, provided the citizens, by vote, authorize the raising of the necessary amount of money.

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and are hereby requested to arrange for a special election at which the question of issuing sewer bonds for an amount not exceeding $100,000 shall be submitted to the city.

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and are hereby requested to take under consideration the financial features of the citizens' report on the matter of sewerage and report to the Common Council their conclusions with such recommendations of approval, or change, as they may consider are for the best interests of the city.

The Finance Committee after careful consideration and examination of the matters referred to, and with the advice of the Corporation Counsel whose opinion on the subject is submitted herewith as a part of this report, begs to submit the following:

This report, owing to the laws of the State will vary in a number of cases from the recommendations of the Citizens' Committee and the Committee on Water and Sewerage, which had been adopted by the Council.

First. We find that the laws providing for submitting the subject to the vote of the people at an election to be held for the purpose, are so weak in other particulars, that it is not deemed best for the interests of the City that the Council should proceed to act under them.

Second. There is no law on the statute books of the State that permits the whole cost of building sewers to be borne by the city at large and bonds to be issued to provide money for payment of same.

The law that comes nearest to covering the recommendations of the above Committee and also the most satisfactory in other particulars, which we are advised by the Corporation Counsel as best for the interests of the city for the Common Council to act under, is the law entitled "An act to provide for the drainage and sewerage in cities of this State," approved April 7, 1890.

This act provides that the sense of the people on the same can be obtained by securing a petition, signed by the owners of at least three fifths in value of real estate in the said city, as shown by the assessors' books. After such petition has been presented to the Council, they may then proceed to employ competent engineers and mechanics, and cause surveys, plans and estimates to be made in such way as shall be fully considered under the powers given by this act.

The Council may then pass an ordinance for sewers or drains, to be constructed, which ordinance shall specify with particularity the streets to be sewered or drained.

It also provides that the Common Council may authorize, if they deem advisable, to construct sewers to tide or other water, and may take and appropriate lands to be used for that purpose, so far as necessary whether within or without the lines of any public street or highway in such township or municipality and whether without bonds of the township or city or not.

It also provides that in case the Common Council deem it expedient, they can construct with other authorities or other municipalities for the construction of sewers or drains at joint cost, and may purchase lands and erect buildings to deodorize and dispose of sewerage matters.

In order to provide for the payment of a sewerage system, the law provides that the Common Council may for the purpose of defraying the cost and expense of improvement, borrow money and secure the payment of same by notes and temporary obligations of the like, which notes and obligations may be renewed from time to time, until the work is done; that on completion of a certain portion of the system or the whole system, they shall immediately apply to the Circuit Court, for the appointment of commissioners, said commissioners shall make a just and equitable assessment upon the owners of lands and real estate fronting on the improvements which are particularly benefited thereby, in proportion as nearly as may be to the advantage each shall be deemed to acquire.

In case the said cost, damages and expense shall exceed the amount of said benefits, then the excess shall be assessed upon and paid by the city and no benefit shall be assessed in respect of the cost of any improvement or work, in so far as such improvements or work exceeds benefits to any of the whole property assessed, but the cost thereof shall be assessed upon and paid by the city. The payment for benefits assessed shall be collected by the Collector of Taxes in the same manner as other assessments and taxes are collected.

To provide for the differences between the assessments of the improvements, including the incidental expenses and the amount of the assessment, the Council shall after the assessment has been confirmed, issue the bonds of the city. These bonds shall be used to discharge the notes and temporary obligations of the city, issue as aforesaid, so far as they exceed in amount the assessment for benefits, and to satisfy and discharge whatever may remain due on the cost and expense of the work. Said bonds not to have over forty years to run, and to bear not exceeding six per cent interest, and to be made payable as nearly as practicable in equal amounts each year after the year of earliest issue.

The committee after careful consideration, as nearly as they can estimate, would say, that about one-half the cost would probably fall on the owners of property particularly benefitted; the balance on the city at large and they would recommend that the law proceed with the work as early in the season as possible. That the Corporation Counsel be requested to draw up the necessary form of said petition and that copies of same be printed and placed in general circulation for signatures; also that a number of public places, such as the City Hall, Post Office, Library and the office of the official papers be designated as places where persons wishing to sign such petition may do so. That the Corporation Counsel decides petition may be signed in this way, and in order that the public may be fully informed in regard to this matter, your committee would suggest that the Committee on Water and Sewerage be requested to have prepared a map showing the portion of the city proposed to be sewered, with the location of the mains and laterals, said map to be published in the newspapers, if possible, with full explanation.

Respectfully submitted,

C. J. FISK,
F. MARSH,
J. JOHNSTON,
Finance Committee.

WHEREAS, It is shown by the report of the Finance Committee and by the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, that there is no law that is satisfactory which provides for submitting the question of the issuing of sewers and the issuing of bonds to the people, at a special election to be held for that purpose; it is

Resolved, That the resolution adopted at the meeting of March 20th, respecting the calling of a special election for such purpose be and the same is hereby rescinded.

Resolved, That the Corporation Counsel be requested to prepare the necessary form of petition, requesting the Common Council to provide for the system of sewers in the City of Plainfield, as provided by the Act of the Legislature, approved April 7, 1890, and that said petition be put in immediate circulation, under direction of Committee on Water and Sewerage.

The Corporation Counsel was authorized to have petitions drawn for circulation as provided in the above report.

The lease of the court room for one year at $12 per month was authorized to be signed by the mayor. On resolution the sum of $600 was appropriated for the use of the G. A. R. Posts. The contracts for the building of the new engine house were awarded as follows: Mason work, W. C. Smith, carpenter work, Pearson & Gale, and plumbing, D. W. Littell.

Mr. Erickson moved that Architect Fogate be paid 2½ per cent. of the cost of erecting the new building for the plans and supervising the work. Also that Chief Doane receive 2 per cent. of the cost for superintending the work.

The Fire and Building Committee recommended the locating of 17 new hydrants without delay. The recommendation was adopted. The lease with the Water Company was ordered renewed.

The Committee on Streets reported that they had investigated the gravel pit nuisance, and found it to be as stated. The pit was filled with decaying matter, etc., and that they had authorized the Street Commissioner to cover it over with fresh earth.

An ordinance providing for the widening of Peace street, from Front street to the railroad, was passed on its final and second readings, ordered engrossed and advertised.

As the ordinance relating to the renumbering of the houses of the city went into effect to-day the Committee on Streets was authorized to employ such means as would hurry the matter forward.

On motion Mr. Odlorne was made City Clerk pro tem until the next meeting of Council.

A request was taken to fix the tax budget for 1893. On re-assembling Mr. Fisk offered a resolution, which was adopted, fixing the dog license at $3. The ordinance for the assessment of taxes was passed on its first and second readings.

It fixes the amount to be raised at $84,000.

The ordinance was ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. George H. Frost was elected to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Case.

The East Sixth street ordinance was adopted on its final passage. The bills were ordered paid and Council adjourned.

CHURCH OF OUR SAVIOUR.

How Easter was Observed at that Pretty Little Church.

In the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood, Easter services were appropriately celebrated last Sunday. A goodly number assembled at seven a. m. for the first service of the day, and at 11 o'clock, when the high celebration was held, the church was filled by an attentive and reverent congregation. Never before was the church so beautifully decorated, the altar being massed with Easter lilies, and on either wing growing plants. The side steps were banked with ferns and palms, while the lighted tapers rendered it appropriately brilliant. The rector, the Rev. S. P. Simpson, preached from the text: "I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore. Amen. And have the keys of hell and death." His treatment of the subject was at once instructive, interesting and comforting.

The surpliced choir sang the full ritual service of the Episcopal Church, including especially what is sometimes known as the Agnus Dei and Benedictus. Mrs Buckley, the organist, was assisted by Mr. Nelson on the cornet which added much to the beauty of the service.

The service will be repeated on Sunday next.

PERSONAL.

Miss Stokes of New York is the guest of Miss Hyde, of West Front street.

Mrs. David R. Weaver of Manning ave nue is visiting her mother, at White House.

The grand Spring opening at Mr. F. M. Hulett's music parlors, on West Front street, began to-day, and will be continued to-morrow. Those who were fortunate enough to be present to-day were given a rare musical treat on the piano, by Miss Sumbatoff, the accomplished niece of Miss Bartlett of West Front street.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Two Elevated Trains Collide.

NEW YORK, April 4. (Special.)—At One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street at 7:34 o'clock this morning the first section of an express which leaves One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street at 7:31, ran at full speed into the closely crowded rear car of a Sixth avenue local train, the engine of the express crashing into the car for a distance of six feet. The passengers were severely bruised. Escapes from death were marvelous.

An Escaped Convict's Revenge.

CARROLLTON, Ga., April 4th—(Special)—Last night all the business portion of this city was wiped out by an incendiary fire.

An escaped convict named Asbury Gentry is charged with the crime. He is notoriously revengeful.

A War Veteran Dead.

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 4, (Special.)—Lieut. John B. Franklin died at his home in Broadway, Union county, this morning. Lieut. Franklin was born in Elizabeth April 12, 1840, and when of age enlisted and served through the entire war.

"Leal's Cadets" Subscription Dance.

The "Leal Cadets" in their exhibition drill at the subscription dance at the Casino, last evening, showed that the preliminary work had been entered into with zeal, and that the drilling of the past year had not been wasted. Their work had a snap to it that was pleasing, and the audience of charming young ladies, chaperones and young gentlemen, warmly applauded. After the drill by the entire body, eight "banner cadets" gave an effective display of offensive and defensive tactics. Then when that was over, and the well-earned applause had subsided, the fine dancing floor of the Casino was occupied the rest of the evening in the less warlike pastime of dancing, in which, by the way, the cadets showed themselves quite proficient.

Capt. Edwards was in command of the cadets during the drill.

Grace Church Election.

The parish meeting of the congregation of Grace Church, to elect wardens, vestrymen and delegates to the convention and convocation, was held in the church last night, after the evening prayer service.

The following were elected:

EDITORIAL NOTES

In Essex, England, is a dairy whose work is done by machinery driven by electricity. Here is an idea for American butter and cheese factories.

"God protects the Hohenzollerns!" William of Germany is said to have exclaimed when the lightning missed him and knocked down two poor helle girls to whom he was talking through a telephone. If William really believes what he says, it is not impossible another kind of lightning will strike him one of these days and show him that a Hohenzollern is no better than anybody else.

Another interesting case involving the right of labor to boycott has been decided in the supreme court of New York. Charles Curran, a nonunion man, was discharged from his place as engineer in a Rochester brewery through the agency of a Knights of Labor assembly. The organization secured his discharge because he was nonunion. Thereupon Curran sued the president of the Knights of Labor assembly for $10,000 damages. Curran's attorney demurred to the plea set up by the defense, and Judge Adams of the supreme court sustained the demurrer. His verdict was that Curran had a right to sue for damages, because depriving man of his right to labor for the reason that he does not belong to a labor union is an interference with personal liberty that the law will not countenance. If labor unions could find some legal way to attack the employers against whom they have a grievance, instead of the poor laborers whom they designate as scabs, they would hit a more vital spot.

We shall soon know what the typical American is physically at any rate. It has required two years for Professor Sargent of Harvard gymnasium to make the measurements necessary to find out. He took them chiefly from college students of both sexes between the ages of 18 and 25. Nearly 10,000 measurements were made, not quite 5,000 being from the female form. When it is remembered that 65 measurements had to be made of each individual, the size of the undertaking will be better understood. Then the whole 650,000 had to be examined, and from the result the type selected that was to stand for the American man and woman. In making up the result the mathematical average was not taken of the measurements. The size of arm, chest, head, the height, length of leg, girth, etc., that occurred most often were selected as those which should represent the typical American. After these representative measurements had been collected, then two sculptors—a man and a woman—were chosen to model the perfect American male and female figures. Composite photographs as well as the measuring process were resorted to to obtain results. It is a pity the whole work could not have been done in time to exhibit the statues at the World's fair.

Powell's Prophecy.

E. P. Powell writes in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat that he has been amused and largely edified by the syndicated prophecies which have appeared touching people and things in this country in 1993. Then Mr. Powell tries his hand at the foretelling business too. Prophecy seems to be in the air.

For one thing Mr. Powell is glad the syndicated predictions are mostly optimistic and faithful to the spirit of American destiny. He says it is easy for anybody to declare that the United States will be the greatest nation on the globe in 1993. We have now a population equal to that of both France and Germany. The next great achievement before the race he believes is international sanitation. He predicts that in 50 years more there will not be left anywhere an unconquerable disease. Smallpox, typhus, cholera and yellow fever will be abolished. "Our pestilential swamps will be drained, our pestilential habits reformed." The aim to be immediately reached by mankind is a "cleanly manhood and long life on earth."

Mr. Powell recalls how 50 years ago John Tyndall was denounced as an atheist because he declared that instead of appealing to divinity to cure diseases mankind should begin to observe divine hygienic and sanitary laws, and thus not contract the diseases. We are less devout than the people of half a century ago were, "but if we are less devout we are also less unsanitary." People will still die in 1950, but Mr. Powell says the cause of death will not be disease, but heart failure, a dropping off more or less suddenly. Such death will be the result of the fierce, high pressure life which civilized man leads today. He strains every nerve in his body to exhaustion; then he takes stimulants to keep up. If he is so wildly excited that he cannot sleep, he takes narcotics. He whips his nerves with stimulants, then deadens them with drugs. There must come a reaction from this, and the next step in our progress will be the enlightenment of the people to the ruin wrought by powerful drugs.

The growth of a grand brotherhood among nations will be one of the achievements of the next century. It is cheerful to know that Mr. Powell feels sure young people will not waste their time any more over the learning of a few languages in 1993. Manual training will go hand in hand with mental training, and neither will scorn the other.

The Chief of the Brotherhood Not Done Fighting Yet.

VIEWS ON JUDGE TAFT'S DECISION.

Vice President Ashley Says the Engineers Ought to See Their Error Now—Gompers Says the Judges Must Be Enlightened. The Situation In Toledo.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The decision of Judge Taft concerning the Lake Shore engineers who refused to handle Ann Arbor freight was variously received in various quarters. The decision declared that the whole Brotherhood of Engineers was a conspiracy against the law of the country, and that Chief Arthur, as the head of that organization, was responsible.

When Chief Arthur was asked in Cleveland what he intended to do in view of the fact that the decision of the United States district court had been against the men he represents, Mr. Arthur smiled and said: "It's all right. I don't know what we will do now. I have not given the matter a thought since I heard that the engineers will be all right in any event.

"The court does not seem to understand what my duties are. I have not got such jurisdiction over the men as the court may think. I have no authority to order a strike. The men settle all these matters by vote and I merely give my consent if I see fit to do so. In this case I presume the court is under the impression that I had authority to order a strike."

"What will be the effect of this decision in the injunction suit against you?" was asked.

"I suppose it will enjoin me from issuing certain notices to the men."

"What will you do about it?"

"Can't tell just yet. I will not say any more about the matter until I see the decision in full."

"Will the brotherhood fight the contempt case further?"

"I cannot tell you anything about it now."

"Has the judge has held one of the men for contempt."

"Yes, so I notice, but the dispatch does not say what they are going to do with the man. Just wait until we hear further particulars and we may know more about what can be done in the matter."

Vice President James N. Ashley of the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan railroad, said in New York:

"The decision does not surprise me in the least, as under the common law boycotting is illegal, and the refusal to handle freight from a road because there is a strike there is boycotting. Now that this decision has been given the men know that by following rule 13 of their bylaws they are disobeying the law."

Samuel Gompers, president of the Federation of Labor, said:

"The time has passed when by a decision of a judge workingmen may be made a part of the sell on which they labor or be tied to conditions which are irksome to them. They will continue to demand their rights until they force judges to entertain a more enlightened opinion as to their purposes."

To Appeal the Cases.

TOLEDO, April 4.—Ask a Lake Shore or Ann Arbor striker what he thinks of the decisions, and he will probably reply, "Oh, I dunno." These two words just about express the general situation here at the present time. A great many seem of the opinion that the railroads have got the best of the deal inasmuch as the injunction against Arthur has been made perpetual.

On the other hand, those few strikers who do pretend to understand the situation claim that the injunction against Arthur does not affect them in the least, inasmuch as he has no power to call a strike or order a boycott, and the final discharge of the seven other strikers is an evidence that it will be almost impossible to enforce the new law compelling all employees while still in the service of a railroad to handle the freight of any other road on which there may exist a boycott.

Of Judge Taft's decision the attorneys say that it will practically have no effect upon the boycott question inasmuch as the grand chief has no power to order a boycott and compel the members to go out on strike. The part of Judge Taft's decision that is looked upon as most important is, of course, that in which he refers to the carrying out of rule 13 of the brotherhood constitution and of which he says: "All persons combining to carry out rule 13 of the brotherhood against the complainant have committed an overt act in furtherance of the combination, are punishable under the law.

"This is true, Judge, as already shown, the object of the conspiracy is to induce, procure and compel the defendant companies and their employees to refuse equal facilities to the complainant company for the interchange of interstate freight, as we have seen, is an offence against the United States by virtue of section 10 above quoted. For Arthur to send word to the committee of chairmen to direct the men to refuse to handle interstate freight, and for the men, in furtherance of rule 13, refuse to continue to handle the freight or threaten to quit, or to actually quit in order to procure or induce the defendant companies to violate the penal section of the interstate commerce law, would constitute acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, which would render them also liable to the penalty of the same section."

Both cases will be appealed at once to the courts of last resort. The contempt case will be taken to the supreme court on the ground that the defendant Lennon was not properly notified of the proceedings; that he was not subpenaed according to law; that he had not seen the order of the court or understood its import, and that the court has no jurisdiction in the matter, the plaintiffs, both being corporations organized under the laws of Michigan and there being no federal questions involved. The case against Chief Arthur will be appealed to the circuit court of appeals on the grounds that no evidence has been produced to show that the defendant was in any way guilty of conspiracy or that he invited any of his men to engage in a conspiracy against the roads in question.

Boston's Gas Scandal Spreads.

BOSTON, April 4.—The Evening Traveller says: "Sensational developments in the gas scandal, as a result of investigation by the legislature, reached a climax by the discovery that a number of New York capitalists are involved in one end of the deal."

Typhoid, Not the Cholera.

HALIFAX, April 4.—Carl Erikson, one of the sick immigrants brought here by the steamer Lake Superior, and who was thought to be suffering from cholera, died at the hospital of typhoid fever.

Great Damage Being Done by the New Jersey Fire Weeds.

PERKASIETVILLE, N. J., April 4.—The forest fires are raging in this vicinity, and rushing through the pine forests and underbrush in the immediate vicinity of [illegible] satellite villages early Friday morning, and has burned several thousand dollars worth of young timber. Another fire that came within a few hundred yards of Pleasantville scorched the barns and other outbuildings of the Pleasant valley farm, and another in the dense forest near Ring bridge creek and Snellville. Men were seen plying by the wagon loads with the horses running at full speed to fight the fire by back fires.

FERNVILLE, N. J., April 4.—The forest fires which broke out in Gallaway township and swept through the heavily timbered lands in that neighborhood are nearly extinguished. Five hundred men fought the fire, which extended for three miles along the Reading railroad tracks all night long. Fortunately the wind changed, drove the flames back south, directly over the same course they had just traveled.

SHOT THE WRONG MAN.

Two Men Killed In a White Cap Raid In Tennessee.

JONESBORO, Ark., April 4.—George Black, a respectable half breed Spaniard, had been notified by some one that he would have trouble if he ranked him to a negro. Saturday night about 10 o'clock a party of masked men halted in front of Black's door and called him out. He refused, and they proceeded to batter down the door. When the leader of the gang, W. J. Metcalf, stepped into the door with a drawn revolver, he was shot by the Spaniard. The gang then withdrew. Black then attempted to escape, but was shot and left for dead. When the party dispersed Black made his escape to town. Metcalf was brought in also, but both died. Metcalf refused to divulge the names of his accomplices, but stated that Black was not the man they were after.

To Fight the Bricklayers.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., April 4.—At a meeting of the building contractors of this city it was decided to import nonunion men to take the places of the striking bricklayers. It was claimed that enough men could be secured from Boston and the eastern part of the state to beat the strikers, and it is expected the contracts will be let immediately. The strikers are equally confident of winning their fight for eight hours and succeeded in sending back 13 nonunion men who had arrived in the city.

A Destructive Storm.

CITY OF MEXICO, April 4.—Further particulars of the destructiveness of the recent storm which swept the gulf coast of Mexico have been received The damage and losses to shipping interest will reach many thousands of dollars. Three coast schooners are reported missing. One schooner was swamped near Tuxhan and two of the crew were drowned. It was loaded with lumber, and the entire cargo was lost.

Only Pure Bred Stock Free.

BOSTON, April 4.—A circular from Secretary Carlisle refers to the importation of live animals under the new laws, and directs that on and after April 5, 1893, no animal which is brought into the United States from foreign countries for breeding purposes shall be admitted free of duty unless the importer furnishes a certificate of the record and pedigree in a form prescribed by the department.

Stage Went Down the Gorge.

COLORADO SPRINGS, April 4.—One of the Bostwicks & Co. Cripple Creek stages was overturned, throwing out nine passengers, all of whom were more or less seriously injured. The accident occurred on the Cheyenne Mountain road, about 10 miles southwest of the city. The wheel horses started to run away and the entire outfit went over a steep declivity, the stage turning completely over.

Not on Coney Island.

NEW YORK, April 4.—It was rumored in Brooklyn that efforts would be made to prevent Corbett and Mitchell from fighting at Coney Island. Sheriff Courtney said in regard to the matter: "I will do my duty and prevent any violation of the law in the arena at Coney Island or before any other club in the county where I have the authority and know that the law is being violated."

Married a Soldier.

NEW YORK, April 4.—There was a brilliant wedding in Trinity chapel, when Miss Nellie Mattillon was married to Lieut. Brewster Wheeler, first lieutenant of ordnance, United States army. There were present many officers in uniform. Lieut. Lieut. Wheeler has been ordered to serve at Chicago in the ordnance department during the coming Columbian exhibition.

Troops For the Choctaws.

CHICAGO, April 4.—General Miles wired Colonel Townsend at Fort Leaven worth to send two companies of the 10th cavalry among the Choctaw Indians in the Indian Territory. This was done in compliance with instructions received by the general from the war department.

To Protect the Bookmakers.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The argument on the constitutionality of the Ives pool law, in the case of Peter De Lacy against his own tenant, was adjourned for a week. But it appears that the race people are going to take action to protect race track betting.

Revolver and Stiletto.

SCRANTON, Pa., April 4.—Guiseppe Gianelli, an Italian, was shot and instantly killed in Dunmora last evening by Francisco Grippo, a fellow countryman. Grippo was stabbed several times with a stiletto. They were playing cards for beer.

They Jumped and Died.

POINT ARENA, Cal., April 4.—Fire broke out in the Grand hotel and spread rapidly to other buildings in the town. About a dozen structures, comprising most of the business portion, were destroyed. Two men jumped from a third story and received injuries from which they died.

For Murder, Their Train Robbery.

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—Colonel Holgood, partner of Train Robber Bunch, was tried in Franklinton for the murder of Bunch and was acquitted. He will now be tried on the charge of train robbery.

LIST OF APPOINTMENTS

Curtis and Hamlin Get Good Places In the Treasury.

BABY RUTH SEES THE DOG ROLLING.

Fears That There Will Be Wholesale Removals Disturb Some of the Bureau Chiefs—The Senate Listens to a Two Hours' Speech by Turpie.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The president sent the following nominations to the senate:

William Edmund Curtis of New York, to be assistant secretary of the treasury, vice Genio M. Lambertson, resigned.

Charles S. Hamlin of Massachusetts, to be assistant secretary of the treasury, vice John H. Goss, resigned.

James H. Eckels of Illinois, to be comptroller of the currency.

James J. Willis of Florida, to be deputy fifth auditor of the treasury.

Henry W. Egner of New Jersey, to be collector of customs for the district of Newark, N. J.

L. Stobo Farrow of South Carolina, to be second auditor of the treasury.

John B. Brawley of Pennsylvania, to be auditor of the treasury for the postoffice department.

James J. Willis of Florida, to be deputy fifth auditor of the treasury.

Henry W. Egner of New Jersey, to be collector of customs for the district of Newark, N. J.

Dudley O. Watson of Michigan, to be collector of customs for the district of Michigan.

John Tracy of New York, to be superintendent of charities for the District of Columbia, vice Mrs. Wells, resigned.

Jones G. Moore to be postmaster of Pratt City, Ala.

In the senate House of Massachusetts submitted a resolution, which was ordered to lie on the table for discussion, declaring it inexpedient to amend the constitution so as to provide for the election of senators by the people. Incorporated in the resolution are statements amounting practically to head notes of an argument against the proposed changes as essentially changing the character of the senate as conceived by the framers of the constitution; as a transfer of selection of senators from the legislatures to party conventions; as substituting pluralities for majorities and as tending to fraud and corruption. Senator Turpie of Indiana spoke for two hours.

BABY RUTH SEES THE DOG ROLLING.

Fears That There Will Be Wholesale Removals Disturb Some of the Bureau Chiefs—The Senate Listens to a Two Hours' Speech by Turpie.

The children of Washington had their annual egg rolling at the White House grounds, and had as pleased viewers of their sports the President and Mrs. Cleveland, most of the members of the cabinet and other people of note. The day was a fine one and fashionable Washington turned out in force. The children for the time being owned the grounds and even the White House building. President Cleveland received an immense load of them at 10 o'clock, and they passed in and out of the ground floor. The president expressed himself delighted with the happy faces they were having. Baby Ruth watched the arriving children from the library window. She was only visible a few moments, and when it was time for her usual ride was made comfy and bowled down to the carriage that was waiting for her.

Capital News In Brief.

Considerable consternation has been caused among employees of the state department by reports that there would be wholesale removals of bureau chiefs of the department, whose places have generally been almost life ones.

The big cruiser New York will be given the same sort of trial as has been prescribed for the Detroit, which is to be tried at Newport this summer.

Unless public business makes it impossible the president will open the World's fair on May 1 and will personally push the button that starts the machinery in motion. Whether Mrs. Cleveland will go though is not definitely settled.

The secretary of the treasury has ordered the commanding officers of all the revenue marine vessels at New York to report to Rear Admiral Gherardi, United States navy, for duty in policing New York harbor during the naval review on the 22th inst.

Sidney Lashelles, who under the alias of Walter S. Beresford, son of Lord Beresford of England, swindled some of the best known people in New York and Georgia, who introduced him into their families and cashed his checks, will have to serve out his term in the Georgia prison.

Disturbed an Indian Grave.

OLDTOWN, Me., April 4.—Mary Ann Gleason, an Indian, married a month ago, was buried last week. Sunday, Wilmor Mitchell, living near the Indian graveyard, saw skulkows moving about the graves. She gave an alarm, and Indian policemen chased the man to the Milford shore, where they lost them. Mrs. Olsen's body was found to have been taken from its coffin. What the object was is a mystery.

A Negro's Ghastly Ride.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 4.—Trainer Norman (colored) was shot and killed on Arsenal hill by William Lewis, a negro, who fought about Annie Loomis. After killing his victim Gray loaded him into a buggy and drove into town, where, deserting the vehicle and corpse, he fled and escaped arrest.

Mr. Roberts Out, Mr. Nebeker In.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Assistant Treasurer Ellis H. Roberts has finally succeeded in relieving himself of the duties of public office. After business with the clearing house E. H. Nebeker, treasurer of the United States, took charge of the subtreasury, and Mr. Roberts stepped out.

They Jumped and Died.

Deaf for a Year

Caused by

Catarrh in the Head

Catarrh is a CONSTITUTIONAL disease, and requires a CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY like Hood's Sarsaparilla to cure it. Read:

"Three years ago, as a result of catarrh, I suddenly lost my hearing and was deaf for more than a year. I tried various things to cure it, and had several physicians, but without any improvement was apparent. I read about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and concluded to give myself a fair trial under the care of a specialist whom I consulted. I took three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and to my great joy my hearing began to return. I continued taking it for a few months, when I had taken about six bottles, and my hearing was perfectly restored. I kept on till I had taken three more. It is now over a year and I can hear perfectly. I am thankful that I am very little with the catarrh. I consider this a remarkable cure, and cordially recommend to all who have catarrh." HERMAN HICKS, 30 Carter Street, Rochester, N. Y.

Persist In the Boycott.

NEW YORK, April 4.—At the meeting of the cutters in Beethoven hall 15 new members were initiated, some of them converts from the K. of L. and others nonunion men. The United German workers have issued a circular giving a full list of all the firms belonging to the Clothing Manufacturers' association to their customers, which is in face of the temporary injunction served upon the officers of the federation. It was decided to leave the question of a general strike among the tailors to the discretion of the United Brotherhood of Tailors.

New York's Sick Senator.

ALBANY, April 4.—At the meeting of the senate Mr. Dailey, who has been on the sick list, was in his seat. Senator Cantor was in town, but not sufficiently recovered to attend the session. Senators Bloodgood and Floyd-Jones were absent owing to illness. A lengthy discussion took place on a petition for woman suffrage in village elections. In the assembly only routine business was transacted.

An Explosive Disinfectant.

ST. LOUIS, April 4.—Attorney C. L. Hamm while walking along the street dropped a bottle supposed to contain a disinfectant, but which druggists declared a dangerous explosive. An explosion followed and 12 passersby were burned, none seriously except Hamm himself, whose entire side was badly burned.

Jackson Still Lives.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 4.—John Jackson, the colored man whose head was torn in by a blow from an ax in the hands of Thomas Wesley, during a quarrel early Sunday morning, is still alive, and his case is the most singular that has ever came under the observation of the jail surgeon, Dr. Curtis.

Defied Danger and Died.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., April 4.—Mrs. Elizabeth Coates, aged 68, was instantly killed at Lang's Crossing by the 2 p. m. Mount Vernon express. She had been in the habit of walking the tracks and had been repeatedly warned, but always replied that the train had not been built that could kill her.

Chretan's Still Belligerent.

PARIS, Tex., April 4.—The Chretan militia promised Agent Bennett that they would disband and go home, but they are still at Goodland and have made no move to leave. Locke is still at his fort at Antlers, using all precaution against a surprise.

A Citizens' Organization Protests.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Three hundred members of the city club crowded into Gilroy's office and presented a petition for the removal of Commissioner of Police Cleaning Thomas Brennan. The mayor adjourned a hearing until April 18.

The General Rudeau Case.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The suit of the United States against General Adam Rudeau in the United States circuit court was taken from the calendar, the case having been compromised. The questions involved were purely legal.

Got Away With $10,000.

CUBAN REVOLUTIONISTS

An Expedition Leaves Florida to Free the Island.

THE CUTTER MCLANE TO STOP THEM.

Fighting Down In Rio Grande Do Sul. Five Hundred Reported to Have Been Killed—The Revolutionists Are Victorious In Alegrete.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The Times publishes the following dispatch from Key West: The revolutionary expedition against Cuba is about to leave here on its mission. The greatest excitement prevails among the people, while the federal officials are anxious but vigilant. It is regarded as certain that the night will witness the attempt of the revolutionists to get away. The revenue cutter McLane is here. Her officers and crew have been equipped for immediate service, her men have been armed to the teeth, and everything is in readiness to intercept the revolutionists if they make a start.

The McLane has got steam up ready for pursuit. The commander is being kept constantly informed by men on shore as to the movements of the revolutionists, but their plans for departure, made during the past month, have been so carefully concealed that it is hard to discover what they are doing or what move they intend to make.

What the exact force of the revolutionists is cannot be stated, but they certainly number between 300 and 400 men. The small boats have been equipped for immediate service, her men have been armed to the teeth, and everything is in readiness to intercept the revolutionists if they make a start.

RIO JANEIRO, April 4.—Details have reached here of the battle fought on March 27 at Alegrete, in the state of Rio Grande do Sul, between the state government troops and the revolutionists. According to the report which has reached this city the slaughter of white troops was frightful, while the loss of the revolutionists was also heavy.

The revolutionists held an intrenched position at Alegrete, and when the state troops attempted to drive them from their vantage ground they made a most desperate and successful resistance.

It is said that there were 1,500 combatants engaged on both sides, and that of this number 500 were killed and a very large number wounded.

The state troops were driven back and the revolutionists have now undisputed sway at Alegrete, which place is used as the base of operations against the government. It is said that the state troops will be re-enforced and another attempt made to drive the insurgents from their position.

The national government has as yet taken no active steps to support the state government.

Escorting a Big Forger.

NEW YORK, April 4.—A. L. Drummond, chief of the secret service of the treasury department, started for West Superior, Wis., with Albert A. Cockwalladar, who is accused of robbing the National bank of which he was president of $40,000. The prisoner was arrested in Brazil. He admitted his identity before Commissioner Shields.

A Receiver Asked For.

PITTSBURG, April 4.—The bill of William J. Mendshall of Delaware, asking for the appointment of a receiver for the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio Railway company, together with Judge Acheson's order appointing G. DeCourcey, have been received in the United States circuit court in this city.

Wright's Second Chance.

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. Y., April 4.—The second trial of Charles A. Wright of Westport for the murder of Mrs. Hidella Taylor in March, 1891, was begun here. Wright was convicted one year ago and sentenced to be electrocuted. The court of appeals reversed the conviction and granted a new trial.

The Shucker Weakened.

BALTIMORE, April 4.—James Williams and Arthur Padelford, members of the swell Baltimore club, made a wager that one could eat more oysters than the other. After each had eaten 11 dozen and three the shucker declined to open any more, and the contest was declared a draw.

Must Not Sing That Song.

BOSTON, April 4.—Judge Colt granted a temporary injunction against Rogers & Tompkins, restraining the singing of the song, "I Wonder if Dreams Come True," by the "Belle in the Woods" company. David Henderson of Chicago claims to hold a copyright upon the song.

Trial of a Cup Defender.

BRISTOL, R. I., April 4.—The trial of the Navahoe, the Carroll 84-footer, took place with Captain Barr in command. Nat Bernhard, Royal Phelps Carroll, the owner and two other gentlemen were among those aboard.

Traced to Detroit.

TORONTO, April 4.—Cashier Kertland of the Imperial Loan and Investment company, has been traced to Detroit. His shortage will reach $10,000. The money was lost in bucket shops.

The Gerry Society's New Home.

From Friends of Home Rule.

NEW YORK, April 4.—It has been announced that 22 $500 subscriptions to the Irish home rule fund have been received.

SUSPICIOUS DEATHS.

Newman's Wife Had Her Life Insured and Then She Died.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 4.—A child belonging to John Newman died on Friday morning after vomiting all night. Two other children died three years ago with similar symptoms. Mrs. Lena fell Newman's wife insured her life and immediately after was taken sick with stomach trouble. She openly accused her husband of trying to poison her. The boy who died on Friday was insured for $170, but the policy will not be paid. An inquest is now in progress

Lord Stanley Slighted.

TORONTO, April 4.—There is much talk in the city over the fact that the members of the house of commons did not present the governor general with an address at the close of the session. Both Lord Lorne and Lord Lansdowne were presented at the close of the last session of parliament during their terms of office with addresses from the house of commons. The oversight in the present case is to be explained by the character of the prorogation, which, though short, was exceedingly busy, and by the fact that scarcely more than a score of members remained for the closing ceremonies.

Steamships at Auction.

NEW YORK, April 4.—An auctioneer sold the three steamships of the United States and Brazil Steamship company to satisfy the judgment of creditors.

A California Tragedy.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 4.—Carl Rock shot and fatally wounded Emilie Schneidrashcheim and then blew out his brains. The woman had deserted him.

Killed by Lightning.

MACOMB, Ills., April 4—Lightning struck Wilcox's lumber office at Bardolph during a rainstorm and instantly killed one man and injured another.

Many of the new bonnets and hats are composed of two colored straws, the crown of one and the brim of another, while some of the newest have these broad spatanding brims of quite a different color to the outside, black being lined with pink straw, or sometimes with green or with the new tint called "sveque," being that particular tone of violet bordering on pervenda, which the ecclesiastics often favor.

A STYLISH HAT.

Manilla straws are also the mode, in such mixtures of four as brown, pink, tan de nil and gold, heliotrope, brown, grey and green. Another class of material appears to be large, meshed thread netting through which the straw is interlaced in many colorings, one of the favorites being champagne and gray.

Under the first Napoleon young girls wore a most bewitching hat called the "paysanne," which had the flaring brim standing well up above the face, yet still recalling a peasant hat adapted to bright summer sunshine. This pretty shape is one of the novelties, and many charming faces will doubtless be seen beneath it as the season advances.

Low crowns may be said to prevail. Some are barely three inches across; others are wide and flat and hardly exceed as all.

The empire bonnet, with its upstanding, overshadowing brim, is seen, but as it adds a good 10 years to the wearer's age it is not likely to be extremely popular.

Another new thing in hats as well as bonnets is a piping of color carried between the plain and figured material of a medium tinge and having a great effect. Imagine a black amour plait alternating with a cord of gold, petunia, green or red, or say other color in fact. Such hats there is a new tone called "champagne," which has a dash of orange in it. This is often blended with green. A long range of hats appears in plain silks, grenes and "sveques," as well as rustic chips in "art colors."

Hats are being made with chip crowns, the under part of the brim or a different color from the exterior brim, and a curious novelty is the introduction of a broad band of color around the crown. With all this variety of fancy straws, it will be an easy matter to match almost any of the new dress fabrics.

Our first cut depicts a straw hat with black brim and green crown. It is trimmed with a black velvet bow, large jeweled pins and black feathers. The brim inside is ornamented with two rows of narrow green straw—a very effective trimming. The second cut shows a natty little hat of black straw, trimmed with green velvet and bunches of violets.

The Big Yerkes Telescope.

CHICAGO, April 4.—President Harper of Chicago university says the Yerkes telescope will be located on Lake Geneva, Wis. Martin A. Ryerson has given the university until July 1, 1893, to raise the $460,000 necessary to secure the $300,000 he proposes giving.

He Took Morphine.

PITTSBURG, April 4.—At 9:15 p. m. William R. Childs, 32 years old, a physician of this city, took an overdose of morphine in a New York flat, where he has stopped for the past few days. He was taken to New York hospital unconscious.

Suspected of Arson.

BIDDEFORD, Me., April 4.—Jacob and Michael Rosenbaum, members of the dry goods house of Rosenbaum Brothers, whose store was damaged by fire on the night of March 11, were arrested, charged with arson.

WIVES HAVE DUTIES.

PREPARING AND KEEPING THE HOME NOT THE ONLY THING.

American Girls Are, as a Rule, Too Independent When They First Assume the Marriage Contract—Where Wives of Other Nations Excel and Fail.

There is no mistake about it that American wives are unlike anything else of the sort in the world, and yet you would suppose the word wife must mean about the same thing the world over. An American girl always improves the marriage with a certain sense of claiming her rights. She may not have distinctly in mind that she is wronged, or likely to be wronged, but she puts herself instinctively in a fencing attitude, and her first quarrel will probably be to show that nobody can lord it over her. This sentiment is caught in the schools, especially in girls' schools, and while it is associated with a very proper sense of freedom, it can also do a great deal of mischief. The English wife makes no claim to know anything about her husband's affairs. The American girl expects to be taken in full confidence, and in this I believe she is right. She ought to know, and she ought to share the consequences of knowing. But so far as I can observe, American wives have not yet come to a conviction that they are to share in the responsibilities of home building. They recognize a certain amount of duty about a house, but if bankruptcy secure not one woman in 100 feels any responsibility as to the occurrence or to the debtors. She simply intends to hold to all she fragments that she can under the law.

In other words and all around, the American wife does not go into the partnership with a full surrender of herself. Divorces are now one to every ten marriages, and she has a half formed or a quarter formed sentiment that she may some day escape the wedding bond if she finds it disagreeable. Of course this reserve of the fullness of the gift, this not quite consummated union, tends directly to mischief. It is likely to breed quarrels, if not a divorce. As a rule, we may set it down that a divorced woman is a husk without a soul. Oh, yes, there are exceptions, but not many. Our true hope for ourselves is to enter into an honest, full marriage—not to love only, but to do our duty. You can not crawl out of the wreck of a shattered home fit to begin the experiment of building another. The really married American woman makes as near a model wife as the world can show. I think the French wives of the middle class are, on the whole, the best product of Christian marriage.

Then I have an idea that husbands and wives live too much in different worlds. This is not so with English people, and especially not so with German and French. There the wife at least understands on a quick how to do her husband's work. I do not know one wife in twenty who can harness or unharness a horse or milk a cow. Most of them couldn't tell a human to do it. When I first married, I had an occasion to drive a horse home, and either leave it all right in harness or unharness it myself. John told me next day that I had pulled the harness into pieces—had unbuckled every buckle but the right ones, etc. I felt vexed and resolved to learn the art, and I have. I can put on and take off a horse's jacket as neatly as I can do it for Ned. But of course Ned is almost always my horse boy, ready to harness and to drive for me.

Only will you tell me why a farmer's wife should not be able to milk a cow or a greengrocer's wife to take his place for a day and sell and keep books? I have watched the effect of this full co-operation, and it works admirably. I know a Welsh merchant who keeps a corner grocery and fruit store, and the next door is his wife's millinery store. She keeps the books with her daughter's help, and the husband pushes all moneys and accounts through the glass windows between the two stores. The Englishman would not agree to this; he and his wife work together in all but money matters. Cash and accounts he holds to be sublime affairs quite beyond the comprehension of the female sex. Another friend of mine is a commission merchant and is working on a small capital, but his wife takes the place of a clerk, and so they make the years pull through, always gaining a little.

Do I mean to say that it is the duty of an American wife to milk cows and run groceries and market wagons and make hay? Then another class shouts quite as loudly to know if I think a man has a right to marry a woman and turn her into a cook or a servant. My dear siblings, it is all in a nutshell. You have just as much right to take right hold, according to your circumstances, and make meat ready for your husband has. He has no more right to make a drudge of you than you have to make a drudge of him. But it so happens in this life of ours that some part of necessary doing or having an obligation to do a great deal of work, and some of it is not pleasant. I conceive the real American wife is the one who cheerfully takes up the work in common. It is not in the nature of things that most of husbands can support wives without work. I am sorry to believe that we are not growing in our respect and honor for work.

The old style New England woman had as hard a lot as any one ever had, but she honored it. Now, I believe with W. T. Harris that we have to do less work than formerly and machinery is still going to lessen it for both man and woman in the future. We need not "be slaves," but we shall never be able to live soundly and womanly without earning our bread. Perhaps my ideal is best expressed in that co-operation—a family should be a fully co-operative body. Don't think you are rising above your level by showing signs of idleness and freedom from toil and care, or that you are lowering yourself by any possible work. I like to make hay. We only demean ourselves by being ashamed of work.—Mary E. Spencer in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Indiscriminate Saving.

"Save the bits of twine. Wind them on this ball." So said an economizing housekeeper to her new "help" as the latter made a roll of the paper in which a leg of mutton had been sent from the market, and put paper and twine into the kitchen fire. The "help," a sensible young person, looked questioningly at her mistress, making no reply. Here was an opportunity not to be slighted; the woman must convert this young person. She said, "Never throw away anything that can be of use." The servant "called back."

"The cord was greasy; it was not fit to use again."

It was the preacher who was converted this time, and she sensibly confessed herself more zealous than wise.

Nothing will take the place of a bit of twine, as all housekeepers have been convinced, but we prefer that which has been used on packages containing other goods than sausage, fish or suet. There are other odors more grateful to the sense of smell.—Good Housekeeping.

JAPANESE AND MOORISH FRETWORK CHEAPLY IMITATED.

Transoms, Doors and Halls Can Be Easily Beautified and Improved by the Deft Use of Narrow Strips of Tin Stained to Imitate the Natural Wood.

The Japanese and Moorish fretwork that does so well for many things is too universally popular to require either comment or commendation. But a substitute that can be twisted to perform all its functions with equal strength, if with less beauty, and at the same time to cost infinitely less may prove of interest to womankind.

ONE OF THE TRANSOMS.

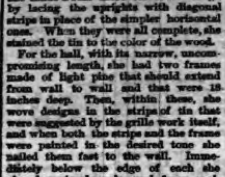
Ordinary sheet tin cut in narrow strips can be and has been by at least one clever woman woven to closely resemble the fretwork and has been put to various uses with perfect success. The strips were cut by the tinsmith and were sent to their destination in readiness for use, but all other portions of the work were done by the mistress of the house with her own able hands.

The house which she had rented was lacking in some of the fine elements of finish that her ambition demanded, and she set to work to supply the lack. There were transoms over the parlor and dining room doors, and the long hall was unbroken by either arch or other device for breaking its monotonous lines. But today the little home is a model of taste and every one of those objectionable features has disappeared.

From each transom the swing piece was removed. Across the top of the open space she tacked slips of tin an inch in width and between each two left an equal space, and when that was done she tacked each tightly and firmly to the lower side of the transom. Then she cut longer strips to run crosswise to those already in place, and these she wove in and out of the perpendicular strips till the entire space was filled with a network of the tin.

Over the door she made the space exactly equal between all the strips, both vertical and horizontal, and obtained an effect quite similar to that of the simplest design in fretwork. Over another she varied the pattern by placing the horizontal pieces at distances of two in place of one inch, and for a third space she made a still wider allowance, finding by trial the uprights with diagonal strips in place of the simpler horizontal ones. When they were all complete, she stained the tin to the color of the wood.

For the hall, with its narrow, uncompromising length, she had two frames made of light pine that should extend from wall to wall and that were 18 inches deep. Then, within these, she wove designs in the strips of tin that were suggested by the grille work itself, and when both the strips and the frames were painted in the desired tone she nailed them fast to the wall. Immediately below the edge of each she placed a simple pole, and from each pole hangs a curtain that decks the hall and adds to it the beauty of its color.



THE HALL ARRANGEMENT.

The curtains themselves, though cheap, are worthy of note, for the materials are simple as can be got, and the effect is a thoroughly excellent one. They are made of the popular blue denim, but have been washed and boiled till the blue is softer by far than when they came from the shop. Across both top and bottom is stretched a band of the lighter side, while the curtain proper shows the darker, and on each band are painted poppies in their glowing splendor.

A Novel Umbrella Holder.

Quite a foreign looking umbrella holder was evolved by an ingenious woman, who saved and begged from her friends all the bits of decorated china she could secure. Then she got a large file and covered it half an inch thick with a layer of putty. Into this she pressed her bits of china firmly and as close together as possible, and when dry she gilded the little ridges between the pieces. A large pot for a palm was decorated in the same way, with equally good effect.

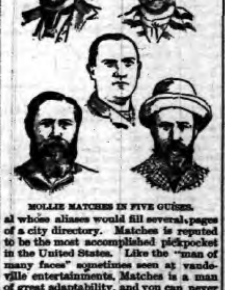
There will be many unbidden and unwelcome guests in Chicago during the World's fair. The crooks of every nation find in large gatherings of people on pleasure bent the most profitable field for plying their trade. Pickpockets, confidence men, bunko steerers, green goods men, thimble riggers and even sand baggers will be there in force in the hope of getting rich in the very few months during which the fair will be open.

The police of Chicago will of course endeavor to give the light fingered gentry a warm reception. Noted crooks will be spotted as soon as they arrive and will be shadowed unceasingly. By this plan it is believed that many rascals who play only for big stakes will become disgusted by the lack of opportunity to ply their trade and will shake the dust of Chicago from their feet.

The police commissioners propose, if practicable, to have two policemen from every city of 25,000 or more inhabitants sent to the fair for six months, their salaries to be paid by the cities that send them, and the fair management to allow each man $50 a month for expenses. It will probably cost $1,000,000 to police the grounds during the fair. To facilitate the punishment of crime a Bertillon bureau of identification, two police courts and a lockup will be established on the grounds.

Of the many criminals who will be at the World's fair perhaps no one is better known than Mollie Matches, an individual whose aliases would fill several pages of a city directory. Matches is reputed to be the most accomplished pickpocket in the United States. Like the "man of many faces" sometimes seen at vaudeville entertainments, Matches is a man of great adaptability, and you can never guess what disguise he may next assume. Matches is said to be worth over $100,000.



MOLLIE MATCHES IN FIVE GUISES.

Another celebrated pickpocket for whose reception the police officials of Chicago are making prepsirations is James Wilson of New York. Chauncey Johnson of Philadelphia is a famous, or rather an infamous, hotel and bank sneak thief who is expected to be present at the World's fair.

Venezuela at the Fair.

Among the minor nations which have made extraordinary exertions to be well represented at the Chicago World's fair is Venezuela. It will have a handsome white marble edifice of one story, with towers and surmounted by statues of Columbus and Bolivar. Surrounding the building will be a unique garden of the rarest of the orchids and other plants for which Venezuela is celebrated. The country will be represented in many of the department buildings.

VENEZUELA BUILDING.

A fact which will make the exhibit of Venezuela of great interest is that the young republic contains the products of every clime, from the valleys where frost is unknown to the mountain plateaus where three months of moderately warm weather comprises all there is of spring, summer and autumn. California is its chief rival in this respect.

College Societies at the Fair.

Those college societies generally known as "Greek letter fraternities," their badges being referred to indicate their various mottoes, have secured space at the Chicago World's fair for a special exhibit. There will be on display a specimen badge of every society and copies of their songs, with general reports on their progress. There will also be a reproduction of the chorugic monument of Lysicrates, said to be the finest specimen of Corinthian architecture in existence, and which will be restored in every particular. In the center of the space devoted to the exhibit. The monument is 40 feet high, and the walls are black, the woodwork being all ebonized and ornamented in gilt. The chorugic monument was a building erected by a victorious chorus leader for the exhibition of the tripod received as a prize in the musical contests in Athens.

Beautiful Silly.

Mr. McGrust came home tired, hungry and impatient, and found that his supper wasn't ready or likely to be ready for an hour or more.

If there is any point in which Mr. McGrust is rigid, inflexible and uncompromising it is meals.

"Now you know well enough, Lobelia," he said, throwing his overcoat on the lounge and walking up and down the room, "that I don't like to be kept waiting for my supper in this way. When a man has been working hard all day"——

"Illiger," exclaimed Mrs. McGrust in a broken voice, "don't reproach me. I have had something else to think of, and I didn't speak to Sally about supper till a few minutes ago. I have had such a shock—you don't know"——

"What is the matter? Any bad news from the relatives?"

"No, no!"

"Had a quarrel with the neighbors?"

"No. It's"——

"Aunt Jerusha coming?"

"I'll tell you if you'll give me a chance, Billiger," said Mrs. McGrust, wiping her eyes.

"It's Billy!"

"Billy who?"

"Billy the canary."

"Oh, it's the canary, is it? If he's got away, Lobelia, I think I can stand it. That bird, madam, has cost me in cages and food and medicine since you first got him, three years ago, about sixteen dollars, and"——

"He hasn't got away, B-Billiger!" sobbed Mrs. McGrust. "It's—it's not that!"

"Is he dead?"

"N-not No!"

"What then?"

"Billy has—has laid an egg!"—Chicago Tribune.

Camera Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club was held in the club's rooms, over the Post Office, last night. The regular routine of business was gone through. An invitation was received and accepted from the League of Amateur Photographers, to go out with them in a boat at the Naval Parade April 27th. The boat has already been chartered.

Careless Driving.

As Mr. Townsend was driving into the yard, at his marble works, on Somerset street, this morning, a wagon driven by George Coon ran into his horse. One of the wheels scraped a piece of skin from the animal's side, otherwise no damage was done.

A BROOKLYN LADY INJURED.

A Splinter Causes a Painful Accident.

This morning, as Mrs. Suydam of Brooklyn was accompanying the Misses Curry to the 7.56 train she met with a painful accident. She was walking along the board platform at the North avenue station when a splinter from one of the old boards penetrated through the sole of her shoe and about an inch into her foot. She was carried into the waiting room, and sat down while one of the young ladies pulled the splinter out. The blood flowed freely from the wound on the depot floor. Mrs. Joseph A. Haynes kindly lent her assistance and the injured lady's foot was carefully bandaged, and she was taken to the home of Mrs. Oliff, on Arlington avenue, where she is visiting. Dr. Endicott was summoned and the cut dressed.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rushmore have moved from Brooklyn to 33 Grant avenue.

Mrs. Ernest H. Ackerman of West Seventh street is confined to her home with la grippe.

Charles Dudley Warner will lecture tomorrow night at the Casino, under the auspices of the Monday Afternoon Club.

—There will be bowling at the C. Y. M. L. club house to-night. The postponed game with the Y. M. C. L. of Elizabethport will be played next Wednesday night.

In the list of petit jurors, drawn yesterday, for the May term of the Union County court were: Christopher M. Fine, Martin Roth, Calvin Neighbor, Fred H. Martin, Peter Flynn, Jr., of Plainfield.

Last night's Elizabeth Journal contained an article by "D. C. C." in regard to Plainfield's streets. It justly praises them and compliments the work of our street commissioner, Mr. Robert A. Meeker.

The Ladies Society of the Congregational church held a tea at the home of Mrs. Case on Central avenue yesterday from six to nine p. m. Several violin solos by Prof. Conde helped to enliven the occasion.

In yesterday's issue of the Harper's Young People appears the fourth article by Mr. Charles E. Doane of this city, on "Carpentry for Boys." These articles are very instructive, and give good points which will be of great benefit to boys interested in the subject.

The selection of Mr. George H. Frost to fill the vacancy in the Plainfield Common Council, occasioned by the resignation of ex-Councilman Case, is a very creditable one. Mr. Frost is a man of national reputation as editor of the Engineering News, of New York, an authority in its line. He is a Plainfielder who is warmly interested in whatever tends to the city's welfare, and is a man of more than ordinary intelligence on matters generally. We congratulate Mr. Frost on the honor conferred upon him, and the Common Council on its good judgment in selecting him for the honor.

Judge Lippincott's Charge.

The April term of the Hudson County Court was opened in the courthouse in Jersey City yesterday. Judge Job Lippincott's charge to the Grand Jury made a profound impression. He charged that the racetrack laws enacted by the New Jersey Legislature last Winter were unconstitutional, and instructed the Grand Jurs to indict without regard to them. He discussed Sunday liquor selling and the green-goods swindling. The delivery of the charge occupied an hour. He spoke at length upon the importance and solemnity of the Grand Jury's duty, and commented upon it to impress the jurors with a sense of their obligations.

Set Up Housekeeping.

Our youngest daughter, the Park Place Chapel, has grown so greatly that she now proposes to set up housekeeping, and has been organized as a separate Methodist Episcopal church. Seventy persons have taken their letters of membership from "the mother church" in order to unite with the new organization. We bestow upon the Park Place Church our best blessing and our warmest good wishes. May the two churches rival each other in love and good works; and may each become an abundant winner of souls to the Master's kingdom.—Visitor.

The Honeyman Excursions.

Mr. A. V. D. Honeyman is in Chicago to-day perfecting arrangements for two excursions, one early in July, and one on the World's Fair later. He has obtained seven of the best constructed cars (each being a hotel, parlor and sleeper combined) but would stop in Chicago at the Michigan Columbian House, near the Fair Grounds, instead of remaining in them all the time. Each trip will occupy twelve days.

Bicyclists Fined.

Two bicyclists were arrested last night for riding through the streets without lantern on their bicycles. Policeman Kiely made the arrest. A one dollar fine was imposed by Judge Coddington, this morning.

James Arnold Breaks an Arm.

James Arnold, age 13, son of Mr. James K. Arnold of Manning avenue, fell from his father's horse, while riding on Chatham street, this afternoon, breaking his arm.

A SOLDIER'S LIFE.

SERGEANT SPRAGUE'S AMUSING AND INTERESTING TALK.

"Canteen and Cartridge Box" the Title—The Audience in the First Baptist Church Last Evening Learned Something not Found in Books.

SERGEANT Sprague agreeably entertained the people who attended the lecture at the First Baptist church last evening. There was a brief prelude of music and then Mr. Murray introduced the popular speaker, who said:

"I am not going to give you information that you can get from books. I am simply going to tell you how certain things looked and appealed to a country boy about 19 years old when there was said to have been a somewhat mythical war. One day late in November our company came pulling themselves along and turned into a piece of woods. We stacked arms and made ready to make ourselves comfortable. The pine trees were around us and we had plenty of wood. We staid and staid at this camp.

"Whenever we went into camp at night we always had a debate about which way the sun would rise. Each morning we were aroused by reveille. Drew parade was a thing that we had to be very particular about. I remember one young fellow who used to use all his energy and all his blacking on the toes of his shoes, leaving his heels unblacked —trusting to the length of his trousers to hide his heels. He was found out and asked why he did not black his heels. He replied, "A good soldier never shows his heels." We kept building and rebuilding our houses in camp. We were situated in Virginia. We belonged to company B and we thought that the company was the very best. Our brigade was Dan Butterfield's brigade and the particular buzie call of that brigade we interpreted as "Dan, Dan, Butterfield, Butterfield." Our house was over a cellar two feet deep. The walls were of logs. The roof was of canvas. A ditch surrounded the house. The only pieces of furniture we had was a spruce bed. There was a chimney made of soda. The mortar was of mud.

"December 11 we broke camp. For a time we sat around waiting. Then they took it into his head to sing us a song. He did, but we didn't appreciate it. We threw things at him and he stopped. The day was well advanced when we got in assembly. We finally started for Fredericksburg. We went all night to the woods. Saturday evening we went to the pontoons. Many went across the pontoon, but never came back. A certain fool did however. One had a coffin and was buried there. I think it was on last two feet deep. The walls were of logs. The roof was of canvas. A ditch surrounded the house. The only pieces of furniture we had was a spruce bed. There was a chimney made of soda. The mortar was of mud.

"December 11 we broke camp. For a time we sat around waiting. Then they took it into his head to sing us a song. He did, but we didn't appreciate it. We threw things at him and he stopped. The day was well advanced when we got in assembly. We finally started for Fredericksburg. We went all night to the woods. Saturday evening we went to the pontoons. Many went across the pontoon, but never came back. A certain fool did however. One had a coffin and was buried there. I think it was on his little finger, near the end. I wanted to be promoted and tried to appear fine on this account. It came to grief. I fell and my gun went into the mud. I went on and exchanged with a man who had a better gun. I stacked it near a stump. That gun had initials carved on the stock. One day on parade I observed a change in looks. I looked through that stock and saw the letters on the other side. I explained that I had exchanged guns with a certain man. I got over the broken ground in front of the enemy. There was about fifty rebels. We kept bidden. At night we departed very quietly. The next night we were told we were to relieve the house was a house, but well ventilated with cannon balls. At midnight we were told we were to relieve the 43d and New York. Before daylight we crept into the little town and crossed the pontoon, headed for our old camp.

"After a time we went off again. This time it was a severe march. I had not seen in any history. We marched up the river a few miles, spent New Year's Day in the snow and marched back again. After one expedition we found boxes from the North and letters from home. We also had some soft bread. Nobody can appreciate soft bread until he has lived on hardtack, and nobody can appreciate hardtack until he has lived on nothing for a time. We were out the march again. We were headed for Gettysburg. All the rest were thrown away. Overcoats were hung on fences and the darkies took them and wore them. But we kept our blankets. The men sometimes always kept them. We marched for about eight hours a day.

"In Virginia we had a fine way of spreading all over their State seasoned hickory rails. Instead of fencing, Virginia fence was not good for fences, but it was good for fires. I remember chasing a rail fence for some distance, but could not catch it. A fire had been made in an open field with a match and a rail. One day I found a pig, which in memory time. Now I do not suppose the cherries hurt any of us much, but some of us were dreadfully sick afterwards. On the first day of July we made our best march. We marched forty miles from sun to sun. We handed up at midnight. We dropped to the ground for sleep. I heard the order given for reville at three. I think that was the most intensely disagreeable remark I ever heard.

"We were waiting to go into battle. We heard the many battle noises. We had to think about everything. We did not want to think about. It was sickening. We were not told that we were to be held. Little Round Top, but that was our mission. We were stationed on rocky ground. The regular wore 40 rounds. We could hide behind. Some of them weighed half a ton or so. Then they came. Down the hill to front of us came the enemy. We fired. There was no order to begin firing—there generally is none. The order came to stop firing but we kept right on. Suddenly I felt as if someone had poked me hard. After a while it dawned upon my stupidity that I was hit. It seemed strange. It seemed so natural that the other fellow should be hit. I was not in much pain. One tooth pulling would be worse than that was. I carefully withdrew and went to a hospital. On the way I saw a fellow behind a tree (on the wrong side). He seemed to have a chill.

"I spent a disagreeable time in the hospital. The noises made by the patients were not very agreeable. I am thankful for having lived through it and thankful for re-established country. Visit some old rein. It is more grown. Time has rounded off the corners. To the touch of memory cuts the hardships out. We remember not the hardships. We enjoyed ourselves, for in these days we were boys."

The singing that was to have been given was omitted because of the sickness of Mr. Titsworth, one of the members of the quartette, but bugle calls were interspersed and a very interesting evening was spent.

TWO BOARDS OF VESTRYMEN.

The Latest Developments in the Jennings Matter.

The anti-Jennings vestry at Westfield held a meeting Monday night at the residence of Samuel Elliott to organize. The vestry as it now stands consists of the following re-elected vestrymen: Samuel Elliott, senior warden; Charles Forster, J. Harper Hunt, A. K. Gale and E. Shields and these new ones: T. B. Bushnell, junior warden; John F. Irwin, W. G. Barton and H. W. Greene. G. B. Young and J. B. Greene declined re-election, but are in sympathy with the vestry.

Mr. Shield said Mr. Jennings was not the legal rector, and the vestry propose to put him out of the church if it takes a year. When asked if the new vestry would stand under the circumstances, Mr. Shield said that in view of Jenning's attitude in refusing to allow the old vestry to vote the only thing which could be done was to elect another chairman and proceed with the election as they did.

They are now two boards of vestrymen, but Mr. Jenning's opponents have possession of all the books, papers and church records, and, therefore, have the upper hand, at least to this extent, although the Jennings faction still retains possion of the church property pending the hearing before the Supreme Court.

Wants it Bad Regardless of Dangerous Rails.

To the Editor of The News:—Are we to ever have a railroad on Somerset street for, are we forever to live like unsophisticated farmers, and be deprived of every luxury of modern times? A road is needed and would improve property in every way. We can only really sympathize with people who reside on beautiful streets, where by reason of the topography of the land, a road is not needed but for the business man (?) on a principal street who opposes such an improvement because he is afraid it will injure his horse, I can only say I feel sorry for him. Some fellows (?) do not even keep their own sidewalks in repair. What would New York be without the Broadway road? Said by "Synagogue" any city be without a road on its principal streets? It will certainly increase business and a business man desiring to locate, would invariably look for a place, by which cars would pass. Let us have the road. Only a few "Shoo fly" bicycle kickers" are opposed. The majority of people want the road, as was evidenced by the meeting last fall. Don't let all pay for a cab morning and evening, and the growing population demands a rapid transit now. Let us have it. "ONWARD."

Disagrees with the Account.

To the Editor of The News:—In your notice of the Duckworth case, in Saturday's issue of your valuable paper, there are several mistakes. Will you kindly correct these, as follows:

You say, "The first and third child were baptized in the Catholic church with their father's consent and in his presence."

The statement should read, "The first and third were baptized in the Catholic church without the knowledge and consent of their father."

You also say, Mrs. Keating claims the children, "because they were baptized in the Catholic faith with the knowledge and consent of their father."

The children were baptized in the Catholic faith without the knowledge and consent of the father and they have been brought up in the Protestant faith at the desire of the father.

Genuine April Weather.

The weather yesterday was genuine April weather, full of surprises. It began warm though foggy. At nine a. m. it was clear, while at 11 it was raining. In the afternoon the thermometer went up to 70, and was so warm that even a light coat was uncomfortable.

At 7.45 p. m. there was another change. This time it was a gale which came suddenly from the east and lasted half an hour.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Ate Strychnine for Candy.

Camden, N. J. April 5. (Special.)—Mary Dalton, a blind servant in the family of County Physician Isaard, who keeps a drug store, stole into the store and took from a jar what she supposed to be candy. It proved to be strychnine, and Dr. Isaard, on learning of her terrible mistake, set to work with a stomach pump to save her life. She will probably recover.

A WRIT OF CERTIORARI.

Granted in the Jockey Club License Matter.

Mr. R. V. Lindabury, representing the Citizens' League, appeared before Supreme Court Justice Van Syckel yesterday and secured a writ of certiorari to remove the resolution of Elizabeth Council, which granted the license to the Elizabeth race track, into the Supreme Court.

The petitioners for the writ were James H. Alexander, Robert M. Moore and C. B. Miller. They believe that the act under which the Elizabeth Common Council granted this license is unconstitutional, and ask for an expression of the Supreme Court on the subject.

Counsel Lindabury says that this writ acts as a stay and that steps will be taken to prevent racing on April 15, and until the court passes upon the constitutionality of the act.

New Remedy for Cold in the Head.

Col. Julian Scott was recently a sufferer from a severe cold in the head. A member of his family in Europe sent him a remedy, which worked a very effective and speedy cure.

The formula of the preparation was published in the New York Herald of Sunday, and is as follows:

Salol	1.00 grm.
Salicylic acid	.50 grm.
Menthol	.10 grm.
Powdered boric acid	4.00 grm.

At the outset of a cold in the head a pinch of this powder is to be snuffed up each nostril every hour or two. Subsequently one dose every three hours is sufficient for the day only. If used more frequently or longer it gives rise to an eruption of the edge of the nostril. But the preparation can be so modified as to prevent this eruption by mixing with it a little talcum or boric acid or by reducing the proportion of salol to one-half or one-quarter of that mentioned in the formula.

A "Synagogue" of Capitalists.

There is an engineer on the Central railroad, and a good engineer, too, who is peculiarly unfortunate in his choice of words. He was talking about the street railroads last week and remarked that he hoped that the big "synagogue" of capitalists now controlling the road would do better than the Philadelphia fellows had done.—Newark Call.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If you want good laws, elect good men to make them.

The Fifty-second congress added 609 new laws to the list on the United States statute books.

"Boomers, cattle and Indians" must clear out of the Cherokee strip till the president declares it open.

An international legal tender coin would be a great convenience, especially just now, when Canadian dimes are scorned in the market place in the United States and American dimes are in like manner rejected in the Canadian cities

One of the acts of the late congress was to authorize the construction of a new cruiser, three gunboats and one line of battleship. These will be the next additions to our navy after the completion of those at present under construction. The gunboats are intended for steaming up rivers where the large cruisers cannot pass.

The coming region of the earth is undoubtedly Africa. It is thoroughly well watered; consequently there is not the barrier to its conquest by white men that Australia has presented. The field alike for the coming novelist, man of science, adventurer and fortune hunter will be Africa. Exhaustless riches of all kinds lie waiting to be appropriated there.

Short sighted dogs and horses are one of the latest discoveries of science. The story goes that these animals are now beginning to wear spectacles and find great relief. It is a fact that the short sightedness of horses frequently causes them to shy at objects they cannot see distinctly. But, on the whole, why should horses and dogs have defective sight? Nobody has been making them study books six hours a day.

After collecting and sifting the evidence furnished by our foreign consuls in regard to experiments in plant growing abroad by electricity the United States state department finds that the question is not decided. The evidence is not full enough, and what there is is conflicting. Here is a useful field for some of our millionaire gardeners for pleasure. They could undertake the growing of plants by electricity and show the trade gardeners whether it would make fruits, vegetables and flowers grow faster and more vigorously to have an electric light shining upon them of nights.

That was a good question the Yale and Princeton students selected for their great March prize debate, "Resolved, that the peaceful annexation of Canada will be beneficial to the United States." Such questions acquaint college students with matters which they must need to know. It would be well, too, if every country neighborhood could maintain a debating society at which all the people took part in the discussion of all questions of current public interest. If this were done, we should not have so many old hunkers on the country in the age land or so much fool lawmaking in state legislatures on the other.

It is to be hoped that the proposed investigation of the Nicaragua Canal company will be carried through to the end, and the disbursing agents of the company be required to account for the way in which every cent they paid out was expended. This will now be necessary in view of the Panama scandal. The agents of the company will doubtless welcome as eagerly as anybody this opportunity to show their countrymen that the business of the Nicaragua canal is in clean hands, unlike that of the Panama canal in America. The public will want to know on exactly what kind of a basis the Nicaragua canal stands before investing money in it, and the directors of the enterprise will of course be only too glad to show how honestly and economically the funds have thus far been managed.

Everybody who has ever visited New York city knows that the most delightful part of it is the battery and Battery park, where Jenny Lind sang at Castle Garden a generation ago, and where New York's social Four Hundred of a century gone by used to take the air of summer evenings. For twenty years, until quite recently, this pleasant spot has been given up to steerage emigrants and snoozing loafers. The emigrants have been removed to Ellis island. The malodorous loafers still snooze upon the benches of the park and will continue to do so as long as the place is a public park. But Castle Garden itself is to be redeemed to nobler uses. It is to be turned into an aquarium, belonging to the city, and will again become one of the chief points of attraction of New York. Both fresh and salt water fish will be exhibited in its clear glass tanks, and marine plants will grow as they do in their native habitat. A real whale and a real shark will ornament the collection. There are few aquariums of any kind in America, and the interest and the value this one at Castle Garden will have, especially for the inland inhabitants of our great country, are immeasurable. The eyes of the boy and girl from Kansas and Kentucky will grow wide with wonder looking upon the monster octopus, whose pictures they have seen as he overturns a ship's boat and swallows the sailors bodily.

THE SPRING ELECTIONS

Excitement in Chicago Over Carter Harrison's Victory.

THOUSANDS ABOUND A BIG BONFIRE

Many Mayors Elected in New York State. Women Vote For Road Commissioners In New Jersey—Supervisors in Queens and Suffolk Counties.

CHICAGO, April 5.—Carter H. Harrison was chosen mayor of Chicago by a majority of 19,000, and the entire Democratic ticket elected by majorities ranging from 16,000 to 19,000. The day was unmarked by disturbance of any sort. The contest for the World's fair mayoralty was one of extreme bitterness. Mr. Harrison, who represents the regular Democracy, secured the nomination by defeating Washington Hesing, editor of the Staats-Zeitung, who bolted the convention. The Democratic newspapers, excepting only The Times, which is owned by Mr. Harrison were in favor of Mr. Hesing's candidacy, and upon his defeat by Mr. Harrison, gave their support to the Republican and Citizens' candidate, Samuel W. Allerton, who was nominated a few days later. Since Mr. Harrison's nomination, however, two afternoon papers have come to his support and waged vigor ous warfare upon the Allerton combination."

The night closed in Chicago with an exciting incident. A huge bonfire was built under the Allerton banner that has so long flaunted before Harrison's Times office. Men got lots of the ropes and tried to pull the banner into the blaze, which rose 50 feet. There was danger of setting The Times office on fire, and the police were unable to get the rope away from the crowd. At this Carter Harrison appeared in the crowd, and with uplifted cane protected the policemen and restored his defeated opponent's banner to safety. Carter was received with a tremendous ovation by about 20,000 people.

In New York State.

LONG ISLAND CITY, L. I., April 5.—Returns were slow in coming in from the spring elections on Long Island. The Prohibitionists are defeated all along the line. The results for supervisor in Queen's and Suffolk counties are estimated to be as follows:

Oyster Bay—Joseph Steinert, Democrat, elected.

Flushing—D. N. Van Nostrand, Democrat re-elected.

Jamaica—William F. Everett, Democrat elected.

Newtown—John Hog, Democrat, re-elected.

Hempstead—Thomas D. Smith, Republican probably.

North Hempstead—Augustus Demion, Republican, probably.

Smithtown—Benjamin F. Curtis, Republican re-elected.

Southold—Henry A. Reeves, Democrat, re-elected.

Huntington—George M. Tileston, Republican, re-elected.

Southampton—James H. Pierson, Republican, re-elected.

Babylon—Joshua P. Jarvis, Democrat, elected.

Brookhaven—John L. Havens, Democrat, elected.

Islip—William H. Young, Democrat, re-elected.

Riverhead—Frank H. Hill, Republican, probably elected.

Shelter Island—G. Byron Griffing, Republican, re-elected.

East Hampton—George A. Miller, Republican, re-elected.

The Queens county board will probably remain as it was last year—five Democrats and two Republicans.

If Hill is elected in Riverhead the Republicans will retain control of the board, with a majority of 2. Last year it was a tie.

Clute Mayor of Schenectady.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., April 5.—The election passed off quietly.

Jacob W. Clute, Republican, was elected mayor by 52 majority.

Harry Denniston, elected city treasurer, was nominated by both the Republican and Democratic parties.

George Weller, Democrat, was elected Assessor.

David L. Stage, Republican, was elected commissioner of excise.

John Clements, Democrat, was elected commissioner of Police.

The common council is Republican by 11 majority, the same as it has been during the past year.

Nominations in Massachusetts.

MELROSE, Mass., April 5.—The Democratic congressional convention nominated Dr. William Everett of Quincy on the twelfth ballot.

BOSTON, April 5.—After one of the hottest fights in the history of the Seventh Massachusetts congressional district the Republican convention at Charlestown has closed with two nominees for successor to Henry Cabot Lodge. Speaker Reed and Mayor Hayes of Lynn. The latter, however, received a nomination as a bolter, the original convention nominating Harrett by a vote of 52 to 1. The Hayes men mustered 53 votes, the bolt coming on the admission of the Ward 4 (Charlestown) delegates, to whom the Hayes men objected as being elected by Democratic votes.

The Women Turned Out.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., April 5.—At the election for road commissioners many women exercised the right of franchise. The vote was an unusually large one and more interest was displayed than in any election held here for several years. The successful candidates were O. D. Smith, Clinton H. Blake, J. F. Seabrinkle and H. J. Crincebeck.

Frank C. Drake in Oneida.

ONEIDA, N. Y., April 5.—At the charter election at Oneida the Republicans elected Frank C. Drake mayor by 81 majority. Last year Fred D. Chase, Democrat, was elected by about the same majority.

LIKE A MAMMOTH TORCH.

A Burning Grain Elevator Scatters Sparks For and Wide.

PITTSBURG, April 5.—The largest fire that has occurred in Allegheny for years broke out in the warehouse of the Godfrey and Clark Paper company on South Canal street. Owing to high gale the fire department was unable to prevent the spread of the flames, which communicated rapidly to the malthouse of the Eberhards and Ober Brewing company. At this juncture Pittsburg was appealed to for aid and responded with three companies, but the fire could not be stayed, and in a short time the large grain elevator of the Eberhards and Ober company was on fire. The elevator, which was an ironclad, 120 feet high, burned swiftly inside and scattered sparks in all directions, starting many blazes.

The firemen beat all their energies to preventing the destruction of property for 6 o'clock they had the flames under partial control.

Two Pittsburg firemen were injured by the fall of the grain elevator, being struck by falling debris. A number of thieves were at work under cover of the excitement, and some valuable property was stolen.

KANSAS WOMEN ALL VOTED.

Mrs. Potter Is Not to Be Mayor of Kansas City, Though, by Long Odds.

KANSAS CITY, April 5.—The strangest election contest that has ever taken place in Kansas has occurred. It was an election in which women took the leading part. It was the first election in Kansas in which women had full and free suffrage, and they exercised it as fully and as freely as the Australian voting system would permit. The greatest interest was in Kansas City, Kan., the largest city in the state, and in Topeka, the capital. In Wyandotte, Kansas City, Kan., dozens of women stood about the polls and "worked" for their friends.

In that very lively and wicked town Mrs. Anna Potter, the wife of the Hon. Eli Potter, a millionaire land and cattle owner, was a candidate for mayor, but enough votes are in to show that she is hopelessly left.

Huns and Italians Fight.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., April 5.—At a late hour three high swarmen with blackened faces, believed to be Italians, attacked a party of Huns near Hazleton, who were on their way to their homes. The Huns began to show fight, and a desperate conflict took place between them. Three of the Huns were knocked down, shot and robbed. One of them had three bullets in his left leg, another had two in his breast and the third one a bullet and knife blood in his shoulder. The coal and iron police turned out and were joined by a large crowd, who went in search of the Italians, but they were lost sight of at a place called the "swamp" and have so far made their escape.

Desperate Pistol Duel.

LOUISVILLE, April 5.—A desperate shooting affray occurred in Boyle, a village six miles east of Morganfield. Frank Cobb and Chester Cavanaugh were the participants. Cobb married Cavanaugh's sister about three years ago, and soon after asserted her. Cobb fired two shots before Cavanaugh could draw his pistol. After this both fired until their pistols were empty. One shot from Cavanaugh's pistol pierced Cobb's left breast just above the heart, and he died. Cavanaugh was wounded in his right shoulder and left ankle, but will recover. Cavanaugh is 19 years old.

Urged to Indict Gamblers.

NEW YORK, April 5.—At the opening of the April term of the Hudson county court in Jersey City, Presiding Judge Lippincott delivered a charge to the grand jury in which he called their attention to the betting at the Guttenburg race track, pool selling at Harrison and policy playing in Jersey City and Hoboken. The judge impressed on the grand jury that the recent acts of the legislature legalizing pool selling were unconstitutional, and that the statute of 1846 did its duty, would indict all places where pool selling is carried on as under the old law.

Mgr. Satolli In Boston.

BOSTON, April 5.—Mgr. Satolli's plans for today are to address the students and the clergy of the diocese at 9 a. m., then to visit Archbishop Williams and leave Boston for Washington at noon, on account of the arrival of his assistants in New York. His coming at this time has no official significance to the Boston archdiocese, being prompted simply by the courtesy of the faculty of the seminary and Mgr. Satolli's deep interest in theological studies.

The Khan In a Fury.

BOMBAY, April 5.—It is reported from Quetta that Mir Khudadad Khan, khan of Khelat and sovereign of Baluchistan, has murdered his prime minister, has mutilated several of his advisers, and is torturing many high officials, whom he has imprisoned in dungeons. He is supposed to have learned or suspected that there was a plot to assassinate him.

Another Branch of the Fight.

MACON, Ga., April 5.—The hearing on the petition of the National Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers was continued before Judge Emery Speer in the United States court today. The sides are confident. The engineers claim that intimations from the court are in their favor.

Texas Establishes a Quarantine.

AUSTIN, April 5.—Governor Hogg issued a proclamation establishing quarantine on the Texas gulf coast and Rio Grande border, to take effect on May 1. It applies to vessels, persons and things coming from ports and places infected with yellow fever, smallpox or cholera.

Six Cartloads of Girls.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., April 5.—Six cartloads of young girls went over the Baltimore and Ohio railroad bound for Baltimore. The girls will work in Gail & Ax's factory at Baltimore. They went by special train at their employers' expense.

Shot by a Maniac.

NORWALK, Conn., April 5.—Mrs. Daniel Moriarity of Hickleberry Hills was shot in the temple last evening by a supposed crazy man, who made his escape. A posse is searching for the man, who is supposed to be in the woods.

Veteran of Forty Battles Dead.

NEW YORK, April 5.—Lieutenant Colonel Timothy Hanley died in his 58th year at his home in this city from the effects of a wound received in the battle of Smithville, Va., in 1864. He had served in over 40 engagements.

Mitchell Accepts by Cable.

LONDON, April 5.—Charley Mitchell replied his acceptance of the offer of the Coney Island Athletic club to fight Jim Corbett under their auspices for the purse the club has offered, "providing the articles are fair."

A SUMMER WHITE HOUSE

The President Selects the Picturesque Middleton House.

THE INTERIOR BUREAUS SHAKEN UP

There Will Be Some Investigations In the Weather Bureau, Too—Maxwell Still Wielding the Ax Industriously—Ambassador Bayard Will Not Start Till May.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The question which has been agitating the real estate dealers and the owners of suburban property ever since Mr. Cleveland's election has been settled by the selection of a country place at which the president and Mrs. Cleveland will pass the heated term. The president this time did not follow his course during his first administration, when he bought Oak View and subsequently sold it at a handsome profit. This time he has leased a country house for a term of years. The place selected is the old Middleton House on Wooley lane road, in the picturesque Rock creek region, but nearer town than Oak View, which is farther out on this same road.

Workmen are engaged in refitting the house, which is expected to be ready for occupancy by the last of the month. The house belongs to Francis G. Newlands, who has been elected to congress from Nevada, he having bought it a few years ago of the wife of Chief Engineer Henderson of the navy.

The house stands on an elevated knoll, surrounded with fine old oaks and has some distance back from the road. It commands an extended view of the beautiful Rock Creek valley to the north, and on the south there can be had a charming view of the city. The house is an old one, built solidly and well to endure for years. It is plain in appearance. A cut of it represents a wide, plain, 3-story brick structure, with plenty of windows, and flanked on each side by wings of two stories in height. There is a spacious room and a dining hall of generous proportions. There are about 30 acres of land connected with the property.

Shaking Up the Bureaus.

Secretary Hoke Smith has entered actively on the policy it was announced by the American Press some days ago he would pursue, of weeding out of the bureaus in his department. Twenty-nine clerks in the census office were discharged, and others will follow them within a few days. The general land office will be taken up shortly and after it has been overhauled, the pension and other bureaus of the department will receive attention.

More Missions Allotted.

The president made the following nominations:

James O. Broadhead of Missouri to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Switzerland.

Bartlett Tripp of South Dakota to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Austria-Hungary.

Eben Alexander of North Carolina to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Greece, Roumania and Servia.

To be consuls of the United States—James E. Neal of Ohio, at Liverpool; James M. Dobbs of Georgia, at Valparaiso; Q. O. Eckford of Mississippi, at Kingston, Jamaica; Daniel M. Burke of New York, at Pernambuco; Edgar Whidden of Maine, at St. Stephen, N. B.; Henry D. Merritt of Illinois, at Buenos Ayres; Jas. B. Dickinson of New York, at Nottingham; Benjamin Lenthier of New Jersey, at Dundee.

Charles E. Ingersoll of Pennsylvania to be appraiser of merchandise in the district of Philadelphia.

Paul F. Faison of North Carolina to be an Indian inspector.

News of the Capital In Brief.

Secretary Morton has decided to make a thorough investigation of the charges of mismanagement and maladministration preferred against the weather bureau by James B. McLaughlin, chief of the executive division of the bureau, who was suspended for writing a letter protesting against the promotion of the weather observer at Norfolk. Professor Harrington, the chief of the bureau, has asked an investigation, but requests that it be delayed a short time because of his health, which compelled him to leave the city to which he has just returned.

Colonel Temple Clark, a member of General Rosecran's staff in the late war, and of late years an employee in the department of agriculture, died.

Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Maxwell appointed 144 fourth class postmasters, 88 being to fill vacancies caused by removals.

Representative Spriggs denies the statement that he would voluntarily retire from the chairmanship in the next congress because of ill health.

Ambassador Bayard will return from Wilmington in about 10 days for the purpose of conferring with the president and Secretary Gresham. He will not start for London until early in May, and Minister Lincoln will remain at his post until relieved.

Officials of the government are without any knowledge regarding the proposed new Cuban filibustering expedition from Key West.

No One Pressed Charges.

HARTFORD, April 5.—The proposed investigation of the warden of the state prison and the management of the prison apparently came to an abrupt conclusion, as no one appeared to make charges. An executive session was held. The committee then decided to meet at 2 o'clock today and give another opportunity for the presentation of any charges.

Will Be Missed In Sweden.

TROY, N. Y., April 5.—August Rhine lander, aged about 30 years, en route from West Superior, Wis., for Gothenburg Sweden, his native place, boarded the wrong train, dropped off the platform under the wheels. The train passed over him. He died at 10 o'clock last night.

His Wife Found His Body.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., April 5.—John H. Stokes, a business man of Dexter, Jefferson county, hanged himself in his barn, and his lifeless form was found by his wife. The only theory given is that he was temporarily insane, having suffered for some time from asthma.

Seats For Factory Girls.

HARTFORD, April 5.—The house rejected the bill to allow the closing on Sundays on the ground that the present statutes are sufficient. The bill to provide seats for female operatives in factories, when not actively employed, was passed.

Death of a Centenarian.

JOHNSTOWN, N. Y., April 5.—Thomas H. Brown, the centenarian of Fulton county, died at his home near Fish House. Mr. Brown was 102 years old. He was the oldest Mason in the state.

Raised from the Dead

Long and Terrible Illness from Blood Poisoning

Completely Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent lady of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says: "I became perfectly cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as I almost like one raised from the dead."

HOOD'S PILLS should be in every family medicine chest. Once used, always preferred.

BREVITIES OF A DAY.

In a rear end collision on the Sixth Avenue Elevated road in New York the fireman and engineer were injured and many persons were badly scared.

The Jersey and Staten Island ferries to New York were much delayed by a heavy fog.

The North German Lloyd steamer After put into the sea-laden bark Knox Soule off Governor's Island, and the latter had to be beached.

A $100 dog swallowed a $250 diamond. Both were owned by a Brooklyn jeweler, who killed the dog and recovered the gem.

When Mr. Balfour visited Belfast the city took a holiday.

Frank Duffy, 60 years old and once a candidate for the New York legislature, is on trial in New York on a charge of murder.

The dedicatory ceremonies at the new Mormon temple in Salt Lake City commence tomorrow.

The Commercial bank of Australia, Melbourne, has suspended payments.

By the collapse of an elevator at West Superior, Minn., five men were seriously injured.

Murder and Arson Promised.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., April 5.—The following letter was received at the police office in this city. It evidently refers to newspapers in Fall River: "Notice to Fire Department as Well as Chief of Police—Fire: We have fully made up our mind to set fire to The Globe building, as well as to The Herald Printing building. Those papers are very fond of publication, and we will give them something to publish, and the very first opportunity we get we will murder the above editors. No more at present, but sooner or later it will be done. I am sincerely their enemies, J. P. S."

Ate Poisoned Oysters.

ST. LOUIS, April 5.—Mrs. Henry A. Mause, wife of a jeweler, partook of some oysters which her husband procured from a neighboring store. Mause did not eat any of the oysters, and shortly after supper left the house, and going to the store, looted it of the most valuable articles, including the contents of the safe. He has not been seen since. Mrs. Mause became ill soon after eating the oysters, and died yesterday under circumstances which indicate poison. The coroner is investigating the affair.

Alleged Cruelty to Sailors.

NEW YORK, April 5.—Otto Snook, 20 years old; John Loper, 22, and Alexander Abo, 29, three sailors of the schooner Nettie Langdon, which arrived from the West Indies, were charged in the Yorkville police court by Captain E. H. Ross with cutting all the sails, riggings and ropes of the schooner while she was lying off Red Hook. The sailors, on the other hand, told a story of privation and cruelty that they had suffered from the captain, and all bore the evidences of many hardships.

The Color Line In Railroading.

NEW YORK, April 5.—The trial of a suit involving the right of negroes to ride on railroad trains in the south was begun in the United States circuit court. Mack W. Caldwell, a colored man of Brooklyn and his wife, are suing the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad for $5,000. Colored lawyers are conducting the case. The defense is that the laws of Tennessee permit railroad companies to have separate cars for the blacks and whites.

An Undeveloped Romance.

OKLAHOMA, Ia., April 5.—A little girl by the name of Werner was kidnaped from a room in the Second ward school building yesterday morning. A woman called and asked to see the child. The teacher sent the child to a cloak room where the woman was waiting, and in a few moments she returned, asking to be excused. Nothing has been seen of the child since. She was an adopted daughter. All trace of the child's mother was lost.

Visitors Will Be Allowed.

NORFOLK, W. Va., April 5.—A number of college presidents have made arrangements to have their pupils visit Norfolk during the rendezvous. Admiral Gherardi has informed the executive committee of the rendezvous that his regulation prohibiting visitors, ladies and others on the ships during the review, will not apply during the time the fleets are in Hampton Roads.

Death on the Mountain.

NYACK, N. Y., April 5.—The body of Miss Margaret Maroney, the young woman who disappeared from her home in Piermont on Monday, March 27, was found among the rocks of the Hook mountain in one of the wildest spots, where she had evidently wandered in the darkness. She had fallen 100 feet among the rocks and had broken her neck.

Accident to Sunday School Scholars.

RALEIGH, April 5.—Dr. Smedes, rector of St. Mary's school, invited his pupils to ride on a switch train to his grounds. By accident two cars, loaded with children, met at the lowest point with great velocity. Eight children were badly hurt and many others slightly injured.

Silver Dollar Counterfeiters.

NEW YORK, April 5.—John Smith and William Mitchell were held by Commissioner Shields on the charge of passing counterfeit silver dollars. When the men were arrested Smith threw away several of the bogus coins, which were recovered. They are a good imitation.

Sad News Awaits Vilas.

MADISON, Wis., April 5.—The relatives of Senator Vilas have been unable to find him to inform him of the death of his daughter Nellie. A private funeral occurred and the remains were laid in a vault at the cemetery. When the lady's father returns public services will be held.

For Importing Laborers.

BOSTON, April 5.—Among the indictments reported by the grand jury of the United States district court was one against Cadwalider M. Raymond, skate and bicycle manufacturer, who is charged with importing labor under contract.

Objected to a Nonresident.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 5.—The Democratic central committee are telegraphing protests to Washington against William Eade of Missouri for the position of governor of New Mexico, mainly on the ground of being a nonresident.

THEIR RIGHT TO STRIKE

Clothing Cutters Hold a Fiery and Defiant Meeting.

ASK CITIZENS TO AID BOYCOTTS.

They Pledge Themselves to Disregard the Action of the Courts—Labor Leaders Say Judge Taft's Decision Means a Nationalization of Railways.

NEW YORK, April 5.—From Walhalla hall went forth the edict of the United Garment Workers to the Clothing Manufacturers' association. It was to the effect that the organization proposed to stand by the locked out clothing cutters until the manufacturers were beaten, and that so called labor unions not concerned in the dispute had better keep their hands off. Incidentally it was proclaimed that, whatever be the verdict of the supreme court, the organization proposed to go ahead with the boycott until the manufacturers either gave in or every organized laborer in the land ceased to buy their clothing.

Amid great enthusiasm the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, We believe that as American citizens we have a right to organize for mutual protection in accordance with the everlasting Christian principles of freedom and justice granted to us by the constitution of the country.

Whereas, The Clothing Manufacturers' association of this city has locked out our brethren, the clothing cutters, for no other reason than that they have defended the rights guaranteed to them by the constitution—that of belonging to a labor organization.

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to stand by these locked out members of the Clothing Cutters' union and cease work should such action be necessary for the interest of the members of the Cutters' union and for the sacred cause of organized labor.

Resolved, That we condemn any man who assists capitalists against the interests of organized labor and those of the American workingmen, by lowering the standard of wages, no matter whether he does so under cover of so called organized labor or otherwise as a masked enemy of organized labor.

Resolved, That we call upon the citizens of the state to uphold our rights by asking the people to refuse to purchase clothing made by scab labor.

Indignant Over Judge Taft's Decision.

BALTIMORE, April 5.—Among the Knights of Labor the opinion is very general that the decisions of Judges Taft and Ricks in the Ann Arbor (Ohio) suits are favorable to organized labor.

J. G. Schonfarber, editor of The Critic and past master workman of District 41, K. of L., said: "These decisions are in line with what knights have been working for—that is the nationalizing of railroads. They have claimed that the government ought to control all natural monopolies, such as railroads, telegraph and telephone lines. This has been a matter of agitation for them alone, but these decisions seem to make it an issue before the people.

"It is a question whether the country is yet ready to grasp the question and whether more agitation and more education is not necessary. But this shows that the ideas we have been working to develop are getting into the courts and the legislatures."

PHILADELPHIA, April 5.—The decisions of Judges Ricks and Taft in the western railroad troubles have led to considerable criticism on the part of local labor leaders. John W. Hayes, general secretary of the Knights of Labor, said: "People are beginning to lose respect for the law when they see it is all in favor of the capitalists. The decisions will not prevent the occurrence of strikes nor the boycott. The decisions will not affect labor organizations."

T. Imas O'Reilly, editor of the organ of the Knights of Labor, said that the strongest point in the matter was that made by Mr. Powderly, who claimed that the decision will make the nationalization of railroads one of the prominent questions of the day. P. J. McGuire, general secretary of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners in the United States, said that if the workingmen felt they had no protection under the law they will be tempted to take matters into their own hands, and that the trend of judicial decisions recently has been inimical to the interests of labor.

Fought Fifty-eight Rounds.

HELENA, Mon., April 5.—Billy Lewis of San Francisco and Jim Burge of Australia fought in the Opera House here from 10 o'clock p. m. till 8 a. m., when Lewis was knocked out in the fifty-eighth round. The purse and side bets made the stake $1,800.

The Papal Delegates.

NEW YORK, April 5.—Mgr. Donato Sbaretti and the Rev. Hector Papi, members of the apostolic delegation, left at 3:30 for Washington. They have been staying at Archbishop Corrigan's residence during their short sojourn in this city.

The Retiring Sea Matter Begun.

PARIS, April 5.—The Behring sea arbitrators met today at the ministry of foreign affairs. Baron de Courcelles, president of the court, presided. Mr. Phelps had not completed an argument when the tribunal adjourned.

World's Fair Hotel Burned.

CHICAGO, April 5.—The new World's fair hotel on Ogiesby avenue, known as the Leamont, and just approaching completion, was destroyed by fire. The loss, covered by insurance, will be $30,000.

A Lovelorn Suicide.

NEWARK, N. J., April 5.—Charles Bechtel shot himself in the right temple because his girl went back on him.

THE BURIED MINERS.

Still Entombed In the Laurel Mine and Probably All Are Dead.

HARLETON, Pa., April 5.—Richard Williams, William Trombath and Thomas Hudson, victims of the Laurel Hill mine accident, are still entombed. There is no hope of recovering Williams alive, as it is believed that he was crushed to death. The fact that the torrent of water crushed the immense pillar of coal that divides the breast is causing apprehension for the safety of Trombath and Hudson. The pillar giving way cut off the air passages, and unless air from an undetected opening is now traveling inside this point they will undoubtedly die from the effects of accumulating black damp. The work of rescue is proceeding slowly owing to the black damp. The rescuers cannot remain in the place for more than a few minutes at a time.

Crushed by His Mother.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 5.—The 2 story frame building occupied as a grocery and dwelling house by Louis Fredericks was destroyed by fire. Fredericks rushed back to rescue his mother and sister, but was severely burned that he had to retreat and ordered the women to jump into his arms from the second story. His mother made the leap and crushed Fredericks to the ground. She is in a critical condition and may die. The sister also jumped, but is less seriously injured.

New York East Conference.

DANBURY, Conn., April 5.—Delegates to the New York east conference of the Methodist church are here from all parts of Connecticut, Long Island and Brooklyn. The opening session of the conference will be held Wednesday. The ministers took part in the anniversary exercises of the Epworth league. Members of the league were here from all parts of the conference. Bishop W. X. Ninde of Topeka presided.

The Fair Strike a Fiasco.

CHICAGO, April 5.—The strike of 1,000 carpenters at the World's fair grounds to enforce discrimination against nonunion men turned out a dismal fiasco. Less than 100 quit work. The leaders attributed the failure to a misunderstanding, but the real reason seemed to be that the rank and file weakened at the firm front presented by the exposition officials.

Tentralia.

Many of the brilliant statesmen of France have had the gift of terse, witty expression. It has served them when elaborate arguments would have been far less impressive.

When Turgot was minister some one enthusiastically advocated a certain method of raising money for the government.

Turgot disposed of the subject shortly and vigorously. His judgment was known to be good, and little more was heard of the tax in question after he wrote on the memorial:

It would be safer to execute the author than the project.—Youth's Companion.

A Children's Post Easter Carnival.

TWO PRETTY COSTUMES.

As a relaxation after Lenten severity it is now becoming fashionable to give the children a party on Easter Monday night. Here are two pretty costumes seen. The first is a Norwegian peasant. She wears a white tulle cap and checkered apron corsolet, caught up by green silk tassels and bows of red silk ribbon, and fastened with old silver buckles. The petticoat is in blue woolen stuff, the apron being made of horizontal stripes, blue, yellow, red, green and white. The hanging purse is in dark green plush with golden-yellow embroideries, and the pointed pompoms. The other costume is extremely simple, though very pretty. It is called the "Restauration Belle." It was a pale light green satin, trimmed with fur, grey gauze, white feathers, and pearls in the hair.

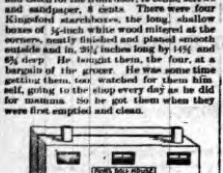
CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Bob' 'bout House.

Bob made it for the Twins. The Twins received it as Bob's birthday gift. They will assure you that they own it, but "it is Bob's doll-house because he made it."

Bob says the most important thing about it is that it only cost 90 cents. He has kept the items. Boxes, 40 cents, large brass hinges, 30 cents (if the fittings had not been brass, it would have cost less), small hinges and catch for the front door, 12 cents, screws and sandpaper, 8 cents. There were four Kingsford starchboxes, the long, shallow boxes of sawdust white wood mitered at the corners, neatly finished and pianed smooth outside and in, 20½ inches long by 14½ and 6½ deep. He bought them, the four, at a bargain of the grocer. He was some time getting them, too; watched for them him self, going to the shop every day as he did for mamma. So he got them when they were first emptied and clean.



The house was made by fitting portions of the lids in each box lengthwise, as for shelves, fastening them from the outside with brass screws, setting up partitions above and below and fastening them in the same way. The front door and windows were made by boring with a large auger and cutting out with a keyhole saw. Pieces of mica sheets (from a stoveshop) were fastened upon the outside of the windows with strips of molding picked up somewhere. Two boxes were fastened together length wise, one above the other (the Twins said the little screw heads in the floor were "reg leters"); and each pair joined together end to end with hinges. One pair was to stand fixed on a box or table of convenient height for the little girls, and the other was to swing open. This one had the front door to it with hinges and hasp.

So it was one house when closed and two almost exactly alike when opened. The name of the starch manufacturer was sand papered off the house outside and in.

A Pet Crow.

I have never had any real truly pets, for my brother Dick, who is 6 (I am 8), swings kitties around by their handles, so he calls their talks, and I am afraid of dogs. But last summer when I was in the country we went on a picnic, and on the lowest branch of a pine tree, where I could almost touch it, I saw while I was hunting for Indian pipes something black, which papa said was a crow.

He put up his hands and lifted it down. He thought it must have belonged to some body, for its wings were clipped and it could not fly. We took it home, and father built a big cage for it and I named it Otis dish, and I fed it and played with it all summer. I kept the cage in a clump of spruces behind the house, and every morning Obadiah would wake me crying, "Caw caw!" After a little Obadiah was let out of the cage, and then he would follow me all over the house just like a kitten. Then I sat down, he would sit at my feet and nock up into my face, oh, so solemn. I asked Otis

Interesting For Boys to Know.

The strongest man of modern times was Augustus II. He could roll up a silver plate like a sheet of paper and could twist the strongest horseshoe apart. There are many other wonderful feats of strength and skill which could hardly be credited were it not that they come from such reliable sources. How many boys have ever heard that a Turkish porter can trot at a rapid pace and carry a weight of 600 pounds? That a white mouse with a swift nose that would carry him around the world in less than a fortnight if he were able to go around in an undisputed course? That a swordfish can strike his weapon through a thick plank of a ship, and that a specimen of such a plank with the sword of a fish sticking in it may be seen at the British museum? That a lion is not so strong in the mouth that he can leave the impression of his teeth upon a piece of iron? And that Milo, the celebrated athlete of Crotona, was so strong that he could madly pull up a tree by the roots and break it in two? —Kansas City Times.

MINERAL CURIOSITIES.

Some Unique Exhibits Which Will Be Seen at the World's Fair.

The department of mines and mining will be one of the most attractive at the World's fair. The states and territories that will exhibit are Pennsylvania, New York, North Carolina, Virginia, Oregon, Georgia, Wyoming, Washington, Arizona, Iowa, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Kentucky, Texas, Kentucky, Ohio, Minnesota, Kansas, California, Idaho, Montana, Florida, Maryland, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Utah, New Mexico, Colorado, Maine and Oklahoma, while the foreign countries which will be creditably represented are Germany, Great Britain, New South Wales, Canada, Spain, Bolivia, Greece, Orange Free State, Austria, Chile, France, Russia, Japan, Colombia, Argentine Republic, Italy, Venezuela, Brazil, Cape Colony, Holland, Mexico, Peru, Paraguay, Ecuador, Costa Rica, Hayti, Honduras and Chili.

FACADE OF KENTUCKY'S PAVILION.

One of the most unique exhibits in the department of mines and mining is contributed by the state of Kentucky. It is a sort of pavilion which is certain to attract the attention of visitors. This pavilion will have a facade 25 feet high made of polished coal. Kentucky's mineral resources will of course be adequately represented, but her banner exhibit will be the representation in miniature of the Mammoth cave. A chamber 50 feet by 200 beneath the main floor of the building will be devoted to the reproduction of the cave, and the resources of art and science will be taxed to the utmost to make the illusion perfect. The negro guide who has escorted so many thousand visitors through the actual cave will be brought on to explain the beauties of the exhibit.

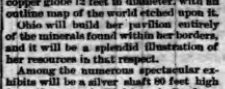
Some of the pavilions and other structures erected in the building by the different states will be particularly attractive, and not the least beautiful of these will be the one contributed by Michigan, which will serve to show that the Wolverine State possesses natural sources of wealth outside of its lumber forests. Her pavilion will be of sandstone and marble, in the Florentine style of architecture. One feature of it will be a huge copper globe 12 feet in diameter, with an outline map of the world etched upon it.

Ohio will build her pavilion entirely of the minerals found within her borders, and it will be a splendid illustration of her resources in that respect.

Among the numerous spectacular exhibits will be a silver shaft 80 feet high from New South Wales, a shaft of anthracite coal 62 feet high from Pennsylvania, a granite pillar 55 feet high from the richest quarry in New York and an opalescent grotto representing the crystal caves of Central America built by the government of Honduras.

The Liberty Bell Will Be There.

Philadelphia has again consented to lend her precious relic, the famous old Liberty bell, and it will be transported to Chicago on an open platform car with four trusty policemen to guard it. It was taken to the New Orleans cotton exposition in a closed car, but on this trip it will be exhibited in every considerable city along the route. It is now all safely housed and can no longer "proclaim liberty," as its inscription directs, by sound, but the sight of it will fire the patriotic heart.



MOVING THE LIBERTY BELL.

Information For World's Fair Visitors.

The bureau of public comfort of the World's fair in its plans has assumed that nearly all visitors will prefer to take their meals from day to day wherever it may be convenient. It announces as part of its scheme that from 50,000 to 100,000 people can be served with meals daily within the exposition grounds alone—an estimate considerably below the figures of the wags and business committee, which calculates upon a service for at least 200,000 people in emergencies.

The press is requested to announce, as a safeguard for the public, that the exposition has only one department authorized to make contracts for rooms or furnish information about them. The bureau's office is at McNally building, Chicago, and communications addressed to W. Marsh Kasson, its chief, will receive immediate attention.

Singleness and Bad Habits.

When I was quite young, I said that I would never marry a man who was not a Christian or who used intoxicating liquors or tobacco. I was married when 21 and have a husband who is all that and not a bit stingy. No, he is not too stingy to form bad habits, but could never see that by so doing he would be any better, and by letting them alone he as well as others would be better off in many ways that do not touch the pocketbook.

We all have faults that others can see better than we, and is it not one of our duties to help each other for a higher and better life? The wife alone cannot make the home or train the children to noble manhood and womanhood. The husband must do his part. Children are watching to see if practice agrees with preaching.

Dear girls, it is no disgrace to be an old maid. Better be one than marry a man who thinks more of his bad habits than of you.

Do not be a crank, but become well enough acquainted with your gentlemen friends before promising to marry them to feel free to talk in a kind, quiet way on all subjects and have a perfect understanding.

You do not know what you are getting to have. If all would say, "My husband must be so and so," the men would not be long in coming up to the standard.

All honor to the one who chooses single blessedness in preference to a man with bad habits!—Housekeeper

How Young Boys Should Ride Bicycles.

When a child is well mounted on a bicycle, the important question of how far he may ride arises.

No absolute rule can be laid down, as no two children of the same age are alike. The only thing that can be said is that anything more than moderate fatigue is injurious. A young growing child suffers much from overexertion. Though at the finish of a ride he may seem fairly fresh, if he has done much, the results will be apparent soon after and a sleepless night and distaste for food will show that the system is poisoned by the products of its own waste. And it must be remembered while treating of this subject that excessive speed is more injurious than excessive distance—and exercise in cold climates is hard.

The great test by means of which a judgment may be formed as to the distance which is sufficient for each child is to observe how he sleeps the night after the ride; how he takes his food; how he is the day after. If he sleeps well, eats well, and is bright and lively the next day, the riding has not been pushed too far and has done good, not harm, but if he is feverish and sleepless, refuses his food and is languid, dull and fidgety the next day, then it is certain that too much has been accomplished and that such rides if persisted in will lead to mischief.—Bicycling News.

Little Danger of Overexertion.

It is scarcely necessary to caution girls against the sort of work that overdevelops muscles and makes them hard and inelastic, but unless a girl needs an unusual amount of exercise to keep her in good health she does not want to work her muscles until they are prominent and ugly. Health is better than beauty, however, and if that sad result should attend some girl's exercise she can easily console herself with that thought and in remembering how few are her headaches and her colds and how little time she has to waste on such discomforts.

The girl of today can rejoice that those funny, lackadaisical Clarissas and Belindas and Arabellas whose delicacy and helpless-ness were held up for the admiration or our great-grandmothers have safely passed over the border into the land of the ridiculous. We can laugh at them now as we wear our sensible shoes and try our best to be what they would have called rudely healthy with their strange idea of what was beautiful and proper.—Mrs. Arthur Brooks in Harper's Young People.

Giving a Child Sweets.

It is the wise mother who gives her children confections in small quantities, for the sweetments of which they are so fond often cause trivial ailments, which grow serious and in time become distresses of a chronic nature. The candies and goody goodies which children crave may permanently injure the teeth and plant the seeds of dyspepsia or purulent indigestion or create an undue tendency toward the deposits of fat. When sugared matter comes in contact with the teeth, it is very apt to leave a sticky deposit, which ferments and decomposes the enamel, and when the sugar enters the stomach it helps to make fat and irritants.

Then, too, the stomach of a child is delicate, and the strain put upon it by too great an allowance of sweets is too much for it. Do not know what else to say, only children should not be allowed sweetmeats in limited quantities, and indeed their effect is excellent at times. But there should be a limit, which is very well defined by the simple rule, "a little at a time."—New York Telegram.

A Couple of Home Cures.

An excellent remedy for a chest cold, used promptly, is a poultice of hot onions. The onions should be sliced and stewed in hard till somewhat tender and very hot. Then put them in a tag already prepared, take two or three stitches in the end and apply where the distress is most evident. This done while waiting for a physician will often avert a serious attack.

The same authority, a famous home doctor and nurse, a woman, of course, says that chestnut tea is an absolute specific for whooping cough.

"I gather and dry chestnut leaves every year," she says, "and I have long stopped counting the number of cases I have cured by their use. The dried leaves to be had at the druggists will do quite as well. A tea should be made and given freely to the children. The cough will disappear entirely. It does not merely lessen the attack, it cures it," says this most trustworthy authority. "In the case of nursing infants," she adds, "the mother must drink freely of the tea."—New York Times.

Inexpensive Table Decoration.

An ingenious little friend of mine, who cannot afford cut flowers every day, has just made a very pretty and inexpensive fernery for her dining table. First, she procured a pressed glass dish of suitable size and shape, and this she lined with tin foil—not only to hide the soil, but also to preserve the brilliancy of the glass. Then she bought at the florist's a gracefully shaped fern for table decoration, the one known as Adiantum farleyeuse. Before transplanting it she put into the bottom of the glass dish a few bits of broken crockery to help the drainage.

Occasionally she adds a little charcoal to keep the soil in good condition, and when not needing the plant for table decoration she puts it on the window shelf, where it can have more light. By this means she keeps her dainty fernery fresh and thriving, and she says that "fern" is sure to harmonize with everything on the table, which is not always the case with a flower.—Emma E. Brown in Chicago News-Record.

A Case of Pig.

A Washington lawyer of considerable prominence relates an amusing story incidental to the first criminal case in which he was retained by the defense. He was then practicing in a small town not far from Washington, and the case was that of a local character who had purloined a fat porker, the property of a neighbor.

At first matters looked bad for the accused during the trial, but Mr. L., the lawyer, was most eloquent in his defense. His speech abounded in flights of rhetoric and figures. At times he was even pathetic to such a degree that tears dimmed the eyes of the jury, while the prisoner wept most copiously. The finish and climax of his eloquence brought everything around to a climax of triumph, the jury delivering the verdict of not guilty without leaving their seats, although the evidence for the prosecution tended to show a most conclusive guilt.

The released man was most profuse in his words of gratitude, calling Mr. L. his preserver, the champion of his honor, his liberty and all that life held dear to him.

Mr. L. acknowledged with becoming modesty his flood of thanks, but at last seeing no end in sight of these extravagances began to hint that a financial acknowledgment would be more in order.

"To be sure, to be sure," exclaimed the client eagerly, "I won't forget about that and will pay you handsomely too. Say, Mr. L., you be in your office tonight at 12, and I'll come around and fix things all right."

"Twelve o'clock!" said the lawyer in astonishment. "Bless me! Why do you set this late hour?"

"Never you mind, sir," returned he, "never you mind. I mean to pay you, and pay you well. Don't forget, 12 o'clock, sure."

Lawyer and client departed their respective ways. That night Mr. L. sat in his small office awaiting the coming of the man whose reputation he had cleared. There was a hushed commotion in the rear of his establishment promptly at midnight, then a muffled knock at the door. Mr. L. answered it.

"Sh!" whispered the client hoarsely; "there I was. Is it open?"

"But why do you make such a secret of it?" asked the lawyer.

"Not too loud," was the answer. "Didn't I say I'd pay you handsomely?"

"You did indeed."

"Well, I mean to keep my word, Mr. L., here it is. I brought you the pig!"

And there in the gloomy recesses of the midnight's weird shadows stood several hundred pounds of stolen bacon calmly awaiting the transfer of ownership.—Washington Herald.

The Scott Press Works Society.

The annual meeting of the Scott Press Works Mutual Benefit Society took place last evening in Odd Fellows Hall, on West Second street. Amendments were made to the by-laws, and the following officers elected:

President—James McKenzie.
Vice President—Charles C. Davis.
Secretary—John Wilson.
Treasurer—Henry Newman.

Nine directors were elected, but for some unknown reason many of them resigned before the meeting ended. It is probable another meeting will be held next week to take action on the resignations and to re-elect directors. The reports showed that the society is in good financial condition, and has $280.50 in the treasury. It has a membership of 160.

Judgment Against Mr. Weichers.

The Merchants' Bank of Canada entered judgment for $127,212 yesterday against John E. Wiechers, of the failed firm of Field, Lindley, Wiechers & Co., of New York. Mr. Wiechers resides on West Eighth street, this city, and is a member of the Union County Country Club. Through connection with the above firm Mr. Wiechers and his father were swindled out of nearly $1,000,000 for which Field was tried, but got off on the plea of insanity.

Head Pin Tournament.

The games in the head pin tournament at the Crescent League, last night, resulted as follows:

	Won.	Lost.
Woolston	0	2
Leggett	1	1
Sangston	1	2
Wood	1	0
Petrie	0	1

The average ranged from 23 to 100. To-morrow night's bowlers will be Sangston, Thiers, Keller and Van Alstyne.

A Bicycle Hustler.

New Brunswick is destined to become a cycling center. Since the debut in this city of Plainfield's hustling bicycle dealer, F. L. C. Martin, with his wide awake manager, Kelsey H. Wyckoff, a great demand for the Columbia bicycle has been aroused.

He has already sold 21 wheels, so that his success is assured. His store is in the bank building, at the corner of George and Church street.—Home News.

A Gig's Axle Breaks.

An accident happened at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, between six and seven o'clock this morning which might have proven serious, but fortunately did not. Frank Hand was driving around the corner on his way to Netherwood, when the axle of his gig broke, at the end nearest the sidewalk, throwing Mr. Hand to the street. He escaped injury, owing to the fact that he was driving unusually slow.

From Plainfield for the World's Fair.

The Pond Machine Tool Company today shipped an immense lathe to the Columbian Exposition. It was shipped to Mr. F. Sargent, the exposition's mechanical and electrical engineer, Jackson Park, Chicago. The lathe will be used for making steel car wheels.

Mr. Runyon's New Building.

Mr. John Runyon's new brick building, on the site of the old Bolce lumber yard, Park avenue, is to be 60x90 feet. The work of erection will begin immediately as it is to be ready for occupancy May 1st. Mr. L. A. Hammer has leased it for a feed store.

Cock Fight at Fanwood.

A cocking main took place last night at Fanwood, between Fanwood and Westfield birds. Six battles were fought, Fanwood wining four and Westfield two. Quite an amount of money changed hands on the result.

FARMLAND NEWS.

A BUDGET OF INTERESTING ITEMS.

Gathered from One Section of the Sparsely Settled Country the Other Side of the Mountains.

A Sad Case of Poverty.

An old German who lives near South Stirling was found by Mr. John C. Cooper, recently, ill, without food, fire or money to buy them with, lying in his little home. Mr. Cooper warmed the house and has since kept the man, (who is alone in the world,) and about eighty years old, supplied with the necessaries of life. Mr. Cooper's post office address is the Plainfield Post Office and all contributions he says will be forwarded by him.

West Oak Too Soon.

Mrs. George Mantz, a sister-in-law of the Mr. Mantz who was so crippled by an operation resulting from being frozen as related in the News, is lying dangerously ill as her home in Coontown. She was ill for a few days, and had apparently recovered, but, after going out, she had a relapse and her recovery now is a matter of doubt.

The Pastor Got $31.95.

The Rev. Frederick Oston, the pastor of the Coontown church, was given a "Donation Party" last Monday evening at Mr. Peter Williams' house in the valley. The amount of money received amounted to $31.95.

One who attended said "there ought to have been $32, but I guess someone was short a nickel."

Mail Change in the Future.

After the first of July Warrenville will have a daily mail. Mail now leaves only three times a week. This is a very unsatisfactory arrangement for the residents in Warren Township.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Chas. Hook of East Third street is sick with la grippe.

Clinton V. Janson of East Third street died to-day of diphtheria.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade of East Front street are visiting at Johnstown.

Mrs. Leigh Hammond of Pearl street is suffering from an attack of la grippe.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald of New York are visiting Mr. McDonald's father on West Fifth street.

Mr. A. M. Seguine has moved with his family from Central avenue to corner Park avenue and Fourth street.

The Misses Ada and Mattie Van Horn of Duer street are spending the week at their uncle's, O. W. Van Horn, at White House.

Editor Frank W. Runyon of the Courier will leave Plainfield Monday for a trip South to benefit his health. He will be accompanied by his wife, and mother, Mrs. A. M. Runyon.

A number of Plainfield young ladies have arranged an original society event for next Monday afternoon at the Casino. It is a ladies' cotillion, and gentlemen will not be admitted.

A telegram was received in this city to-day announcing the death of Mr. D. L. Abbett, who recently married Mrs. Demarest of Crescent avenue, and who has since been in the South.

Ex Judge Codington, of the law firm of Jackson and Codington, was able to get down to his office a little while yesterday afternoon, for the first time in two weeks. La grippe is responsible for his absence from business.

The marriage of Miss Marie Celia Loizeaux to Mr. George Atkins Bomann of New York took place last evening, at the home of the bride's parents, on Chatham street. The ceremony was performed by City Judge Coddington.

The marriage of Miss E. Josephine, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Compton, of Evens, to Mr. James Johnson is announced. The ceremony will take place at the residence of the bride's parents, Wednesday evening, April 12.

Mrs. Frederick R. Haberle tendered her husband a surprise party last night at their home on West Front street, it being the occasion of the twenty-eighth anniversary of his birth. Many guests were present, and the evening was pleasantly spent in dancing.

Miss Susan S. Boice, a graduate of the New Brunswick High School, a young lady who, according to the Home News, has been making marked advancement as a vocalist, will fill a fine salaried position as soprano in the First Presbyterian church of this city after May 1.

The Blakeerly Bible class, conducted by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, which is studying "The Apostolic Church," has changed its hour of meeting. Beginning with April 7, it will meet in the Congregational church parlors, Friday afternoon at four o'clock. The class will soon begin reading Gloddit's "Who Wrote the Bible." The class is open to all.

First Presbyterian Church Election.

The parish meeting at the First Presbyterian church last evening for the election of elders, deacons and trustees, resulted as follows:

Elders—F. C. Lounsbury, W. J. Ladd and R. H. Radford.
Deacons—A. V. Searing and Mr. Nexsen.
Trustees—W. H. Shotwell, J. C. Paul, T. J. Pruden and H. A. Pope.

JOHN TAYLOR JOHNSTON'S WILL.

He Left $1,500,000 in Real and Personal Property.

John Taylor Johnston, who died March 24th last at his residence, No. 8 Fifth avenue, New York, left a million and a half. His will was yesterday filed for probate with Probate Clerk Tinney, by his executors. He left $750,000 real property and $750,000 personal property.

His will is dated December 31st, 1889, and the executors are John Herbert Johnston, his son, and Robert W. De Forest and Henry E. Coe, his son-in-law. He leaves $10,000 to each of his grandchildren, and $10,000 each to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, of which he was the first president, and the University of the City of New York, of which he was a graduate.

His books he gives to his son. The residue of his estate is divided equally among his four children, John Herbert Johnston, Emily J. De Forest, Francis Johnston Mali, and Eva Johnston Coe. Thomas Nolan was appointed special guardian for the children.

Accidents at White House.

There has been a number of accidents at White House, recently.

On Wednesday of last week George McDonald, aged 16, was harnessing a horse for Dr. Pursell, a brother-in-law of Dr. Fritts of this city, when he turned around just in time to be kicked by the doctor's stallion which was being led around the yard by his keeper. The injury was not thought serious at first, but upon examination, it was found the boy had received a blow in the stomach and was injured internally. He lingered, suffering considerably, until five o'clock Thursday morning, when he died.

Thursday Lamonte Voorhees was injured while at work on a hay press. He was driving the horse around, when the press came to a standstill suddenly, throwing the horse down, and the boy, who was sitting on the end of the pole, under the horse's feet. He received a deep flesh wound on his face and several other bruises.

Jacob Hockenberry, aged 23, on Saturday, was run over and instantly killed on the railroad between the station and the freight house, by a coal train.

In THE NEWS of last week were accounts of two other accidents at that place. One was the case of John Rush, who was kicked in the face by a horse, and the other happened on the railroad, when one Italian was killed and two others injured.

"Robin Hood."

Concerning the play here Saturday night the manager says: "That most sterling of attractions, 'Robin Hood,' is coming with its tuneful music, perfect ensemble, and gorgeous detail. This famous organization is owned and controlled by that noted trio of operatic managers, Messrs. Barnabee, Karl and MacDonald, of the Bostonians. This charming opera will be presented on the same scale of magnificence as it was at its memorable run of 250 nights at the Garden Theatre, New York. There has never been an opera written that has had the success of 'Robin Hood.' It has now exceeded over 300 performances and is still going steadily on with undiminished patronage wherever presented. The company that is to appear here has played in all the large cities the present season to the capacity of theatres and 'tis almost proverbial that on every night the standing room sign is displayed upon the rising of the curtain. This excellent company will doubtless repeat their large financial results in this city."

It is certainly an attraction recognized having standard weight both as to the quality of its members and its recognized strength as an organization."

A Natural Query.

The Church passed his tiny plate,
The mother he tugged and shook,
"Is Mamma," he said, "if she don't get good,
Do—does angels make H-O?"

H-O is unique and unsurpassed as a child's food. Made into gruel it is also an invaluable delicacy for the sick and weak. It is the purest and most delicate oatmeal made, and differs from all others in every particular of quality. Is the best any too good for you?

EDITORIAL NOTES

Democratic Advisers.

Three gentlemen, an Independent, a Democrat and a Republican, respectively, advise the Democratic party how to use the great opportunity before it. The Independent is Hon. Seth Low, president of Columbia college, New York, the Democrat is Hon. Oswald Ottendorfer and the Republican is Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge.

Mr. Low says that the election of President Cleveland was a victory for the principles advocated by himralso for the man himself, because voters had confidence that he would adhere to those principles through thick and thin. Mr. Cleveland was elected, in the estimation of President Low, chiefly because he favored tariff reform and civil service reform, and because he was opposed to extravagant pension and other legislation. If now the Democratic party will go in for tariff reform, it will destroy the spoils system and also break up the Democratic local party machine, then, in the estimation of Mr. Low, it will be the ruling party in this country for a long time.

Mr. Oswald Ottendorfer is especially concerned about the silver dollar. He plants himself on the gold basis as on the rock of his salvation, and says the country is now dancing on a volcano. The volcano may, so to speak, erupt and blow us into financial kingdom come at any moment just so long as we continue "to dump the proceeds of silver mines into the national treasury and issue therefor treasury notes interchangeable for gold or silver coin." This practice Mr. Ottendorfer considers on a par with the teaching that it "requires only an act of congress to make 60 cents' worth of silver equal to a dollar in gold." One gathers that Mr. Ottendorfer is a "goldbug," and considers the repeal of the Sherman silver act of 1890 as the most howling duty of the Democratic party and the Fifty-third congress.

Then there is Hon. Cabot Lodge. He is by no means obscure as to what his ideas of the Democratic duty of the hour is. It is to inaugurate free trade. "Unless the victorious party is false to the plainest kind of pledge, they must sweep protection from the statute books." He declares the new system must have a fair trial, and the party in power must raise government revenues by methods which can give no protection whatever. If their system is successful, we will stick to it. If it is a failure, out the voters of the country will whop the Democrats, and in will go the Republicans again, thinks Mr. Lodge.

War and Baked Beans.

It is a good story, that told by R. K. Munkittrick in Harper's Magazine. He was walking "along the bluff at Siasconsett" when he was accosted by a venerable man who had been in the war. The old fellow's case seemed a pathetic one, as he told how strong he was before the war, how he could do anything ere the fatal years of army service that had planted his vigor and reduced him to a wreck. He said sadly that he had been a whole week "a-painin that there stoop." He was not so old yet, he said; would not be 70 till February, and he ought to be as lively as a cricket still. He felt that he would have been indeed only for the war that had ruined his health and made him an old man before his time. Munkittrick sympathized, and the veteran told how the war had knocked him out:

"It was the war that done it," he continued, with great feeling. "I came back all chock full of rheumatism and malary, and I ain't never been the same one since. I felt jes that way was an awful sore for me."

"It was a hard trial," said a kind attempt to be sympathetic.

"Yes," he replied, "it was. Why, do you know what I could do before the war?"

"No."

"Well," he continued, "I could sit down and eat 14 pieces of baked beans for breakfast without turning a hair, and now I can't eat one plateful to save my life."

The next move in naval progress will probably be to sheathe the bottoms of the new cruisers with a coating of wood and copper. The sheathing prevents the accumulation of barnacles upon the ship's steel bottom, and the consequent frequent docking and cleaning which this fouling makes necessary. The heavy clogging of the barnacles and other substances makes the vessel's bottom so rough and heavy that her progress is seriously impeded, and her coal bills run inordinately high. Besides that, one of our new cruisers could not run away from an enemy if her bottom was fouled with barnacles.

After the reproduced flagship Santa Maria does duty at the Chicago fair she will be sent to Washington to remain permanently, to show visitors what kind of a vessel Columbus sailed in when he discovered the new world. Will they put the Santa Maria in the Smithsonian institution along with George Washington's breeches and cocked hat?

The commercial crisis is evidently passing in Argentina, and the people are settling down to work and progress. During 1892 this country exported to the Argentine Republic $1,381,000 worth of agricultural implements and machinery against $327,000 in 1891.

There are those in this country who talk of the United States restoring her throne to Lilnokalani and holding her at any upon that frail and tottering stool. The United States will look well in the role of bolstering up a monarchy, will it not?

CHOLERA THREATENS US

The Dreaded Disease Is Beyond Control in Russia.

AN EARLY OUTBREAK IS FEARED.

The Marine Hospital Service Is Making Preparations to Ward Off the Scourge. Foreign Consular Inspection of Immigrants to Be Enforced.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 6.—There is now scarcely a doubt entertained by those aware of the real situation that Russia is to again suffer from the ravages of cholera. Concurrent with the setting in of slightly warmer weather the official reports, incomplete as they are, show the recrudescence of the disease in nearly all the places in which it wrought such frightful havoc last summer and autumn.

Official returns have been made public, showing that from March 19 to March 26 there were 65 cases of cholera and 19 deaths from the disease in the town of Orel, the important commercial centre between North and South Russia. With its trade with the various sections of the country Orel is particularly liable to suffer from epidemic diseases, more particularly cholera, and it is also a point for the dissemination of the disease.

The official figures place the number of cases of the disease reported from March 12 to March 27 in the government of Oufa, west of the Ural mountains, at 84 and the deaths at 39. From March 25 to March 26 there were 10 cases and 4 deaths in the government of Yelisavetpol in Transcaucasia.

In addition to the bad showing of the above official figures it is a matter of common knowledge that the number of cholera cases and deaths from the scourge are far more numerous in the governments than are not included in the returns.

This is especially the case in the governments of Podolia and Saratoff, which were ravaged by cholera last year. It is impossible, however, to obtain the actual number of cases and deaths in these governments.

Measures of Prevention.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Assistant Surgeon Rosenau cables the Marine hospital service today that smallpox is prevailing at Antwerp. The bureau has been on the alert with respect to cholera and will also take precautions against the admittance of smallpox. It is expected that within a few days the regulations to govern the quarantine service of the national and state governments will be promulgated. It is recognized that no quarantine can afford absolute immunity from disease and Dr. Wyman has told the New York authorities he will see the authorities and others and concoct measures for fighting the dreadful contagion, should it break out in the summer. It is said that the weather in Europe becomes sufficiently warm in the last part of April and early May to develop cholera cases, and from this point on the reports that are received from abroad will be closely followed.

An early outbreak it is felt would indicate that the epidemic would be severe. Every day that its appearance is delayed will add to the effectiveness of the fight of this country against its prevalence, since it will make so much shorter the length of time the disease will have to run before winter and cold weather cuts short its ravages. Last year the Marine hospital service was aided by the lateness of the appearance of the cholera, but at the same time it was at the disadvantage of having neither the full powers nor the amount of money now possessed for the purpose of keeping it out. This year the conditions are reversed, and if cholera is to come history tells an early outbreak is likely. The foreign consular inspection of the immigrants is expected to be of great service in diminishing the danger from the scourge, so far as Russia is concerned.

The long distances to be traveled in reaching the seaboard and the slow transportation would give time for the disease to develop before the port of departure for the United States was reached, and our representatives would be enabled under the law to ward off danger by having those immigrants quarantined abroad and refusing bills of health to vessels proposing to transport them.

Board of Health Act.

NEW YORK, April 6.—The international conference of the state and Canadian boards of health was begun at the Fifth Avenue hotel, Dr. A. N. McCormick of Kentucky presided. Canada and the province of Quebec were represented, as well as 20 states in the Union. The morning session was given to 50 prepared papers by representatives of different states and of Canada. The evening session was devoted to reports of committees appointed at the morning session.

Dr. Jenkins then made a brief extemporaneous report on the condition of affairs at the port of New York. Dr. Jenkins said that he had had a conference recently with a number of competent advisors on the subject of improvements on Hoffman island. On this island there were needed more facilities for the management of an emergency such as occurred last fall.

The Express Fight.

BOSTON, April 6.—Two cars loaded with packages in the care of the American Express company and intended for transit from New York to Boston were sidetracked at Bowesters, N. Y. This was the culminating point in the trouble between the New York and New England road and the express company. The next move, it is said, will be a suit at law against the railroad by the express company.

No Official News of the Chili War.

NEW YORK, April 6.—Chilian Consul C. R. Flint said Mr. W. R. Grace both said that they had received no advices of any trouble in Chili. Neither the consul nor Mr. Grace believes that the Iquique cablegram, that martial law had been ordered in Santiago, was correct.

Trenton Fales Protest.

TRENTON, April 6.—There are nearly 2,000 Polish residents in Trenton, and a mass meeting was attended by 300 of them to protest against the promulgation of the new treaty between this country and Russia.

The Loyal Legion Banquet.

NEW YORK, April 6.—The regular meeting of the New York commandery of the Loyal Legion was held here. About 450 members and guests sat down to a banquet over which General Wager Swayne presided.

Trying the Coal Dealers.

ROCHESTER, April 6.—The trial of the local coal dealers on the charge of conspiring to raise the price of coal in Rochester is proceeding slowly.

DOINGS IN WASHINGTON.

The Late Appointments and the Gossip of the Capitol Corridors.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The president sent the following nominations to the senate. James S. Ewing of Illinois, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Belgium. Thomas T. Crittenden of Missouri, to be consul general of the United States at the City of Mexico. Lewis C. Hughes of Arizona, to be governor of Arizona. William T. Thornton of New Mexico, to be governor of New Mexico. William M. Mase of Ohio, to be surveyor.

The senate will hold a few other executory sessions at which a few speeches and confirmations will be made, and will be adjourned sine die until called together next autumn.

Indian Agent Bennett recommends that the Choctaw country be put under martial law.

Harry Martin, a stepson of Senator Vance of North Carolina attempted to commit suicide because of his attentions to some girl. He is the young man who figured in the court some time ago for attempting to break into the White House during the Democratic banquet when under the influence of liquor.

There was a lively meeting, lasting 2½ hours, in the office of Postmaster General Bissell between two factions of the South Carolina Democracy.

ONLY FOUR LIVED.

The Rest of the Crew of the King James Died of Exposure and Starvation.

REDONDO BEACH, Cal., April 6.—The steamer Los Angeles reports the picking up of a boat which proved to be the missing one of the ill fated ship King James. They left the ship at midnight on March 13. At 5:40 p. m. of March 21 the boat was capsized and there were four men drowned. The captain, his boy and the remainder of the crew climbed upon the keel of the boat and succeeded in righting her, but the boat was full of water, and they remained in their precarious position for 36 hours, when the men, worn out, exausted and chilled, began dying, and one after another passed away until eight, including the captain's son, were dead.

All the provisions, oars and rigging of every kind, excepting a small piece of sail, were lost in the upsetting.

When picked up the captain and the three remaining members of his crew had been five days without food or water. They were so weak as to be unable to stand or walk, and had to be lifted from the boat by the willing arms of the rescuers. The names of those saved are Captain William Drummond, Joseph Muller, Tessman, Edwin Flint, sailmaker, and John Spiney, apprentice.

Deposited Checks, Drew Out Money.

SALEM, N. J., April 6.—A neat swindle was practiced on the Salem National bank by a well dressed, gentlemanly young man, who went to Lawyer J. Forman Sinnickson and introduced himself as a client of Judge Buchanan of Trenton, and said he had been sent here by him. He wished to open a bank account. Mr. Sinnickson took him into the Salem bank and introduced him to Cashier Rumsey. The stranger gave his name as A. J. Bowman, deposited checks on the First National bank of Elizabeth, N. J., and Elizabeth, N. J., for about $1,600, drew $300 on his check and shortly afterwards left town.

A Suspected Sensation Monger.

HARTFORD, April 6.—There are eight less employes at the state prison than there were. Overseer F. J. Martin was suspended for a month by Warden Chamberlain, and in consequence of this seven others refused to go to work. It is supposed that Martin's suspension arises from suspicions of the warden that the sensational statements about the management of the prison which have recently been published have been given out through Martin.

Ex-Mayor Whitney Married.

LOCUST VALLEY, N. Y., April 6.—Ex-Mayor Daniel D. Whitney of Brooklyn, married Miss Henrietta Titus, the daughter of Mr. Whitney's first wife's sister. Mr. Whitney fell in love with her a couple of years after the death of his first wife, which occurred eight years ago. There was much opposition on the part of the young woman's relatives to the match at first. Miss Titus is 40 years old, and the ex-mayor much older.

Westinghouse Company's Profits.

PITTSBURG, April 6.—During the last fiscal year ending March 31, the reorganized Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company's output was $8,000,000. The net earnings after paying for all ordinary and extraordinary expenses have averaged 25 per cent of the amount of the sales, and will add between $1,100,000 and $1,200,000 to the surplus account after providing sufficient for the 7 per cent dividends on the preferred stock.

Strikers Return the Compliment.

TOLEDO, April 6.—Chairman Taylor of the Ann Arbor strike committee stated that suit will probably be brought against the railroad company by the strikers for $40,000. This is the rough estimate of the amount alleged to be due them. It represents the difference they set forth between the arbitrator's scale adopted in the Ann Arbor strike of two years ago and the amount paid by the company.

Careless Priest and Honest Drummer.

ANDOVER, Mass., April 6.—Rev. Father Ryan of St. Augustine church, who married Mrs. Frances Hiller last Sunday, was given as his fee an indorsed check for $500, but while returning home he lost it. It was found, however, by a drummer, and restored to the anxious loser.

Difficulty In Unloading Krupp's Gun.

BALTIMORE, April 6.—The 124-ton Krupp gun is still in the hold of the Longstreet. The vessel has been here nearly three weeks and the Maryland Steel company is paying a forfeit of $150 per day until the cargo is removed. The vessel was loaded in Santiago, not at Hamburg.

Famous Picture Destroyed by a Vandal.

ROME, April 6.—The famous portrait of a Venetian nobleman in the palace of the Doges, Venice, has been hacked to pieces. The portrait was valued at 500,000 francs. No clew to the identity or motive of the man who mutilated the picture has been obtained.

His Spree Ended In Suicide.

PHILADELPHIA, April 6.—As an ending of a long continued drinking spell James McNamee, 50 years, was found strangled in the cellar of his residence. His wife is covered his body kneeling on a soap box, a noose made of clothesline encircling his neck.

Another Sp ech Expected.

LONDON, April 6.—Mr. Gladstone is in a hearty condition and was expected to deliver a speech in the house of commons today.

OUT OF DOOR EXERCISES

The World's Fair Opening to Be Public.

OFFICIAL PROGRAMME ARRANGED

The World's Fair Mayor Talks About His Reported Prospects of Marriage—He Says He Is Willing, but That the Lady Is Not—Interesting Bits of Fair Gossip.

CHICAGO, April 6.—The committee on ceremonies have decided to hold the opening exercises of the Columbian exposition in the open air instead of in Choral hall. This will give the public at large an opportunity of seeing President Cleveland and witnessing the formal starting of the immense machinery of the fair. The original scheme proposed the exercises in Choral hall, where only 2,000 favored ones would have been admitted by card. This plan aroused so much opposition that the committee on ceremonies have decided to hold the exercises in the open air, where as many as can crowd in the vicinity can see the show. Unless more changes are made the exercises will take place on the government plaza next to the Casino above. There are nearly 9 acres of space there and easily 50,000 persons could be crowded in the space. The only objection to the open air is a fear that the crowd may become unruly in its eagerness to press near the presidential stand.

The following programme has finally been decided on:

Music, "Columbian March and Hymn," John K. Paine.

Prayer.

Presentation of chiefs of departments and foreign commissioners by the director general.

Music—"In Praise of God," Beethoven.

Address and opening of the World's Columbian exposition by President Cleveland.

Starting of machinery, during which time will be performed the "Hallelujah" chorus by Handel.

Official visit from the president of the United States and officials of the World's Columbian exposition and the national commission to the various departments.

Thousands of Packages on the Way.

NEW YORK, April 6.—Up to date 42,578 packages containing foreign exhibits for the World's fair have passed through the New York custom house. Most of them have been sent here by various governments, but a fair share represents individual exhibitors.

The customs officers are now looking after between 2,000 and 3,000 packages which were shipped from Bremen. They belong to the Italian government, the bulk of whose exhibits have been sent on a national vessel to Portland, Me. The packages now here will be shipped to Portland in charge of a special officer, and will be taken to Chicago along with the main lot.

Carter Is Willing, But—

CHICAGO, April 6.—"Barkis is willin, but Harrison won't," said Harrison Carter when asked as to the truth of the story that came from Springfield that the newly elected mayor was to wed comely Miss Nina Gillette, a lady of Springfield, who lives at Elkhart, Logan county, Ills.

"Miss Gillette is as good a woman as the world possesses," he continued, "for she and I have corresponded, and our friendship has been as strong as the friendship between man and woman can be, but of late I have not heard from her. I don't deny that the old man would get married if he could, and I can't say that he won't."

Mexico's Valuable Display.

MONTEREY, Mex., April 6.—The most valuable portion of Mexico's exhibit at the World's fair is now being diminished by express. Forty cases, valued at $60,000, have so far been sent and 70 more cases are to follow today and tomorrow. All must arrive in Chicago by April 15. These cases contain paintings and other objects of great value. Mexico will make a greater display at Chicago than she has ever done at any previous exposition. Over 100 tons loads of bulky and less valuable articles have gone forward on freight trains by the different railroad lines.

Will Go In a Rowboat.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 6.—A young Norwegian named Knud E. Knudson left this city in a rowboat, bound for Chicago, to attend the World's fair. His craft is 16 feet long, 4 feet 6 inches wide and draws 6 inches of water. Knudson says he will row all the way to Chicago, going via the Hudson river and Erie canal. He expects to make the trip in 10 weeks.

Quick Justice For Offenders.

CHICAGO, April 6.—It was decided to maintain at the World's fair a police court, where delinquent visitors may have justice meted out to them without delay. The magistrate will be in constant attendance, prepared to try a case at any hour. The magistrates will be appointed by Chicago's new mayor, Carter H. Harrison.

The Boycott Stands.

NEW YORK, April 6.—The second legal battle in the contest of the locked out clothing cutters was fought before Judge Barrett in the supreme court. The men sought relief from the injunction restraining them from issuing boycott circulars. Judge Barrett declined the motion for an injunction and dissolved the temporary injunction. He holds that the Manufacturers' association is not the party plaintiff, and doubts very much if such an action could be maintained by the individual manufacturers affected.

It May Be Mr. Harris.

PHILADELPHIA, April 6.—It was stated on excellent authority that the successor to Mr. McLeod as president and receiver of the Reading company will be Joseph S. Harris. The first meeting of the board of managers will be held on Saturday, when the resignation of President McLeod will be considered, and if accepted his successor will probably be chosen.

No Greater New York.

ALBANY, April 6.—The greater New York bill was reported to both houses from the cities committees, but only to be killed. The house report was favorable, but the senate report was adverse to the bill.

Thrown Into Nets.

NEWTON, Mass., April 6.—Two children of Charles Bisotti were rescued by being thrown into nets during a fire that destroyed a 2-story wooden building.

Four People Burned Out.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., April 6.—Three frame buildings were burned. They were occupied by poor families and most of their furniture was destroyed.

"Gentlemen: For the benefit of suffering humanity I wish to state a few facts: For several years I have suffered from catarrh and heart failure, getting so bad I could not work and

Could Scarcely Walk.

I had a very bad spell of paralysis of the throat some time ago. My throat seemed closed and I could not swallow. The doctors said it was caused by heart failure, and gave me medicine which I took according to directions, but it did not seem to do me any good, my wife urged me to try Heed's Sarsaparilla, telling me of Mr. Joseph C. Smith, who had been

A DEADLY PRIZE FIGHT.

Dan Donovan Was Knocked Out For Good by Joe Dunfee of New York.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 6.—Dan Donovan of Cleveland, O., who was defeated in the mill with Joe Dunfee of this city at Maple Bay, died at 4:30 p. m. Wednesday. The defeated pugilist never recovered consciousness after the hard, and decisive blows he struck, although a score of physicians worked over him all night.

The sheriff, when he arrived at the fight, woke to a realization of his duty in the morning, and ten warrants issued by the district attorney arrested Joe Dunfee, who won the fight, and P. Jay Donohue of New York, who acted as referee.

There is much indignation in the community over the affair, and there will probably be no more "scientific exhibitions" with the gloves here for some time to come.

Dunfee has not been admitted to bail, and probably will not be. He has the sympathy of the public, and is much affected by the unfortunate ending of his first fight.

Donovan's two brothers have arrived here, and his mother has been sent for and is expected to arrive tomorrow morning. She has not yet been told of her son's death.

Donovan's seconds, Tom King and Pat Hussey of Cleveland, are receiving harsh criticism for not throwing up the sponge before the last blow. Donovan was plainly knocked out, but was allowed to rise to his feet and receive another terrible blow behind the right ear. The doctors say that death was caused by concussion of the brain, but this will be definitely settled at a post mortem to be held tomorrow morning.

Other arrests are liable to follow, many of those who participated in the affair being prominent politicians.

COME IN, HAWAII.

The Provisional Government Receives the Invitation of President Cleveland.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 6.—The steamship Australia arrived here with the following advices from Hawaii:

HONOLULU, March 29.—The provisional government is in receipt of dispatches stating that President Cleveland is favorable to the principle of annexation and that Secretary Gresham favors it and a prompt ratification of the treaty.

The United States revenue cutter Rush arrived here this morning, nine days from San Francisco, having on board ex-Congressman Blount of Georgia, who was appointed commissioner to investigate the existing condition in Hawaii and report as to the expediency of the annexation of the Islands to the United States. Mr. Blounts received a hearty welcome.

To Save Harris From Death.

ALBANY, April 6.—Assemblyman Rice received two petitions from Mr. Howe in the Carlyle Harris case, and he immediately made a canvass of the assembly, securing the signatures of nearly 90 members in an hour before the house adjourned. The petition asks the governor to consider the new evidence which Mr. Howe has to present and to grant such clemency as may be warranted by his evidence. Governor Flower has written Lawyer Howe to send in his petitions on April 16, that he may have more time to consider them. It is said that Richard Croker has become interested in Harris' fate.

Shot While Reading a Warrant.

PLUMLERVILLE, Ark., April 6.—While Constable Charles F. Pate was reading a warrant to Flanagan Thornton, a negro, at Menifee, five miles east of here, the negro shot him with a Winchester. Pate died at 9 a. m. A colored man helped Pate into a house nearby, and came here and gave the alarm. A posse of men with a pack of bloodhounds started after Thornton and when they overtake him his career will be brief.

Populists Break Freight Charges.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 6.—After the fiercest and most protonged struggle ever witnessed in the Nebraska legislature, the maximum freight rate bill passed the senate. For two nights and two days the session has been in a deadlock. The bill contemplates a reduction in rates of about 30 per cent. The railroads have made strenuous efforts to defeat the measure, but the Populists stood solidly for the bill.

The Decline of Bull Fighting.

PUEBLO, Mex., April 6.—The government of this state took the first steps several months ago in the matter of abolishing bull fighting. There has been no exhibition of that sort this city since the new law went into effect. The other states of Mexico are now falling into line, and the indications are that bull fighting in this republic will soon be abolished.

Call of the Cabinet a Salad.

PARIS, April 6.—The Paris dailies are almost unanimous this morning in describing the new cabinet as weak and mediocre. M. de Cassagnac says: "It is not a government. It is a salad." President Carnot is generally blamed as the person bearing the sole responsibility for the unsatisfactory issue of the crisis.

Cars Rolled Into a Swamp.

SING SING, April 6.—A freight train on the New York and Northern railroad was wrecked at Wheatley Hill, two miles south of the falls. Four freight cars and the tender rolled down a 12-foot embankment into a swamp. A brakeman was slightly injured, and traffic was blocked for several hours.

Testing the New Cruisers.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 6.—The naval board detailed to witness the speed trial of the new cruiser Detroit will report today, but the trials cannot begin before Friday. It is reported as quite probable that the New York will also be tried here.

To Celebrate General Grant's Birthday.

GALENA, Ills., April 6.—The birthday of General Grant, April 27, will be celebrated on a large scale here. A committee of five was appointed to draft a bill making Grant's birthday a legal holiday.

Minister Coolidge Entertained.

PARIS, April 6.—Mrs. Ayer gave a dinner to T. Jefferson Coolidge, the United States minister. Among the guests were a host of artists, authors and ladies of the American colony in Paris.

The Pilgrim Fathers Gather.

BOSTON, April 6.—The annual session of the supreme colony United Order of Pilgrim Fathers, was held here, with 108 colonies represented by some 300 delegates.

Open the Fair Sundays.

BALTIMORE, April 6.—Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, who is visiting relatives in this city, says she favors the opening of the World's fair on Sundays.

Looms Running Again.

FALL RIVER, Mass., April 6.—The strike at the Hargraves mill is ended. All the looms are running.

A MANIAC IN THEIR CAR.

Startling Experience of Mrs. Sage and Miss Helen Gould.

AN INSANE MAN RODE WITH THEM.

He Came In With a Rag of Oranges, but Became Violent and Made Things Lively in the Drawing Room Car Until New York Was Reached.

NEW YORK, April 6.—The Sun prints the following story: The occupants of the drawing room car on the West Shore railroad had a somewhat exciting journey south of Cornwall. The only occupants of the car were Mrs. Russell Sage and Miss Helen Gould, daughter of the late Jay Gould, with their maids. Colonel Dwight Laflin of Saugerties, Judge Clearwater, Edward H. Bradhead and Samuel Dubois. As the train was moving out of Cornwall a large and powerfully built man, carrying a Gladstone bag filled with oranges, entered the car and took a seat next to Colonel Laflin. As the train was passing Fort Montgomery he jumped up, burst into tears, and cried out:

"My little boy, my little boy, I will never see my little boy any more." ...

When questioned he began to talk incoherently about himself and family. He said that he was a retired policeman, living on a pension at Saratoga, and that his little boy was in heaven, for which place he was bound with a bag filled with oranges. Just beyond Haverstraw he said that the train was going too slow, and rushed for the front of the car with the evident intention of jumping off.

With the aid of the porter he was prevented from doing this, and then he became very violent. It required the combined efforts of the male passengers, the conductor and porter to keep him on the car.

On reaching Weehawken, Judge A. T. Clearwater telephoned for an ambulance and a policeman. While on the ferryboat he attempted to jump overboard, and when interfered with, drew from under his overcoat a policeman's night stick, with which he soon cleared a place for himself.

He charged Colonel Laflin and Judge Clearwater with trying to assassinate him, and with his hand on his hip pocket shouted that he would defend himself. At times he would kneel down and in pitious tones speak of his boy, saying that the heavens were open and that he wished to go up there and see his child.

When the boat arrived at the foot of West Forty-second street a policeman was on hand, and after a struggle secured the lunatic. He had escaped on Easter Sunday.

Choctaw Factions Recruiting.

PARIS, Tex., April 6.—A battle at Antlers, or Fort Locke, is now considered inevitable. Forty men left Atoka to join the militia and 40 followed them to join Locke. The militia are at Goodlands, swearing they will bag Locke and all his men. Locke is at his fort ready for the attack. Jackson, the defeated candidate of the National party for governor, arrived at Antlers this morning. Locke had 50 men at the depot to escort him to his fort. It is believed that a fight will take place before United States troops can reach Antlers.

The Sheriff a Good Shot.

RALEIGH, April 6.—The body of John Allen Johnson (colored) has been found in the woods near Raleigh. In an encounter with Deputy Marshal Upchurch, who was endeavoring to take Johnson into custody, both drew revolvers and began firing. The marshal's bullet passed through Johnson's spinal column. Upchurch is still alive, but his condition is considered critical.

A Colored Game Constable.

FLUSHING, L. I., April 6.—Andrew Mitchell (colored) has been elected game constable on the Democratic ticket. He is the first colored man to be elected to office in Queens county.

EASTER COSTUMES.

Showing Drooping Sleeves and Bodice Revers, Latest Skirts and Hats.

One of the costumes here illustrated is in fawn colored vienna, with a skirt in three divisions, each edged with dark fawn velvet, headed with handsome passementerie in two shades. The bodice has very deep revers falling over full gigot sleeves of velvet made with the drooping sleeves now in vogue, a jabot of cream satin ribbon, with large bow and a velvet waistband. The hat is quite the latest mode which accompanies this effective gown; is of fawn chip, with large bows of satin ribbon. Three ostrich plumes surmount the quaintly shaped brim.

The second costume is in green frise shad ed with pink and green. The skirt is lined with silk, and each seam is defined by a row of passementerie of iridescent beads. The bodice with deep revers is in the form of a bertha edged with green satin and bead passementerie falling over the gigot sleeves. Guipure covers the vest of green satin, of which folds of the satin form the lower part. The waistband has a large metal clasp set. The stylish bonnet is in black drawn net, with fine jet front, rosettes and long strings of green satin ribbon. At the back appears a large velvet rose of bright petunia color and a lace bow.

TEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL BURGLAR.

Tried to Open a Safe With a Hammer and a Cash Drawer With a Can Opener.

ROCHESTER, April 6.—Tina Resnick, aged 10 years, was arrested at midnight Saturday night in the act of breaking into a safe in the Henry Wahl store, in the suburbs. She was in the police court accused of burglary. Patrolman Allen found her in front of the safe holding a hammer, with which she had been attempting to break the combination knob. She had also been operating on the cash drawer with a can opener. The child cried and begged the officer to let her go.

Patrolman Allen took the child to her home. The district attorney asked that the child be held for the grand jury, and that she be committed temporarily to the State industrial school. Humane Agent Groot asked that she be placed in the custody of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children pending the disposition of the case by the grand jury. The case was adjourned.

Quarreled Over a Jackknife.

BELVIDERE, N. J., April 6.—A miner who refused to give his name was brought here to await the result of injuries which it is charged he inflicted upon Alton Kharton, a fellow workman. The two men were returning from work when a dispute arose as to the ownership of a jackknife, and the miner struck Kharton a blow in the countenance with a pick handle, fracturing his skull. Kharton's injuries are probably fatal. The prisoner refused to make any statement regarding the crime or to say anything about himself.

Freight Train In the River.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 6.—A south bound through freight train on the Jacksonville, Tampa and Key West railway was wrecked. The engine tottered over on Buffalo Bluff drawbridge and plunged into the river, carrying six cars with it. A. C. Knox, engineer of Sanford; J. H. Olmstead, fireman of Hirschtown, and J. A. Lewis of Boston, a stockman, in charge of horses and mules bound for Barbersville, this state, were killed.

A Daring Nihilistic Trick.

VIENNA, April 6.—Leading nihilists are arranging a secret meeting in Russia near the American frontier. To illustrate the nihilists' activity, the czar recently found in one of the imperial albums a portrait of a nihilist who was arrested for complicity in the assassination of his father. The strictest inquiry in the household failed to solve the mystery of its appearance there.

Sent Back the Stowaways.

BOSTON, April 6.—Three separate stowaways were returned to England on the steamer Columbian. They arrived in Boston on that steamer last Wednesday and were arrested. They gave their names as James Scott, age 18; W. J. Kelley, age 24, and Samuel Carter, age 19, and said they lived in Manchester, England.

Elk For Gould's Park.

KINGSTON, N. Y., April 6.—Twenty-six Wyoming Elk were placed in the park of George Gould at Furlough Lake, in the Catskills.

AN ORDINANCE

To provide a new system of street numbers.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That the owners of parcels of real estate fronting on the streets, lanes and alleys of the City of Plainfield shall be requested, and each of said parcels shall be known and designated by the number or numbers indicated on the official maps adopted by resolution of the Common Council February sixth, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, to be with the City Clerk, and entitled as follows:

Map of the City of Plainfield, Wards No. 1 and No. 2, showing new system of numbering, No. 3 and 4, showing new system of numbering, No. 5 and 6, showing new system of numbering, No. 7 and 8, showing new system of numbering, and said maps are hereby adopted as the official maps of the City of Plainfield for the purpose of establishing street numbers.

SECTION 2. That the owner or owners of each and every dwelling house or store which shall fronts upon any of the public streets, lanes or alleys of said city, shall within ninety days after this Ordinance goes into effect, cause the proper number or numbers of such house or store to be placed in figures, in some substantial manner, in some conspicuous place on the front part of such dwelling house or store, so as to be plainly visible from the sidewalk, and in default of compliance herewith, shall be liable to a penalty of five dollars for each and every offense.

SECTION 3. That the owner or owners of each and every dwelling house or store that may hereafter be erected within the limits of said City, shall, within thirty days after the completion thereof, cause the proper number of such dwelling house or store to be placed in figures in the manner pointed out in the preceding section, and shall be liable to a penalty of five dollars for each and every offense.

SECTION 4. That to enable the owner or owners of any parcel of real estate fronting on any of the streets, lanes or alleys of said City to ascertain the correct number thereof, it shall be the duty of the City Clerk, upon application made to him to furnish his ordinance in writing giving the division, each edged with dark fawn velvet, headed with handsome passementerie in two shades. The bodice has very deep revers falling over full gigot sleeves of vel- of said maps and said official maps shall also at all proper times be open to the inspection of the public at the office of the City Clerk.

SECTION 5. That in case the owner of any lot or lots shall at any time desire the renumbering thereof he shall be at liberty to apply to the Common Council by petition, which petition shall be accompanied by a properly prepared map showing the changes desired, and clearly showing how the numbers on the entire block would stand in case such renumbering is ordered. The applicant shall present with his said petition, proof by affidavit that a copy of said petition together with notice of his intention to apply to the Common Council has been served upon all of the owners of property fronting on the said block or published in all the official papers of said city at least ten days prior to such application, and thereupon the Common Council may in its discretion by resolution order said block to be renumbered in the manner specified in such application or in such other manner as they may deem best, in case the Common Council order any change in the numbering of said block, a map duly authenticated shall be filed with the City Clerk showing the changes so made, and upon said map being so filed, the numbers upon the premises in said block to the block in question, superceds those on the original maps referred to in this ordinance.

SECTION 6. That all ordinances or parts of ordinances, so far as they are inconsistent herewith, be and the same are hereby repealed.

Adopted by the Common Council, March 20, 1893.

Approved by the Mayor, March 22, 1893.

NEW KINDS OF FILES.

Noteworthy Improvements Effected by a French Mechanic.

In spite of its universal importance and use the indispensable file has up to our day undergone no essential modifications, and the very essential improvements shown in the cuts below are worthy of consideration. All users of the file know well that it is far from offering as good services as it might. Filing dust very soon clogs both coarse and fine cut files and paralyzes a large part of the cutting power. A French mechanic, instigated by these objections, has devised the following modifications, which were originally illustrated and described in a French journal and recently noted in The Jewelers' Circular.

SELF EMPTYING FILES.

The inventor makes grooves in the cutting faces, they are somewhat deeper than the cuts and run oblique. These grooves collect the filings, which therefore do not clog the cuts, but are carried into the grooves and then drop out. The improvement has the further advantage of producing a number of sharp edges and corners of the cuts near the grooves, which cause the file to be of any degree of sharpness, such as is never found in ordinary files.

The inventor asserts that the price of these self emptying files, after the manufacture of them has once begun, will not be higher than that of ordinary files. At any rate it is true that these new files, the cuts of which remain always free from being clogged, will retain their cutting power much longer and take hold much better than the ordinary style.

An Experiment In Physics.

There is nothing very complicated in the experiment about to be described, but readers will find it very much easier to comprehend if, instead of merely reading the explanation, they will try it for themselves. You know that if you place yourself between a lighted candle and the wall your nearly will throw a shadow on the latter, but such shadow will only be profile, and you cannot expect to see within its compass eyes, nose or mouth. Following is a method which not merely supplies these absent features, but will even make the eyes roll from side to side, and the mouth, furnished with teeth of portentous size, open and shut as though eager to devour some member of the company.

To produce this effect you must place yourself at one corner of the room near a wall to which a mirror is attached. The person who holds the light behind you must arrange, by varying as needful its elevation and direction from the wall, that the reflection of the light in the glass shall fall exactly on the same spot of the wall as the shadow of your head. The reflection of the glass will appear as a luminous oval within the limit of such shadow.

If, however, you cover the mirror with a sheet of stout paper, in which you have cut out (as shown in the illustration) two eyes, a nose and mouth as grotesque as you please, the luminous rays passing through these openings will alone be reflected and will appear duly placed as shapes of light in the middle of the shadow of your head, with the effect shown in our illustration.

To make the experiment still more startling you may cover the mirror with two papers cut out in like manner, one being fixed, the other movable. This latter you will move as may be needed in front of the other, when the spectators will, as stated, see the eyes roll and the mouth open in an alarming manner.

Hints About Cements.

A certain amount of time must be allowed for all cements to harden, and the time varies with the nature of the cement used. The Portland Cement Journal illustrates the point thus: "For instance, if an oil cement is used a great deal of time will be necessary, but if one that is liquefied by heat is used the object will be ready for use as soon as the joint becomes cold. There is, however, the objection to such cements that they are liable to come apart when the finished job is again exposed to the heat. On the other hand, the cements composed of oils and metals, like white or red lead and boiled oil, become hardened by oxidation and cannot again be softened by any usual means. A great deal of time is needed for such cements to set, but once this is thoroughly done they will stand almost any climate or treatment. Copal varnish and ordinary shellac make excellent cements, but require from two to six days to set thoroughly.

Antirust Preparation.

A good preparation for preventing tools from rusting is made by the slow melting together of six or eight parts of lard to one of resin, stirring till cool. This remains semifluid, ready for use, the resin preventing rancidity and supplying an airtight film. Polished on a bright surface even so thinly, it protects and preserves the polish effectually, and it can be wiped off nearly clean, if ever desired, as from a knife blade, or it may be thinned with coal oil or benzine.—Power.

RECEPTION GOWNS.

Their Originality May Be Deemed Their Strongest Point.

Fashion mongers are complaining of a dearth of novelty just now. They say that there is the customary lull before the coming tempest—alias crinoline. Therefore a costume that is genuinely original, even in part, is hailed with delight.

A really unique gown is the reception dress shown here. It combines horizontal and perpendicular lines with startling effect. It is really a great plaid as it appears here, and yet the material is perfectly plain. The foundation of the costume is of mirror velvet. The skirt is trimmed with five narrow bands of sable placed at wide intervals, and the big shoulder puffs are striped diagonally to correspond. The long, tight fitting sleeves, collar, belt and band across the bust are of jet. The perpendicular effects are produced by long fringes from the neck, the bust and the waist. It is a decidedly unique and stunning gown.

A more simple reception dress for a young girl is made of light blue shot and striped silk. It has a tiny corselet of white gulpure, and the bodice is trimmed with white ribbons arranged in a novel way.

Uses For Turpentine.

Turpentine has almost as many uses in the house as borax. It is good for rheumatism, and mixed with camphorated oil one of the best remedies for bronchial colds. It is an excellent preventive against moths, although naphtha is preferable, its odor leaving much sooner. It will drive away ants and roaches if sprinkled about the shelves and closets. A spoonful of it to a pail of warm water cleans paint excellently, and a little in the boiler on washing day whitens the clothes.

The Hoopskirt Question.

To write of the fashions without a mention of the hoopskirt would be like giving a dinner without the wine. Here, says the New York Sun, in the city the hoopskirt is seen in the best shops and sold on the quiet to women who enjoin strictest secrecy on the salesmen. As many as 25 of the wire cages are sold in a day, they report, in one of the smaller shops to customers whose names are not to be found out. Still, in London as yet the hoop is not worn by the ladies who figure in the lists of The Court Journal and are received at the drawing rooms.

From Paris the latest advices are that neither Doucet, Worth, Rouff or Lafarmine has as yet declared for the crinoline. Still the coming change is in the air, and while no one is quite brave enough to bell the cat and make the first innovation all may strike the note simultaneously, and "the hoop" will be in, figuratively speaking, before the American legislators to the contrary notwithstanding. The last forlorn hope is that whenever the hoop has imposed its tyranny it has been at the instance of some universally accepted leader of the fashionable world, and now there is no French empress whose personal reasons for adopting the ugly fashion may make the mode mandatory.

Fashionable Dinners.

Dresden porcelain is favored at all high and fashionable dinners. The nappery frequently corresponds in color with the flower selected for decorating. When daffodils are plentiful, the tablecloth and napkins are yellow in that combination of silk and linen and cost about $40 a set.

Evening Dresses For the Coming Season.

This superb evening dress is one of those ordered from Paris for the trousseau of the young Archduchess Margaret of Austria. It is of ivory and pink shot velvet. A deep vandyke collar of point de venice and "sabots" of the same costly lace are fastened to the sleeves and cor-

This distinctively "1830" costume is of a shot silk shading from heliotrope to lime blossom green. The short waisted bodice has a double lapel of faced velvet, shaded from green to heliotrope. The sleeves are also of velvet, and the skirt has two flounces of lace.

A MEAN TRICK.

He Wanted to Row, but It Wasn't a Success.

A wealthy member of a swell club, accompanied by a real estate broker and capitalist, was out strolling along the lake shore northward a short time ago when the gentlemen mutually agreed that nothing was more enjoyable than the exercise of rowing. The lake was as pellucid and still as a tarn at eventide, when not a zephyr is astir, and they engaged a boat with the abandon of youth. The real estate man took first turn at the oars, and the ease and grace with which he handled the blades excited the envy of his companion of the wealth.

"You don't propose to hog it all the afternoon, do you?" said the latter. "If there's one thing I do pride myself upon it is my knowledge of rowing. You have had that place for a mortal hour, and if you don't get up at once friendship will cease here and now. That's what I'm discoursing."

Amicably the other relinquished his place and cheerily took a seat forward, well in the bows.

"What is subchief are you doing?" presently the real estate man inquired. "Can't you see that you are whirling about in a circle?"

"Yes, I see it. I'm always stronger in one arm than in the other. That makes the whole trouble."

"You're striking strokes with one and one with the other, then."

He did, but with the same result. Around and around the boat went in the same exasperating round. The swell chieftain used strong words, while his companion smiled.

"I'm a nice one, ain't I? Here I'd been planning to take my wife and babies out for a row, and a nice spectacle I'd have made. I'd been a consarned murderer and suicide, that's what I'd have been. But I'll overcome the blamed obstacle, whatever it be, if I die for it."

The perspiration rolled down his cheeks, the vest in coat, his vest, his collar, cravat and cuffs. He grew fairly desperate. Forward he inclined and backward he bent until the oars fairly doubled. The boat flew around like a whirligig. Redder and redder his face became until he seemed to sweat blood.

"That's enough," finally said his friend tantalizingly. "Can't you see 'tain't in you? You're made one sided, and ain't to blame for it."

"I've sided nothing. I sin't feeling well, that's it. My left arm's been in bad shape for some time. Maybe one ear's shorter than the other."

But at what he would the result was the same, and finally, when utterly worn out and exhausted, he said gaspingly:

"I—I guess you may take the oars."

And then he turned about and saw the real estate man sneakingly drawing a big stone out of the water.

The boat had been anchored all the time he was rowing.

"I'll be the death of you for that," groaned the victim.

And it was near to being his own, for it was a week afterward before he got out of bed.—Chicago Mail.

A Good Reason.

A rather shabby looking stranger with long hair stood on the steel arch bridge the other morning and gazed up and down the river by turns. A dapper looking gentleman with shaven cheeks and a bang like a West Hotel barber shop passed a few feet from him and sniffed the gale, while a fat terrier frisked about his feet. The stranger approached, and with the customary "Well, sir," reeled off the following: "It don't look much like it did—ty-nine years ago. The falls are scarcely recognizable. That island below is not more than half what it was then, but I was one of the fortunates or rather unfortunates, who helped to create it. We were going down the river with a great raft of rough lumber and skins when our craft went to pieces on a huge rock which lay just beneath the water unperceived.

"The river was running high that spring and our crew was all drowned. I was the only one to escape. But to pass from these sad reflections to my story. The sunken raft made a foundation for that wild looking little island which you see. Through long years driftwood and bits of earth and pebbles washed about on the rocky pile. The seeds of trees sprouted upon the curious formation, and their roots groping out in all directions served to keep the embryo island from washing away. When it falls in—ty-two hurled the large rocks to the unique position which they now occupy. A miniature island was then complete, and—"

At this point in the narration the dapper gentleman interposed an interrogation, "Are you looking for anything to do, stranger?"

"I am open for anything that turns up," was the ready answer. "I've just struck town and"—

"Never mind that, my friend. I have found a prize. My lecturer quit last night, and I want a good man with a fancy like yours. Here's my card. Call before 10:30 a. m." The stranger took the proffered introductory ticket and read, "Fred A. Pride, Manager Dime Museum."—Minneapolis Tribune.

Will Probably Dig It Up.

Rivers—Somebody, I see, has been defacing your front fence.

Banks—Where?

"On the inside, just over that snowdrift."

"Why, Rivers, I cut that notch myself. That's where I—er—threw my insecticide pipe New Year's day."—Chicago News-Record.

TO MAKE A MAN GOOD.

HON. CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER'S LECTURE LAST EVENING.

He Tells, at the Casino, That a Reformatory is Better Than a Prison for Young Criminals and Proves It—His Theme and Manner of Telling It Quite Interesting.

The Monday afternoon Club and its friends were most agreeably edified at the Casino last evening by a lecture on the subject of "Prison Reform," which the lecturer, Hon. Charles Dudley Warner, has made a study for many years.

The lecturer is a tall, well-built man, with white hair parted in the middle, a closely-trimmed beard and a long mustache. He wore glasses, and the usual other things, and as he took a seat on the platform, led by Rev. Dr. Ketchum, who introduced him most fittingly, there was an expression on his face, as if he didn't feel well. All this vanished, however, when he arose and began to talk. His droll style of expressing himself and you make me think of a manner, at times recalled Mark Twain, who, like the speaker, also hails from Hartford. At other times the speaker's style forcibly reminded one of Lord Dundreary.

The lecture occupied about an hour, and the lecturer managed to hold the close attention of his audience to the end.

The gist of his remarks was, as the title suggests, a plea for a reform in our methods of dealing with confirmed criminals.

When a man has once become a felon and has served a term in the State prison, and when he is released proceeds to again commit a burglary or do some other serious crime, it is safe to consider that person a confirmed criminal, who, like a confirmed lunatic, is not fit to be at large.

Mr. Warner favored the system in vogue at the Elmira Reformatory, excepting that he considered that the term of imprisonment ought to be indefinite. As it is now, a prisoner, the maximum penalty for whose crime would be say, ten years, is given two years in the Reformatory. This means that if those in charge don't think the prisoner improved enough to allow him his liberty, he may be detained until he is considered safe—to the end of the full term he could have been sentenced to—that is, the entire ten years, if necessary. On the other hand, if he can prove himself thoroughly reformed, he may secure his release within a year.

The prisoners are examined when they first enter the reformatory, and this examination is exceedingly thorough. The prisoner is examined thoroughly not only as to his physical and his mental condition, but as to his previous surroundings. Effort is made to find out all that is possible about his parentage to determine to what extent his criminal tendencies are inherited. No one is accepted in the Reformatory who is over thirty years of age.

All this information is entered in a large book, and the man's record, thus begun, is carefully kept throughout his imprisonment.

There are three grades in the Reformatory, and, when a man first enters, he is put into the middle grade. Only in the lower grade are men required to wear a conspicuous prison uniform. This is red flannel. In the higher grade the men live better and are given greater liberties. The man in the middle grade has a chance to observe all this, and knows that the grade he will eventually go into depends upon his own conduct.

After his release he is held under ticket-of-leave for a year. Some one must become security for his good conduct for that length of time.

This system has given results that are surprising. For a number of years the average who did not return to careers of crime was 80 per cent., and last year it reached 86 per cent.

In the ordinary state prison the number of criminals increase in a ratio out of all proportion to the increase of population, and we go good-naturedly paying the increased taxes for police, courts, and prisons, while the prisons do not reform the criminals, but only make them more cunning in their future burglaries or other crimes. Yet we go on paying taxes.

At the conclusion of his remarks many of the audience availed themselves of his invitation to ask questions of him on this subject, and his answers were exceedingly interesting.

Course of Sermons by Rev. Mr. Herring.

The following is a course of sermons in the First Presbyterian Church by Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor, Sunday evenings at 7 45 o'clock:

April 9th - Benaia. "He slew a lion in a pit in a time of snow." Be men.

April 16th—Abishai. "A cup of cold water only." Nothing venture, nothing have.

April 23rd—Shammah. My own vineyard have I not kept. One man's courage.

April 30th—Ittai. "Whither thou goest I will go." Follow thou me.

Sudden Death of John E. Yose.

Mr. John E. Yose died last night at his home on West Second street. He had only been sick a short time with pneumonia, and his death was unexpected. He was an expressman and truck driver and well known and was a member of Oazelle Engine Company. He leaves a wife a two children.

PERSONAL.

Miss Mamie Pirie of Elizabeth is visiting friends here.

Mr. Eugene Moore of East Fifth street is confined to the house with la grippe.

Miss Stewart of New York is the guest of Miss Gertrude Walz of La Grande avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Raymond of 125 Madison avenue will sail for Europe tomorrow.

Frank, the youngest son of Capt. Hand, has been confined to the bed a week with la grippe.

Miss Mary E. Bradshaw of West Fifth street, is to be married Monday to Mr. Samuel J. Moore of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Dr. Frank R. Searles has moved from 44 East Front street to the old Latimer house, corner of Front street and Bank place.

Mr. Joseph Sattels of Park avenue says that he has a letter from Mr. D. Z. Abbott of this city, whom a telegram reported dead, and that the letter says he is improving.

The subscription dance at the Casino to-night will be the society event of the season. It is given for a charitable purpose. The music will be furnished by Giesmann of New York and the supper by Sherry.

The following gentlemen were elected officers of the Hillside Tennis Club, Wednesday night: President, Geo. P. Mellick; Vice-President, Frank Buehnell; Secretary, James P. Murray; Treasurer, D. C. Ivins.

William Liable of Plainfield, has purchased the lot next to his father's residence on West Front street and will build a cottage upon it. A Plainfield carpenter has been awarded the contract. - Dunellen Call.

In response to the request of the American Sabbath Union, the Rev. Dr. Lewis, at the Seventh Day Baptist church, to-morrow morning, will take for his theme "The Sabbath Question in the Light of History."

Word has been received by relatives in Plainfield of the death of Mrs. Alice Wherett, at her home, No. 43 Kenney street, Newark. She was a daughter of Mr. William Pennoyer, formerly of this city, and a cousin of Lawyer Nelson Runyon of Plainfield.

Mrs. S. A. Perkins of Cleveland, Ohio, a celebrated temperance lecturer, will lecture before the W. C. T. U. of Scotch Plains, Tuesday, April 11th, at eight o'clock p. m., in the M. E. church of that place. There will be solos by Miss Blanche Fellows of this city.

Clinton V. Sanson was buried this afternoon at Scotch Plains. The funeral was private. The services were held at the grave by Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M. The pall bearers were D. S. Dunn, Jacob Hoffman, Jr., Thomas Van, J. Poole, J. P. Reed and L. M. Dunavan.

At the Presbyterian church, Dunellen, Sunday evening a children's service was observed. Miss Spangenburg of Plainfield addressed the meeting. The Call says: "She outlined the story of Christ's death and resurrection and interested the children with here and there a story to illustrate how good could be done. She commended the young people to work for Christ and the church and while doing so not to forget foreign missions, but to do what they could to help that along too."

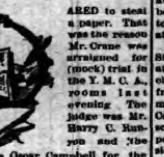
Editor Js A. Demarest and wife started to day for Washington to be gone for a week. Mr. Demarest goes to try and get the office of postmaster of Plainfield. One of his employers, Mr. Wm. L. Force, also wants the office and claims to have the endorsement of Senators McPherson and Smith. Mr. Rowland M. Stover also thinks he would like the office. He is endorsed by Mr. James Martine, Congressman Dunn, whose nominee Mr. Force is understood to have tried hard to defeat, and National Committeeman Hon. Miles Ross. Mr. Demarest has the rest.

Mrs. Margaret A. Britten, who was stricken with paralysis last Thursday and again on Monday, died last night at her home in Evona. She did not leave her bed after the first stroke and her recovery was not thought possible. She had been married three times. Her first husband's name was Gray, the second Richards and the last Britten, who survives her. Four of her children are living—Thomas Gray of New York, who is at present in Montana, Frank Gray, Hon. James Richards of Ohio, and Mrs. Charles Haverle of Hamburgh street, North Plainfield. Her husband for 25 years was proprietor of Britten's Hotel at Scotch Plains. Mrs. Britten was a story writer of some renown, and many of her contributions have been published in the New York Ledger.

AN AMUSING TRIAL.

AT THE Y. M. C. A. LAST EVENING.

Mr. Crane Found "Guilty" of Stealing a Paper.—The Prisoner's Brother, as a witness, Causing Much Laughter by His Witty Replies to Questions.



ABED to steal a paper. That was the reason Mr. Crane was arraigned for (mock) trial in the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening. The judge was Mr. Harry C. Runyon and the lawyers were Oscar Campbell for the prosecution and Charles J. McNabb for the defense. The prosecution moved the case of the Y. M. C. A. vs. Crane. Mr. Crane pleaded not guilty. The prosecution advanced as evidence that Crane had on the night of March 28, knocked three papers from a Y. M. C. A., table on the floor. He picked up two and put them on the table. The paper Mr. Crane was charged with stealing he put under his coat and carried to the Y. M. C. A. library and hid under his overcoat. The defence advanced that Mr. Crane took the Golden Days regularly, that he was a member of both the Y. M. C. A. and of the church, that he took the paper in question, but that he took it to keep it until he could get his own and mark it in an exchange notice which he had seen in the Y. M. C. A., paper. Both sides were ably conducted. The witnesses for the prosecution were Messrs. Buell, Carpenter, Probasco and Bush. Those for the defense were Messrs. A. Crané, W. Probasco, C. Crane, Morgan, and Rittenhouse. The evidence of most of the witnesses was serious but Mr. C. Crane's was very funny. For instance he said, in answer to the question, "Was you any relation to the prisoner?" that he had been told so. C. Crane is the brother of the defendant. He was also asked what time he had his meals. He said supper time, dinner time and supper time.

The judge charged the jury that, if they believed the prisoner to have taken the paper with the intent of stealing it, they should decide for the prosecution, but, if they believed the paper to have been taken without such intent, they should bring in a verdict for the defence. The jury was not out long. The verdict was "guilty." The culprit was sentenced to six months in the county jail. The jury was then discharged.

BREVITIES.

—Borough Council meeting to-night.

—Gazelle Engine Company will hold a special meeting to-night.

—Mr. J. Sutton will lead the 6.15 a. m. meeting in Reform Hall (basement) Sunday. Mr. H. F. Baird will be the leader at 4.15 p. m.

—The theme at the Seventh-Day Baptist prayer meeting to-night will be: "The Effect of Sabbath Keeping on Christian Life."

—A physician said, referring to Spring weather: "People ought to remember that even an old Winter suit looks better than a Spring coffin."

—Carelessness and Spring clothes and the sudden changes in the weather this week will probably be the direct cause of many deaths.

—In the civil suit of Hetfield vs. Kilcran, at Justice Nash's, yesterday afternoon, judgement was rendered in favor of the plaintiff, Hetfield.

—Comedian William H. Crane will move out of the Star Theatre, New York, at moving time—that is by May 1st, when he will take simple, good hearted "Brother John" far away. Mr. Crane's New York season will by that time have lasted three months which is an unusually long period for an actor to remain in Gotham. There are not four actors in the profession who can remain in New York so long and make money. Mr. Crane's season has been extremely prosperous and his work has been praised by every one. His popularity is very great. When he produced "On Probation" this season the critics paid him a great deal of attention, but how he acted and the amusement he created, but very little comparatively about the play. The same state of affairs existed the morning after the production of "Brother John." From this one might suppose that Shakespeare's splendid sentiment in "Hamlet" that "the play's the thing" needs to be revised so that it will read "the actor's the thing." It is very hard to knock down traditions, but once in a while they have to go. Mr. Crane has decided to play "Brother John" all next season. Of late years his repertoire of plays has become very extensive and he has decided to lease some of those he is not likely to ever take up again.

Stopped by a Post.

Yesterday afternoon, Mr. A. D. Thompson's carriage team became frightened at a train of cars which was passing over the Broadway bridge at the Grand Central depot. The coach man was unable to hold them, and they ran up Third street at a rapid gait. There is a post close to the roadway, and with this the carriage collided. The shock of the collision stopped the team and the driver again secured control of them.

Y. M. C. A. DIRECTORS MEET.

Favorable Reports Heard from the Different Committees.

A regular meeting of the Board of Directors was held at the Y. M. C. A. Rooms last evening. Reports were received from the Devotional Committee through A. C. La Boyteaux, showing total attendance at Young Men's meeting, 300, average, 75, two Bible training classes, average attendance, 17. Meetings have been held Sunday evenings at Washingtonville and Mount Pleasant with good attendance.

The Educational Committee, through Stephen Catherine, reported attendance at 33 sessions of the eight educational classes. Reports were also received from J. W. Gavett of the Reception Committee, W. D. Murray of the Building Committee, and the treasurer of the Association. The General Secretary reported for the boys' work and the extension movement. He also reported that the total attendance for six consecutive days, of different persons visiting the rooms was 933, or an average daily attendance of 23. Men were provided with work, visited in sickness, and other wise assisted. Letters of introduction, inquiry or information about men were sent to six of the leading cities of the country.

A Dance at Miss Glupa's.

The beautiful home of Councilman Glupa, on Broadway, was the scene of a gay assemblage last night. A dance was given by Miss Bessie Glupa for her guests, Miss Tompkins and Miss Potts, of New York. The spacious rooms were beautifully decorated with spring flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Stephen A. Glupa and Miss Glupa received the guests in their usual delightful and hospitable manner.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Glupa, Miss Marion Dumont, Miss Lillian Erskine, the Misses Van Boskerck, Miss Minnie Wood, Miss Carrie Streull, Miss Annie Murphy, Miss Lulu Talmadge, Miss Gilbert, Miss Gertrude Walz, Miss Stewart, of New York, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, Miss Hawley, Miss Florence Huntington, Miss Gussie Murray, Miss Jessamy Barte, Miss Louisa Bushnell, the Misses Tracy, Messrs. Fred Walz, Harry Borden, Louis Walz, Clarence Murphy, Dexter Tiffany, Thomas Van Boskerck, William Gilbert, George Van Boskerck, William Tyler, Lucius Gilbert, Windsor Decker, of Scranton, Pa., Irving West, William Runyon, John Munn, Howard Huntington, Lucien Van Buren, Alfred Streull, Leander Lovell, Edward Bloodgood, Orville Waring and J. Murray.

Supper was served at 11 o'clock by Maresi of New York. Negier of New York furnished the music.

Elizabeth Behind Plainfield.

At Trenton, New Brunswick, Newark, Paterson, Plainfield, Mt. Holly, Woodbury, Bethlehem and many other places throughout New Jersey Citizens Leagues have been formed, to fight the gamblers. But Elizabeth seems far behind in this matter. It would be an excellent thing if the Port should take the initiative in this matter. In regard to the influential league. It would do much to refute the misrepresentation made by unscrupulous men with refence to the moral sentiment of that growing portion of this city.—Elizabeth Journal.

A Social at the Warren Mission.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission gave another of their delightful entertainments last evening. The chapel was crowded and the exercises thoroughly enjoyable. As the conclusion of an interesting and pleasing programme, consisting of dialogues, vocal and instrumental music and recitations, a general good time was enjoyed and refreshments served.

Eleven to One.

The case of Griffen vs. Springer was tried this morning. The lawyers were Judge Coddington for the defendant and Mr. Craig A. Marsh for the plaintiff. The suit was brought against Mr. Springer by the plaintiff who claimed that money was due him for a store in Pennsylvania, which defendant had leased. The jury disagreed. Eleven favored "no cause for action," while one held out for damages.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A Record-Breaking Prize Fight.

NEW ORLEANS, April 7, (Special.)—The Bowen-Burke fight was stopped in the 110th round by the referee, who decided it no contest.

The purse will probably be divided. Bowen wanted to finish. Bones in both of Burke's hands were broken.

In the matter of length, the fight beats all previous records. It occupied nearly seven hours and a half.

Sleighing at Peekskill.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., April 7, (Special.—A blinding snow storm is raging here. Snow begins falling at nine o'clock this morning, and in an hour two inches had fallen.

There promises to be sleighing soon.

Small-Pox at Red Bank.

RED BANK, N. J., April 7. (Special)—It is now known definitely that there are thirteen cases of small-pox in this place. The doctors hope that none of them are very serious.

Did Not Intend It to Become a Law.

It has just been discovered that, through an oversight of some of the officers of the late Legislature, Gov. Werts signed a bill which that body did not intend to become a law.

Senator Drake's bill consolidating all the game laws of the State went through both houses without opposition, and was ready for the Governor's signature, when it was discovered that it would prohibit the fishing for shad in all rivers of the State except the Delaware above tide-water.

The farmers along the Raritan objected to this, for the tide rises and falls as far up as Bound Brook, a mile below Bound Brook. Only last year an amendment was passed to take out this objectionable feature, but in some way the amendment was not engrossed in the bill sent to the Governor to sign.

Installation of Officers.

Deputy State Councillor Mills of Bound Brook came to this city last night and installed the newly elected officers of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M. Visitors were present from Pioneer Council, No. 53, of Bound Brook, and Somerset Council, No. 104 of this city. On account of the death yesterday of Clinton V. Ianson, a member of the order, the special exercises and collation were postponed. The following were the officers installed:

Councillor—Charles Young.
Vice Councillor—Augustus Wilson.
Warden—Charles Force.
Conductor—J. H. Lunger.
Assistant Recording Secretary—Horace G. Adams.
Inside Sentinel—John Sohl.
Outside Sentinel—John P. Reed.

Elizabethport's New Industry.

The Fowler Car Company, of Brooklyn, has purchased a large tract of land at Elizabethport, on which it is intended to erect its immense works. Plans have been made for thirteen large buildings, which are to be put up as soon as possible, and it is expected to have them ready for use by Thanksgiving Day. The works will give employment to from 700 to 800 men and will be an important addition to the manufacturing industries of Elizabeth. Ground has been secured between Pine street, Port avenue and the Long Branch Railroad tracks.

Looks Like Racing at Linden.

There is every indication that the management of the Linden race track intend to resume racing there this Spring. Superintendent Babcock has put a big gang of men to work repairing the grand stand and betting rings, trimming the infield, and rolling the track, while a number of painters were set to work painting the fences and outbuildings.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Americans Abroad.

Thousands of our fellow countrymen and women will doubtless take a run across the water for a brief vacation this coming summer. It is safe to say a majority of them will go for the first time and that they will be of that class which combines the best qualities of mankind—the intelligent people who have earned the money they are going to spend in Europe. They may be seen by the hundred and thousand criss-crossing Europe, notebooks in hand, and, heaven bless them! talking through their noses, sometimes, aloud very loud.

A word to these, our fellow countrymen and women, may not be out of place, lest the ignorant and untraveled populations of Europe get exceedingly erroneous ideas of this Union. Don't talk loudly and boastfully everywhere about how superior things in your own county are to everything in Europe. It will not be taken as evidence of the well-bred Americans, and, besides, it is not the fact. A hundred things there are better, finer and handsomer than any object in the same line in this country. Keep your mouth shut and your eyes and ears open. Watch quietly the usages of the foreign ladies and gentlemen and fall into their customs when you are in their country. Note that foreigners do not expectorate and do not smoke in public.

Look at the exquisite pictures, the marvelous sculpture. Listen to the music, contemplate the finely finished landscapes, the lovely parks, and let the beauty and poetry of it all sink into your utilitarian American soul. You will be reminded by the behavior of some of your own fellow countrymen that rudeness is not independence, and a coarse, aggressive manner is not the best way of showing yourself a citizen of the greatest nation the sun shines on. For that very reason you can afford to be quiet, polite and gentle in manner. Go abroad to learn, and you will be richly rewarded. Do not lecture the foreigners on temperance and prohibition. Doubtless they need it, but it is not your place to do it.

Once in awhile you will meet some of your own fellow countrymen with sprucely, bushy beards, outlandish garments and the same rusty, long legged boots they wore when they drove the cows to the swamp pasture—on the whole, looking like a grizzly bear. This kind of Americans will be so well satisfied with themselves that you will feel a blush creeping slowly up into your countenance at sight of them. You dodge them, wherever you can, and shed blame to you. You will wish often that some Americans are only had sense enough to perceive how a well dressed, well bred foreigner can many a time give needed points to Americans in matters small and large.

In the year 1890 286 passengers were killed in railway accidents in this country. In the same time 2,451 railway employees were killed, though there are probably 100 passengers to every employee. In 1890 2,425 passengers and 22,000 employees were injured. The proportion is about the same each year. These figures will enable one to understand why the automatic car coupler bill over which there was such a fight in congress last winter was passed. Under that law, instead of the common hand brake, power brakes must be used on freight as well as passenger trains. With these the engineer can control the speed of a train. By the provisions of this act brakemen will no longer be compelled to go between cars to couple them, but instead an automatic coupler must be employed. Grab irons and hand holds must also be provided as the interstate commerce commission may direct. When this law comes into operation, the slaughter of railroad employees will probably be stopped to a great extent. There is time for the killing of 100,000 or so of the unfortunate fellows yet, however, though since railroad companies will not be forced to use power brakes and automatic couplers before Jan. 1, 1898, five years yet. However, it is certain that humane railway corporations will have complied of their own accord with the law long before that time.

The change to paid members in the British house of commons is significant of the democratic tendencies in Great Britain. The fact that hereafter members of the house of commons are to be paid for their services will enable poor men to get into that body and work off their "views" upon the British lawmaking power. The British have found out that the American way is best. Our system is to pay members of congress enough to enable them to live comfortably and devote their time to business, but not enough to let them be society swells.

Europe will this summer miss anywhere from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 that American tourists annually spend over there during the warm season. It is enough to paralyze trade in all that little corner of the earth. The tide will for once set the other way if cholera does not spoil all, and we shall see how it goes to take in $50,000,000 of money in a summer from tourists.

Anybody who says the new times are not as good as the old times is getting to be an old fogy and he is mistaken besides. Do not think this world go by you.

A CONSULATE MOBBED.

An Alleged Insult to Our Flag by Peruvians.

ACTING CONSULAR AGENT SHOT.

A Squad of Peruvian Police Looked on While the Building Was Sacked and the Fiendish Outrage Pursued—Meager Details by Telegraph, but a Letter on the Way.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Information was received at the state department that the United States consulate at one of the Peruvian ports had been sacked by a mob while the police looked on without interference. The news came in a brief telegram through the minister to Peru. The name of the place where the consulate is located and the name of the wounded officer do not appear in the dispatch.

The following is the dispatch:

A mob attacked Masonic lodge, sacked the building and burned the fixtures in the street. Incidentally the United States consulate was invaded, furnishings destroyed and acting consular agent shot in the foot. Archives saved intact. Squad of Peruvian police looked on while the mob performed the work without interference. The mail brings the particulars.

HICKS.

Secretary Gresham acted promptly on the receipt of this telegram, and after a conference with the president sent the following dispatch to the minister:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, April 6, 1895.

To HICKS, Minister, Lima:

Protest against failure of authorities to afford protection to consulate, and if facts are well established ask expression of regret, prompt punishment of offenders, and reparation for injury to American property or person.

GRESHAM.

The particulars in question, which are left to be supplied by mail, apparently include the information as to where the outrage occurred, which unaccountably is missing in the telegram. There is but one consulate in Peru, that at Callao. In this port lies Mr. Aquilla J. Dougherty of Illinois, appointed during Mr. Harrison's administration, June 2, 1890, stands on the record as consul. There are under him six consular agencies, the occupants of which positions are doubtless merchants of the country who are paid by fees, and those fees seem to be very small, inasmuch as only two make any returns at all to the department of fees collected, and those returns are under $25 a year. Probably many of them are native Peruvians, though the names of some of them indicate the contrary. These consular agents are as follows:

JOHN HICKS.

Cerro de Pasco—M. C. McNulty, appointed Sept. 25, 1882.

Chiclayo—Alfred Golf, appointed Jan. 8, 1889.

Mollendo—William R. Grifith, appointed March 30, 1886.

Paita—John E. Hopkins, Jr., appointed July 20, 1891.

Piura—Emilio Clark, appointed Oct. 29, 1884.

Truxillo—Edward Gottfried, appointed July 7, 1893.

Tumbez—William Baldini, appointed June 20, 1893.

Whether the outrage complained of occurred at one of these smaller places or at Callao no one at the department can determine from the telegram, but inasmuch as it comes from Lima the impression prevails that the scene of the outrage was one of the interior points. This impression is further strengthened by the knowledge in the department that in many places where the natives assault the subconsulate the trouble is due not to any antagonism to the country represented, but to prejudice and ill feeling against the representative personally. This is not an uncommon occurrence in South America or in other parts of the world, where the acts of a mercantile consular agent are resented by the people, who would respect the acts of a citizen of the United States duly appointed to a full consular position.

Brazilian Troubles Exaggerated.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The Brazilian legation in this city has received a cablegram from the foreign office in Rio Janeiro relating to the troubles in the state of Rio Grande do Sul. The telegram stated that reports of serious engagements between the revolutionists and the government forces printed in the United States and European press were exaggerated, for the reason that the revolutionists avoided coming into conflict with the troops. The affair at Alegrete, the telegram stated, at which it was made to appear that the revolutionists were signally successful, was a conflict between a body of patriotic citizens without equipments or organization and a portion of the revolutionary forces.

In the one battle that has occurred, according to the telegram, there were but 8,000 soldiers of the Twenty-eighth regiment engaged and they gained a decisive victory. The telegram closes with the assurance that the army is entirely loyal; that no serious have occurred and that every order has been obediently executed.

Investigations at Jackson.

LANSING, Mich., April 7.—A resolution was adopted in the house of representatives providing that the joint standing committee of both houses shall investigate the management of the state prison at Jackson under Warden Davis, who has been succeeded by a new official appointed by Governor Rich. The investigation was brought about by the escape of Latimer, the murderer.

Fugitive Dunfee Gave Bail.

SYRACUSE, April 7.—Joe Dunfee, whose fierce fight in the bar with Dan Donovan at Maple Bay knocked the latter insensible and caused his death, was arraigned this afternoon charged with manslaughter in the first degree. He waived examination and gave bail in the sum of $10,000. The coroner will hold an inquest.

Free Trade Not Annexation.

ST. PAUL, April 7.—Senator C. A. Boulton of the Canadian parliament, states that the reports in regard to the growth of the annexation sentiment in the dominion are greatly exaggerated. The Canadians as a whole, he says, would not countenance any annexation proposition, but want free trade.

Shipwrecked Passengers Ashore.

CHERRYFIELD, Me., April 7.—The steamer Lucy P. Minot, which struck on Southwest ledge near Petit Manan early Tuesday morning, is slowly breaking up. The passengers and crew, 26 in all, came ashore. They have been cared for by the lightkeepers since the disaster.

A TIRESOME FIGHT.

The Bowen-Burke Mill in New Orleans Lasted 40 Nights.

NEW ORLEANS, April 7.—Over 6,000 sports witnessed the fight between Andy Bowen, lightweight champion of Louisiana, and Jack Burke of Texas in the Olympic club arena.

The fight in the opening rounds was quite fierce, Bowen acting as the aggressor Both their men had any decided advantage up to the twenty-fifth round.

In the twenty eighth Bowen knocked Burke down with a right hand swing on the jaw, and only the call of time saved him.

Up to the fortieth round the contest was pretty tiresome, neither man inflicting much damage.

After the fifty-seventh round the audience yelled for a draw. The referee would hardly consider the men to fight, but Police Captain Barrett said there should be no draw when the fight was not brutal.

The fight dragged on to the seventy-eighth round, when Bowen seemed to have a slight advantage.

FOR HOME RULE.

Mr. Gladstone Makes Another Forceful Speech in Behalf of His Bill.

LONDON, April 7.—The galleries of the house of commons were full, but the house itself was not crowded when Mr. Gladstone arose to move the second reading of the bill to establish home rule in Ireland.

Mr. Gladstone said the government had no intentions of amending the bill as presented except in some minor particulars.

Mr. Gladstone's entire speech, which was heard in the house to the minut of the house the question when this great controversy was to end. He did not address the question to the opposition but to the united kingdom generally, but he would rather press it earnestly upon their hearts and understandings as a matter in which both sides were equally interested.

Mr. Gladstone's speech was singing speech and was cheered to the echo.

Marie Decca Wants Her Villa.

HARRISBURG, April 7.—Marie Decca, the songstress, has filed a bill in equity in the Dauphin county court to recover from her husband, Francis Leon Chrisman and his sister, Bertha Chrisman, the home in this city, which the prima donna says was purchased with her money and placed in her husband's name without her knowledge or consent. Chrisman says he earned the money to purchase the property in journalistic work, and that Mrs. Chrisman was in debt about $60,000 when they were married about a year ago. The home here is called "Villa Decca."

Ministers Criticise d Prohibitionists.

JERSEY CITY, April 7.—At the morning session of the Newark Methodist conference presiding Elder Charles S. Rynus made a report in which he defended the sanctity of Sunday in a way that was obviously meant to condemn the Sunday services held at Sunset and Prohibition park. The Rev. Solomon Parsons of Paterson, and the Rev. William H. McCormick of Jersey City, who have been candidates for governor on the Prohibition ticket, took exception to this feature of the report. The report was adopted by a large vote.

Blockade of Fair Exhibits.

CHICAGO, April 7.—The carelessness of American exhibitors at the World's fair is likely to cause serious trouble in arranging the exhibits and may delay the installation of some displays until June 1. Unless immediate action is taken and some remedy devised at once a blockade of freight cars is certain to occur at Jackson park. The fault is with the American exhibitors and with the railroads bringing goods to the fair.

Quarreled About Their Wedding Day.

BIG RAPIDS, Mich., April 7.—George Jaeger, while out riding with his affianced, Miss Anna Moro, quarreled with her because she refused to set the date for the wedding just about as her five times. Three shots took effect, and it is thought she cannot recover. Jaeger then returned to Moro's village, and attempted to commit suicide by putting a bullet through his body. He is still alive, but will probably die.

Many Want to Be Missionaries.

DANBURY, Conn., April 7.—The anniversary of the Women's Foreign Missionary society was celebrated here. Many applications were received from people who wanted to act as missionaries in China, but there was so little money for the purpose that but few could be taken. A collection was taken up and $20 was raised to bring up a girl in a mission boarding school in China.

An Explorer Asks Aid.

NEW YORK, April 7.—At the regular monthly meeting of the chamber of commerce a statement from W. H. Gilder explaining the object of his proposed expedition in June or July to relocate the north magnetic pole and asking the appointment of a committee to confer with the finances of the expedition, was referred to the committee on foreign commerce.

Mrs. Carse Vindicated.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, president of the local Woman's Christian Temperance union, against whom charges of misconduct were recently made, was completely vindicated at the annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. in the women's temple. Mrs. Carse was unanimously re-elected president.

REVIEW AT NEW YORK.

Official Programme of the Naval Parade Up the North River.

WARSHIPS OF THE WORLD IN LINE.

The President Will Review the Columns From the Deck of the Dolphin Amid the Thunder of Hundreds of Guns—Officers of Many Nations Will Be Entertained.

NEW YORK, April 7.—The secretary of the navy has announced the programme of the naval review of the United States and foreign ships of war, which will take place in New York harbor on the 27th inst. According to this programme the men-of-war will be anchored in two columns, extending from Twenty-sixth street up the North river, the foreign ships on the New York side.

While the Dolphin, carrying the president of the United States, is passing between the columns, that portion of the North river between the American columns and the New York shore will be closed and all traffic and passage suspended. After the Dolphin has anchored at the head of the line, vessels of all kinds may circle around the fleet, going up on the New Jersey side of the river, but the passage between the two columns will be closed until the president has landed from the Dolphin and the review thereby terminated.

The president and members of his cabinet will be received on board the Dolphin at 10:30 a. m. off Twenty-third street, North river. The Dolphin will then get under way, and following the line of battleships of the Grip are gone, I am free from sickness and pain, and healthy.

Mgr. Satolli and the K. of P.

CHICAGO, April 7.—W. D. Kennedy, inspector general of the uniform rank, Knights of Pythias, has been carrying on an interesting correspondence with Mgr. Satolli. In reply to questions by Mr. Kennedy, Mgr. Satolli says that the question of position taken on the K. of P. is under consideration. He says, however, that the Knights of Pythias is not under the ban, but that those Roman Catholics not now members are asked to stay out until the question is settled.

Denied the Alleged Discourtesy.

NORFOLK, April 7.—Lieutenant Kilburn of the Newark, when questioned as to the truth of the article which appeared in a New York paper of April 3, entitled "A Snub to an American Admiral," said: "It is so grossly in error that a statement of the facts in the case seems necessary. The most hospitable courtesy and the greatest consideration were shown to the American admiral and other officials by the captain general of Havana, the Spanish admiral and all other officials with whom we came in contact."

Slid to His Death.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Harry Flamian, a staff worker at the World's fair, had completed some decorations on the dome of the Agricultural building, 180 feet high, and in a spirit of bravado made a slide of 30 feet down the sloping roof, expecting to strike on the trough surrounding the base. He gained so much momentum and was precipitated through the skylight to the valley of the roof to the floor, 150 feet below. He struck head first.

Harris' Chances in Reading.

PHILADELPHIA, April 7.—Joseph S. Harris, president of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, is said to be the choice of the Drexels for the presidency of the Reading railroad, and as that firm is now regarded as the dominating spirit in Reading affairs, it is the general belief that the office will be offered Mr. Harris by the Reading directors on next Saturday.

Neighing in the Catskills.

KINGSTON, N. Y., April 7.—There was a small blizzard here, and the ground was covered with an inch of snow. In the Catskills eight inches of snow fell, and in some places sleighs were out. New Agent Alexander Is Locked Up on a Charge of Extortion—Deputy Sheriff Made Things Lively All Night Long and Loafed About in the Aberdeen's Parlors.

NEW YORK, April 7.—City Marshal John Salmon and John V. Alexander, collector of the Grocers' association, are locked up in Jefferson Market prison, charged by the proprietor of the Hotel Aberdeen, at Broadway and Twenty-first street, with extortion.

Lecato had borrowed money when he took three hotels. His business did not succeed as well as he hoped, and he finally gave up two of them after running in debt nearly $12,000.

Among his creditors were Grocers Hewitt and Malone.

Wednesday night at 10 o'clock Mr. Myers was sitting in the hotel office when seven men filed in, with Marshal Salmon and John V. Alexander at their head. Salmon announced that they had executions against the hotel for $600.36, and they intended to levy on all the property they could find.

Salmon went behind the desk and took possession of the money drawer and safe, while the others scattered themselves throughout the hotel, waking guests and raising general hubbub.

About 11 o'clock the crowd began to remove the furniture. They went to all the rooms in the house and by kicking at each door soon learned whether or not the room was occupied. If it was not they removed the furniture and piled it up in the hall or dragged it down the stairs.

At 1:30 Thursday morning Mr. Myers sent for Mr. Offenbach. When he arrived Salmon was asleep in the parlor with his feet on a velvet chair. Alexander was asleep in the reception room, while one of the gang had appropriated a whole suit to his use.

Turned Things Upside Down.

Mr. Offenbach roused Salmon, and demanded to know what he was doing in the place. For answer Salmon waved the four attachments in the lawyer's face, and declared that he couldn't be bulldozed.

Policeman McCartlin of the West Thirtieth street station, was called in, but he was unable to do anything in the face of the executions in the possession of Salmon.

At 3 a. m. the men changed their minds about removing the furniture, and began to drag it back into the rooms again. As the guests, who were awakened by the clatter, began to stick their heads out of the doors, they were told that inside of four hours they must vacate the hotel or be thrown out.

After this Salmon's men again visited the wine room and then went to sleep, laying about in picturesque attitudes on the velvet covered furniture.

Lawyer Offenbach appeared at the Jefferson Market court and secured summonses from Justice Grady. These were served on Salmon and Alexander, and late in the afternoon the two men appeared.

After inquiry into the facts Justice Grady denounced Salmon and Alexander in unmeasured terms.

"I have watched the operations of you and your kind of robbers for years," said the judge, "and now I think that you are in a position where you can be made to suffer."

Justice Grady at once ordered warrants issued, and as Salmon and Alexander were disposing of a quart of wine both were arrested.

The justice held them in $1,000 bail each on a charge of extortion, and as they were unable to get bondsmen they were locked up.

Started by a Visitor.

CINCINNATI, April 7.—A careless tinner started a fire upon the roof of the College Hill sanitarium, which caused a loss of from $100,000 to $130,000 of property and imperiled the lives of 300 patients. The scenes within the great structure, four stories in height and filled with 300 patients, were exciting. The insane shrieked and tore their clothing, the less unfortunate were distracted by fear and begged to be helped away from the flames. It is believed that every life was saved.

Lake Shore Engineers Make Demands.

TOLEDO, April 7.—The local division of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers will make a formal demand or request on the Lake Shore company for the reinstatement of its engineers who left its service on the night of March 17 because they would not handle Ann Arbor freight cars. Should the demand be refused trouble may be looked for on the Lake Shore.

Taylor Goes to Spain.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The president sent the following nominations to the senate: Hannis Taylor of Alabama to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Spain; William Loehren of Minnesota to be commissioner of pensions; Charles Edward Riggs of Iowa to be an assistant surgeon in the navy.

The Academy Objects.

NEW YORK, April 7.—The Academy of Medicine at its monthly meeting again expressed its dissatisfaction with the Webster bill for the purification of the Croton watershed, because no preventive measures are provided for and because the supervision of its works is not to be in the hands of sanitary experts.

Destructive Boiler Explosion.

JACKSONVILLE, Ills., April 7.—The boiler in Eastman's mill at Meredosia exploded with a tremendous report, shattering glass in all the neighborhood. The engineer was instantly killed and his body thrown a long distance.

Missing Word Contests All Right.

NEW YORK, April 7.—The grand jury refused to indict the New York Recorder for violation of the lottery law in connection with the so called "missing word" contests.

Typhus on Blackwell's Island.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Mary Deane, 30 years old, and Mary Mulzey, aged 37, inmates of the workhouse on Blackwell's island, were stricken with typhus fever.

Vessel Sails Burned.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., April 7.—A large building belonging to the estate of Robert S. Pews was burned, together with 80 suits of vessel sails stored there.

MARRIED HIS SISTER.

The Romance of Two Orphans Who Were Separated For Years.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., April 7.—A romance of unusually unfortunate and pathetic detail was brought to light here. Twenty-five years ago two waifs, brother and sister, were abandoned by German immigrants at Castle Garden. They were legally adopted, one by a man named Asa Barr, the other by a Mrs. Evans. The latter moved soon afterward to Philadelphia. Twenty years later the boy, grown to manhood, moved also to Philadelphia, where he followed the trade of a painter. Chance drew the brother and sister together. Barr was captivated with the girl and wood, won and married her.

During the late strike the two moved to Homestead, where Barr found employment. The adopted daughter of Mrs. Evans recently came in heir to considerable property in Canada. Detectives were sent to trace the heiress, and in their investigation discovered the true relationship of Mr. and Mrs. Barr to be that of brother and sister. The terrible knowledge prostrated Mrs. Barr, and her husband is grief stricken. No issue has resulted from their marriage. Legal proceedings will be instituted to sever the marriage bond, and the couple will leave for London, Ont., to claim the fortune.

Lynches After Fiesta.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., April 7.—William Goldkoffer, a German, and Francisco Flores, a Mexican woman, were stabbed to death by Jesus Fuen. Fuen and the Flores woman had been living together, but had separated. Goldkoffer, who was a cripple, attempted to shield the woman and was stabbed in a dozen places by the infuriated Mexican. Fuen was placed in jail, where he is closely guarded to prevent him falling into the hands of the infuriated citizens, who would lynch him if they could get hold of him.

New Remedy For Typhus.

SAN LOUIS POTOSI, Mex., April 7.—The typhus fever epidemic in this city is rapidly decreasing. This is largely due to the discovery of an infallible specific for the disease. This new remedy is a tea made from the huachil plant. The spidee cure, which attracted so much attention throughout Mexico a few weeks ago, is no longer used in typhus cases.

Three Lost Off Lewes.

LEWES, Del., April 7.—The schooner Genesta of Gloucester, Mass., capsized in a squall 30 miles off Barnegat. Of her crew Hunting Butler, Clark McPenny and two Doane brothers were lost. The remainder were saved in the same boat and picked up by the schooner Laughing Water and landed at the Breakwater.

No Cigarettes Allowed In Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, April 7.—Minnesota is to have a new capitol. The bill provides that he new structure shall cost $2,000,000 and that it must be completed in 10 years. The house passed the cigarette bill, forbidding the sale of cigarettes in Minnesota under a penalty of a fine or imprisonment.

Women's Suffrage In Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 7.—After a fierce parliamentary struggle lasting over an hour the senate passed the woman's suffrage bill, extending the elective franchise to women in certain municipal and township elections.

Fire Gutted a Slaughter House.

BROOKLYN, April 7.—Fire broke out in the top story of Aaron Levy's slaughter house and gutted the premises before the firemen could get it under control. The loss on stock and buildings was estimated at $60,000.

WOMAN AND HOME.

DESCRIPTION IN DETAIL OF A PROPERLY KEPT LINEN PRESS.

Economical Table Supplies—American Women Are All Right—Women at the Capital—Rheumatism in Children. Economy That Isn't Economy.

To every woman who takes a pride in her home the house linen is a very important matter. Good linen, though expensive at first, is far more economical and satisfactory in the end. A complete list of the linen should be neatly entered in a book, with a space left for remarks in the future. This book should hang inside the press. A tall cupboard, with shelves that can be pulled out, is perhaps the most convenient place in which to store linen, but a large chest with drawers answers very well. Between the linen, bags of lavender should be placed. Pretty little sacks filled with these scented blossoms, and bearing the words "Sweet Lavender" written across them, can now be purchased from most perfumers and many fancy shops.

It is necessary of course that everything should be marked. The sheets should be folded in pairs, and a band of wide colored elastic, on which a card is sewn, repeating the marks and the name of the bedroom to which the sheets belong, passed round each pair. This will enable a new servant or stranger to find what is required in a moment. Pillowcases should be arranged in sets for every room, with an elastic band round each set and marked in a like manner. Towels should be kept on another shelf of the press, with their distinctive bands. They should be in half dozens, and should also have marked on their bands whether rough, bath or fine quality.

The tablecloths should be taken from the card attached to the band surrounding them particulars as to size and quality, which saves the trouble of unfolding and refolding. Serviettes can be kept in pretty colored American cloth in silk cases; a good plan is to get two or three square baskets without covers—the size of the serviettes when folded—and line these prettily with art muslin, sewing a ribbon onto one side. This could be embroidered with a monogram. A set of such baskets, daintily trimmed with silk, would make a novel little present for a young housekeeper. On one end of the basket the card of contents should be tacked—for instance, "Dinner, 12;" "Breakfast, 8;" "Best dinner, 18." Glass, tea and kitchen cloths should be kept in separate heaps.

If there is a spare shelf, the blankets out of use can be stowed there. They should be tied in pairs and put into a large linen pillowcase, with a lump of camphor between the folds. A reference to the bed to which they belong should be inscribed on the card which is sewed to the case.

Sheets, pillowcases, tablecloths and serviettes should be bordered with initials in white. If the top sheet is an ornamental one, it looks well to have the owner's monogram worked in the center just below the hem. Towels should be doubled lengthwise and marked in large outline letters in colored flax thread at one end. Transfer letters, which can be had in various sizes, are excellent for this purpose, and answer equally well for embroidering the linen.—London Woman.

Economical Table Supplies.

Sight must never be lost of the importance of a proper supply of good food in the young housekeeper should learn by study and practice how to provide her table with nutritious and appetizing food, and yet not depend upon the most expensive viands in the market. By clever process of cooking, such as stewing, brazing, etc., it is possible to produce palatable and nutritious food from the cheapest cuts of meat. If one will select the fat, lean and gristle in their neighborhood where she lives, rather than the rarer kinds, it may with a little care and skill in the preparation be made to rival the more expensive kinds. Green vegetables are never cheap when they first come nor when the season for them is nearly over, but when the market is glutted, as it often does, they are not only cheapest, but being grown nearer home are better. It will be best, therefore, to use these vegetables only when they are cheap.

A fresh vegetable diet is not cheap in a large city. Still, fresh vegetables are necessary to perfect health, and they should be provided for the table whenever they are in season and within one's means. Macaroni, rice, dried beans, etc., are economical and nutritious. Canned corn, when of the best kind, is a most satisfactory vegetable. So are canned tomatoes, which can be served in soups, sauces and as a vegetable, simply stewed or scalloped. Eggs, when properly cooked, is healthful and nutritious. In a perfect Welsh rarebit, or when toasted or combined with cheese, they make an appetizing, wholesome and economical dish. Tripe, kidneys, beef, lamb's and calf's liver make cheap and savory dishes. Lamb's liver is as delicate and delicious as chicken liver.—Maria Parloa in Ladies' Home Journal.

American Women Are All Right.

Mme. Crepaz is, we hope, unduly severe on American wives. The American fair cannot fulfill all the foreigner's extravagations "as woman, wife, mother and mistress of his house." This will horrify Mr. Howells. There are "numberless women" in Boston who refuse to marry. This seems exaggerated, but if it be true what an opening is here for English chivalry! What a noble task, to teach Bostonian women how to love!

We decline to believe that human nature has died out in Boston. Next time an English eleven crosses the water let a sentimental can be tried. This may seem flippant, but it is only a concrete expression of a belief that the fair Bostonians are human beings. They will go on being wives and mothers, or the repugnant minority will be unimportant and unattractive. There is a great deal of human nature in women, and human nature will solve this problem. Ladies of capacity will write and doctor and preach sermons and adorn platforms—the rest will continue to be "very, very women." A few may act as "pioneers of culture" and form Browning societies.

The hearts of the vast majority are in the right place, the old place, and Mme. Crepaz, when she says that the heart of the American girl "grows less sensitive to tender emotions, while a marriage of reason is the only one she thinks of," says more than the judicial faculties can swallow—more than the novels of New England prove. The bobolink or some other local fowl doubtless keeps singing. "Marry, maidens, marry," and the transatlantic muse preach on the old text of Herrick.—London News.

If there is any important departure at the capital, it is in the increase in number of eager women who are in touch with public men for the first time, and who find their natural capacities enormously gratified and stimulated by the insight they obtain of the intrigues by which men rise to power, the very men with whom they dine and talk, and on whom they use their exquisite arts of coquetry. It is one of the most beautiful experiences in their lives, this introduction to the inner arts of politics, of the large game that is played for great stakes on the national field. A true woman never fails to find infinite pleasure in watching the rise of a politician in whom she has a personal or a friendly interest, and the downfall of his enemy, while, as for the statesman, is it necessary to say that the success he has managed by the subtle battery of this feminine solicitation?

The women of Washington have a rational interest in the subjects that are of the utmost importance to the national life, taking sides and entertaining hopes with the men in whose careers they have most interest. The people who were at the capital on the evening when the news came of Mr. Blaine's nomination had an exceptionally good opportunity to know how intense is feminine enthusiasm for a political champion and can therefore readily understand why it is that a poor unfortunate male becomes so much engaged with principles that himself left out of many pleasant houses if he has the folly to permit his principles to make him an obstacle to the progress of the fancies.—Mrs. Lamb's article in the World over?—Henry Loomis Nelson in Harper's.

Rheumatism in Children.

Rheumatism is now applied to one of the earliest classified of all diseases. In the public mind the word is connected with swollen and painful joints, or less frequently with pain in the muscles or sinews.

As our knowledge of rheumatism has broadened, we have learned to consider it a disease of the system in general, resulting in local manifestations.

The pain and swelling in the joints are due to the irritation exerted by the poison of the disease when it is circulating in the system—upon the delicate structures which compose the joints themselves.

The action of this rheumatic poison is felt also upon other parts of the body. Recurring tonsilitis is often the result of such action upon the tissues composing the tonsils. This is frequently the cause in adults, but much oftener so in children. The action of the rheumatic poison is less frequently exerted upon the joints in children, the rheumatism more commonly locked upon as a disease of adult life.

One symptom of the rheumatic temperament occurring in children is the development of little roundish bodies beneath the surface of the skin and around the joints. They are most common along the margins of the kneepan and other joint and along the backbone and collar bone. The symptom quickly without pain, but are slow in disappearing.

It should be understood that the growing pains of children are often the only evidences of a rheumatic tendency. The chief safeguard against such a tendency lies in giving children proper food and a sufficiency of exercise.—Youth's Companion.

Economy That Is Not Economy.

We women are not such economists that if we start in to economize we do so with such a vengeance that in a very little time no one could tell whether we were striving to be economical or lavish. Economy is a very wise and prudent thing, but there are some species of true economy that the great majority of women fail to appreciate. They do not see any economy in hiring a good servant when they can do the work just as well themselves. Yet they fail to consider the worry and tear on the system and the additional feeling that comes at the end of the day when such a course is followed day in and day out.

What they gain in money they lose in strength and happiness besides, for the husband who comes home at night seeking a congenial companion, and finding in her instead a hopelessly wrecked nerve, who hasn't the ambition even to look over the evening paper, will soon get in the way of going where things are brighter and pleasanter. It is better to have a small bank account and a less showy wardrobe and plain dresses, able woman, who will lighten your labors and make your home to be a sweet and genial wife and mother, around whom all the pleasant home interests center.

It is economy to buy labor saving inventions, it is economy to consult a physician at the first symptom of a cough instead of waiting until his services will be required two or three times a day. In fact, it is economy to do everything that tends to keep you in good health and in good spirits.—Philadelphia Times.

Many Uses For Clean Sand.

Good, clean sifted sand has many uses. If one cannot obtain it, it is easy to perfectly clean, and sand that has been washed down by the roadside may be used. Throw a pailful of this into a tub and pour in water, stirring the sand vigorously until all of the muddy look is washed out. When the water shows perfectly clear after being stirred up, the sand is clean. It may then be dried and put away in a bag or box for future use.

Very few people are aware that flowers can be kept very much longer by setting the stems into a dish of sand. Put the flowers into the vase as usual, then carefully sift in sufficient sand to fill the vase nearly to the top, then add water until it stands a very little above the top of the sand. This is useful in more ways than one. Very light, fine vases are thus made sufficiently heavy to be out of danger of upsetting.

One may also draw upon the sand bag for filling dishes in which cuttings are put to root. Very few cuttings would spoil if they had sand to root in. Keep them until the roots are well grown. Everybody can have an abundance of rooted cuttings simply by having a can around on ordinary fruit jar, filling it with sand and putting the cuttings into it. Hang this near the window and keep sufficient water in the vessel to moisten the sand well all of the time. In small houses, where there is lack of light, half a dozen jars hung around in various windows where the sun shines will insure plenty of material for putting out as soon as frost is out of the ground.—New York Ledger.

A Plea For Domestic Science.

Mrs. Wilkinson, president of the Columbian Association of Housekeepers, says it is easier to the day to start a class in any kind of study, even Sanskrit or Chinese, than to establish housekeepers' clubs. In this locality she thinks they know enough already about marketing, cooking and other domestic branches, or is it because there is a very perceptible growing antipathy for home duties? Or does false pride enter in, as one keen observer says who has frequently observed that those women known to have plenty of means and help will talk about their ways of doing certain kinds of housework, but that most who really do the work of their homes will keep as mum as can be, and guard their hands most carefully, that they may not reveal the drudgery of which they are ashamed?

Nor will this be different, she claims, until domestic science is considered as important a branch for girls as music, literature or mathematics. England has a national union embracing many schools both in England and Scotland, where teachers are trained in the science of household work, both as to the economies suitable for the working classes as well as methods required by those of abundant means. This training includes nursing and sanitary science, and is considered profitable for all classes.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Quiet Art of Restgnation.

In their quiet Norfolk home the Princess of Wales and her two unmarried daughters spend their days in a simple round of home duties that many American women of small means would find too monotonous for endurance. Life is absolutely unvertful as Sandringham since the baby, Lady Alexandra, is no longer the only neighborhood, and the ladies rarely go beyond their park gates for their daily walks. Sometimes they stroll about West Newton. They personally attend to their pets and drive out for a time, but the greater portion of the day is spent at fine needlework, of which they are very fond. They are all deft workers in the pretty feminine art and have mastered the science of cutting as well as making garments.

The American woman in affliction rarely takes the quiet way of bearing it. If she has means, she junkets over the globe in most impossible places and unfavorable regions. If she cannot afford to drown her sorrows among the globe trotters, she joins all manner of societies devoted to good works and wears herself out with her enthusiasm. The simple, quiet art of resignation seems to be almost an unknown quantity here.—Exchange.

An Ideal State of Affairs.

What an ideal state of affairs for the housekeeper when there is a culinary depot in every neighborhood and a name for the day is sent round in the morning and orders taken, just as the fishmongers now send round their lists! That is what a writer on domestic services dreams of, who holds that the present system is played out and old fashioned, and that it is time to reorganize household affairs on a co-operative basis.

Corned beef is sure to be tough if boiled hard. Put it in boiling water, cover closely and simmer for four or five hours, then allow it to remain in the liquid for half or a whole hour, according as it is to be served warm or cold.

Oscar Wilde was once asked by a woman the best way for a stout woman to dress. "Tell her," was the autocrat's reply, "that the most becoming thing for her is drapery." Don't be afraid of fullness, but use it with discretion.

A hairdresser visits Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt every day. Among other New York ladies who depend upon professional aid in this line are Mrs. Frank Abbott, Mrs. De Peyster, Mrs. Stokes and Mrs. Pierpont Morgan.

It is perhaps not generally known that Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, the novelist, is a sister of George Francis Train, and that one letter in her superfluity of initials stands for her maiden name.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

THE REGULAR APRIL MEETING LAST EVENING.

The New Councilmen Sworn in—Numerous Petitions and Communications Presented — The Mayor's Message Committees Appointed—Mr. John Vetterlein Appointed Clerk, and Mr. Benjamin E. Gavin Street Commissioner — Marshal Pangborn's Salary Increased—Other Business.

The Borough Council met in regular session, in Spencer's Hall, Somerset street, last evening, with every member present. Mayor Gilbert was present from Plainfield, and the lobby was filled with borough cliffs. Messrs. Edwards and Howell, the new members, were sworn in by Mayor Saunders. The Council now stands as follows: Republicans, Messrs Needham, Hummer and Edwards; Democrats, Messrs. Neal, Connolly and Howell. The minutes of several adjourned and the regular March meetings were read and approved.

Petitions.

The following petitions were read and referred to the proper committees, when appointed:

For stone cross walk at corner of Washington avenue and Park place. Signed by A. E. Faber, George P. Dapee and others.

For crosswalk at Summit avenue and Grand street. Signed by D. N. Force and others.

From residents of Rock avenue asking that that thoroughfare be repaired and macadamized. Signed by C. F. Bebeb and others.

For crosswalk corner of Washington and Linden avenues. Signed by H. F. Reynolds, S. St. J. McCutcheon and others.

The clerk (reading)—"William L. Saunders, dear sir; I don't want to impose on your good nature. Next Monday evening the Boys' Club"—"I beg pardon," said the Mayor, and the Clerk also stopped reading, while a good laugh was enjoyed at the Mayor's expense. (He had handed the clerk, among the borough petitions, a private letter.)

From residents of Greenbrook road for the repairing of the road bed on that street from Blatz's hotel to the bridge.

For sidewalks on Grand street, between Grandview and Mountain avenues.

From the residents of Washington avenue, asking Council to have the riding of bicycles on the sidewalks in their vicinity stopped. Also that a marshal be deputized for that district to keep boys from injuring the shade trees.

Communications.

From Warren Engine Co. No. 1, petitioning Council to appoint Mr. George H. Fairchild foreman. Referred.

From the G. A. R. Posts of Plainfield asking that an appropriation be made to help defray the Posts' expenses for the Decoration Day celebration. Received and filed.

From Warren Engine Co. No. 1, stating that they did not elect a foreman at the last meeting, and that Assistant Foreman J. J. Stahl was acting foreman until the Council should appoint one. Received and filed.

The same company informed the Council that George Schlereth had served his time as a fireman and was entitled to exemption papers. Received and filed.

A list of claims were read and left over until next meeting.

Mayor Saunders then delivered his annual message. It is as follows:

Mayor's Message.

Gentlemen of the Council:

In beginning the fiscal year the question first to importance before public officers is that of finance. The people each year determine the amount of money to be placed in our hands, charging us with the responsibility, not only for its safe keeping, but for its prudent disbursement. The borough affairs should not be a close analogy between the management of the affairs of any municipality and that of a commercial enterprise. The part that politics plays is only a necessary evil. We must have political parties in order to insure the right of the majority to govern, but after election they should be that same harmony of interests and economy of management which characterizes a good business organization.

Our beautiful Borough, notwithstanding its improved condition in sewers, lights, water and general service, has no bonded debt of any kind. Our aim should be to keep it so, as far as we can, consistent with public health and safety.

SEWERAGE.

I have called the attention of last years Council to the matter of sewerage. At no time has this question been brought so prominently before us as now, but we may congratulate ourselves that we are so closely related in our interests with the City of Plainfield, that, in considering so important a subject, it is our privilege to get the benefit of the experience of our larger and richer kin. I commend to your consideration the report of the Plainfield Sewerage Committee, and have placed in the hands of the clerk a package containing a number of printed copies of this report, which I hope you will take home, study, and distribute among the taxpayers of the borough. This report is the result of long and serious deliberation, and the conclusion which has been reached is, in my opinion, practical and wise. If the city of Plainfield can lead the benefits of what is known as "intermittent Filtration," it is certain that North Plainfield should adopt that system to say. It is only a question of time when we must adopt some system of sewerage. The problem is a very simple one, and no more so than that which usually confronts a municipality when dealing with this subject. Our soil is easily excavated, and does not involve rock cutting, for any depth required. There is a natural grade from northeast to southwest, and in every respect, except in the disposal of the sewage, we may follow the experience of many others, but at less cost for excavation and grading. The sewage collected by which health matters may be disposed of is to discharge them into an available stream. Experience has proven to be the best disposal when based upon conditions of public health. It has been demonstrated conclusively that sewage purification can most thoroughly be effected through the agents of the soil and air. In other words by the process of filtration and aeration.

The objectable matter in sewage is organic, and nature has provided us with a natural process of reconstruction by which organic matter changes again to harmless or inorganic compounds. This process of reconstruction is going on all about us by natural laws, and sometimes when it took so life could not long exist. Mr. Frost has very clearly illustrated this point and has described in the simplest way the whole process of intermittent filtration by saying that, "when a pan of dish water is thrown into the back yard the soil acts as a filter separating the solids from the liquids and leaving a film of noxious matter which may at first be seen on the ground. In the course of time the disagreeness by sunlight, chemical action of the oxygen of the air and thereby being converted into harmless inorganic or earth matter."

It is not likely that the sewerage system of North Plainfield will connect with Somerset, Watchung or Second avenues, but the brook will be the natural outlet, and it will be confined to its banks and laterals, the brook would not be objectionable, except, perhaps, at its mouth in the west, at which there might be a common nuisance. In the consideration of this subject I would recommend that you take no action until the question, whether or not there is to be a sewerage system at an early date, has been decided in Plainfield. If decided in the affirmative I would appoint a committee to take charge of the whole subject in your interest.

SEWAGE DISCHARGE INTO THE BROOK.

I have previously called the attention of the Council to the question of sewage Discharge into the brooks. During the last session of the State Legislature an act was introduced by, our Senator limiting it a criminal offense punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, to throw into brooks which may run through or adjacent to cities and towns. This act is not a law. In view of the prominence of the sewerage question just now, I would recommend that a petition to the Legislature, but there is now every reason to believe that in the near future there will be an absolute stoppage of brook pollution.

GARBAGE.

In connection with the subject of public health I urge you to provide some definite and uniform system for the collection of garbage. At times the question has previously presented itself as to whether or not it would be best to collect all garbage, or leave it to be carted away by individuals. There are however several objections to this, and for the present I am inclined to the belief we move in the direction of granting licenses to public scavengers. Our present system is very incomplete to be thorough, it seems to be everybody's business to collect garbage. At certain seasons of the year it is carried away in large quantities, the collection does not take place with sufficient frequency or promptness, and in addition to the tendency to collect putrifying matter, thus endangering public health, the streets are rendered by any attention where the collector of garbage is expected to be in the neighborhood, for reasons given, declined to receive such matter. Such a condition of things should be prevented by law, and the most satisfactory way I can see is to grant licenses for specified districts making it compulsory that the one licensed shall make regular visits to each and every house in the district.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The Council of the last year elected measures looking toward improvements in the fire department, and the present year is to take up the work which they have begun until the service is put in good, practical shape. This should be a matter for early consideration and action, and it is the first and most important duty which your profession on Fire, Water and Lamps has to perform.

LIGHTING.

The borough has a good system of lighting, but many complaints have been made that the lights are not always burning. The contract with the Light Company gives us the right to deduct a specified amount from the company to keep the lights burning or forfeit double the charge for each light. Complaints on this subject should be made to the Fire Commissioner of Fire, Water and Lamps, and a definite statement made of the number of time the lights have been out. Such complaints should receive attention, and the terms of the contract with the Light Company should be enforced.

STREETS.

Much work has been done during the past year in macadamizing street. The people have voted in liberal sums of money for this purpose, and it seems to me that more attention should be given to repairs. It has been customary to use the money raised each year for the new work on the street, so that at the end of the fiscal year there is but little money remaining to put the work in order and to improve unpaved streets.

SIDEWALKS.

The sidewalk question has been a prominent one before every Council. This has always been a perplexing subject to handle, and the result is that we still have bad sidewalks, and in some places none at all. There seems to be but one more reasonable plan that I can suggest, requiring that on certain streets and on specified distances all new sidewalks should be laid of flagging.

MARSHAL.

In fixing the compensation of borough Marshal for the ensuing year, it seems advisable to modify the present system by which we have our Marshal is paid a certain sum of money, and in addition to that a fee. This is a dangerous and subject to abuse. The report of the Committee on Ordinance last year recommended that the Council devise means by which both the borough magistrate and the marshal be "freed from the present system by which a portion of their salary is paid as they are often accused of unnecessary arrests being taken in and fined for the fees." A fixed salary equal, perhaps, to that given a policeman in the city of Plainfield might be paid our Marshal and a contract be drawn up with him by which he agrees to turn over all fees to the borough treasury.

DOG NUISANCE.

We have legislative authority now to protect the borough against the dog nuisance by an annual tax. This has the further advantage in that it affords a means by which we may collect a considerable sum of money for borough purposes, and in connection with this subject permit me to urge you to greater care and interest than has been exercised in the past toward increasing receipts by fines and licenses. We do not collect enough money in this way, but depend too much upon general taxation. There is reason so believe that if the attention of the clerk and the several constables were directed closely to this subject we may in this way carry out to some extent that purpose which should be ever prominent in the minds of public officers, a reduction of the tax rate.

WM. L. SAUNDERS,
Mayor.

Miscellaneous Business.

Mr. Needham, from the Committee on Stationery and Printing, stated that the committee had printed the borough reports in pamphlet form.

The report was received and filed.

Resolutions.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That $25 be appropriated to the G. A. R. posts for Decoration Day.

Resolved, That the salary of the Borough Clerk be $200 per annum.

Resolved, That John Vetterlein be and is hereby appointed Borough Clerk for one year.

Resolved, That Mr. Charles A. Reed be and is hereby appointed Corporation Counsel for the year, at a salary of $200 per annum.

Resolved, That Benjamin E. Gavin be and is hereby appointed Street Commissioner for one year at a salary of $50 per annum and $2.50 per day for actual work.

Resolved, That the Mayor and Council advertise for bids for crushed stone for borough purposes, for the ensuing year, by order of the borough. The mayor to be authorized to negotiate a loan of $500 to be charged to the general account.

Resolved, That $800 be borrowed and the same charged to the street light account.

Resolved, That Joseph Pangborn be appointed Marshal at a salary of $720 a year.

Resolved That the Committee on Ordinances be authorized to present an ordinance fixing the tax on dogs at the next meeting of the Council.

Resolved, That the Corporation Counsel's opinion together with that of the Attorney-General's be obtained in regard to the Borough's power to appoint an assessor.

New Business.

The Mayor appointed Andrew Love to fill the unexpired term of the Rev. T. Regent Hall, resigned, as member of the Board of Health.

This made the appointing a borough magistrate was left to the Mayor.

The names of the following persons were submitted for consideration as special marshals: Israel Jones, John Milne, Peter Sarauss, James Stewart, Lincoln Leggett, Robert Blooms, John Mackay, R. MacDonald, Wm. Conroy, F. H. Whitley, Henry Bodenheimer, H. B. Pangborn, Peter Dougyer and Israel Compton.

The following standing committees were appointed:

Streets and Public Health—G. H. Neal, H. E. Needham, J. H. Howell.

Laws, Ordinances and Elections—L. A. Hummer, G. F. Edwards, M. L. Connolly.

Fire, Water and Lamps—M. L. Connolly, L. A. Hummer, G. H. Neal.

Auditing and Finance—H. E. Needham, G. H. Neal, G. F. Edwards.

Health—G. F. Edwards, J. H. Howell, L. A. Hummer, M. L. Connolly.

Printing and Stationery—G. F. Edwards, H. E. Needham, J. H. Howell.

Councilman Neal moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet Friday, April 21.

Mayor Saunders introduced Mayor Gilbert, who spoke at length on the sewerage question, describing the filtration system minutely. When he concluded the Council tendered him a vote of thanks.

Council adjourned.

PERSONAL.

Mr. L. H. Bigelow will render vocal solos at the Y. M. C. A. to-morrow afternoon.

Miss Cora VanNest of Martinville is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Lone of Craig place.

A son of Rev. Dr. Taylor of Park avenue is seriously ill with diphtheria. A yellow card on the door gives warning of the contagious disease, so that no one will become exposed to it.

Mr. E. L. Suffern will speak and Peter Condo will accompany the singing with a solo at the Y. M. C. A. meeting to be held at the Congregational church to-morrow afternoon at 4.15 o'clock.

The funeral of John E. Yoss will take place to-morrow afternoon, at two o'clock, at his late home on West Second street. Interment will be at Hillside Cemetery. The members of the Plainfield Fire Department are invited to attend. They will meet at the engine house at 1.45.

Farmer Thomas Lewis, aged 65 years, a resident of Baskingridge, died Thursday of Bright's disease. He leaves a wife and three children. He was a promisent member of Dr. Rankin's Presbyterian church of Baskingridge. Deceased had four brothers and two sisters: Messrs. John and Mrs. Mary E. Goltra, widow, and David, all residents of Baskingridge, Mrs. Susan, wife of Dr. William Pennington of Livingston, Messrs. Israel and George of North Plainfield. He had been a sufferer with the disease for several years.

Miss Agnes Waterbury, the second daughter of Rev. E. M. Rodman, the rector of Grace church, died last evening, in New York. She attended the services at Grace church, Plainfield last Sunday morning and evening, appearing to be in the best of health and spirits. On Monday morning she was taken with a cold to an aunt. On Tuesday she was taken sick. Three doctors were called in and pronounced the case malignant scarlet fever. From the beginning they gave no hope. She was only fifteen years old, and lived at 1004 Park avenue. She was of several attractiveness. She was very popular with all who knew her. She had been attending the Dr. Mayson's young ladies seminary on Seventh street and intended to be absent but a few days. Sincere sympathy is expressed on all sides for the family in their deep affliction.

YOUNG "OLD FOLKES"

THEY GIVE AN ENJOYABLE CONCERT AT VINCENT CHAPEL.

Bonnets and Gowns Over a Century Old.—Music and Recitations Galore.—A Pleasing Entertainment.

N the Vincent Chapel of the Methodist Episcopal church, last evening, the fashions of a hundred years ago were mingled with the modes of 1893. As advertised, it was a concert of "Ye Olde Folkes" represented largely by the young people of the church.

"Squire" Milner, who was the musical director, excused a delay in the starting of the concert, by saying the stage had broken down, and the walking was bad.

When the young ladies, in their old-fashioned gowns, many of them heirlooms, and their powdered hair, and Mr. Miner's choir boys, also with powered hair, filed in, it was somewhat difficult to identify the wearers.

The bonnets were curiosities. One was a huge affair as big as a bushel basket, made of brown silk, and opened like a fan. Another bonnet and charming wearer looked like this

A recitation by Miss Lockey, told of a grandmother's elopement in the days of long ago. She was heavily applauded. A character song, by Mr. Will Holmes, who represented an old man in an admirable manner, was encored. Recitations by Miss Smith and Miss Ida Pond were both charmingly rendered and warmly received.

There were vocal solos by Miss Davis, Master Tallany and Mr. L. S. Bond, and an auto-harp solo by Master Willard Martin, all of which were quite in keeping with the balance of the programme.

Mr. Wm. Clairmont presided at the piano.

The proceeds of the concert will be used by the Ladies' Aid Society to defray some needed expenses.

EDITORIAL NOTES

During 1892 this country gained more than $11,000,000 over 1891 in the amount of its exports to the Spanish American republics.

It is believed the applications for places in the marine hospital service will not be so numerous after the doctors in the country know that to get such an office they must pass an examination in the common school branches, particularly in geography and United States history. This is an insinuation against the average doctor's ability to spell, which we hurl back with scorn.

It is mentioned as a fact that the republic of Brazil has offered to pay all the traveling expenses of colored people from the United States who desire to settle in Brazil as colonists. They will get their farms free besides, on the homestead plan, after they get there. Here is a better chance for the black man than the white man ever had in the United States. The white people who colonized America paid their own expenses here and had to whip out the Indians and establish a government before they could begin to really live. All this has been done in Brazil long ago. If now the negro has the grit to accept the offer from Brazil and go there, he can amass a fortune for himself. It is a golden opportunity to prove his claim to be the equal of the white man.

New Field For Photography.

Photography, the mere art of taking sun pictures, has entered on a new field, and a thoroughly charming and inter esting one. It is only the truth to say that this new phase is due almost solely to the amateur photographers. It is the science and art of grouping objects and living beings in an artistic arrangement and then taking a photograph of the study. The effect is in some instances as pleasing as that of a beautiful painting. Indeed enlarged paintings could be made from some of these groups that would grace any gallery in the land.

The amateur lady photographers have been the ones to develop this branch most successfully. It is quite in line with refined artistic tastes. It is also much easier to use the warm, livingfleshed and blood models to perpetuate an artistic idea than to spend months and years over dry paint and canvas and then sometimes meet failure. The possibilities are here almost infinite, limited only by the photographer's artistic gift. To search long and carefully for beautiful models, to group them according to the thought in the artist's brain and then snap a camera at the picture and preserve it—there is not a pleasanter fad or fascination than this. Every condition good and bad, every grace, every virtue, beauty or deformity can thus be depicted at first hand. In this kind of work Miss Katherine Weed Barnes, grand daughter of Thurlow Weed, has few equals. She has been pronounced in London the most skillful amateur photographer living.

The Cherokee Outlet.

A correspondent of the St. Louis Globe Democrat writes that the above is the right name for the tract of land commonly called the Cherokee strip. He himself has been over the country several times, and he pronounces the new region a "land of promise in every sense of the term." The Outlet is 60 miles across from north to south and 210 miles long from east to west. The moment the gun is fired announcing it open 50,000 will tear forward in a race to locate homes or grab town lots for speculation. The Outlet lies between Kansas on the north and Oklahoma on the south It will become a part of Oklahoma territory on its opening. The boomers will find there very little if much easier than they did in Oklahoma, for four railroads already enter or cross it. There are several good stage routes as well. By the evening of the second day after that shot is fired the writer thinks very few good claims will be left vacant, and the majority of settlers will have taken possession within three hours. In addition to having stage routes and railroads through it the country is abundantly watered. We know how good a land it must be when we remember the hard time there was getting the cattle grazers off it and they finally had to be held off by United States cavalry. Before the opening the counties and county seats will have been established, and the settlers can have postoffices and local representation at once. In a month's time these American citizens will probably be starting schools.

Oklahoma contains something over 2,000,000 acres, half of which is first class land. The Outlet is almost three times as large, with nearly all of it fertile. The G. D. writer says there are very few quarter sections in which a thrifty man cannot earn a living for himself and family. His imagination revels with delight in the luxuriance of the blue grass, which no number of cattle "have ever seemed able to eat off during the summer months." The Cherokee Outlet is a good place for thrifty farmers who have saved up a little money by renting and cropping lands in the older states.

From $3,000 to $4,000 quarter sections will be open for settlement in this magnificent country. The soil of most is black and loamy. The boomers who enter the region are an unusually family and intelligent class.

WORK OF A WINDSTORM.

Great Damage Done as It Swept Through Western States.

NINE PERSONS CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Fifteen Built Buildings Blown Down in Chicago—A Huge Wave Caused Wrecks in the Harbor—The Storm Traveled East and Arrived With Snow and Rain.

CHICAGO, April 8.—This city has been the center of some exceedingly peculiar weather conditions. A severe hailstorm crossed the city from west to east, breaking nearly all of the window lights in the district from Thirty-first to Thirty-ninth streets, causing a loss estimated at $150,000. Fred Glass, aged 12 years, and Mary McGee, aged 11, were run over by teams frightened by the storm, and may not recover.

In the vicinity of the stock yards all of the telegraph and telephone wires leading south from the city were blown down. At 1 p. m. the mercury stood at 81 degrees above zero. This is the highest it has ever gone for 20 years, save in 1888, when it stood at 82.

In the west spring cyclones were rampant and the damage has been quite severe. A gale almost approaching a cyclone in severity swept southern Illinois, Iowa and Missouri, and much damage has been done. The wind had in a great measure spent itself through Illinois, but full reports are not obtainable. It is feared that in remote sections there may have been loss of life, although so far none has been reported.

A large structure being hastily run up near the World's fair grounds collapsed. The workmen were all in hand, and no one was injured. The Plymouth hotel also collapsed. It was one of the largest in that district and was almost completed. In its fall it crushed a 1-story structure.

Huge Wave In Chicago River.

Early in the morning a huge wave swept in the mouth of the Chicago river from the lake and played havoc with the shipping. Its cause is a mystery. The wave was 5 feet high from trough to crest, and carried away everything that fell in its path. The steamer City of Paris and Mabel Wilson were torn from their moorings; huge hawsers snapped like twine. On the ebb of the wave the Wilson and the City of Paris were carried against the A. P. Wright and the City of Venice, breaking their lines, and all four were carried into the lake.

The captain of the City of Paris was awakened, and he immediately had the anchor dropped, just before another wave swept into the river, carrying the other vessels with it. The City of Venice was carried up the river, and grounded above the life saving station. The Mabel Wilson grounded near the life saving station, her crew swung around, and she stuck in this position, completely blocking the river.

Tugs were sent to the rescue with new lines, and under the direction of Harbor Master Deane order was partially restored.

Along the lakes in lower Michigan also there has been much loss of property. The weather has suddenly turned oppressively hot and the wind is blowing southwest, the direction in which tornadoes and cyclones generally originate.

Nine Killed and Six Injured.

ROMEO, Mich., April 8.—A heavy wind followed by a heavy fall of hail caused a gang of men on the cantilevers here to run into an engine house at one end of the huge machine. The lever was on the south end of the track and had been carelessly left unfastened. The wind increased to a gale, struck the cantilever and started it down the track toward the engine house, in which 14 men were huddled. When it reached the end of the tracks the enormous machine, weighing 1,000 tons, struck directly on the engine house. As a result nine men were killed and six severely wounded. The men were all Italians except the foreman, Samuel Korns, who lives in this city. The cantilever was 350 feet long and 99 feet in the air.

Destructive Storm at Lacotia.

LACOTIA, Mich., April 8.—During a most destructive storm here a number of dozen barns were blown down and a windmill was blown 100 yards. Several houses were blown from their foundations. The house of Lou Dalrymple was struck by lightning and split in two, but the family fortunately escaped. Great damage was done to orchards and shade trees and fences and outbuildings are leveled in all directions.

Roofs Torn Off.

SOUTH HAVEN, Mich., April 8.—The worst windstorm on record in this vicinity struck South Haven. The cover of the waterworks standpipe was blown off and chimneys were blown down. There was an immense fall of rain. South of the town great damage was done to farm buildings. Many barns were leveled, roofs were torn off, a schoolhouse was unroofed and several buildings were struck by lightning.

The Heaviest Storm of the Season.

ROCKFORD, Ills., April 8.—The heaviest windstorm of the season prevailed here. Small buildings throughout the city were tipped over and many trees were leveled to the ground. At Cherry Valley a factory brick building was demolished and box cars were blown from the tracks.

At Rapid City.

RAPID CITY, Dak., April 8.—For six hours a remarkable windstorm from the southwest swept this region. As shown by the signal office anemometer the velocity was 64 miles per hour. The electrical manifestations were so strong that few people in the city were able to sleep.

The Storm In the East.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., April 8.—A terrific rain and windstorm did great damage here. Traffic on the street railroads is suspended and business is at a standstill. Trees, buildings and wires have been blown down and two men were badly injured by falling trees. The same storm also did great damage at Erie.

FONDA, N. Y., April 8.—Five inches of snow fell in the Mohawk valley. The snow was accompanied by a high wind. It became warmer later in the day and the snow was followed by rain.

NEW HAVEN, April 8.—A driving snowstorm combined with the prevalent mud the ball games between the Bostons and Yales. Travel is much impeded over the street car lines and trains on the Consolidated road are about an hour late.

War Artist Verestchagin Dead.

LONDON, April 8.—Verestchagin, a notable German artist, fell dead in the street here. As a war artist he gained in America considerable reputation during the rebellion.

WHISKY AND LUMBER BURNED.

Almost an Ounce of Whisky and a Small Forest of Dried Lumber Burned.

OWENSBORO, Ky., April 8.—Fire destroyed the four large warehouses of the Glenmore Distilling company here and caused the biggest conflagration in this history of the city. The buildings contained 18,987 barrels of whisky, of which there were but about 400 barrels on which the tax had been paid. The warehouses and principal part of the whisky belonged to the Glenmore Distilling company, of which R. Monarch is president. The entire loss is estimated at $950,000; fully insured.

ASHLAND, Ky., April 8.—A most disastrous fire occurred at the extensive yards of the Yellow Poplar Lumber company in Boyd county, owned by the Chicago Lumber company, at Coal Grove, O., just opposite this city. The entire plant was destroyed together with 24 private residences. The lumber was thoroughly dried and burned like tinder. John Mascill was seen on top of the planing mill and is supposed to have perished. Hundreds of residences were unable to save anything, barely escaping with their lives. The loss will reach $750,000.

THE RIOT AT HULL.

The Strikers Proposed a Compromise, but It Was Declined.

LONDON, April 8.—The strike at Hull threatens to have serious consequences. For some time past some of the shipping companies have been employing nonunion laborers to load and discharge their vessels, and a few days ago the union men went on a strike. Quite a large number of nonunion men went to Hull to take their places. A number of policemen and dockshipers attacked the nonunion laborers.

A desperate struggle ensued, the strikers being temporarily victorious. The police finally drove the strikers back, seriously injuring several of them.

The strikers then attacked the offices of the Shipping federation, and another serious conflict with the police took place, with much more serious results than before, the strikers being dispersed after many had been severely hurt.

The strikers made an effort to compromise their differences with their employers, but their peace proposals were rejected.

Death of "Oofty Goofy."

NEW YORK, April 8.—Gus Phillips died in this city of a complication of diseases. Mr. Phillips came into prominence during the Tweed regime as the wit and funmaker of the Americus club. Under the name of "Oofty Goofy" he wrote a series of articles called "Walking Down Broadway," which gave him considerable literary reputation. After the fall of the Tweed ring Mr. Phillips went on the stage and achieved considerable success as Snorkey in "Under the Gaslight." Mr. Phillips was one of the oldest Elks in America, and at one time it was said that he belonged to more secret and social organizations than any other man in the country.

Vessel Owners' Shrewd Move.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 8.—Hawaiian Consul General Pratt has been notified by the provisional government of the Hawaiian Islands that until further notice no foreign vessel will be allowed to change her flag and registry in Hawaii. The order is intended to shut out foreign built vessels whose owners would like to have their property come into the United States with the Hawaiian Islands. Among such vessels is the British steamer China of the Pacific Mail line.

The Choctaw Situation.

ANTLERS, I. T., April 8.—The militia were confounded to find that Jackson, the defeated candidate for governor, over whom the Antlers war has been raised, had joined Locke and his force in the fort during the night. The militia was strengthened by the arrival of 80 well mounted and well armed men, who responded to the call of Governor Jones. It now looks like a fight war between the original Jones and Jackson factions, as both men are on the scene.

The Express Fight Is On.

BOSTON, April 8.—Official notification of the injunction in favor of the American Express company was received by Superintendent Barton of the New York and New England road last evening, and General Superintendent Dwight of the express company says he will at once cause an injunction over the New England road, and will continue them permanently, as they held a contract with the New England for five years.

The Craig Charges Dropped.

JERSEY CITY, April 8.—The Newark M.E. conference considered charges against Rev. Alexander Craig. Rev. William H. Rissell alleged that Mr. Craig had said that the congregation that had such a minister ought to accuse him out. Bishop Foss said he thought it would be proper to refer the dispute to the presiding elder, but the conference voted against it and the matter was dropped.

Ingenious, but Dishonest Conductors.

MONTREAL, April 8.—The Montreal Street Railway company, which has been systematically robbed by its conductors, have just unearthed the scheme. The men had invented a clip for punching transfers, and tickets were taken from boxes. Thirty conductors have already been dismissed and others will follow. The company have established a secret service on all its lines.

Marie Ames's Property.

PATERSON, N. J., April 8.—The orphan court here transferred its decision in the matter of the estate of Mlle Marie Ames, the opera singer, who died in Paris a few years ago, leaving a large estate of land situated at Lake View, in Passaic county. The property has been sold to Charles F. Weber, for about $7,000. The decision confirms the tax sale.

Gas Exploded In a Stove.

TROY, N. Y., April 8.—An explosion of illuminating gas in the dry goods store of Mrs. B. Rowan caused a $60,000 fire in this city. Firemen had a hard time fighting the flames, and Assistant Chief Engineer Henry Salisbury was badly injured by falling glass.

Prize Fights For the Fair.

CHICAGO, April 8.—Gossip has it that a movement is on foot to make Chicago a prize ring headquarters during the World's fair. The talk is in the direction of forming a new athletic club, similar to the New Orleans and San Francisco organizations.

Boys' Fatal Fight.

PORTLAND, Ind., April 8.—Chris Foutz and Charles Rowland, a pair 15 years and living at Dunkirk, quarreled. Rowland drew a knife and cut Foutz four times, inflicting injuries from which he is dying.

Worried About the Postmaster.

KENYON, N. H., April 8.—The friends of Postmaster Gen. Wm. F. Harrity are worried about his unexplained absence. His business affairs are all right.

LOOK OUT FOR CHOLERA

An Earnest Warning From Medical Scientists.

DANGER OF A SCOURGE IS REAL

Pure Drinking Water, Clean Cities and Unceasing Vigilance at the Ports of Entry Are Absolutely Necessary—Even With These Safeguards the Cholera May Come.

PHILADELPHIA, April 8.—The Medical News, an established journal of medical science, publishes the following article as a note of warning to the nonmedical public:

"Medicine now calls the people and warns that there must be a numerical and national house cleaning, that, despite all quarantine the possible epidemic is probable, and that at last the only safety lies in internal health and sanitation—in an ability to deal with cases of cholera wherever and whenever they may obtain in the country. This ability cannot exist without a purified water supply, clean cities and as everywhere existing machinery of local medical policing, that, to speak plainly nowhere exists.

"The spectacle now presented in New York and in the croton watershed—the Daly raid—will long remain in future annals as one past wonder and belief. In a spasm of fright and awkwardness the city is to pay millions of dollars, without at all merely fear and impotently express the needs and needs. It is commonly agreed that this clownish and brutal method of purifying the croton water supply will not certainly prevent it, and will have no result in limiting its function as a disseminator of cholera germs if they come among us.

"The energy of the rest of the American people seems to have exhausted itself in a lazy confidence in the exclusion policy.

Danger In the Cities.

"In Philadelphia our purlieus, back alleys and slums are certainly not in good condition, and we are inexpressibly happy not only to drink the sewage water of several hundred thousand people, but of other wells in a very unhappy way. The newer and more less violent in their intensity, while new sources have been improved. Her appetite has also been better. From our report with

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I have no hesitation in endorsing its merits."

For the Good of Others

Rev. Mr. Williams Heartily Endorses Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We are pleased to present this from Rev. A. A. Williams, of the Silsbee street Christian Church, Lynn, Mass.:

"I see no reason why a clergyman, more than a layman, who knows whereof he speaks, should hesitate to approve an

and worth, from which he or his family have been signally benefited, and whose example is worthy of imitation by others. I therefore gladly bear testimony to the excellence of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It possesses virtue, the want chiefly one bottle could and did do half here. I have used it in my family with the most gratifying results, and have been very well pleased with its action. I have also given it to others, while here, and have been benefited. For our readers with for which she found little help. She has tried many things that promised relief, but found only one that gave her permanent relief. Hood's Sarsaparilla. If you suffer as she did, get a bottle and find out for yourself what Hood's Sarsaparilla will do for you. Remember

NEW YORK'S PATRONAGE

Lieutenant Governor Sheehan Goes on to See About It.

QUESTIONS FOR THE PRESIDENT

The Visit Is Unterpreted to Be a Demand From the State Organization For Offices. Admiral Gherardi May Not Be Able to Command the Fleet.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The interview between Lieutenant Governor Sheehan and President Cleveland is being watched with a good deal of curiosity by those who understand the situation. The correspondent of the New York World sends this account to his paper:

Great significance is attached to the visit of Lieutenant Governor Sheehan, who arrived from New York. It is generally understood that he has been commissioned by the machine leaders at Albany to see the president and endeavor to obtain from him an expression as to what the organization may expect in the way of federal patronage.

Mr. Sheehan admits that this is the purpose of his trip, and from statements made by him it would seem that the machine has decided to abandon its policy of allowing the state appointments to go by default.

Mr. Sheehan spent several hours in conference with Senator Murphy, and the senator will call at the White House with the lieutenant governor. Mr. Sheehan did not call on Mr. Hill. Mr. Sheehan brought with him a handbag full of applications for appointments in Erie county. He lost the key on the train from New York and a locksmith will have to be called in to help him out of his dilemma.

"I intend," he said, "to ask Mr. Cleveland to make some appointments in Erie county, and I have applications for many of the various offices. We are, perhaps, unfortunately situated in our county. The term of the postmaster does not expire for two years, and the collector has yet some little time to serve. But there are 120 fourth class postmasters in the county, and many of them may be appointed within the next few months."

"Will Senator Hill accompany you to the White House?" Mr. Sheehan was asked.

"I don't think so," he replied, and then added: "Do you think it would do any good?"

Asked more particularly about his call on Mr. Cleveland, Mr. Sheehan said:

"Senator Murphy will go with me to the White House, and we expect to have a frank talk with the president. So far as I am concerned I shall be frank. As I have said, I intend to ask Mr. Cleveland to make several appointments in Erie county, and, therefore, I may possibly file applications for a number of the fourth class postmasterships in Erie county. I am not prepared to state who my candidates are for the more important offices."

Admiral Gherardi's Illness.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The news published to the effect that Admiral Gherardi was seriously ill and would probably have to be relieved of command of the naval review was received in Washington and at the navy department with much regret, and some confirmation or denial of the news has been looked for. The navy department received a letter and several telegrams from the admiral, but in these he made no mention of his being seriously ill, nor did he ask to be relieved of his command. No movement has been made looking to any change in the arrangements for that event.

Minor Nominations.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—These nominations were sent to the senate:

Caleb W. West of Utah, to be governor of Utah.

Dumlnie I. Murphy of Washington, to be the first deputy commissioner of pensions.

Ambrose W. Lyman of Montana, to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Montana.

Levin L. Jones of Maryland, to be second assistant engineer in the revenue cutter service.

Brief Washington News.

Secretary Carlisle left the treasury department earlier than usual. He is suffering from a stubborn cold.

The president has signed the commission of Max Judd as consul general at Vienna, disregarding the protests of the antisemitic societies of Vienna.

The details of the president's trip to the naval review and to the opening of the World's fair at Chicago are being arranged and will be made public shortly. He will not go to the naval rendezvous at Hampton Roads, and it is probable that he will go direct from New York to Chicago.

The department is without any further information relating to the assault upon our consulate in Peru. No further action will be taken until after the receipt of the mail from Lima giving full details.

Secretary Morton contemplates abolishing the quarantine division of the agricultural department, believing it unnecessary.

Secretary Gresham has cabled to our minister to Turkey a strong expression of the president's views on the outrages on American citizens at Marsovan, in the Turkish dominions, and the violation of the mails of the United States legation.

Sporting Laws For Connecticut.

HARTFORD, April 8.—An act prohibiting the hunting or killing of deer for 10 years after Oct. 1 was passed in the assembly. Another act passed imposes a penalty of $1,000 or imprisonment, or both, on any person who shall enter a horse in a race under a false name, or who shall misrepresent or conceal a horse's public racing record. Both houses adjourned till next Tuesday.

Denies Glory to Columbus.

BUFFALO, April 8.—Right William Stevens Perry, bishop of Iowa, preached the first of a series of Columbian sermons at St. Paul's church. He said we owed nothing to Columbus. Spain or Rome, for the discovery belonged to John Cabot. The sermon was strictly anti-Columbian and anti-Romish and has created considerable excitement.

Threatened by Prairie Fires.

LEXINGTON, Neb., April 8.—Prairie fires are burning in several directions, and it is feared with the heavy wind that great damage will be done. An immense fire is sweeping toward this place now, but ample fire breaks and the hose companies will prevent its reaching the city.

To Prosecute Dishler.

ROME, N. Y., April 8.—District Attorney Kinne has issued subpœnas for the witnesses for the prosecution in the case of the People vs. David A. Dishler, indicted for murder in the escape of Buncoer O'Brien.

BREVITIES OF A DAY.

Judge Moore has decided that the Brooklyn city officers who were indicted on account of their connection with the Columbian celebration, with the exception of City Auditor Wetzel, would have to go to trial.

Mrs. George Greene, homewhipped J. A. Duke in the street in Jersey City and then had him arrested on a charge of slander.

The snowstorm which raged in New York state changed to rain and wound up in a thunder shower.

Colonel W. B. Hayes of New York, convicted of perjury, has commenced his eight years' term in Sing Sing prison.

The religious rites of the Roman Catholic church were refused at the funeral of Dan Donovan, whose death was the result of a prize fight.

Margaret Anne Hilton once the belle of Albany, died, aged 58.

The Bowen-Burke prize fight lasted for 110 rounds and was the longest on record. The result was a draw.

Mrs. Lulu Wall-Loden, sister of Berry Wall, appeared in a New York police court to prosecute her seamstress, whom she charged with stealing.

Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, late minister to England, bade farewell to the queen and will soon return to this country.

Requests for permission to erect a statue of the late Roscoe Conkling in Union square, New York, has been made.

Hugh Gallagher and Charles Sherman are locked up in Jersey City, charged with horse stealing.

White Face Horse and Two Sticks, bad Indians of the Pine Ridge agency, are to be put in jail.

Fought to Die by Fire.

DELAWARE, O., April 8.—Fire was discovered in the insane asylum at the county infirmary, where 84 inmates were locked in their cells. The turnkey was in another part of the building with the keys, and Superintendent Allen found it necessary to burst in the doors of the cells and bring the inmates out. They were frantic with fright and, rushed wildly amid the smoke and flames. The violent ones seemed determined to remain in the building, and fought the attendants like tigers. The attendants found it necessary to club the infuriated inmates, and only succeeded in getting them out by pushing, crowding and pounding. The building was completely gutted.

An Impression in Wax.

SAG HARBOR, L. I., April 8.—A daring attempt was made to take a wax impression of the keys to the Sag Harbor Savings bank. The bank is located over a hardware store, and one of the clerks saw a stranger go up stairs. The cashier found his keys, which were left on the desk, oily. Several pieces of beeswax were found on the floor. A watchman will be placed in the bank until the locks can be changed.

Escaped Fire and Drowned.

HASTINGS, Neb., April 8.—Mrs. Claus Frahm, who had been confined to her bed by heart trouble, while alone in the house lighted a cigarette to deaden the pain. She fell asleep and the cigarette set fire to her clothes. When the fire was extinguished Mrs. Frahm was found dead in the bathtub. The water was still running and her head was submerged.

A Lynching Imminent.

MORRILTON, Ark., April 8.—Flanagan Thornton, the negro who killed Constable Pate at Menifee Tuesday, was captured near here. The town is full of armed men, and it is believed that Thornton will be lynched.

A Mysterious Murder.

RICHMOND, April 8.—A finely dressed young man with but one arm was mysteriously murdered near Chester. The companion with whom he has frequently been seen since Thursday is missing.

GOOD HEALTH

CHILDREN'S ACCIDENTS.

Broken Bones and How to Manage Them Properly.

When all precautions have been taken, accidents will occasionally happen, and every mother should be able to render intelligent "first aid" to her children. In many cases "first aid" consists in preventing things from going worse and in judicious letting things alone till the doctor can be summoned "A Family Doctor" says in Cassell's Magazine that much harm has been done after broken limbs, heads in the ear, nose, etc., by well meant but mistaken attempts to remedy matters, and he advises as follows:

In the case of broken limbs the first thing to do is to send for the doctor. Do not lift the child from the floor at once, as very often, when the bone is broken, lifting the child allows the limb to hang, and the sharp broken end of the bone may tear a hole in the skin or even damage the blood vessels, which are very near to the bones, and either of these complications makes the injury much more serious. Before moving the child you must place the injured limb in such a position that no further harm can be done. If the leg is damaged, gently tie it to the other leg with soft handkerchiefs above and below the place where it is broken. If the arm is broken, place it tenderly on a soft cushion and let one person attend entirely to the careful lifting of this cushion as the child is lifted into bed. He should be placed upon a mattress and not a feather bed. Do not attempt to take off the clothes, but leave everything as it is until the arrival of the doctor.

The same treatment should be adopted in the case of any of the bones being put out of joint. Often by a sudden jerk or lift one of the bones is put out of joint near the elbow, and this leaves a permanently weak arm. Nurse maids and others are greatly to be blamed for the habit of jerking children over crossings or in their paddles. Whenever a child is to be lifted, it should be caught around the waist or under the shoulders, as no harm can be done in this way. Children have become cripples from falls down the stairs or from their nurses' arms on to their backs. If the child is stunned, lay him flat and keep him quiet. Loosen the clothing and give him fresh air, but do not attempt to rouse him and let him be seen by the doctor as soon as possible.

Advice About a Bad Complexion.

A writer on skin diseases has remarked that the disinclination of some physicians to trouble themselves about the cure of "pimples" is not because this disorder is insignificant and harmless, but because they do not know any certain remedy for it. He adds, however: "There can be no doubt that in the majority of cases patients can be greatly improved by treatment, and although an absolute cure cannot be anticipated with confidence it is cruel advice to tell a young lady who suffers from what she usually terms a bad complexion that the eruption should be left alone, as it will disappear of itself, for apart altogether from the fact that this disfigurement can be much ameliorated by treatment and the disease kept in check we can, if consulted in time, avoid in great measure those disfiguring scars which never disappear."

Tomatoes and Cancer.

There is a prevalent idea that eating tomatoes is an exciting cause of cancer, and for the last two years the cancer hospital at Brompton, England, has been so inundated with letters on this subject that the medical committee have thought it necessary to announce that tomatoes neither predispose to nor excite cancer formation, also that they are not injurious to those suffering from this disease, but, on the contrary, are a very wholesome article of diet, particularly so if cooked.

ETIQUETTE

FOR EVERYDAY USE.

Refined Manners and Gentle Hospitality at the Table.

Given the disposition to do what is kindly, courteous and considerate to others, and intuition will largely supply the best methods of its expression. Yet there are helpful suggestions that can easily be borne in mind, and some of these are given as follows by Good Housekeeping: To begin right one should take an easy position at the table, sitting neither too near nor too far away. Nothing is more improper than to lounge back in one's chair or to lean forward upon the table during any temporary wait which may occur. Any necessary waits should be broken and brightened by conversation with one's neighbors at the board. This, however, should not be attempted at a meal or hostess at table, interfere with their duties.

It is no longer the usage for those first served to wait till all have been supplied before commencing to eat. The host and hostess look after the progress of all the guests in order to make sure that none are neglected, but each guest conducts his own affairs and pays no attention to his neighbor, except in circumstances where ladies or children are under the oversight of their natural escort.

As dinners soup is usually the first course, and in taking it from the spoon care should be exercised to do so silently—this admonition applies to all kinds of food. It is decidedly vulgar to make a noise either in taking the food into the mouth in its manipulation or in swallowing. The latter is especially reprehensible, yet how often do we hear some person gulp down food with such a disgusting spasm of the throat muscles that we wonder how he could have escaped strangulation. In the same category of obnoxious habits may be placed the crunching of sweetmeats or other hard substances either in or elsewhere. The latter is very common, but it is none the less annoying and impolite.

The use of knife, fork spoon and fingers underwent considerable modification from time to time, and singularly enough, as it would seem, more articles are now allowed to be handled at table than formerly in many years. Among these we may name bread, olives, cheese, radishes, celery, asparagus, berries eaten with the stems, and most fruits, while it is no violation of polite usage to take cubes of sugar with the fingers. Generally, however, what is considered the proper usage will be indicated by the hostess in the utensils supplied with the various articles, and when none are furnished it may be accepted as an indication that the fingers are expected to do duty. The knife is to be used only for cutting, for spreading butter and the like; the spoon conveys to the mouth fluids and semi-fluids only—everything else is relegated to the fork.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE KHEDIVE OF EGYPT.

A Young Ruler Who Is Not So Independent as He Would Like to Be.

After Ferdinand de Lesseps completed that wonderful work, the Suez canal, England, recognizing the great commercial interests involved, set to work to obtain a controlling power over it. Englishmen became its virtual owners, and England established what is called a "protectorate" over the country of Egypt, which was too weak to stand alone against foreign powers. In 1882, after disbanding the existing Egyptian military forces, the British organized a new army under an English commander and with many English troops. They also control the public finances, the courts of justice and the police. This was the condition of affairs during the reign of the Khedive Mohammed Tewfik.

Tewfik's successor, Khedive Abbas, who is not yet 19 years old, recently attracted attention by a sudden defiance of his British advisors and protectors. In this he only showed a spirit similar to that of his father, Tewfik, who sometimes gave scant attention to the unbending English demeanor and was once heard to protest that he could not invite a guest to dinner without the permission of Great Britain's representative.

But it seems that the young khedive felt his bold attitude to be a little rash, for he soon became apparently reconciled again to the British representatives at his court. Judging, however, from his portrait, Abbas is a sturdy young fellow, quite equal to striking an occasional blow for independence.

As a child Abbas is said to have been willful and spoiled, but not especially well mannered and interesting. For five years before his accession to the vice regal throne of Egypt he, with his brother and cousins, was at school at Vienna. For a time they were fain to submit to the rigid code of rules that bound their fellow pupils, but finally Abbas and his brother revolted against these restrictions and were provided with a house of their own, where the two—for they were inseparable companions—were left in peace to enjoy life after their own fashion—a very quiet fashion, too, surrounded by a little cohorte of their own friends, but always under the supervision of their governor.

Curious Easter Eggs.

Besides the plain colored eggs which are a matter of course with young folks there is much fun in dressing up blown eggs in character. The heads are painted on the upper part of the egg, the lower portion forming the body. The legs and arms are made with writing paper gummed onto the egg. For a little girl the hair is made with bow, a hat of tissue paper, a little dress, muff and legs are painted to the lower portion of the egg. A mandarin's head can be cleverly done. The features are sketched on the egg. Hats and tights are made of black silk. The back is made with stiff paper, so that the egg rests on it, which in turn is supported by a visiting card glued underneath, and a tassel tie of ribbon is knotted around the neck. A negro's head, with high hat and cravat, hair made of white, cotton wool and huge spectacles painted on the face, is funny. The head of a Quakeress represents a quaint fancy, and any one clever at that sort of thing can cut and fold the bonnet out of brown paper.

The Wolf at Dinner.

The wolf sat down upon a chair.
"Ho, waiter, bring the bill of fare!
In lamb I'll have a leg of mutton,
A platterful with some nice green peas."

The Ship of the Desert.

The camel is the only animal that can live for any length of time upon the desert. It can go without water five or six days without suffering and can eat the dry thorn bushes and other bits of vegetation that would give a horse no sustenance. It is a very patient and docile animal, can carry a heavy load and will kneel at command for his master to mount or dismount.

The camel is often called the ship of the desert. Without it the Arab would not travel across the parched, hot sands. Its frequently carries the whole family, with their food and water. The swift camel, the Hedjin, can travel at the rate of eight or ten miles an hour for 20 hours.

Counting the Steps.

"Oh, how many steps there are to take!"
Said Madge in her own sweet way.
"There are steps for baby and grandmamma,
And it's nothing but steps all day.
Now papa calls me—I must surely go.
And Tommy says, "Find me, Sis!"
But the steps I take for you, mamma,
I never count them at all."

'And why does my darling never count
The steps that she takes for me?"
"Because," and closing her lips with a kiss,
"I love you so, don't you see?"

Long Year.

Julius Cæsar in B. C. 45 was the first to reform the calendar by ordering that every year whose date number is exactly divisible by 4 contain 366 days, and all other years 365 days. The intercalary day was introduced by counting the sixth day before the calends of March twice. Hence the name bissextile, from bis, twice, and sex, six. He also changed the beginning of the year from March 1 to Jan. 1, and also changed the name of the fifth month (Quintilis) to July after himself. The average length of the Julian year is therefore 365¼ days, which, however, is too long by 11 minutes and 14 seconds, and this would accumulate in 400 years to about three days. The Julian calendar continued in use until A. D., 1582, when the date of the beginning of the seasons occurred 11 days later than in B. C. 45, when this mode of reckoning time was introduced. And in order to rectify this discrepancy Pope Gregory reformed the Julian calendar by ordering that every year whose number is exactly divisible by 4 contain 366 days, except the centurial years, and that the centurial years exactly divisible by 400 also contain 366 days, and all other years 365 days. He also added on the 10 days by which the Julian and true calendars differed, thus making the vernal equinox occur on or near March 21, as it had once been after. Russia and the Greek church still use the Julian calendar for civil and ecclesiastical purposes.

A Curious Museum.

One of the most curious museums in the world is that containing hundreds of those minds of newspapers at Aix-la-Chapelle. This quaint museum library was founded some seven or eight years ago by Oscar Forhenbeck, who collected newspapers as one or people collect stamps or autographs. The whole of his income for something like 40 years was distributed over newspaper offices of the civilized and uncivilized world, and he received every morning dailies published in 30 languages. By the year 1885 he found himself the happy owner of 10,000 files. He then hit on the excellent idea of founding a newspaper museum, and with this object in view sent a circular round asking the whole newspaper world to send him in his great work. The continental press seems to have responded with enthusiasm, and now, says The Chronicle, there is certainly no such collection of newspapers existing in the whole world. Mr. Forhenbeck, a keen man of business, made this rien in chief, and both he and three assistants are busy indexing and arranging the ever increasing collection.

French Advocates of Woman's Rights.

The French advocates of women's rights do not resemble the English advocates. They effect no eccentricity or austerity of dress, but frequently appear in gowns and bonnets from the last Parisian modistes. The female Demosthenes of the league are Mme. Rouzade, a lady whose excited eloquence savors somewhat of fanaticism, and Mme. Dereismes, a lady possessed of a good vocal organ and an inexhaustible stock of arguments, and Mme. Astie de Valserye, the secretary of the league, who has been chosen as a candidate at the next elections. Their motto is perfect equality with men in all employments and in all professions—"for equal work, equal wages."

Forest Restorations.

Seven reservations of forest lands have already been made—viz., those of White river, Pike's peak and Plum creek, Colorado; Pecos and Canadian rivers, New Mexico; Bull river, Oregon; Yellowstone park, Wyoming, and San Gabriel, California. These comprise an area of more than 2,260,000 acres. Twenty-three other proposed reservations are now under consideration by the department of the interior. These are situated in the states of California, Colorado, Idaho Minnesota, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, Washington and Wyoming.

Indians as Fruit Growers.

Meehan is authority for the statement that many of the native tribes of Indians were good gardeners, and progressive ones at that. He tells in his monthly magazine that through the earlier missionaries European fruits and vegetables were introduced to this continent, by which some of the Indians were glad to profit. Mr. George G. Coover has an ancient map of a Seneca settlement near Geneva wherein is located the site of an orchard of apple trees planted by that tribe.

The Pottery Tree.

The pottery tree, found in Brazil, is curious and useful. One would scarcely expect to find pots and jars and pitchers growing in, if not on, a tree, but the material for them certainly grows in this tree. It is found in the form of silica, chiefly in the bark, although the very hard wood of the tree also yields it. To make this curious pottery the bark is first burned, and what remains is ground to powder and mixed with clay.

Bridesmaid Superstitions.

It is still a current notion in many parts of England that the bride in removing the bridal wreath must take especial care that her bridesmaids throw away every pin. Not only is it affirmed that misfortune will overtake the bride who retains even one pin used in her marriage toilet, but woe also to the bridesmaids if they keep any of them, as their prospects of marriage will thereby be materially blasted.

A POPULAR ERROR.

The Term Caucasian Race Not Synonymous With White Race.

In a paper presented to the Moscow congress last summer M. Ernest Chantre, a profound student of the ethnology of northwestern Asia, remonstrated against the use of the term "Caucasian race" as synonymous with "white race." Professor D. G. Brinton, well known American authority on such subjects, seconds this protest in Science and says:

M. Chantre points out that it is demonstrable that some of the so called Caucasian peoples ever lived in the Caucasus or can be traced to the Ponto-Caspian area. The study of local archæology proves that this trace was comparatively lately inhabited, that its occupants in early times, as today, had no ethnic unity, but were the disjecta membra of various stocks, who fled to these mountain fastnesses as asylums; that they are without linguistic or somatological connection, and that the only proper use of the term is to apply it solely to the tribes occupying the main chain of the Caucasus. Tribes who have no historic or ethnic identity with any others outside this area.

Yet so slowly does a correction of this kind penetrate popular error that it is nearly always made up at second or third hand, that the term "Caucasian race" will probably survive in school geographies and encyclopedias for a generation to come.

Flying Hannah.

The circuit rider for a mountain district in West Virginia was stopping for a day or two at the house where he was to preach on Sunday, and to him a mountaineer came with a buxom mountain maid and wanted to be married then and there.

"Where's your Bezpeel?" asked the minister.

The man was surprised.

"Ain't got none," he said. "We don't have to have no license, do we? We ain't agoin to sell liquor."

That was all the license he knew about.

The minister explained to him, and he rode away to get the county seat and later in the day appeared with the license.

"That cost me a dollar, mister," he said ruefully. "Do you charge anything?"

"You can pay me whatever you please, but I never charge less than a dollar."

"Well, I've only got half a dollar, mister, and won't git the balance till after harvest."

The minister hesitated, because he thought the mountaineer was trying to beat him, and while he was willing to perform the ceremony gratis he didn't want to cut prices. All at once the mountaineer put in:

"I've got it, mister," he exclaimed, showing the half dollar at him. "Here's half per price. Now, you marry Hanner to me. They ain't anybody in the land I want but Hanner, and Hanner kinder hankers for a whole passle of fellers that is better lookin than I am, but ain't as well off, so if you git Hanner you needn't worry about me at all. Take your half dollar an go ahead on Hanner. You kin fix me after harvest, and I'll give you t'other half when the job's done."

However, the minister couldn't see his way clear to settling it that way, and he completed the job then and waited until after harvest for his fee.—Detroit Free Press.

ENVELOPED IN STEAM.

ENGINEER "JOE" LUTZ SEVERELY SCALDED THIS MORNING.

The Driving Rod of his Engine Punched a Hole Into the Boiler from which Steam and Boiling Water Poured Out.

Engine No. 97, pulling four coaches filled with passengers, bound for New York, due at Plainfield at 8 47 a. m., had an accident this morning at Greenbrook, between Dunellen and Bound Brook. A breakage in the machinery caused a driving rod to pass through the boiler and an escapement of steam and boiling water followed, entering the cab and scalding Engineer "Joe" Lutz severely.

The steam gushed out in great clouds completely enveloping the engine. The water escaped, flooding the fire box, extinguishing the fire, and making the engine dead and useless. The train was running at the rate of 60 miles an hour. It started from Easton.

The coaches were attached to another train and the passengers resumed their journey to New York.

Lutz was taken to his home in Easton.

PERSONAL.

Miss Schenck of New Brunswick is a guest of Miss Louise Snedecker of Grove street.

Mabel Fisch, 10 years old, died at her parents' home, 60 West Second street, this morning of diphtheria.

Messrs. Nolte and McCabe, two of the members of the Y. M. C. A., of Elizabeth, were the guests yesterday of the C. Y. M. L. of this city.

The Monroe Avenue chapel of the M. E. church has made an engagement with Rev. Herbert Munson of Drew Theological Seminary for the coming year.

Kejib, I. Kathej, of Damascus, Syria, will give a lecture on "Syrian Marriage Ceremonies" at the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Thursday evening. He will illustrate his lecture by native costumes. The admission will be free to all men.

Mr. Camp, of Kimball avenue, who sang in the Congregational church, Easton, Sunday, has been appointed choir master at the First Presbyterian church, Plainfield. Miss Camp will sing also in the same choir.—Westfield Standard.

Funeral services were held this afternoon over the remains of Dr. John C. G. Happersett, at the home of his brother, Mr. H. V. Happersett, 12 Putnam avenue, this city, at 2.30 o'clock. The body was taken to Brandywine Manor, Pa.

Rev. Henry Pierson and wife, from Dr. Simpson's Tabernacle, New York, are to begin a series of evangelistic services in the Park Avenue Baptist Church Wednesday night. Preaching every night and afternoon thereafter, to which everybody will be welcome.

Saturday morning, at his home on Grandview avenue, occurred the death of Mr. Henry A. Weiss. He was 67 years old. Death was due to consumption. The funeral services will be held at his late residence, No. 29 Grandview avenue, North Plainfield, at three o'clock.

At high noon to-day, Miss Mary Elizabeth Bradshaw, niece of Chief Doane was married to Mr. Samuel J. Moore of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The bride was attired in a becoming travelling gown of gray broad cloth. After an extended wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Moore will reside in their new home, at Poughkeepsie-on-the-Hudson.

Mr. Joseph B. Rogers, aged 69, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Delia Mills, Grandview avenue, at six o'clock Saturday evening. He had been sick but a week with pneumonia. He was born in Westfield and lived there up to about a year ago when he and his wife, who survives him, came to this city to live with their daughter, who is an only child.

The funeral of the late John E. Yoss took place yesterday afternoon. Owing to a little daughter being ill with diphtheria no service was held at the house. The Rev. T. Logan Murphy conducted the service at the grave, in Hillside cemetery. About twenty-five members of Gazelle Engine Company attended in a body, as well as a number of members from Engine Company No. 2. The pallbearers were: David Bell, J. Searing, A. H. Martin, C. DeGraw, A. TenEyck and L. M. Dunavan.

The burial of Miss Agnes Waterbury, second daughter of the Rev. Erskine M. Bodman, who died in New York Friday evening, took place yesterday. The burial party, upon the arrival in this city of the 5.14 p. m. train from New York, proceeded directly to Hillside Cemetery, where the Episcopal service, which is very impressive, was read at the tomb by the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector of the Holy Cross church. The following clergymen were present: Rev. Dr. Yerkes, Rev. Dr. Lowry, Rev. Dr. Richards, Rev. Mr. Goodrich, Rev. Dr. Lewis, Rev. Mr. Richardson, Rev. Mr. Schenck, Rev. Mr. Herring, Rev. Mr. Murphy and Rev. Mr. Dwight. A quartette composed of Miss Morgan, soprano; Mrs. Freeman, alto; Mr. W. H. Cook, tenor, and Mr. Arthur Freeman, basso, sang.

The particulars of the death of Clinton V. Ianson, last Thursday, of diphtheria are very sad. He was a young man, only 23 years old, and had been married about two years. His wife was a Miss Florena Hand, youngest daughter of Mr. David Hand of Netherwood. About a month ago she was taken dangerously ill, and her life was despaired of for some time. During her illness her husband was a constant attendant at her bed side and watched by her side every night. The wife was beginning to improve week before last. On Saturday of that week Mr. Ianson complained of a cold, but it was thought nothing serious. Tuesday night Dr. Jenkins was summoned, as he began to show symptoms of a disease worse than a cold. The doctor pronounced it diphtheria. On Thursday he died, while his wife was in the next room scarcely able to raise her head from the pillow. The funeral, which was private, occurred Friday afternoon. On Friday morning, unable to stand the strain any longer, the heart broken young wife sent for her father, and begged to be taken home. Mr. Hand procured a coach, and, lying on a mattress, she was conveyed to her father's home, at Netherwood. Careful nursing and a mother's presence are doing much for her, and she is now greatly improved.

Death of a Former Plainfielder.

Mr. John Tunison died at his home in Union township on Tuesday afternoon of his seventy-third year. He had a severe cold which developed into pneumonia. He was born in this city, but had been a resident of that township for thirty-five years. He leaves four children, Mrs. Dennis Long of Westfield, Mrs. J. W. Abeles of Irvington, and Alexander and John R. Tunison, of Lyons Farms.

NEW MINISTERS.

FIVE ADMITTED TO THE NEWARK CONFERENCE SATURDAY.

Bishop Fitzgerald's Impressive Address to the Candidates for Admission into the Conference.—How to become True Ministers.

Much of the work of the Newark Annual Conference, which was attended by the Rev. Dr. Hurlbut of this city, at its fourth session Saturday, was of a routine nature, but none the less important was the business done.

The presiding elder of the district named St. Luke's, Newark, as the place for the next convention. The nomination was unanimous.

The following clergymen were admitted into the conference on report of the Conference Committee on Qualifications, who recommend them:—James A. Heudecy, Charles J. Kimball, William J. Keath, William E. Palmer and Louis J. Griffiths.

Then came the most impressive scene of the day, when Bishop Fitzgerald summoned the five candidates for admission into the Conference before the bar. They were all young men, and were filled with the importance and solemnity of the occasion. Taking his discipline book in his hand, the Bishop descended to the bar and thus addressed the supplicants:

"We all have been impressed with the high honor placed upon men as ministers to foreign countries from this great and grand United States. It is an honor, indeed. I say unto you, a greater honor has been conferred upon you, as an ambassador of Jesus Christ. You are a minister of the King of Kings, that in His name you may beseech men to become reconciled to Him. You will be greatly inspired by remembering you are Christ's ministers.

"Declare fully the message He gave you, so when at the last you make your report, it will be acceptable to him. It is expected that ministers to foreign countries shall be qualified. Thus it is with ministers of God, and He has provided that through His church, you shall be tried. May this qualification be truly and fully demonstrated as the years pass over your head. I trust that all your wants will be supplied.

"To be a successful minister you must work, you will find people who are hungry for the words from your lips. You have a great opportunity. The church has believed you are so called to preach the Word at God. Thus, teach, persuade and live lives of holiness unto the Lord. I undertake to say: No man who takes upon him the vows you have taken, and continues to preach, though he doubts the Word of God, cannot be an honest man. So, I beseech you, if at any time you find you are in that condition, come before the conference, and we will release you, though with tears.

"In the church discipline rules are not so strict, as if is at any time you see a place where a wise change can be made, we are willing to listen to you. If you wish to say women can go as delegates, you are privileged to say so, and you can do all the talking you want to about it. But do not change the church discipline till the Conference has changed it. It is your duty to abide by it until the church orders different. Don't become dissatisfied with your fields of labor. Don't become angered when you have to leave a favored field. There are three requisites you should have: God's Grace, A Knowledge of His word, and Knowledge of Man. May God guide and make you each a faithful and true minister in His cause."

Taken Suddenly Ill While Preaching.

Rev. Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut, who has been acting pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, was taken suddenly ill while preaching last evening and was compelled to stop abruptly.

He had said, "I remember the first time I heard Mr. Moody preach. There was a few moments pause. The speaker, who had been growing very pale, spoke again, hurriedly, in a lower tone and evidently with an effort—"My friends, I have been ill, and I do not continue speaking, and will have to stop here. You will arise and be dismissed with the benediction." As soon as this was pronounced, Dr. Hurlbut hurried into an adjoining room, whither he was followed by some friends.

It was learned that he had been ill in bed during the day, but had felt that he must preach in the morning and evening although strongly advised by his family and friends not to attempt it.

This morning he is much better.

Mr. Churchill's "Salem" Dead.

Mr. G. W. Churchill of Dunellen lost his valuable trotter, "Salem," Saturday night. It died of gabritis. Dr. Pocock of this city was summoned, but arrived too late to be of any service, as the horse was dying when he got there. "Salem," had a record of 2.29½, and was prized very highly by Mr. Churchill.

A Great Success.

The fair for the benefit of St. Joseph's church at Sacrowood Hall, last week, was brought to a close Saturday night. It was very successful and a large amount of money was cleared.

The success of the fair was due, in a large measure, to the efforts of the pastor, the Rev. Father McErlean and his able assistant, Rev. Father Cushing.

RECTOR JENNINGS AND HIS VESTRY.

Argument Heard in the Matter Saturday at Trenton.

Argument was made before Supreme Court Justice Van Syckel and Reid at the State House, Trenton, Saturday, on a motion to dismiss the writ of certiorari issued against the vestrymen of Grace Church, Westfield, to review the work of the board in dismissing Rector Jennings. Mr. Craig A. Marsh of this city represented the rector and held that the case belonged in the Supreme Court, because the appeal of the tribunals within the corporation had been exhausted. He should be tried by impartial men. The charges, he said, grew out of a conspiracy, and it would be a farce to go before a tribunal made up of the very men who were the principal conspirators. The men in the ecclesiastical tribunal are men of high character. Mr. Marsh said that these men have denied to the rector his substantial rights from the beginning. They cannot deprive him of a civil right, and it has been decided that ecclesiastical bodies cannot go that far.

Mr. Marsh says it is just as much of a contract to preach the gospel as any other occupation. It carries with it civil rights which any court will protect. As Mr. Marsh asked for a rule on the secretary for certain things omitted in the papers sent up, and also to take evidence to show that there was collusion, and that the standing committee could not find fault with the pitiful charges that were made, this was granted.

Lawyer Shreve argued that the status of the case had not been properly presented: that no charges had been made, and that because the church was going into the organization of a new one and people had to be dissolved to save the corporation, but Mr. Jennings could step out without any stain on his character, for nothing like that had been attempted. The Bishop had only done what was his duty. The decision was reserved.

If Mr. Jennings should be sustained the case would be just where it was before the trouble started and everything would have to be done over again except the vestry would profit much by past experience.

A WORTHY ASSOCIATION.

Children's Home Society Organized at Westfield.

Certificates of incorporation of the Children's Country Home have been filed in the office of the County Clerk at Elizabeth. The incorporators are William G. De Lamater, Anson F. Grant, George B. Seabree, Alfred E. Pearsall, Charles G. Endicott, Mary Patton Welles, Minnie B. Morse, Florence Morse Embree and Effie E. Beebe, all of Westfield.

The purpose for which the association has been formed are the care, cure, nurture and maintenance of sick, injured infirmed aged and indigent persons, orphans, half orphans and destitute children, and for the training, education, instruction and preparation of persons, male and female, to act as nurses.

The governors or directors who will manage this worthy association for the first year of its existence are: Mary Patton Wells, Minnie B. Morse, Florence Embree and Effie E. Beebe. The home will be located in Westfield.

Mrs. Perkins is a Friend.

Mrs. Sarah M. Perkins, who is now lecturing in New Jersey, is the editor of a paper entitled A True Republic and always has a good word to say for her fellow workers of the fraternity. At the meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Chicago, last Spring, one of the speakers spoke somewhat harshly of reporters and newspaper men. Mrs. Perkins was on her feet in a moment, and in a short speech paid a graceful tribute to the men and women of the press. They had helped her very much, she said, in her reform work, by their courtesy in giving accounts of lectures and meetings, thus giving her an audience of thousands of readers, and added that she for one felt immensely indebted. On the last evening of the Council, Mrs. Perkins was presented with a large and beautiful basket of roses, as a token of gratitude for her timely defense of the newspaper fraternity.

Mrs. Perkins will read her lecture, "Margaret Fuller the Thinker, and Mary Lyon, the Worker," on Tuesday afternoon, in the Unitarian church, at four o'clock. This lecture is much praised by the newspapers.

Bridging the Central.

The work of bridging the Central Railroad tracks at Elizabeth by the Pennsylvania for their elevated structure was begun Saturday. The piers over Broad and East Broad streets have been placed in the position they will occupy until the permanent stone arches are built and now that the tracks are laid up to Grant's Tomb works the builders are spanning the latter.

Who Has Lost a Horse?

A bay horse was caught on West Fourth street this morning by an employee of Bolce, Runyon & Co. The animal had part of a double harness on. Its left hind leg was bleeding at the fetlock joint. It was taken to Hadden's livery, on East Fourth street.

Literary Notes.

A new work published by E. P. Dutton and Company, 21 West 23d street, New York entitled "Hiram Golf's Religion" has the special merit of originality. The book is handsomely bound in white, purple and gold.

The New S. P. C. A Law.

There have been three amendments made to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals law.

The first section gives the President of the State Society authority to organize a District Society in the several counties, and the said county societies can organize other societies with the approval of the President of the State Society. The President of the State Society can revoke the charter of a District Society for cause.

The second section is amended, making the use of the badge of the Society by a person not a member a misdemeanor, punishable with a fine of $200.

The fourth section gives District Societies the right to receive personal property by bequest.

Under an amendment to another section offenders may be arrested and district courts, police courts and justices of the peace will have authority to try such persons while in custody. The amendment does away with the necessity of giving an accused person five days notice to appear for a hearing.

"Robin Hood" at Music Hall Saturday Evening.

One of the most enjoyable and best attended plays at Music Hall this season, was that of "Robin Hood," Saturday evening.

The entire company was excellent. The characters of the "Sheriff," "Little John" and "Scarlet" were exceptionally good. The music throughout was bright and pleasing. There was scarcely a vacant seat in the house.

"Oatmeal, sir? Why, I am a sort of oatmeal epicure!"

Thomas Carlyle suffered so greatly from dyspepsia that he turned to oatmeal as the only possible relief from his misery. Oatmeals nowadays cause indigestion instead of curing it—that is unless you get the perfect grain—H-O. The one, clear, clean oatmeal.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The largest building in the world is the hall of Manufactures and Liberal Arts for the World's fair at Chicago. The ground area covers 30,47 acres. The central hall alone comprises seven acres and will seat 75,000 persons, giving to each its six feet of space. There is iron and steel enough in it to make the Brooklyn bridges. Now let New York gnash her teeth.

If the United States wanted or expected to take Hawaii at all, the right time to do so was when it was first offered to us. There were no vexations and harassing questions. Other nations made no objection. The enthusiasm of the Hawaiians who wanted annexation was redhot. Now on second thought some of them are not so sure they wanted annexation after all, and all the ifs and buts of the average vacillating human mind have had time to come uppermost. Japan wants Hawaii herself, and the European nations are beginning to think it would pay them to let the United States have these islands. So it goes always. Merely a vote at the right time, followed simply by a signature, and it would have been all settled, and President Cleveland would now be appointing postmasters in Hawaii.

Minister and Embassador.

The raising of Ministers Pauncefote of England and Patenotre of France to the full rank of embassadors by their respective governments is significant of the growing consideration felt for this government by the nations of Europe. It is likely that Germany, Italy, Austria, Russia and Spain will follow suit and shortly elevate their representatives at Washington to the rank of embassador. In the etiquette of the diplomatic service there are three general classes of accredited agents to a foreign country—the embassador, the minister plenipotentiary and the charge d'affaires. The embassador is the highest, representing not only his government but absolutely the person of his sovereign at a foreign capital.

It is a fact that hitherto the governments of Europe, while they sent embassadors to one another's capitals, sent only ministers plenipotentiary to the United States. Our chief diplomatic representatives in Europe therefore took the rank of minister also and fell into the second class of diplomatic agents. The embassador takes precedence of the minister on all ceremonial occasions, and therefore even James Russell Lowell, when he was minister to England, had to walk behind the representatives of [illegible] States the envoys [illegible] minister Eustis will probably shortly be the United States embassador to France. Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, our embassador to England, has the honor of being the first American diplomat of the highest rank.

Biennial Legislative Sessions.

In Massachusetts old time tradition adheres to this day to the annual election of both governor and members of the legislature. It has been argued that this makes great fuss and feathers, with no corresponding good results to show; that, in short, it would be much better to have not only the governor elected every two years, but also the legislative assembly meet only every other year. Usages of the states differ according to their own sweet fancy in this matter. A majority hold elections for both governor and legislature biennially, with annual sessions of the latter body. Probably common opinion favors in this system.

In the New England Magazine Mr. Raymond L. Bridgman argues in favor not only of electing a governor, but also the legislature every year. Truth compels an unprejudiced observer to say that his reasons for the annual legislative sessions are stronger than those for the annual elections. One point which he mentions is that the rural inhabitants would be satisfied with a meeting of the legislature every two years. They live quietly and simply. They do not feel the rushing current of growth pushing them fiercely on.

It is the cities that require annual sessions. New needs constantly arise as the population increases and civilization becomes more complex. To mention only one or two instances, whenever a discovery like the telephone or the electric light and electric transit is put to general use, a multitude of laws must be made to fit the new needs. It is the same all over. The law of development requires that the old should be wiped out, the new made place for. Then, too, in our new countries the mistakes of lawmakers are something prodigious. As is will once said, the mistakes of doctors are hidden underground; those of the lawyers and lawmaking bodies cannot be. When a legislature has made a bad break, it must come together as quickly as possible and mend the break.

There is another reason Mr. Bridgman might have brought forward, but does not, in favor of annual sessions. In this country every man is a sovereign, and all citizens ought to be kept in touch with the times and governing laws as well as with parliamentary rule and usage. This can be accomplished by no means so well as by annual legislative session.

THE STONE MEANT FOR BALFOUR.

Socialists Plant Their Red Flag In the Faces of the Soldiers—Stanley Says Too Much Ammunition Is Sent Into Africa by the Germans.

LONDON, April 10.—The steamships Montebello and Rodosa went out from the Hull docks and anchored in the Roads, so as to be able to take aboard their crews at a safe distance from the rioters. Two companies of dragoons, armed with lances, formed on both sides of the crews about two hours later and escorted them to the tenders. The police, who had been called out in full force, tried to stop the mob back, but the strikers broke through the lines repeatedly and began stoning the soldiers and sailors. The police swung their clubs right and left, cracking heads and battering faces. When the rioters crowded up in front of the crews so as to stop their progress the dragoons beat them back with the butt-ends of their lances. Several dragoons and police men were injured with stones thrown by rioters, and about a dozen strikers were carried from the scene of conflict by comrades. At the docks the crews were placed on the tenders and proceeded to the Montebello and Romeo. Both steamships then sailed.

A gunboat arrived at Hull and anchored in the Roads. Another is expected to arrive today.

A large but orderly meeting of strikers was held. Ben Tillett and Joseph Havelock Wilson, labor M. P. for Middlesborough, made the principal addresses.

Both of them urged the men to hold fast to their present position, and Mr. Wilson proclaimed the intention to produce a general strike.

The dockers at Grimsby resolved to handle no freight for Hull ships which might go to Grimsby to be loaded.

Royalty Breaks a Custom.

ROME, April 10.—Vatican circles are quite scandalized by the disregard of the usual customs by the Princess of Wales and her suite on her recent visit to the pope.

The Princess of Wales wore a simple veil instead of a long black one, which is prescribed for all audiences with the holy father. The Princesses Maud and Victoria had traveling dresses on. The Duke of York wore a silk hat and carried a stick, and General Ellis wore a frock coat. For all audiences with the pope the dress is strictly prescribed. For ladies black dresses with a long veil of the same color; for men, a dress suit, white tie and no gloves.

Socialists Wave Their Flag.

BRUSSELS, April 10.—In observance of King Leopold's fifty-seventh birthday General Brassine, commander of the troops in this district, inspected the garrison. As he passed down the line with his staff a group of socialists, led by a man with a large red flag, ran up shouting, "Long live universal suffrage!" All the officers reined in their horses, and several apprehending an attack drew their swords. [illegible] Leopold [illegible]

Stanley Approves.

LONDON, April 10.—Henry M. Stanley has written to the Peace association a letter in which he attributes the increase of trade in 1892 at African ports under German rule to the check given to the growing practice among German merchants of importing into Africa small arms and ammunition. These materials of war, he says, are sold to the slave trade and do incalculable damage. He appeals to the European nations to suppress the traffic in arms carried on by the Germans and Portuguese. Unless this step be taken, he says, all efforts to stop the slave trade will be useless.

Death of a Noted Frenchman.

PARIS, April 10.—Ex-Minister de Pariew is dead. He was minister of public instruction in the cabinet inaugurated in 1869. He received the grand cross of the Legion of Honor in 1857 and subsequently was decorated with many foreign orders. He wrote voluminously on historical and economic subjects.

A Whole Village Heirs.

LONDON, April 10.—A Scotchman named Proudfoot, who died recently in Natal, bequeathed £20,000 to the laborers in Moffat, Scotland. The 80 laborers in the village have resolved to use the money in establishing a public institution for sick and aged poor and in maintaining a pension fund.

Deaths by Earthquake.

BELGRADE, April 10.—A severe earthquake was felt in many parts of Servia. The village of Veliki Popovitsh was tumbled into ruins and several inhabitants were killed. Deaths in wrecked houses are reported from other villages in the kingdom.

The Viking Ship Starts.

CHRISTIANIA, April 10.—The Viking ship which is to be shown at the World's fair sailed from this port. She will cruise along the coast in order that the people may have an opportunity to see her, and early in May will sail from Bergen to the United States.

In Turkish Dungeons.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 10.—The condition of affairs in Armenia is becoming more serious daily. Constant arrests of Armenians are reported in private letters. It is estimated that between 1,800 and 2,000 Christians are now in Turkish dungeons.

Cheers and Stones For Balfour.

DUBLIN, April 10.—As Mr. Balfour started from Kingstown for London he was cheered. A window of Lord Iveagh's house, where Mr. Balfour was entertained, was smashed with stones. The man who threw the stone has been arrested.

Fell From a Balloon.

PARIS, April 10.—A balloon carrying three passengers left Brussels. M Tosti, a professional aeronaut, was in charge. Over Staples, France, fell in the balloon. The other two passengers continued the voyage.

Tuberculin Gates Closed.

SALT LAKE, April 10.—Large crowds thronged at the gates of the tuberculin hut they were not opened, an almost unprecedented thing. Everybody expected a large and lavish service, but none at all were held. Instead the regular ceremonies were resorted to in the temple.

OUR CONSUL AT MOLLENDO.

He It Was Who Was Shot by a Mob—Angry Peruvians.

NEW YORK, April 10.—The Herald prints the following today:

The wounding of a consular agent of the United States, which Minister Hicks reported to the Washington government, occurred at Mollendo, Peru, on March 25. The trouble grew out of the anti-Masonic demonstrations which have lately been made in Peru under the direction of the bishop of Arequipa. Masonic rites were being observed at the lodge room in Mollendo on the evening of March 25.

During the ceremonies a mob attacked the building. Many stones were thrown and those who were participating in the rites were driven from the lodge room. Having driven out the Masons the mob sacked the lodge room and burned the building.

A few shots were fired during the melee, one of which wounded the American consular agent, Emilio De Cazoria, in the leg.

The municipal police, who made no effort to protect the Masons in their rites, has been dismissed by the government and will be placed on trial. Reports from Mollendo say it is quiet there now.

LEGISLATORS PREPARING TO REST.

An Attempt Will Be Made to Abolish Capital Punishment In New York.

ALBANY, April 10.—Nine legislative days comprising the present week will be consumed by the legislature in regular session. The bills yet enacted upon are important as regards numbers. The most important bill which remains finally enacted upon is the annual supply bill. It has already passed the assembly and will reach the governor before many days.

The rest of the session will be devoted entirely to the consideration of the calendars. The senate is about up to its work.

Senator Smith's bill providing for the abolition of capital punishment is a special order in the senate for tonight, while in the assembly Mr. Sullivan has given notice that he will endeavor during the session to move to consider out of its order his bill, which is similar to that of Senator Smith's.

The Saxton antipoolroom bill is in the assembly judiciary committee, as is also the state comptroller's bill empowering him to examine the books of racing associations in his computation of the five per cent upon the receipts of the associations.

Wanted to Be a Nun.

CITY OF MEXICO, April 10.—There is considerable excitement among the Roman Catholics at this city over the alleged action of the government authorities in forcibly detaining Miss Jesus Topes, a young lady, and daughter of a prominent merchant who left here last Tuesday for Lafayette, La., where she was to enter a convent as a nun. The reform laws of Mexico prohibit convents, and no woman is allowed to take the veil. She had gotten over 900 miles north of this city when the train was boarded by a police officer, who took the lady off and accompanied her back to this city. The authorities here claim that the brothers of the young lady were opposed to her entering a convent and ordered her detention. The Roman Catholics claim that the arrest was made upon orders of the government.

The Photographs Are Necessary.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 10.—[illegible] It will be a difficult matter to secure a complete identification. The importance of this identification will be felt later, when certificates are transferred to Chinese who have been smuggled into this country. The change, however, will relieve us of considerable labor."

Tailors Ready to Strike.

NEW YORK, April 10.—The mass meeting and concert under the auspices of the Garment Workers' Trade Council of New York, held in the Thalia theater to demand the enforcement of the recent laws against the sweating system and to protest against the interference of the courts with the rights of labor organizations, was well attended. The United Brotherhood say that if there has been no settlement with the cutters they would have had a strike in two weeks' time on their own account, and when they do go out they intend to demand 10 hours' work and the abolishment of the tenement house work or sweating system.

Food Will Be High In Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 10.—The highest prices now asked for rooms in Chicago may be further advanced if the present prospects of the big provisions deal is realized. Produce dealers assert that everything they handle will be marked up from 20 to 100 per cent, and some of them have been so bold as to assert that eggs will reach $1 per dozen. Staples have advanced all of 10 per cent and many of them more than that. Potatoes, flour, cabbage, meats, etc., are going up daily.

Raising Home Rule Funds.

JERSEY CITY, April 10.—A meeting to raise funds in aid of Irish home rule was held at the Academy of Music. Speeches were made by Mayor Orestes Cleveland, Judge James Fitzgerald of New York and others. The subscriptions amounted to $1,200.

Bishop Wigger Laid the Cornerstone.

ORANGE, N. J., April 10.—The cornerstone of the new St. John's parochial school building in Orange was laid with an imposing ceremonial by the Right Rev. W. M. Wigger, bishop of Newark.

The Fight For Eight Hours.

MINNEAPOLIS, April 10.—Mayor Eustis has vetoed the bill passed by the council making eight hours a day's work for men employed by the city. An effort will be made to pass it over the veto.

Populists In Massachusetts.

LYNN, Mass., April 10.—The People's party will hold their first rally in Saugus this evening. Ex-Governor Rice and Cary, candidate for congress, will speak.

Sheehan Will Visit Europe.

ALBANY, April 10.—Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Sheehan will take a European trip after the final adjournment of the legislature, returning in time to visit the World's fair in early June.

A Victory, Say the Engineers.

MACON, Ga., April 10.—The decision of Judge Speer in the case of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is regarded by the Brotherhood as a signal victory for that organization.

Killed His Divorced Wife.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., April 10.—Andrew Campbell shot and killed his divorced wife and then took his own life. They had been living in the same house.

SESSION ALMOST OVER.

A Few Patronage Plums as Yet Left Unplucked.

CHINESE ARE NOT REGISTERING.

What Will Be Done With the Thousands of Them Who Refuse?—The President Spends a Quiet Day and Takes a Drive "Cornered" Murphy's Banquet.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The final adjournment of this special session of the senate seems near at hand. Many senators are of opinion that the session will close by Thursday of this week. The senate is now waiting notification from the president that he has no further need of its services in confirming nominations. When that notification will be received is unknown, but is expected at most any day.

The fact has become well known that aside from confirming nominations it is not intended to take any action of importance at this session. Already a large number of senators have left the city and it is hard work to muster a quorum each day. The question of organization has been settled by the election of the Democratic candidates under a resolution that they are not to take their offices until the next session of congress, which is expected to be called the latter part of September.

The president has filled a large part of his important offices and there are not many places now remaining to which it is essential he should nominate and the senate confirm nominees before final adjournment. Perhaps the most important he should fill prior to dismissing the senate are the judgeships of the newly created court of appeals of the District of Columbia. The offices are fifty-three, with an annual salary of $6,000 each attaching and $500 extra to the chief justice.

It is important that the president should make these judgeship nominations very soon as the court should organize at once under the law.

Among the important foreign missions which are yet unfilled are those to Russia, Italy, Turkey, China, Persia, Brazil, Hawaii, Hayti, the Netherlands and the Argentine Republic. Minister Phelps may be permitted to remain as our representative to the flowery kingdom, he having been appointed by President Cleveland originally, and retained through the Harrison administration owing to the refusal of China to receive Henry W. Blair as minister.

The Chinese Exclusion Question.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—There is considerable work ahead for the treasury department if it intends to enforce to the letter the Geary Chinese exclusion act, which provides for the deportation of those Chinese laborers now here who fail to register and show their right to be in the United States within one year from the passage of the act. May 5 is the last day.

Chinamen are slow to avail themselves of the opportunity, and the latest advices received at the treasury department, that not more than a few thousand of the hundred or more thousand believed to be in [illegible] is entered until the case that is to be brought in a New York court to test the constitutionality of the act is decided.

The President's Outing a Quiet One.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 10.—President Cleveland, Secretary of State Gresham and Senator White of Louisiana spent Sunday quietly at Senator Gray's place—the home of Ambassador to the Court of St. James Thomas F. Bayard—in this city. The distinguished visitors remained indoors until 5 p. m., when they took a long drive in the Bayard drag along the banks of the Brandywine and through the residence part of the city. During the drive Mr. Bayard pointed out to the president the old Bayard mansion, the residence of Senator Gray and the new federal building now in course of construction. The party returned to Delaware Lodge at 6 o'clock and did not venture forth again.

There were no callers either Saturday or Sunday at the Gray residence, although a number of people gathered in front of the house eager to catch a glimpse of the president. Mr. Bayard gave his friends to understand in Philadelphia that he was here simply for the purpose of having a quiet day free from interruption, and the president was not compelled to receive visitors.

Dunes Eat American Corn.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Secretary Morton has received a communication from Charles J. Murphy, the department of agriculture's agent in Europe, concerning the bill of fare of the recent American mains banquet given at Copenhagen.

The bill of fare is headed by the motto "Economy in food is the wealth of nations," and bears the eagle and the flags of the United States and of Denmark in colors. Corn was served at the banquet in half a dozen or more styles, and with accompaniments of oysters and roast turkey. California raisins and California wines no doubt impressed the Danish guests with some untamed ideas as to American food products.

Shot In the Face.

BATAVIA, N. Y., April 10.—At the village of Corfu, about 10 miles west of Batavia, Mrs. Miranda F. Fleming was shot at close range three times in the face. Clinton Mattison, aged 18, son of a wealthy Corfu farmer, was arrested. He denies the shooting, but the woman is positive in her statement that he is the man. It is stated that some time since Mrs. Flanders lost a pocketbook containing considerable money, and upon her accusing him of the theft the shooting occurred. The woman will die.

Postmaster Field Resigns.

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—Postmaster John Field has sent his resignation to President Cleveland. Although the postmaster did not fix any definite day as to when the resignation should take effect, it was a final decision, the convenience of the government only being considered in the matter. Mr. Field declines to make any statement in regard to the matter until the executive has had an opportunity to act upon it.

Female Bicyclists at the Fair.

CHICAGO, April 10.—James Murphy, well known in the sporting fraternity, announces that he will manage a women's bicycle contest, beginning April 27, to continue six days. The cyclers will wheel eight hours a day, and the one who runs the greatest number of miles will receive several hundred dollars.

Both Had Eczema
In Its Worst Form

After Physicians Failed, Hood's Sarsaparilla Perfectly Cured.

Great mental agony is endured by parents who see their children suffering from diseases caused by impure blood, and for which there seems no cure. This is turned to joy when Hood's Sarsaparilla is resorted to, for it expels the foul humors from the blood, and restores the diseased skin to fresh, healthy brightness. Read the following from grateful parents:

"To C. I. H. & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most valuable medicine on the market for blood and skin diseases. Our two children suffered terribly with the

ASTORS ESCAPE DEATH.

Almost Burned Up While at Their Country House.

MILLIONAIRES AS FIRE FIGHTERS.

Villages In Ohio Surrounded by Fire and Only Saved From Destruction by a Timely Rain — Boy Burned While Asleep. Death and Destruction by Fire.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 10.—It has just developed that Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor narrowly escaped death by fire at their palatial country residence, just north of Rhinecliff. On Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Astor left New York for their country home. The house had not yet been opened for the summer, and prior to the arrival of the Astors there was no one about the place but the old woman who officiates as housekeeper and her two children. The famous millionaire and his wife arrived quite unexpectedly, and the old housekeeper hurriedly placed in order their apartments and lighted a roaring wood fire in an old grate in the bedroom Mr. and Mrs. Astor were to occupy. Mr. and Mrs. Astor retired, unconscious of impending danger.

About 4 o'clock the next morning they were both awakened by a feeling of suffocation, and Mr. Astor leaped out of bed only to discover that the room was filled with smoke. He at once raised the cry of fire and alarmed the housekeeper, who promptly sent her two little boys in search of help.

Meanwhile both Mr. and Mrs. Astor secured buckets of water and flooded the floor, through the cracks of which smoke was pouring in dense clouds. No fire was visible, but it did not take half an eye to see that an extensive conflagration was raging among the beams beneath the fireplace.

Despite the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Astor the flames gained on them, and they were about to seek safety in flight when a dozen men, who had been summoned by the little boys, opportunely arrived. Mr. Astor promptly organized them into a fire brigade, and under his direction the men chopped a hole in the floor and found the beams on fire for 16 feet in the vicinity of the fireplace. The impromptu fire brigade soon had the flames under control and finally subdued them. The beams had caught from the overheated stone on the bottom of the fireplace.

Mr. Astor was so well pleased with the prompt response of his neighbors that he presented the leader of the men with $100 and gave $50 to each of the other 11 men. The loss on the house was very small, but Mrs. Astor has been confined to her room ever since as a result of the smoke and excitement. Mr. and Mrs. Astor both believe that they had a very narrow escape from suffocation.

Villages Saved by Rain.

PORTSMOUTH, O., April 10.—The residents of Nauvoo, Union Mills and Friendship, of this county, lifted up prayers of thankfulness when a heavy April rain began to fall. For the past two weeks a very strong and dangerous forest fire has prevailed west of the Scioto river.

The fire originated in the Washington township lumber region Monday, and has been gradually spreading. The path rendered desolate by the fire is 16 miles long by 4 miles wide, and over $50,000 of ties, hoops, poles, tanbark, cordwood and sawed timber has been burned. At one time the hamlets of Union Mills and Friendship were surrounded by fire, but Saturday night's rain saved them.

Burned While He Slept.

BALTIMORE, April 10.—In the destruction by fire of the Baltimore and Lehigh railroad freight depot, George McGreevy, aged 18 years, was burned to death. McGreevy had just arrived in this city. He came with a letter of introduction to Mr. S. Watkins, the night telegraph operator at the depot, and was lying on the lounge in the telegraph office when the fire was discovered by Mr. Watkins and Mr. Hooper, the night freight agent. The men called to the boy to follow them as they ran to the windows to escape. After the fire had burned itself out the charred body of the boy was found on the remains of the lounge.

Caused by a Cigarette.

ST. LOUIS, April 10.—Fire burned about two-thirds of the fair ground stables, causing a loss of $50,000. Over 400 horses were gotten out in safety, but one valued at $1,000 was burned to death. The blaze was started by a lighted cigarette carelessly dropped by a stable boy.

Burned Before Her Son's Eyes.

WALLACE, Neb., April 10.—During a heavy windstorm a fire was started north of the town, sweeping everything in its path. Mrs. C. Ogirs was caught by the fire and burned to death. Her sons tried to rescue her and were badly burned, but will recover.

A Vast Sea of Flames.

VANCEBURG, Ky., April 10.—Fires in the forests in Lewis county broke out several days ago and the winds have spread them over the whole county. From Clarksville to Sugar Loaf mountain the whole country was one vast sea of flames.

The Longest Block Burned.

WATERBURY, Conn., April 10.—Fire gutted the Lilly block, the longest business block in the city. The loss is $150,000.

Heard From Boston to Chicago.

BOSTON, April 10.—Representatives of the Boston papers gathered at the general offices of the Postal Telegraph-Cable company to hear Mrs. Albert Barker, the English reader, recite to an audience of newspaper people in Chicago through a long distance telephone. Mrs. Barker rendered a short programme.

Miss Mitchell's Rival Arrives.

PORTLAND, Or., April 10.—Miss Edith Day returned to Portland over the Southern Pacific having completed her 10,000 mile railroad journey through the United States and Mexico in 17 days and 14½ hours. Miss Mitchell traveled in the opposite direction.

Burned In Jail.

STANBERRY, Mo., April 10.—Lon Stiles and Lee Newman were burned to death in the county jail. It is supposed they set fire to the jail in hope of making their escape. The jail, which was entirely destroyed, contained no other prisoners.

Shot Himself Before a Mirror.

BROOKLYN, April 10.—William C. Robbins, 44 years old, an insurance agent, who lived in Flatbush, committed suicide by shooting at the Clarendon hotel. He stood before a mirror that he might take true aim.

THAT BIG SYNDICATE.

Many Rumors About a Steel and Iron Plant to Rival Carnegies.

PITTSBURG, April 10.—The latest publication of the rumored organization of a steel and iron syndicate, with a capital stock of from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000, to rival in magnitude the combined Carnegie interests, cannot be traced to an authentic source in Pittsburg. Similar reports have appeared recently in local papers, but the most careful investigations fail to develop satisfactory results. There are very few business men of this city who give the story credence.

Those who have been named in connection with the rumors either cannot or will not furnish the desired information.

The latest reports in this connection are that James Harvey, the inventor of the famous nickel steel and the Harveyized steel from which armor plate is made, is the projector of the syndicate. The Carnegies use Mr. Harvey's process, paying the inventor a royalty on the production. It is said that Mr. Harvey has become dissatisfied with this arrangement, as he had expected to be taken into partnership with the Carnegie firm. Disappointed in this, he determined upon the organization of a syndicate that will have the exclusive use of his valuable process.

Miss Mitchell Ahead of Time.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Miss Ross Mitchell who has traveled around the country in three weeks, has set her foot upon ground again. She left the city on a wager that she could travel 10,000 miles without leaving the railroad car and she succeeded in accomplishing the feat. She arrived here 12 hours ahead of time. She was weary of riding, but had enjoyed the adventure thoroughly. The trip was without special incident. Miss Mitchell promises not to write a book.

Will Fence In the Lake.

CHICAGO, April 10.—According to a morning paper the Illinois Central road is preparing to fence in the entire lake shore north of the World's fair grounds and charge people for the right to stand on the beach. The road is preparing to adopt the elevated road system of carrying passengers, and says that as it proposes to run this country lifted up prayers of thankfulness when a heavy April rain began to fall. For the past two weeks a very strong and dangerous forest fire has prevailed west of the Scioto river.

The fire originated in the Washington township lumber region Monday, and has been gradually spreading. The path rendered desolate by the fire is 16 miles long by 4 miles wide, and over $50,000 of ties, hoops, poles, tanbark, cordwood and sawed timber has been burned. At one time the hamlets of Union Mills and Friendship were surrounded by fire, but Saturday night's rain saved them.

No May Day Demonstration.

NEW YORK, April 10.—A committee representing the Central Labor union and the Central Labor federation appeared at the Grand Central station this afternoon for the C. L. U. to join with the socialists in an 8-hour demonstration on May 1. A delegate reported that the C. L. U. have no May demonstration this year. This was vetoed with such a shout that the committee of socialists retired in a hurry.

Smart Boots—New and Dainty Evening Shoes and a Fine Line for Carrying Them.

Shoes, though a much neglected item, are a particularly important one in a woman's dress. There is a second deal of character in a pair of boots to They are to not to extent an index to the mind of the wearer. To see a woman appropriately and carefully shod seems to indicate a proper self respect and a certain decision of character. A well booted woman generally walks well, or at any rate fairly well, for to walk absolutely well is a rare accomplishment. But there is no disguise about the ungainly shamble of the woman in loose, ill shaped boots or shoes.

The straight toe cap is very smart for day wear, and the prettiest boots are in patent leather, with glace kid tops. Taste in evening shoes is less unlimited than a season or two ago, when gold and silver kid, tinsel, gorgeous brocades and antique paste ornaments were the fashion. Satin and glace are the materials principally used, the ornaments usually consisting of neat bows or small steel ornaments. One of the daintiest shoes brought out for evening is that in the sketch, ornamented with a pansy. It is of satin. The shoe exactly opposite—open in front to show the instep—is of glace kid, with cut steel shaped bands studded with jet cabochons and an elaborately embroidered toe.

Pretty bedroom slippers are of felt or velvet, with warm flannel linings and trimmings of soft, dark fur. Unlike ordinary slippers, they have a moderate heel and rather smart toe.

An effective evening shoe, which admirably fulfills the requirements of a dress shoe, is that in the sketch, which is entirely different from the usual run of evening shoes. It catches the light, is of glace kid studded all over with tiny cut steel points and is finished with a bow and buckle of the same kid. A capital receptacle for carrying shoes is the bag shown in the middle illustration. It is made of white brilliantine, with a drawing string at the top, and is lined with a bright color. Into it the shoes are slipped when the wearer goes to the ball, and it is then hung on the peg in the dressing room.

Second Coat Upon the Waters.

MILWAUKEE, April 10.—A. J. Eisenmann has been informed that he is the sole heir to an estate of $17,000 or more, left by F. A. Walter, who recently died in Houston, Tex. Mr. Eisenmann finally recollected Mr. Walter as an old Chicago friend whom he had befriended in the summer of 1870 by a loan of $10 with which to buy a ticket to St. Louis, where Walter had the promise of a job.

Russians Will Lose.

FORT MONROE, April 10.—The Russian officers of the General Admiral have been the lions of the day, both socially and officially. Besides being the first foreigners to whom American hospitality has been extended, they now have a prior claim to the right of the line, and their arrival just at this time has solved the problem as to which nation would lead the great review in New York harbor.

Boiler Makers Want Nine Hours.

BOSTON, April 10.—Seven hundred and fifty boiler makers and iron shipbuilders agreed to strike this morning. This is the beginning of what promises to be a long and stubborn fight in this industry. The strike will effect several large contracts on hand, notably at the Atlantic works, East Boston, on the United States cruiser Marblehead and at Harrison's great works, South Boston.

NEW RACE OF WOMEN.

THE CHANGE THAT HAS COME OVER SOCIAL CONDITIONS.

How Modern Education and Exigencies Have Affected the Relative Positions of the Sexes in the Matter of Finances. Business Women.

It was a famous saying of Lord Brougham—though attributed by him to somebody else unknown—that it was the whole end of life, taken in its most common, and of the whole machinery of the state, to bring 12 good men together in a jury box. In a similar way it was once said by an experienced American lawyer that the most important result of all the great recent changes in the position of women—new laws, new education, new professions—would be found in the creation of a race of business women, who would look after their own money matters, instead of trusting them utterly to men. It is inevitable that this result must in some degree follow. A race of women brought up to read, write and cipher, to keep books and send business letters, to study constitutional law and political economy, to sit on school committees and charity boards, to manage tenement houses and prisons, to practice law and medicine and make their own wills, cannot possibly remain in that state of pupilage which was once the only natural condition of their sex.

Whether it is pretty or otherwise, graceful or otherwise, a race of business women is upon us. For observe that it is not needful that each individual woman should do all these things in person, or indeed any of them; the most secluded woman still feels the effect of the general change, just as the disturbance of the natural waters of a lake finds its way at last, though infinitesimally, into the remotest nook. The social alteration is in the air, in the newspapers, in the whole habit of life. A prominent philanthropist in a city of 100,000 inhabitants once called my attention to the fact and proved it by comparison of documents that whereas 40 years before all the leading charitable associations of that city had men alone for their officers they were now chiefly carried on by women, even the office of treasurer being now in feminine hands.

And certainly the change has come none too soon. It is painful to think how large a part of the impoverishment of women once comfortably established has come not from avowed enemies, but from these on whom they had most reason to depend. Fathers, brothers, husbands, guardians, trustees, have often been the very source and origin of their woes. Trusted with too implicit confidence, able to secure the signing of any conceivable document without comprehension by the signer, these men have been exposed to a temptation too great to resist in times of financial pressure or of promising speculation. With the best intentions at the outset, they have trusted trust matters as it were their own. If all went well, the object of the trust might be benefited: if otherwise, she might be ruined.

Cases have been known where men of the noblest character, philanthropists of the highest aims, and withal trained lawyers, have been found at death never to have made any distinction whatever between trust funds and their own estate, so that it was with the greatest difficulty that the trust funds had been replaced by the executors, while all the time their wives have been left penniless. The more prosperous such people outwardly are, the greater this danger. The merchant's wife usually knows what her husband's wages are and what it costs per week to feed her children. Unless the husband drinks to excess, she knows just where she stands.

The farmer's wife knows her rights in the homestead and is aware that the real estate cannot be legally sold without her signature. But where property is once invested in the great perpetual world of stocks and bonds and mortages the woman of the past was powerless, and even the woman of the present is only beginning to comprehend. But she has got to comprehend it, for the whole tendency of the age is driving her that way.

It is common to say that she is constitutionally incapable of understanding such matters. That is always the easiest solution when one is not willing to take the trouble to teach or to learn. But this is not said of women alone. It is equally said of other classes not expressly trained to business—of clergymen, physicians, authors, army officers, naval officers, and in all these cases it is very often true.

In how many households it is the wife, not the husband, the sister, not the brother, who supplies the clear head, the prompt decision, the efficient action! Heretofore this has been less manifest because, as has been said, the women had not even elementary business training and were therefore at disadvantage even when better endowed by nature. Now we are changing all that.

And it must, moreover, be remembered that there are whole departments of business action where the qualities that are confessedly feminine are pre-eminent. For instance, judgment of character—are concerned. I once heard an eminent lawyer, now in the United States senate, argue in favor of putting women on juries on the ground that the opinion they would form of a witness would be more accurate three times out of four than that of the men who sat by their side. They would follow by instinct that admirable rule laid down by James Freeman Clarke—that it is not enough to judge people by their actions. We must also judge actions by their people. And beyond this merely personal insight there is often a ready application of principles among women where the minds of their husbands move more slowly.

The mere fact of a consultation, the mere necessity of discussion and comparison of notes, makes a man safer and more prudent in the most complex business matters if he habitually consults his wife. And what man, knowing the uncertainties of his own life, would not prefer that she whom he leaves in charge of his children should be a confessed woman?—Thomas Wentworth Higginson in Harper's Bazar.

Bureau Covers.

A model bureau has the bottom of each drawer lined with a cheese cloth or silkenpad tied with tiny bows. Another pad, frigrantly sacheted in satin or watered silk, pink, blue or delicate green, is edged with silver cord for the top of the drawer. Over this is spread an overlay of delicate linen lawn embroidered about the edge in dainty spin stitch and garnished with tiny French baskets worked in yellow silk, filled with blue and pink flowers and tender green leaves.

Another design from Watteau is the very little basket his gay shepherdess swings on her rounded arm. The cushion has Cupids and garlands on another bit of linen lawn edged with lace, and is finished with silver cord and gayest satin bows at each of the four corners, achieter with a rhinestone buckle in each bow. The elaborate cushion is mounted out of obscurity on a silver easel, to be purchased at a picture store for 20 cents.—Housewife.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A Tender Hearted Mastiff.

The mastiff in this picture, children, is a perfect terror, I have been told, to all tramps, cats and fowl, but he has a kindly heart, as the following will show:

Some time ago a fowl belonging to the dog's master by some mischance broke a leg, and after it had been carefully bandaged by its owner the bird was allowed to go about the yard again. Immediately it hobbled up to the mastiff, ignoring the fact that he had a special fondness for poultry as food, and instead of pouncing upon the bird and taking its life away the dog showed its utmost sympathetic nature and anxiety to befriend the crippled bird, and in dog language invited it into his kennel. The dog and fowl fast friends, and it was quite a common sight to see the mastiff walking about with his winged companion perched upon his back after the fractured leg had been entirely healed.—Christian at Work.

Dutch Boys and Their Wooden Shoes.

There are many kinds of wooden shoes worn by the peasants in Europe, but none are more clumsy and heavy than the "klompens" of the Hollanders. They are boat shaped, with high wooden projections to the heels and a curious little upward twist to the toes, like the prow of a Chinese junk. But heavy and awkward as the shoes are, the Dutch children run about as lightly as if they were shod in Cinderella's glass slippers, and do not seem to object in the least to the clicking sound made by the shoes on the pavement. One of the most extraordinary sights in the world is a line of Dutch children at school, all playing lapping in their great, noisy wooden klompens.

Having formed a row of "frogs" from one end of their village to the other, the boys begin to jump in the usual agile way of the players of the lively game. As soon as the line is in motion, a most tremendous sound startles the village. The oldest inhabitant can hardly "hear himself think," but he knows that the noise is not thunder—it is only the rattle of the boys' wooden shoes as they strike the hard brick paved street.—Harper's Young People.

A Story of a Cat.

A good cat story comes from Bombay. In August a Liverpool resident proceeding to Bombay took out with him a cat, which he intended to present to a friend in India. Some days after the arrival of the steamer in Bombay pussy was missed, and though she was searched for high and low she was nowhere to be found. Her owner had quite given her up for lost, when he received intelligence from England that the cat had made her appearance at her old Liverpool home on Oct. 26 in calm and collected as though a trip to India and back was quite in the ordinary course of her life. The facts are vouched for, and there is no reason to doubt their substantial accuracy, but it is not made clear whether the cat was not stowed away in the steamer in which she returned to India and carried back to the ordinary course. Under any circumstances her adventures are, however, sufficiently remarkable to deserve recording.—York shire (England) Press.

Lazy's Suggestion.

Uncle William was talking with Lazy his little niece, about a present. He wished to know her mind upon a certain highly interesting subject, but preferred to get as it indirectly.

"Now, Lazy," said he, in a casual manner, "if I were going to buy a doll for a little girl, what kind of a one do you think she would like?"

"Oh, Uncle William, answered Lazy, with undisguised interest, "there is nothing like twine!"—London Tit-Bits.

Warranted Against Breakage.

Clara was perched upon the fencepost, swinging her chubby legs and singing at the top of her childish lungs.

"Be careful, Clara," said I as I passed by. "you might fall and break your bones. I'm afraid you'll get hurt."

"Oh, don't be afraid," she answered reassuringly; "I did fall down yesterday all ready, and I never even cracked."—Kate Field's Washington.

Just the Time.

Wee Daughter—Mamma, may I have a party?

Mamma—There isn't room in this house for all the little girls you know.

Wee Daughter—That's why I think this would be a good time to have it. I'm most at 'bout half of 'em.—Good News.

When Lilian's Hair Is Combed.

Lilian's head is a perfect glory of golden brown curls, and it is the wonder of her little mates how she ever has it combed. Lucy asked her one day with great awe-struck eyes, the manma combed it, and she answered, "Yes, I cry every day, but not on Sunday."—Youth's Companion.

The King's Pool.

The fool kept by the king
Was quite a stupid boy,
Although he had his share of wit
His majesty would swear.
"There's nothing in his cocoa-nut,"
Said he, "to make a man mirth,
But still I have to laugh
To get my money's worth."

Amusement in Spools.

I have a large collection of empty spools, which I have painted in all bright colors. With them I build houses, bridges and many other designs. I also make guns of wood through the holes in the spools, I contrive little wagons.—Cor New York Recorder.

Mrs. Drexel's Dagmar Cross.

The Dagmar cross is now owned by Mrs. Joseph Drexel of New York. It is a very beautiful cross in enamel, about 1¼ inches in length and an inch in width, being a facsimile of the original, which is preserved in the old Northern museum at Copenhagen. Its workmanship dates back to the beginning of the thirteenth century, and it was found in the grave of Princess Dagmar at Ringsted in 1695. Being hollow, it is supposed to contain precious relics. Duplicates of this cross were made by Ball, Tompion Mackenzie, a jeweler of this city, and for the Princess Alexandra of Denmark, for a wedding present on her marriage to the Prince of Wales. The principal cross is attached to a necklace of 118 pearls and 2,000 brilliant and rose diamonds.

The court jeweler, Crisensen, in Copenhagen made the facsimile cross for Dr. Mackenzie, a copy that is said to be scarcely distinguishable from the original. The face of the tiny cross is what is known as a Byzantine cross—that is, at each corner is a rounded disk instead of the bar end. These medallions, for such they make in goldsmith's work, although very small in a stone cross, are the field in the Dagmar cross for lovely enamel figures of Christ, the Virgin, St. John the Baptist, St. Basil and St. John Chrysostom.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The American Type of Women.

Within two generations an infusion of blood from two European races—the Irish first and the Germans afterward—has diluted the American stock. This has it altered the stature, girth, weight, frame, color and physical type of the American of today?

We have in this country several well defined types of women. We have the New England and New York woman, middle height, slender, graceful, rather inclined to wiriness; the woman of the middle states, plumper and somewhat heavier, with a lymphatic tendency; the woman of the southern states, inclined to an equipoise, a combination of the sanguineous and lymphatic temperaments; the woman of the valley, tall, thin, black eyed, with yellow complexion and a high voice, and finally the woman of California, with her opulent form, her erect carriage and her dreamy eyes. All these types must have sprung from the same stock, more or less, and yet see how different they are! Can it be supposed that the variations between them are due to climate and conditions of life only? That these factors are potent will be denied by no one.—San Francisco Call.

A Fancy Apron.

A unique apron is made of ser ies with white medallions, 4½ inches in diameter, scattered at regular intervals over it; materials required, 1¾ yards of swiss, 18 spools of orange embroidery silk, which is only 10 cents a dozen; 2 yards orange color moire ribbon for ties. A hem 6 inches in depth finishes the bottom; the top is folded over deep enough to form a wide sash at the waist, the apron is ready to commence with the embroidery silk. After it is made there are 11 rows, and 12 medallions in each row. Knot the silk and draw the needle through from the wrong side, at the edge of a medallion; then bring the silk across on the opposite side, dividing it in halves, then in quarters, then divide each quarter once. Now the medallion is divided into eighths and is called a daisy. Now proceed with the others until all are made into daisies. The material should be nearly a yard in width.—Table Talk.

Keep on Blowing.

A young lady organist in a church in Colorado was much perplexed and vexed with the young pastor of a church in the next street and was delighted to hear one week that he was going out of town to preach the next Sunday in her own church.

The organ was pumped by an obstreperous old sexton, who would often stop when he thought the organ voluntary had lasted long enough.

This day the organist was anxious that all should go well, and as the service was about to begin she wrote a note intended solely for the sexton's eye.

He took it, and in spite of her agonized beckonings carried it straight to the preacher. What was that gentleman's astonishment when he read:

Oblige me this morning by blowing away till I give you a signal to stop. MISS ALLEN.

Very Expressive.

A New York mercantile house held an unsettled claim of long standing against a "lame duck" out west, and hearing he was becoming "well to do" sent their claim on to a western lawyer to collect. In due time they received a reply, which effectually laid any hope they might have entertained of receiving their money. It ran in this wise: "Gents—I can will never get any spondulicks from Bill Johnson. The boy designed called upon him yesterday and found him with nary tile, his feet upon the table, and his pockets chuck enough on him to wad a gun!" We call that an expressive simile.—Exchange.

What He Craved.

The editor of The Scotsman recently received the following letter, which the writer desired to be handed to any bookseller in the town: "Sir—I want a nice touching book—a book that will tell me how to talk to the lass that I love, a book that will tell me the words to say to her and the words to ask her when I be courting her, in the sort of book that I want, no matter how few or how little the words may be."

Pleased Her.

Young Author (engaging board)—You have several literary men boarding here, I believe.

Mrs. Silmdiet—Yes, quite a number. I like literary men.

"I am delighted to hear it."

"Yes, you see, literary men never kick when I demand cash in advance. They are used to it."—New York Weekly.

—Mr. H. N. Spencer, 26 and 28 Somerset street, calls attention in another column to his full assortment of field and garden seeds and seed potatoes.

—The Lyceum Wheelmen met last night in the club house. The question of mile was to be decided, but the matter was deferred until next Monday night.

—Mr. Peter E. See has sold his grocery business to Mr. William Van Winkle and son. Mr. Van Winkle's son, William D., has been in the employ of Mr. See for about eight years.

—The old St. Mary's rectory, on Manning avenue, was broken into early yesterday morning, with the intention of robbery. The would-be burglars were frightened off before securing any booty.

—There was no game at the Park Club last night. A telegram was received from the manager of the Rossvilles stating that he was unable to bring his team to Plainfield last night. The date for the game will be arranged later.

—On Friday afternoon the case of Peter V. Husted vs. Frank Sohl will be tried before Justice Hedges. The suit is about 7,000 bricks. Mr. Wm. M. Stillman is counsel for the plaintiff and Mr. H. C. Runyon will appear for the defendant.

—The Bound Brook Chronicle celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary last week by coming out with 16 pages. On April 8, 1868, 25 years ago Saturday, at White House station, Hunterdon county, the first number of The Family Casket was issued by Andrew Jackson Shampanore. After an existence of some ten years at White House station, Mr. Shampanore removed the paper to Bound Brook, and soon changed its name to that of The Chronicle. Nine years ago he sold the establishment to its present owner, Mr. W. B. B. Mason, whose integrity and high moral ideas have placed it on a level with the best journals of today. It was in the Casket that the first articles from the pen of Editor A. V. D. Honeyman of North Plainfield, appeared.

TO HOLD ANOTHER "STAG."

The Matter Left in the Hands of the "Patriarch."

The Plainfield Bicycle Club held their regular monthly meeting last night, in the club house, on Sycamore street.

Among the other business transacted was the election of Frank Randolph to membership.

The club decided to hold a "stag" party, for members only, at the club house, Saturday night. The club's "patriarch," Mr. T. S. Barr, will have charge of the affair, and this fact alone bespeaks for it a success.

Eleventh Series to be Opened.

The sixth annual meeting of the Home Building and Loan Association of Plainfield will be held at 12 East Front street on Monday, evening April 17th, for the election of officers; four directors for three years and one director for one year and auditors. Polls will be open from 7.30 to nine o'clock. Action will be taken on Amendment to Art. XIII of Constitution of which notice was given at the last regular meeting of the Board of Management.

The eleventh series will be opened for subscription. Entrance fee 25 cents per share, dues $1. per month, per share.

Head Pin Tournament.

The head pin tournament of the Crescent League is getting interesting and *the excitement will increase as the tour*nament proceeds. Last night's games resulted as follows:

BILLIARD AND POOL TOURNAMENTS.

Arranged by the Park Club Members. —Entries Close Saturday Night.

Entries will close Saturday night for the billiard and pool tournaments at the Park Club. These will be the third tournaments of the year.

The following gentlemen have entered the billiard tournament: Messrs. Van Deventer, Underwood, Page, Scott, Lyman, Brooks, Long, McCutcheon, Alexander, Roome, Hinrichs, Thomas, Rogers, Sandford, Theirs, Erickson and Townsend..

For the pool tournament the following have entered: Messrs. Lyman, Hinrichs, Reed, Sandford, Long, McCutcheon, Theirs, Douglass and Thomas.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Clarence Mundy of Ninth street has recovered from an attack of the grip.

Mrs. Benjamin Fawcett, of Central avenue will start to-morrow for Switzerland, to visit relatives there.

Mrs. Maria Angelina Benjamin died yesterday afternoon at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. C. J. Feytel of West Front street. Funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon, at three o'clock.

The Hon. Mr. Richards, of Ohio, who came to Plainfield to attend the funeral of Mrs. Margaret Britten, his mother, which occurred yesterday afternoon, left on the 1.17 a. m. train this morning for Washington.

The usual good time was had at the Boys' Club last night. Among those taking part were Rev. Mr. Charles Herring, Mr. Vegiard, President W. B. Wadsworth, and Mr. D. O. Tiffany. Superintendent Bond read a story written by a member of the club.

The funeral of George Ingraham Seney formerly of Bernardsville, took place yesterday from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. John W. Simpson, 34 West Twentieth street, New York. The Rev. Richard S. Storrs of the Church of the Pilgrim, Brooklyn, assisted by the Rev. J. D. Buckley, officiated. The choir of St. Bartholomew's church sang. The Episcopal burial service was read at the house.

The family of the late John E. Yose are in a sore affliction. Saturday night the daughter Maggie was taken sick with diphtheria, and Sunday night the mother was also stricken with the same disease. They had no one to nurse them at first, but through the efforts of the members of Gazelle Engine Company, and the Board of Health, a woman was procured as nurse. It being a contagious disease it was hard to find anyone willing to run the risk. The firemen are seeing that everything that can be done for the sufferers is done. A little baby is also sick. They are reported to-day as much improved. Dr. Fritts is attending them. Mr. Yose was buried but a few days ago.

Some of the Successful Ones.

Some of the persons who were fortunate enough to win in the contests at the fair of St. Joseph's church, at Saengerbund Hall, last week, and their prizes are as follows:

Parlor suite, Mrs. Mahoney; watch, Miss Katie Cullen; diamond ring, Miss Mamie Walsh; portrait of Father Cushing, Mr. I. Jacoway of Jersey City; saddle and bridle, Mr. Chas. Smith. The Chinese tea set was won by some one from Raritan.

The proceeds of the fair are said to be between $1,500 and $1,800.

Music Hall Notes.

The manager of Music Hall says, "Fun lovers will enjoy going to Music Hall, Thursday, April 13th, to see 'U and I.' This is a farce comedy of the first water. Any one who goes to see 'U and I' under the impression that they are about to witness a tragedy never stepped up to a greater mistake."

Mr. Smalley's Horse.

The horse which was caught on Fourth street and taken to Hedden's livery stable yesterday, as stated in the News, has been claimed by its owner, Mr. Samuel Smalley. It was one of a team that ran away on Liberty street. Mr. Smalley was thrown from the wagon but not seriously injured.

Warden Lynch Steps Down and Out.

Warden Patrick Lynch of the city jail has "stepped down and out," and removed with his family to his own house on West Second street. Policeman Kiely will now take up the duties of warden and moved in the jail building to-day.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To Lose an Able and Conscientious Worker.

To the Editor of The News:—The parishioners of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's will regret to learn that Father Cushing has received a call to another field. Some say it may be to be parish priest at Dunellen. But the writer being in a position to know is pretty good and reliable authority that this is it—surprising priest will soon start for Washington, D. C., to study in the Catholic university for a short time, preparatory to his taking charge as assistant bishop of the diocese of Denver, Colorado, being elected as such by a Bull of Pope Leo XIII., last December. It being the second time the supreme pontiff called him to the charge of so heavy a responsibility. He has the heartfelt good wishes of both the rich and poor alike, but the latter were his chief delight to be among to console and advise them in all their trials and troubles, and may God speed our beloved Soggarth Aroon. Resident.

The Trolley Extension.

The work of laying the street railway track on Somerset street to the mountain was begun to-day, beginning at Johnston's drive.

It is expected to have the work completed within a month, if the company is not prevented by injunctions, some more of which are talked of.

There are but six inches of macadam on the Somerset street bridge, and to put on the tracks it will be necessarry to fill in on each side, and thus proportionately lower the sidewalk, already too low.

The track, some claim, is not what was promised.

The claim given is that the style is not made now. No doubt the real reason is that it costs a little more. Injunctions are talked of on this account also.

At Somerset and Front streets there is to be a switch, a fourth street car passing to the depot must return before the Somerset street car can proceed. The result will be a wait of about ten minutes, and disgusted passengers getting out and walking to the depot.

The latest is that the road appears to be the Prudential Insurance Company of Newark, Mr. Nevius, the President of the railway, Mr. Bikel & Riker the counsel, being also officers of the insurance company.

The company is rich enough to give a decent road, but may not do so if the people here willing to accept anything offered. If the rail is not what was promised, it may prove a source of continued damage to vehicles if the people submit to it.

A Good Move.

Mayor Saunders is doing a good thing in having notices served on property owners who allow their sidewalks to become in bad condition dangerous to pedestrians. The condition of the sidewalks in the borough generally is nothing short of disgraceful. If the property owners don't promptly fix their walks, the borough will proceed to do it, the notice says, and we guess that it will be seen that the work is done right. Board walks are out of date, unhealthy, disease breeding, and always more or less dangerous. They ought to be abolished in such a place as North Plainfield. Flagging is the cheapest and best forever, besides being free from the danger resulting from rotting disease-breeding wood.

The Mayor can immortalize himself by enabling the borough to get rid of its abominable board walks.

Another Summons for Lawyer Van Ness.

Constable Moffett received a summons from the Supreme Court to serve on Lawyer John K. Van Ness. It is for a note of $4,000. Mr. Van Ness was out when the constable called at his house, near Scotch Plains, to serve the summons, so it was given to his wife, who promised to give it to her husband when he returned. It is returnable April 18th.

Did not Pass the Senate.

The bill which fixed a rate of seven cents a basket for carrying peaches or other fruits in New Jersey standard baskets of one quart or less, and eight cents a basket for a distance more than 30 miles, was not signed by Gov. Werts as reported. It did not pass the Senate.

Wasn't Riding the Track.

Assistant Foreman George Ball of Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company met with an accident, at Westfield, Sunday. He was riding a bicycle, when he fell off, striking the ground on his left shoulder, dislocating it.

TO BE INCORPORATED.

The Newark Conference so Decides Yesterday.

The Newark Conference in session in Centenary Church, Jersey City, yesterday resolved to have itself incorporated under the laws of New Jersey for various commercial and religious reasons. In the past, when a charitable bequest has been made to the Conference, the money has gone into the hands of parent societies and the Conference got only a small share of it. When J. W. Gillies, of Hackettstown, bequeathed $7,000 to the Conference the sum went into the society's treasury at Philadelphia and dribbled back to help needy churches in a manner that would have exasperated persons possessed of less of the Christian spirit than the members of the Conference. The members growled nevertheless and submitted to Judge Frank Fort, of Newark, a proposition to incorporate the Conference.

Presiding Elder Haviland, of Paterson, read Judge Fort's opinion, which was to the effect that the Conference should appoint a committee, whose business it will be to secure the enactment of a law that will meet the necessities of the Conference. The proposition met with some opposition, but was adopted, and the following committee appointed: Rev. S. P. Hammond, Rev. C. T. Colt, Rev. David Ballerou, Rev. J. J. Marron and Rev. Dr. S. Van Benschoter.

The remainder of the day was devoted to memorial services.

The Crescents' League Record.

When the Crescents entered the Journal Bowling League last Fall they had bright prospects of bowling a winning series, but circumstances in future bowling back and club caused their bowlers to lose interest in the contest. During the time they were in the league the Plainfield Athletic

EDITORIAL NOTES

Arbor Day.

It is with pleasure that we give place to the following eloquent paragraph from the proclamation of the governor of Pennsylvania on Arbor day:

Let the people lay aside for a season the habitual activity of the day and devote sufficient time thereof to planting a forest, fruit or ornamental tree along the public highways and streams, in private and public parks, about the public schoolhouses and on the college grounds, in gardens and on the farms, thus promoting the pleasure, profit and prosperity of the people of the commonwealth, affording protection against floods and storms, securing health and comfort, increasing that which is beautiful and pleasing to the eye, comforting to physical life and elevating the mind and heart, and by associations and meetings excite public interest and give encouragement to this most commendable work.

In the beginning of his proclamation Governor Pattison alludes to the favorable changes that have already taken place in regard to this question since Arbor day was instituted as a regular occasion for observance in Pennsylvania. The main change has been everywhere in the direction of improved public opinion. It began first in the public schools in all the states. This was the best possible beginning. The pupils had a holiday in which to plant trees in school grounds and parks. The next step was to plant trees along public highways. The planting was always accompanied with pleasant ceremonial observances, speeches, recitations and music.

From this the next move was to set before the people the frightful injury done their farms by stripping off the timber, especially near the headwaters of streams. They were set to thinking of the damage that had already been done and of ways in which further damage might be checked. Then they began to set out trees on their private grounds, both fruit and forest trees. Millions of trees have thus been planted by the children of those who cut trees down.

A valuable store of literature has accumulated on arboriculture. There are now books in plenty that show what trees are best adapted to given soils, also what trees will be most profitable in the commercial way, both for nuts and wood. The American eye for artistic beauty has been immeasurably helped too. Many a farmer who formerly let weeds and briers run wild and unsightly along his roadside has cut them all away and planted rows of beautiful trees. Hedges of flowering shrubs, clumps of trees about spring and water sources, already attest to our awakened interest in arboriculture.

France.

It fills one with ineffable weariness to behold those lazy, stupid and stingy Bourbons trying once more as always to overthrow the French republic. The old Count of Paris ought to be gently gagged and bound and kept in a sanitarium for a year or so till the French republic clears the thieves out of her high places and settles herself firmly to constitutional quiet again. It is disgusting to read how in his manifesto to the Monarchists old Paris says, "We must let France understand that a monarchy alone can give her a strong and stable government, whose sole object is the public welfare."

The Count of Paris has a short memory. Monarchy had things all its own way in France from the time of King Clovis, A.D. 465, down to 1792. Did it in 1,300 years give to France ever at any time a government whose sole object was the welfare of the people? No. On the contrary, its load of taxation became so heavy, its oppression so cruel, its ingenuity so satanic that at last the French people rose and cast it out from among them. Let us hope it has at last been finally cast out forever and forever, amen! Didn't monarchy have a fair trial in France? Wasn't 1,300 years long enough, in heaven's name? Think on these things, Count of Paris, and keep your mouth shut.

"Sir," writes Professor Goldwin Smith to the editor of the London Times, "the pomp, immense and impressive, though republican, of a presidential inauguration must bring home to the mind of every thoughtful Englishman who witnesses it the momentous fact that America has the safeguards of a real monarchy, while Great Britain has only a monarchical pageant." He proceeds to say then that this fact makes the difference between American democracy and the democracy into which England is drifting. He regards the variety of republicanism which Europe seems to be approaching as merely a form of state socialism. American republicanism in his judgment is the real thing. It has thus far escaped the danger of a state socialism. The idea that a man must do everything for himself is, in Professor Smith's opinion, a much safer one than the idea that government must do everything for him.

The most remarkable fact in population statistics is the increase of the Jews in Great Britain in 1874 there began a distinct decline in early marriages among the original Anglo-Saxon stock, and the decline continues. But the Jewish population of the kingdom has doubled in 20 years—that, too, not counting immigrants.

The continent of Europe seems to be standing on a dynamite magazine. There have been dynamite alarms on one and the same day at several cities in France, at Berlin, at Rome, at Brussels, at Vienna and in Holland.

STRUCK AND WENT BACK

The Great World's Fair Strike Was a Short One.

THE DELEGATES REGRETTED IT.

Nearly 5,000 Men Lost a Day's Pay, and the Unions Lost Some Points—The Walking Delegates Got Free Passes to Visit the Lakeshore, but May be Sent Away.

CHICAGO, April 11.—The sound of the hammer, the rasp of the saw and the swish of the whitewash brush will be heard again today in Jackson park and the great World's Columbian exposition will be opened May 1. Such was the effect of the decision reached last night after a complete backdown by the walking delegates, representing 27 different trades and over 4,000 men employed on the World's fair grounds.

The strike was inaugurated by the building trades council at the request of the Carpenters' union. The organization struck last week because the World's fair officials declined to discharge nonunion carpenters and employ union ones, though none of the latter could be had. The strike they inaugurated did not seem to worry the board of control to any considerable extent, and the strike was more to show the power of the carpenters' union than because of any grievances.

Early in the morning the men began to gather at the entrance to the World's fair grounds, but few of them passed through the gates. Instead, they formed in groups at each of the entrances and as fast as workmen approached they were taken in hand by the pickets and asked to refrain from going to work. The importunities of the strikers were generally successful and only a small percentage of the thousands of mechanics employed in the construction of the "White City" began their daily tasks when the whistles blew for the commencement of work.

For some time there was no violence and the men confined themselves to growling and to making stump speeches and were listened to by small crowds of workmen. At 8 o'clock half a dozen delegates entered the grounds and started to make a tour of the building. During the trip their numbers were increased, until there was a long procession of the men.

The leaders, fearing that the men might get into mischief, asked them to disperse. This order was shown to be a wise one, as a few minutes later several of the strikers met some who had recently been forced to join the union. These men were at work and the strikers ordered them to quit. They refused and a small fight was started. Some Columbian guards came to the rescue and drove the strikers away.

When this was reported to Mr. Burnham he gave prompt orders that all delegates found interfering with the workmen or trying to induce them to quit work should be put off the grounds. This order was promptly put in force, and the patrol wagon was kept busy. It also prevented trouble in the grounds.

Probably 80 per cent of the trades interested did not go out, but as many men of the other trades who were not directly interested knocked off work to await the result of the trouble. In addition to these it was said that nearly 1,000 more men and railroaders were ready to quit if the strike was not speedily settled.

They Regretted the Strike.

The men gathered about the gates were quiet and orderly and passed the time in discussing the situation. By far the greater number of them seemed to regret the order to quit work. While feeling that the fair officials had not kept its word with them as a union, they as individual workmen were satisfied with their places and hours.

Shortly after noon, when the walking delegates began to realize that the exposition officials were not going to beg the men to come back, and partly to satisfy the clamor among the strikers, who had by this time become much disgusted with their actions, they presented a signed application to the board of control, which was holding its regular weekly session. Several of the leaders were called before the officials and were soon convinced that they had no case. They drew up another agreement which they signed and asked the officials to sign. The latter declined, but said they would recognize the agreement, and the leaders said they would at once order the men back to work.

The terms of the settlement are that union men shall be taken back and treated in the same manner as if they were not union men. That the walking delegates shall be provided with passes to visit the men at work so long as their presence does not interfere with the workmen. If they do interfere, in the judgment of the fair officials, they are to be excluded from the fair and their passes revoked. The men agree that there shall be no further trouble on any account between this time and the close of the fair.

Victory For the Fair Officials.

The result is considered a decided victory for the fair officials. The meeting broke up in a very friendly manner, the delegates shaking hands with President Higinbotham and Director of Works Burnham.

On the whole when the number of men involved is taken into consideration it may be said the strike was an orderly one. The executive committee cautioned the men against using violence.

The net result of the strike was the loss of one day's work to the men, the granting of free tickets for walking delegates and 84 hours loss of time in completing the fair at a time when every minute is precious. It is virtually a victory on the part of the labor leaders, who were compelled to admit that the question of employing nonunion men was settled finally two years ago.

Four thousand five hundred workmen obeyed the orders of the Building Trades council to strike and about 1,000 ignored the orders.

Almost Beaten to Death.

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., April 11.—During a drunken row in South Egremont, Frank Perry had and wounded Frank Dean about the head and shoulders, inflicting serious and perhaps fatal injuries. Perry escaped into New York state. Both men have families.

SENATORS AND STRIKES

The Senate Talked About the Ann Arbor Decision.

PERU WILL MAKE REPARATION.

Lack of a Quorum Blocked Legislation and the Charges Against Roach and Payne Were Laid Over—A Lieutenant Who Wants to Be a Hermit.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—There was neither nominations nor confirmations in the senate. Mr. Hoar offered a resolution empowering the committee on privileges and elections to ascertain facts relating to the charges against Senator Roach as would enable it to report what are the powers and duties of the senate in the premises. Senator Chandler offered a similar resolution as to the charges against Senator Power of Montana. Both went over.

Resolutions proposing investigations during the recess into the railroad business and administration affairs were offered in the senate in a discussion of the recent decision of Judges Taft and Hicks in the Ann Arbor strike case. Senators Peffer, Gorman, Call and Chandler, all spoke of an inquiry as successful if it were necessary for the senate to take action in behalf of the workingmen. Senator Sherman spoke against the resolutions before the senate, neither of which involved an investigation of the judicial decision referred to, as juridic.

The resolutions finally passed, and then an attempt was made to have an executive session, which was frustrated by Senator Hoar raising the point of no quorum, so the senate was compelled to adjourn.

The Lieutenant a Hermit.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—News reached the war department that Lieutenant N. J. Brumback, Second infantry, who so mysteriously disappeared from here last Saturday, has located to the vicinity of Fort Sherman, Idaho, where he was seen returning to his cabin in the mountains, where he had previously lived the life of a hermit for several weeks until brought here for an investigation into his sanity. He will be brought back to camp and kept under strict surveillance.

Peru Regrets It.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—United States Minister Hicks, in a cablegram to the state department dated Lima, the 9th, locates the scene of the recent sacking of a United States consulate at Mollendo. He says the Peruvian government expresses regret as the occurrence, has removed the subprefect of the department of Mollendo and will provide proper reparation for the loss of property.

He Will Give a Dinner.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Secretary Herbert will leave here on April 21 for Annapolis, where he will board the dispatch boat Dolphin and proceed to the rendezvous at Hampton Roads. The following evening he will give a dinner on the Dolphin to the principal officers of the fleets. On April 24 he will sail for Boston, where he will join with the entire fleet for New York harbor.

Clerks Must Say Nothing.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Secretary Smith and Commissioner Lamoreaux of the land office have united on a policy by which information in the office in the escape of clerks and of clerks on land cases will be kept secret and no information given out concerning them in advance of the opinion of the commissioner or the secretary on the matters involved.

Carlisle Picks Eastern Men.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Secretary Carlisle appointed Jeremiah O'Rourke of Newark, N. J., to be supervising architect of the treasury at a salary of $5,000 a year. Secretary Carlisle also appointed Mr. Van Sendeu, managing editor of the Paducah (K. Y.) Daily Standard, to be his (Carlisle's) private secretary.

Will Take Back Part In Cash.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The Indian office is expecting the arrival of Chief Harris, Treasurer Starr and a few of the head men of the Cherokee's to perfect the execution of the treaty of the Cherokee lands to the government. About $300,000 is to be paid them in cash, and the rest of the money can be bonded.

McKinley Going South.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Governor William McKinley of Ohio and wife arrived in Washington on their way south for the benefit of Mrs. McKinley's health. The governor refused to talk politics.

Asiatics Fight Again.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 11.—The Arabs and other Asiatics who caused the disturbance on Bloomingdale road were each fined $10. After court was over the party went home to their quarters and the fight was renewed, but the police quelled the row. One woman was struck over the head with a club and had to be taken to the hospital. Her assailant was arrested with two others.

No Examinations There.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Chicago university has abolished the examination system in the graduate school and the university college. This is to take effect the present quarter. An instructor may or may not give an examination as he pleases, but the point is that it is no longer required. This is intended to be a step in advance of the old method of education.

For the Fencing Championship.

NEW YORK, April 11.—The preliminary competitions for the annual fencing championship of the Amateur Athletic union and the Amateur Fencing League of America commenced in the New York Athletic club. Foils were the weapons used, the broadswords and sabers being reserved for tonight.

Investigating Railroad Policy.

Simply Awful

Worst Case of Scrofula the Doctors Ever Saw

Completely Cured by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"When I was 4 or 5 years old I had a scrofulous sore on the middle finger of my left hand, which got so bad that the doctors cut the finger off, and that took off more than half my hand. Then the sore broke out on my arm, on my leg, and face on both sides, so nearly destroying the sight of one eye, also on my right ear. Doctors said it was the worst case of Scrofula they ever saw. It was simply awful! Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Gradually I found that the sores were beginning to heal. I kept on till I had taken ten bottles, at a dollar! Just think of what a return I got for that investment! A thousand per cent. at least. Rejoicing! For the past 4 years I have had no sores. I

ANOTHER CRUISE FOR THE NAVY.

The White Ships to Take an Outside Practice Run.

FORTRESS MONROE, Va., April 11.—Admiral Gherardi has decided to have another practice drill with the squadron before any more foreign visitors arrive. The vessels were to sail at 10 o'clock today and be absent two or three days. They will cruise off the Capes during the day and return to Lynn Haven bay for anchorage at night.

The Philadelphia, with Admiral Gherardi, will remain in the Roads to receive any foreign visitors that may arrive during their absence. Rear Admiral Benham will command the maneuvers while the fleet is outside. A northeast storm may delay their departure until Wednesday.

Mrs. Frank, wife of Colonel Royal Frank, post commandant, gave a tea this afternoon, which brought the army and navy together for the first time in a social way, and was largely attended by the officers of the fleet.

New Jersey's Mystery.

MILLVILLE, April 11.—When Coroner Sawyer, State Attorney Logue and County Physician Thompson returned from the bedside of Thomas Bassett, they decided to have a post mortem examination of the remains of James P. Tyner made at once, to settle all doubt as to whether or not he had been poisoned. When Bassett regained consciousness the state attorney had a long talk with him, but refused to make public the result of his conversation. The physician says Bassett will recover unless some complication arises.

Fatal Mine Explosion.

WILKESBARRE, April 11.—An explosion also took place in Black Diamond mine, at Lance Borough. A laborer entered one of the chambers with a naked lamp and fired a pocket of gas causing a terrific explosion which was heard throughout the workings. William George, aged 46 years, was found dead and horribly burned. William Wellinger, aged 37, a laborer, was fatally burned, and three Hungarians, whose names are unknown, are slightly burned and otherwise injured.

Looking For the Registry Clerk.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Chief Inspector Wheeler of the postoffice department, would like to find John G. McGowan and a package of registered mail containing $5,200, which has been lost since Monday of last week. BOSTON, April 11.—At the Hoosac tunnel docks is an immense chunk of coal from the Wigan Junction colliery, Lancashire, England. Its weight is 8,333 pounds. It is an exhibit for the World's fair, and is one of the largest pieces of coal ever taken from any mine in the world.

Fell Sixty Feet and Lived.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 11.—Ex-Worthy Matron Mrs. Nettie Ransford of the Indiana Eastern Star lodge fell down the elevator shaft from the third floor of Masonic temple to the basement, a distance of 60 feet. Her escape from instant death was miraculous.

A Desperate Criminal.

PROVIDENCE, April 11.—James Ryan, serving a life sentence in the Rhode Island state prison, made a desperate attempt to escape. He was only recovered after he had killed a watchman and had been shot three times. He will not die.

The Detroit Proves Fast.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 11.—The cruiser Detroit began her trials. She will probably take a long sea run Wednesday on Long Island sound. Thus far she has exceeded in speed the time figured for a certain number of revolutions of the screws.

An Offending Postmaster.

AUGUSTA, Me., April 11.—Colonel Charles B. Morton has filed charges of offensive partisanship against Postmaster Stinson, represented as the president of a Republican caucus, edited a Republican paper and performed other offensive acts.

Seedsman Hawley Dead.

HARTFORD, April 11.—Royal D. Hawley, the well known seedsman, is dead. He was known to violinists all over the country for his large and valuable collection of old violins. It is one of the most valuable private collections in the world.

Locke Distrusts the Militia.

PARIS, Tex., April 11.—Governor Jones and several of his friends are here to get legal advice. Locke is at his fort. He says he cannot trust in any promises from the militia, and will remain under arms until they disband or are dispersed.

A Change of Court Asked.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 11.—Calvin S. Brice and Samuel Thomas petitioned Judge Bartholomew of the superior court to have whom the Minnon receivership application is pending, to send the case to the federal court.

Famous Stallion Lobasco Dead.

BEATRICE, Neb., April 11.—Lobasco, the famous trotting stallion, owned by J. G. Laddell died of laryngitis. His owner refused an offer of $100,000 for him immediately after he broke the world's record last fall.

SHOT AT KING CARLOS.

A Young Man Tried to Kill Portugal's Ruler.

RUSSIANS DYING OFF LIKE SHEEP.

Fearful Results of the Earthquake In Servia—Squire Abingdon Leaves Some of His Money to Mrs. Langtry—Help Sent to Hull Strikers—The Cholera Raging.

LONDON, April 11.—A dispatch from Lisbon says that while King Carlos was driving an attempt was made to assassinate him. A young man ran toward the carriage brandishing a revolver, and before the police could seize him, fired a shot which passed several feet above the king's head. The young man was arrested and imprisoned. The attempt of the police to keep the matter as quiet as possible resulted, says the dispatch, in the circulation of a report that the young man merely ran with his cane raised toward the carriage.

Hundreds Dying of Starvation.

MOSCOW, April 11.—The famine in the European part of the government of Perm is worse than ever before. The poor are dying by hundreds. In the smaller villages the people have ceased trying to bury all the bodies. Relatives of the dead are often too weak to provide burial for their dead, and so leave the bodies lying on the roofs of the houses.

Despite the severity of the law against secret societies and the prohibition of the collection of funds, save through the officials, private associations are forming to secure food and clothes for the sufferers. These associations, although quite inadequate, give the only relief which peasants can obtain. The state committee has been dissolved and the provincial authorities have taken no steps to reorganize it. It is estimated that 252,000,000 pounds of grain are required to alleviate the distress and keep the peasants in food until the next harvest.

Mrs. Langtry Has a Windfall.

LONDON, April 11.—The Exchange Telegraph company says that the property of George Abingdon Baird, or Squire Abingdon, will go intact to his family, as has been stated. A will made by Baird aboard the steamship Majestic during his voyage to the United States has been found among his effects, it is said, and under its provisions Mrs. Langtry will receive a large property.

Results of an Earthquake.

BELGRADE, April 11.—An earthquake shook most districts in Servia. In eastern Servia great fissures were torn in the earth. Large streams of warm water and yellow mud still flow from the fissures. Thousands of houses and many churches have been wrecked. The people fear to return to the villages and are living in the fields.

Inventor of Melinite Released.

PARIS, April 11.—President Carnot has issued an order for the release of M. Turpin, the inventor of melinite, convicted of betraying secrets in connection with the manufacture of melinite, an explosive, the secret of which was owned by the government of Fre ce.

Call It an Imposition.

LONDON, April 11—Blue books containing the American case and counter case in The Behring sea dispute have been issued. The false translation in the American evidence are described under the heading, "Imposition practiced upon the United States."

Helping the Dock Strike.

LONDON, April 11.—The Grimsby dockers are raising a fund for the aid of the Hull strikers. Sailors and firemen in Hull have given the Wilson 24 hours' notice that they will not sail the steamer Orlando unless port wages are paid.

Five Thousand to Strike.

BRUSSELS, April 11.—Five thousand coal miners in the Borinage district have resolved upon a general strike, partly for higher wages and partly for universal suffrage.

The Cholera Record.

PARIS, April 11.—The latest report from Lorient says that there were 10 deaths from cholera there on Sunday.

Paste Diamonds For Fair Visitors.

DETROIT, April 11.—Two men and three women came over from Windsor, Ont., on a ferryboat. They had a small box over half full of what looked like the purest white diamonds. Each diamond was wrapped in cotton and tissue paper. To an inspector they explained that they were from Paris on their way to the World's fair and that the diamonds were paste. They intended to sell the diamonds to World's fair visitors. They were allowed to go with their diamonds.

The Santa Fe Strike.

TOPEKA, April 11.—There was one fire going in the blacksmith shop of the Santa Fe road here. The strikers remain away from the shops and show no signs of weakening. B. T. Lewis, assistant to General Fry, says there are not to exceed 800 men out in Topeka. The strikers on Saturday placed the number at 1,100.

The Boston-Chicago Relay Ride.

CHICAGO, April 11.—The Boston-Chicago relay ride will commence at 5a. m. April 20, from the office of the Boston Post. Each relay will be made by a rider and a substitute, the former carrying a pouch which will contain the message from Governor Russell of Massachusetts to Governor Altgold of Illinois.

Trouble For Senator Higgins' Secretary.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 11.—A warrant was sworn out by Chief of Police Edwards, publisher of The Evening Journal of this city and a candidate for public printer, for the arrest of Frederick Eden Bach, private secretary to United State Senator Higgins, charged with criminal libel.

Damages From a Telegraph Wire.

TIPTON, April 11.—Melvin Thorn, aged 10, through his best friend, brings suit against the Western Union Telegraph company for damages resulting from contact with an electric wire, which was not properly protected.

Not Legal Guardians.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 11.—Judge Taylor of the superior court declared unconstitutional the law under which boards of children's guardians are organized in all the large cities of Indiana.

Resigned From the Chess Club.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Dr. Fred Minta, vice president and organizer of the Manhattan Chess club, resigned his office.

NO DEATH PENALTY.

The Assembly Bill Passed, but the Senate Bill Was Killed.

ALBANY, April 11.—The special order in the senate was the bill for the abolition of capital punishment introduced by Senator Smith. The bill was taken up in committee of the whole with Senator Aspinal in the chair.

Senator Smith made an extended speech arguing that the infliction of the death penalty is justifiable only in case of treason against the state.

Condemnation to hard labor for life, he said, would really serve as a more effective restraint than capital punishment. When a vote was taken the senate defeated by a large vote the attempt to abolish capital punishment in this state.

Assemblyman Sullivan's bill to the same effect, abolishing the death penalty, met with a better fate. After several amendments had been proposed and acted upon Mr. Sullivan arose and said he was in favor of capital punishment if it could be justly enforced. But he found that nearly every one of the murderers executed were men who had to have counsel assigned to them by the courts and were without money or friends. The death penalty was for the poor man and not for the rich man and therefore he wanted to abolish it.

The bill was finally passed by a vote of—Yeas, 88; nays, 29. If it becomes a law it goes into effect Sept. 1 next, and under the present circumstances will not afford any relief to Carlyle W. Harris.

Raided the Knights.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—The rooms of an organization known as the Knights of the Grand Mogul were raided by the police in consequence of information that the club was a cover for a gambling den. In one room a dozen men were found engaged in a game of draw poker, while another room contained a quantity of liquor. Herman Meyer claimed that he was president, secretary and treasurer of the Knights, and that it was a regularly organized club, but he was held in bail for court. The others were held in their own recognizance to appear as witnesses.

Identified by His Beard.

CARLISLE, Pa., April 11.—"Charley" Sailards, the burglar who shot and killed Policeman Martin on Saturday night, was arrested at Winchester, Va., by police authorities of this city. At the time of the murder he wore a long beard which he had removed in Hagerstown by a barber, who sent a portion of it here for identification.

Trouble Expected In Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, April 11.—It is quite generally conceded that there is a possibility for further troubles in the mining districts in May. It is an open secret that a general strike is in preparation to take effect then, and the state, civil and military authorities are preparing for another attack upon the convicts working in the mines.

Trouble For the League.

BOSTON, April 11.—Receiver Henry W. Putnam of the Order of the American Protective league has filed his first report in the superior court. He says the conduct of the officers in the care of the money has not been of the best, their expenditures have been extravagant and the allowances to themselves liberal.

British Women's First Chance.

HALIFAX, April 11.—The bill for the enfranchisement of women to vote for members of parliament passed the second reading in the legislature by a majority of two after a most exciting debate. This is the first time such a vote has been carried in any part of the British realm.

A Countess For the Lions.

CHICAGO, April 11.—The Countess di Brazza has arrived in Chicago to open the priceless display of laces sent to the World's fair by the Italian government. Extraordinary precautions have been taken to guard this display against any possible accident.

Hod Carriers Strike.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 11.—All the hod carriers and assistants in the city struck for an advance from 25 and 28½ cents to 28½ and 30 cents. Several hundred men are out, and insist that they will not go back until the advance is granted.

Sympathize With Home Rule.

HARRISBURG, April 11.—The House adopted a resolution expressing approval of the efforts of the Irish people to gain local government and conveying to Hon. William E. Gladstone the cordial sympathy of the agitata re.

A Russian Patriot Protests.

NEW YORK, April 11.—The Russian patriot, G. Stepniak, has written an appeal to the American people in favor of the right of asylum for Russian political offenders.

Summer Residence Burned.

GREAT NECK, L. I., April 11.—The summer residence of Mr. Frank Dickinson of New York, on Manhasset bay, one mile from here, was totally destroyed by fire.

Secession Is Denied.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 11.—The story recently published in some eastern papers regarding the secession of New Caledonia and British Columbia is denied here.

Boston Must Have Cigarettes.

BOSTON, April 11.—The legislative committee on public health reported "ought not to pass" on the bill prohibiting the sale of cigarettes and cigarette tobacco.

Organized a Coffin Trust.

NEW YORK, April 11.—The casket and coffin manufacturers of New York, Brooklyn and other large manufacturing places have organized a trust.

Funeral of Bishop Kip.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—The funeral of the late William Ingram Kip, the Episcopal bishop of California, was held in Trinity church.

Different Then.

He—Your chaperon is not very watchful. She (absently)—But you should see her when there's a man in my vicinity.—Life.

An Earthly Angel.

A southern paper publishes the following advertisement: "Wanted—By a young lady fond of pleasing countenance, good figure, agreeable manners, general information and varied accomplishments, who has studied everything from the creation to crochet, a situation in the family of a gentleman. She will take the head of his table, manage his household, scold his servants, nurse his babies, check his tradesmen's bills, accompany him to the theater, cut the leaves of his new book, sew on his buttons, warm his slippers and generally make his life happy. Apply in the first place to Miss ——, Hickory Grove, Ga., and afterward to papa on the premises."

Brace Up, Men.

If the ladies insist on wearing crinolines, there is no reason why they should have it all their own way.—Truth.

Sweet Pins.

Quite a study is made of bonnet pins just now. The newest consists of a single uncut, conically shaped stone, set around with brilliants. A malachite or lapis lazuli ball, starred with diamonds, is charming and not too "voyant," while other more showy pins are completely incrusted with brilliants. The average American woman has not yet learned to pay sufficient attention to these minor details pertaining to her toilet, and the effect of many a pretty hat or bonnet is spoiled by her neglect of unsightly pins far too much in evidence.

Capes With Collarettes.

Capes of cloth with white lace ruffles and deep ruffle collarettes over or under collarettes of the cloth are offered. The wide ruffle around the bottom of the cape is frequent. Lace ruches are around the throat of lace trimmed capes. A gold appliqued black net makes a showy cape ruffling on black or colored cloth. Watteau fullness of velvet is set in the back of capes with a collarette to match the watteau. A gray cape has the fullness of velvet shading from gray to red. The collarette, which is a narrow ruffle, opens in the back under a velvet bow, which heads the watteau. Long wraps have double breasted fronts and all manner of overcapes, triple capes to the waist or double shoulder capes, and so on. Gauntlet cuffs, large and loose, and velvet turnover collars are the rule. A double turnover collar, or rather a narrow collar turned over the top of a straight standing collar—one of velvet, the other of cloth—is a pretty finish on gowns and capes.

Seal Your Letters.

The old time fashion of sealing letters is coming in again, and everywhere may be seen wax of every conceivable hue. In place of the small and thin sticks once in vogue large and solid shapes are now adopted, some being so heavy that they often serve as paperweights. The use of motto wafers is also being revived, but this fancy is more ornamental than really useful.

Hunt Up the Tennis Rackets.

Worn out tennis rackets make quite picturesque wall pockets, fitted up with pockets of silk, the frames enameled in faintly colors and tied with gay ribbons.

THE HOUSEHOLD

THE LINEN CLOSET.

A Place of Pride and Pleasure to the Mistress of a Well Ordered Household.

The interest and trouble bestowed by housekeepers of old on their linen chests shines by its absence in the minds of many of their descendants. It is a pity, too, for few things are more attractive than a well kept linen cupboard. It is always better when this place can be what it used to be called of old—a linen closet—as then there is room for the proper storage of the various items. The closet must be dry, or the results to the linen will be fatal. Where it is possible to give up a closet or small room to this purpose the first thing to provide is plenty of shelves, each wide enough for the articles to be laid upon them. These should have unbleached covers made wide, so that after being fastened to the back of the shelf they will fold up over the linen and the other edge will fall down over this again. When the shelf is long, it is well to divide the cover into two or three lengths, so as to be able to get at each part of the shelf without disturbing the whole. Each kind of linen should be kept separate, with its name marked on the cover to prevent confusion. In this way one can tell at once where to go for anything. An arrangement obtained in some houses is to sort out the bed linen according to the room to which it belongs, the name of the bedroom being in this case marked on the cover. This plan prevents trouble when a room has to be got ready, as one has only to go to the shelf belonging to the particular room she has to prepare to have all the needful linen at hand.

Things bought in sets, such as dozens of towels or napkins, should be kept in sets and marked as such. In putting away linen, whether sheets, pillowcases, tablecloths or napkins, the last clean things as they come from the wash should be put at the bottom of the pile. By adhering to this rule strictly with everything linen will wear half as long again.

Where it is not possible to appropriate a closet or room to the linen as large a cupboard as possible should be chosen, and some such arrangement as the above should be adhered to. It is most satisfactory to allot a shelf to each one, as if many sheets are piled up together they are hard to identify without taking the whole lot down.

The stock of linen can be kept up at a small cost by adding a little to it each year, especially if one can take advantage of the annual sales of good establishments. Though linen has been the only material alluded to here, many housekeepers prefer a really good quality of cotton for sheets, not only as less expensive, but preferable for ordinary use.

Potato Souffle.

Wash and brush 4 medium sized potatoes, being careful to get the skins as clean as possible, then bake them till quite done. Now with a sharp knife cut off a round piece at the top of each, scoop out all the inside and rub this to fine snow through a sieve, put this into a pan with a good piece of butter, a little salt and pepper, and about a gill of cream; milk will do with a little cream. Bring this all to the boil; then whip the whites of 2 eggs to a stiff froth with a pinch of salt, stir it lightly into the mixture and fill up the potato skins with it. Place them in a quick oven to bake and serve at once.

A Novel Rich Pancake.

Mix 2 tablespoonfuls of ground rice into a pint of cream. Set it high over a stow fire and stir well until it thickens. Pour into the liquid 6 ounces of butter melted, add half a nutmeg grated and pour the whole into an earthen pan. When it is cold, stir in 2 tablespoonfuls of dry flour, a pinch of salt, 3 ounces of powdered sugar and 6 well beaten eggs. Mix all thoroughly together and fry the pancakes a good color. When milk is used instead of cream, allow 1 more tablespoonful of ground rice. Only small quantities should be poured into the pan at one time on account of its lightness.

Worm Eaten Furniture.

A solution of oil of myrrh or a preparation of quassia are among the best remedies for this trouble. Petroleum is also very good if the smell be not objected to. Strong solutions of bichloride of mercury may be employed with decided effect, but it is a strong poison, and therefore not safe to use without experience. If the pests have invaded the upholstered part of the furniture, the difficulty will be considerable; then the only thing to be done would be to have it unpicked, thoroughly cleaned and refurnished after washing the framework with the chosen application.

Salt Fish With Tomatoes.

Take a quantity of boiled salt cod picked out in flakes. Slice a moderate sized onion, put it into a saucepan with an ounce of butter, put it on the fire, and as soon as the onion is soft add tomato according to quantity. Take the saucepan off the fire for a minute or two, add the fish, a sprinkling of pepper, and some finely minced parsley. Toss the saucepan on the fire until the contents are thoroughly heated, then draw it aside, to be kept warm till the time of serving.

Curried Eggs.

Fry 2 sliced onions in butter, add a tablespoonful of curry powder and let the onions and curry powder stew in a pint of good broth till the former are quite tender; mix in a cup of cream and thicken with arrowroot or rice flour. Simmer a few minutes, then add 6 or 8 hard boiled eggs cut in slices; heat them thoroughly, but do not let them boil

Window Drapery.

This drapery for a window has not only the merit of being perfectly balanced on either side (a feature desirable to insure general approval), but it is at the same time devoid of the stiffness of many regular designs. The full plaited valance is always effective when in good taste, as it is natural and unconstrained.

A SIMPLE AND ELEGANT DESIGN.

The method of supporting the ends of the festoons by means of cords and rings is an agreeable novelty and one that The Decorator and Furnisher finds quite in harmony with the general simplicity of the design here reproduced from that journal.

THE TERRITORIES AT THE FAIR.

A Handsome Building to Be Dedicated to Their Use.

The four territories, Utah, New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma, will exhibit together in one building at the World's fair, and it is safe to say that this structure and what it contains will attract more attention from persons who have been meditating upon Horace Greeley's advice to young men than any other on the grounds. Utah will exhibit several Indian tribes, Arizona will have many antiquities, Oklahoma will show her agricultural products, and New Mexico will have in evidence her educated Navajoes and Pueblos. Three of these territories have practically the same mineral resources, and they will be exhibited to the best advantage.

THE TERRITORIAL BUILDING.

To one not familiar with nature's possibilities in silver and its closely related metals the mineral cabinet in the Territorial building will be like a realization of his early dreams of fairyland. The gray and yellow chlorides, the glittering cubes of galena ore, the geometrical perfection of some of the figures made by iron pyrites, the delicate hair lines or frostwork of "silver glance" and the grains of gold shining like yellow stars in the almost transparent quartz, where they are sometimes found, all these are but the commonplaces of mineral collections. There are rarer curiosities in silver ores, the sports of nature (for silver will combine chemically with almost any other mineral), such as the blue arsenite and ruby silver, the glowing peacock ore, the horn silver and the tetrahedrite.

Guatemala's World's Fair Exhibit.

Jackson park, scene of the coming World's fair, is just now the busiest place in the country. Along the Midway plaisance 33 buildings are being rapidly hastened to completion. Elsewhere the finishing strokes are being given to many more. Passenger conveyances are excluded from the park, as all the space is needed for materials, and the sound of hammer and saw is heard from dawn till far into the night, for every contractor proudly declares that all his work shall be done and everything in place before the opening day.

The exhibits of the leading nations may be taken for granted, but those of some of the minor nations will be of interest for their unique character. Guatemala, for instance, has decided not to compete with her neighbors in lines where they are confessedly richer than she is, but to confine her display almost entirely to productions in which she is likely to excel. Her building, recently completed at a cost of $25,000, is a beautiful structure in the style of architecture of the official buildings of the country. The tropical garden with which it is to be surrounded will be very interesting. It will include a small coffee plantation, to be worked by natives, which will exemplify the cultivation of the berry in all its stages, and from a pretty pavilion the hot beverage will be served free to all visitors.

Gold, silver, mercury and other metals, mahogany, logwood and other woods, all sorts of coloring matters and tropical plants will go to make up this little republic's exhibit. The Guatemalan commissioners are also anxious to bring out their national band of 100 performers and have them give concerts. Guatemala has appropriated $200,000 for her exhibit and expects to raise more.

Spiral Tower at the World's Fair.

Carl L. Lehman of Chicago has designed a spiral tower which he would like to see erected on the grounds of the World's fair. There are no details as to dimensions, but it is explained that passengers will be carried to the top by means of a small railroad inside. The proposed novel structure is thus described by the New York Safety Power: "The spiral is from bottom to top, having no supplemental support above the foundation. The weights and the iron and steel trusswork have been so calculated as to leave a large margin of safety, everything being based on well known and proved formulas of stress and supportable strain. There is to be a terrace extending from bottom to top, a pavilion and gallery at the top, observatories or galleries at suitable intervals apart and a spiral roadway around the outside of the terrace. The tower has a foundation of masonry and terrace, the cross section of which is a trapezoid, a spiral roadway projecting from the bottom of the terrace and a railway track within the terrace."

CHIMMIE FADDEN.

He Uses His Exit Side Dialect to Describe a Scrapping Match.

"Say, if I ever gets old 'nough t' know wots good for me, I'll go inter de freak shows as de mug wot discovered Barkem. I'm gettin de swelled head from what's in it, an das's why I ain't stuck on meself. See?

"Everyting up t' our house was runnin slick as er ambulance, an tings was comin my way so fast I comes near breakin me neck a-dodgin 'em. Wot's more, I 'nough for a mug like me, ain't it? Sure.

"Well, lemme tell ye. I was out in de barn teachin de coachman's kid dat slow song, no how, he tells me I'm t'rowin it more chanst t' sing it right or I'd tump 'im, when in comes 'is whiskers wid er mug wot scared de horses outer de stall. Say, I knew 'im t' dat mug when 'e was t' our house before, an I puts 'im up for a sporty boy. See?

"Well, he comes out dere t' look at er hoss wot 'is whiskers got for Miss Fannie t' try for a saddle hoss; 'cause 'e knows a hoss, dat Boston mug, when 'e sees one. Fetches de hoss outer de stall an was lookin 'im while dey was pipin 'im off. All of a suddint dat Boston mug says t' 'is whiskers, 'e says, 'Don't you know any singing match ers for Chimmie?' says 'e.

"Wid dat 'is whiskers sent de coachman's kid erway, an 'e shut de door, an he says t' me, says 'e, 'Chimmie,' says, 'Chimmie, me friend from Boston is a-standin wid me, an, nature,' 'e says, like dat. 'An if yuse are onto a boxin match anywhere t'night,' 'e says, 'p'raps yuse could bring us each t' out Miss Fannie knowin it.' Dat's wot he says. See? Jollyin me. See? Say, I taut I'd die 'cause I couldn't laugh, but I says, sober as a judge in de Tombs, I says, 'De Roseland Social, Ousin and Life Savin club has er scrap on t'night,' says I, 'an I could git yuse in dere for a piece,' says I.

I knowed de tickets was only 25 cents, but I taut as 'is whiskers was jollyin me I'd jolly 'im. See?

"Den de Boston mug 'e says, sober as me, says 'e, 'Yuse go an fix tings, an we'll meet yer after dinner,' says 'e, an 'e coughs up er five. Dat's straight, or steen, green fives. See? Dat's reports, dat mean.

"Well, I tole 'em where t' meet me at 9 o'clock, an I made er sneak down t' de Bowery t' see me friend Jack Dempsey, de keep, wot's de president of de Roseleafs. When I tole de barkeep dat de swell gents was goin t' meet me in 'is place, 'e never charged me a nottin for de tickets.

"Well, at 9 o'clock dey comes sheain up t' de door in er hack, an, bully gee! who'd ye tink was wid 'em? Mr. Burton, de mug wot's Miss Fannie's fella'! Sure. Mr. Burton, 'e says, when dey chases in de place, says 'e, 'Good evenin, Mr. Fadden,' 'e says, as perlite as dat. 'Good evenin, Mr. Fadden.' See? Dat was because I was tryin t' string de crowd dere an make 'em tink de swells wasn't no swells, but was friends er mine wot was musicianers or ladlers, er mugs like dat. See? Say, dat's where dey was farmers. De crowd dere was dead on t' onct. Dere ain't nobody can string dose Rosedale Dep all'ers in de Bowery. But me friend, de barkeep, 'e gives de gang one look, an when 'e done dat dey knowed der business. Dey never took no notice no more, cause de barkeep 'e runs dat gang. See?

"Den me friend, de barkeep, 'e tips us de wink, and we makes er smack after 'im t' de back room, where de scrappin was.

"Say, yuse would die ter see de sporty boy from Boston jolly up de game. 'E wasn't in de back room er minnit 'fore 'e knowed all de mugs' names, an 'e chipped in for de purse for de first scrap, an 'e was near runnin de show. 'Is whiskers was kinder cranky, like 'e taut somethin wrong was gwine ter happen, an kep' 'is eye on de door all de time. Well, der was two mixed ale fedderweights stuggin each odder for de first purse, when 'is whiskers, all of er suddint, near fell offen de chair, an 'e grauss, 'De perlice!'

"Dat's wot dey was, sure 'nough, de cops. Dey comes in de front door an de back door, an was er cop at de window, too. De game was near paralyzed. Say, I was tinkin wot Miss Fannie would say if she ever heard.

"De first tings de sporty boy said was t' tell me t' git de hoss, an 'e showed me wid 'is nod his dat. I knowed de cop wot was bossin de raid, an I knowed dere was no fixin 'im dat way. But I tinked I'd make de wad, fun for luck, an went over and whispers t' de cop. 'Do yuse know Senator Burton?' I whispers.

"'Sure,' says 'e.

"'Well, dats 'im,' I says, noddin t' Miss Fannie's fella.

"De cop looks over an says, says 'e, 'Bully for you,' says, 'dat's straight. Wot's he doin here?'

"'He's wid er couple er members,' I says, 'westigatin de slums,' says I.

"Say, I give 'im de cold bluff so straight dat teeth sweat. See?

"De cop says, 'Sneak 'em outer here quick,' 'e says, an 'e gives de tip t' de cop on de door, while I shakes outs wid de two swells. De hack was outside, an dey all jumps in, an I jumps on de box wid de driver. All de way up t' de club I heard 'em knockin me name, an when I got down t' open de door for 'em 'is whiskers was tellin 'em not t' give 'im erway t' Miss Fannie, says, 'cause 'e was a mug wot, 'Chimmie,' 'e says, 'yuse go home an keep yer mout shut,' 'e says.

"'Yes sir,' I says, an hands back de wad t' de sporty boy, an—

"'It looks at it an den at me, an 'e says, 'Wot's dis? Didn't ye use it?' says 'e.

"'No,' says I. 'I squared it wid de senate-pull's,' I says.

"When I tells 'em how I done it, dey all gives me er great jolly, and de Boston mug gives me back de wad and says, 'Chances,' 'e says, 'is now for tweedle-dee,' 'e says, 'or never' lead no innocent gents from Boston t' de Bowery no more,' 'e says, an dey all chases in de hack.

"Say, wot de ye tink dere was in dat wad? Dere was 50 plunks! Dat's straight—50 good plunks.

"De next day I gives me friend de barkeep 25 plunks; cause dat's wot de judge fined 'im, an I was feelin pretty good till I got home, and den, bully gee! de duchess she jumped on me wid bote feet.

"Say, wot de ye tink? De whole game was give t' Miss Fannie by 'er tjet dodie wot heard it as de slats. De dude meets Miss Fannie on de street, an goes an tells 'er de whole foul yarn, an she pretendin all de time dat she didn't care, so de dude couldn't 'ave no laugh on Mr. Burton an 'is whiskers. Ain't she er turnip-head!

"Well, Miss Fannie sent for me, an I gives 'er a great song an dance 'bout how de game was really wukkin t' do de slums, and never meant t' see no scrappin. Wid dat de duchess gives me er wink wot made me want t' laugh so hard dat dere was tears in me eyes, an Miss Fannie thinks I was cryin quit jawin me, and I chases out wid de duchess after me. She jumped on me no notice on account 'bout she let go I had t' cough up dat 25 plunks t' 'er.

"Say, I ain't playin in no luck nohow. De trouble wid me is I don't know wot's good for me. I wish I'd go easy all up to when dat sporty boy wanted to see er scrap.

"De next time dat Boston mug tackles me like dat I'll give 'im er scrap 'atid er 'tchin 'im t' one. See?"—New York Sun.

He Knew No Way.

The editor was a kind man at heart. He had written a poetry once himself, and his experiences had evidently led him to make a resolve to get even with the poetry writing public. It was a blushing young woman who said to him:

"Have you examined my manuscript?"

"Yes. I'm sorry, but it can't be used."

"But," and it took all her courage, "I took so much pains with it."

"I could see that, but you know that there is no art that has advanced less in its mechanical details than poetry writing. Men set type now just the same way that they did years and years ago."

"Don't they say so?"

"Yes, and that's the difficulty about your poem."

"Do you mean that your facilities are not sufficient for its proper presentation?"

"That's it exactly. As yet no way has been discovered for getting neat penmanship and sky blue ribbon into print."—Washington Star.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," WEDNESDAY, APRIL 12, 1893. TWO CENTS.

SOLD A $3000 MORTGAGE

THE CAUSE OF THE SUIT AGAINST LAWYER VAN NESS.

It is Alleged he Never Made Any Record of a Sale of a Bond and Mortgage of $3,000, but Represented it as His Own.

Lawyers Cook & Salmon have retained Judge Coddington of this city to institute proceedings against John K. Van Ness in favor of James C. Caywood as guardian of the estate of Ellen M. and Mary A. Caywood, minors; it is alleged that about January, 1892, John K. Van Ness was counsel for David G. Caywood, former guardian of Ellen M. and Mary A. Caywood, and that certain business matters were entrusted to Counselor Van Ness, among which was an assignment of a bond and mortgage which Counselor Van Ness claimed to own and which he assigned to David G. Caywood for $3,000 or thereabouts; it appears that Mr. Caywood allowed the legal documents to remain in possession of Mr. Van Ness and that they were not recorded, although Mr. Caywood says he paid the money over in good faith to his counsel.

It is stated that Counselor Van Ness about the first of April 1892 converted the above mentioned bond and mortgage to his own son and sold it to another party, Van Ness at the time pretending to be the owner of the bond and mortgage, and received from the third party over $3,000 therefore, but neglected to make any mention of this transaction to the present guardian of the children.

The guardian of course is responsible for the whole amount he paid to Van Ness and in case he should not succeed in recovering the amount that is due him from Van Ness, he will be obliged to make good the sum to the children.

Mr. Coddington brought suit in the Supreme Court against John K. Van Ness on Monday and Sheriff Hicks served the papers on Van Ness's wife yesterday. Van Ness himself not being found.

BREVITIES.

—The billiard and pool tournaments at the Park Club are both handicap. There are only one or two scratch men.

—Mr. Weine's concert takes place tomorrow night at the Casino. He will be assisted by the Beethoven quartette.

—On the 25th of this month the members and friends of the Third street missions will enjoy an entertainment and sociable.

—The entertainment of Iona Council, Degree of Pocahontas, takes place tonight in the Red Men's Hall, 34 West Front street.

—Owing to the sickness of Treasurer Gardner the First Baptists postponed their meeting for election, last night, to Wednesday, April 26.

—There were no game in the Crescent League bead pin tournament last night. To-morrow night's bowlers will be Dunham, Leggett, Hallock and Keller.

—Two weeks from to-day a quarterly session of the Grand Division Sons of Temperance of the State will be held at Summit. There is expected to be a very pleasant incident connected with the session and a large attendance is looked for.

—Mr. J. C. Allen of 28 West Front street is out to-day in another column with his Spring announcement and it shows his usual enterprise. Mr. Allen is very much in evidence when there is any business, and manifests a determination to get it.

—Mrs. Lathrop's temperance lecture not only drew a crowd last night, but created a sensation. She has made a most favorable impression on her audience in Augusta, and has attracted large crowds—Ex.

—Plainfield has surely outgrown its infancy days in business, as a visit through the city's enterprising stores will show. Edsall started to a News reporter, recently, that never has his house done, at this season of the year such a large trade as it has lately. He says he thinks that people in Plainfield appreciate more and more each year the advantages of buying goods at home, especially when they can do just as well.

—Prof. Genning of Amherst says "A college song is like nothing else in the world. Under all its nonsense, there is, in a true college song, a real lyrical skill, and the nearer it comes to seeming to be extemporaneous, the more truly it has crystalized in melody the emotions that vitalize ones student days." The "Y's" say "You cannot afford to miss hearing the Rutgers College Glee Club, at All Souls church, on the 27th. It will renew your youth."

No Light Last Night in the Borough.

Owing to an accident to an Edison dynamo at the North Plainfield electric light station last night, the borough was left in darkness. It was caused by the breaking of a bolt. The private lights were not affected as the company has two separate systems—the Edison for street lighting and the Thompson-Houston for private purposes.

Will be On Exhibition.

A sectional view of the proposed extension to the North Plainfield school and the whole building as it will appear with the extension added will be on exhibition at the carriage repository of Mr. L. M. French, Somerset street, commencing to-morrow.

MR. HULETT'S OPENING.

An Enterprising Gentleman with Novel Ideas.

A large crowd of people who were congregated on the sidewalk in front of Hulett's commodious music store last evening, attracted the attention of every one passing.

Looking inside to see the cause one beheld an audience of intelligent people seated so that they were looking toward the front.

The cause of the commotion was a free concert given inside. It was described as "a classical musical recital," and was given by Mr. Hulett as his Spring opening, those assisting being Miss Helline Sumstadt, who has just returned from Milan, Italy and Russia, where she spent several years studying with the most eminent masters; Prof. Theodore Appell, leader, and an orchestra of sixteen pieces.

Altogether the affair was very pleasing to the audience and very creditable to Mr. Hulett and those who took part.

NEW HOME FOR CRESCENT LEAGUERS

Mr. C. B. Clifton will Build a Club House for Them.

The Crescent League is to have a new club house. It will be built for the club by Mr. C. B. Clifton, at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street. The plans have been drawn and other arrangements are being completed.

The club has a lease of its present location until 1896, and although the new building will no doubt be finished before that time, they will in all probability remain where they are until the lease expires.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jackson of Crescent avenue left Monday for Atlantic City.

Mr. Peter Wooden of Somerset street is confined to the house with la grippe.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Smith of Grandview avenue will celebrate their silver wedding to-night.

Mr. William Buckman, foreman in the composing room of the Press, is ill at his home on Linden avenue.

Mr. Eli Long of Grove street, after a short vacation at his home, returned to Harvard College yesterday.

Mr. Daniel Corey of Warrenville is reported to be seriously ill at his home in that place. He is one of the oldest men in Warren township.

The Rev. Henry Pierson and wife, from Dr. Simpson's Tabernacle, New York, are to begin a series of evangelistic services in the Park avenue Baptist church to-night.

Yesterday, Mr. Pliny Fisk of West Seventh street, who, with his family, has been spending the Winter at the Hotel Plaza, New York, returned here for the Summer. Mr. Fisk's brother, Alexander, has also taken up his residence in Plainfield, at the corner of Park avenue and Sixth street.

The Ministers' Association held a meeting Monday night at the home of the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, on Central avenue. A memorial was adopted, to be presented to the Common Council against the granting of any more liquor licenses, and particularly praying against the recent licensing of a saloon at the very doors of the Mt. Olive Baptist church.

The Red Men of Elizabeth held a grand pow-wow Monday night, in Quien's hall. The various local tribes gathered with the members of Opechee and enjoyed the sixth anniversary of the organization of that branch of the great band of Improved Order of Red Men. The Journal says: Mr. J. H. Carney, of Plainfield, one of the dusky braves of Miantonomah Tribe, gave some convulsing German dialect speeches and made several local hits that were highly appreciated.

This Season's Ball Team.

Manager Keller yesterday signed Catcher Fritz, of last year's Ridgewoods, to play right field.

Max Judge, who is well and favorably known here, will again play in Plainfield. He has signed to play left field.

Leidy will play center field, and Jones will cover first base.

The manager has secured a player named Romer to hold down the bag at second.

For third base Coghlan will probably be the man.

"Leo" Smith of the New Providence team will play short, while "Chic" Hedford will no doubt be the catcher and captain.

As yet no pitcher has been decided upon, but Manager Keller has several good ones in view. When "Tee Kay" makes a selection it may be depended upon to be a "twirler" of A 1 calibre.

Reception at Hulett's Hall.

About one hundred members and friends attended the reception in Hulett's Hall last night, given by Prof. Davis to his dancing class. The guests were treated to an exhibition in fancy dancing by two little girl, pupils—Clara Manning and Lydia Boice.

Halsted Wins His Suit.

In the suit of Gillespie vs. Halsted, yesterday, before Justice Hoff, at Dunellen, the latter came out ahead. Gillespie was adjudged guilty of securing goods under false pretence. Mr. H. C. Banyon of this city was counsel for Halstead.

FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

TWENTY-SECOND ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PRESBYTERIAL SOCIETY.

Held at Roselle, Yesterday—The Reports Show the Society to be Advancing Steadily in its Good Work—More Money Raised this Year Than Ever Before.

The twenty-second annual meeting of the Elizabeth Presbyterial Society for Foreign Missions was held yesterday in the First Presbyterian church, Roselle. The morning session began at 10:30 o'clock, and the attendance, principally of ladies, included representatives from all the churches in the Presbytery.

The officers are: President, Mrs. John Gillespie, of Elizabeth; Vice Presidents, Mrs. C. H. Laughton of Elizabeth, Mrs. J. A. Liggett of Rahway, Mrs. J. G. Mason of Metuchen, Mrs. S. E. Lewis of Rahway, Mrs. S. J. Rowland of Clinton, Mrs. S. Milliken of Plainfield, Mrs. F. H. Pierson of Elizabeth, Mrs. K. High of Westfield; Secretary, Mrs. William Scribner, Plainfield; Recording Secretary, Miss E. M. Colton, Elizabeth; Treasurer, Mrs. E. F. Tyndey, Roselle; Assistant Treasurer, Mrs. W. P. Stevenson, Roselle.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. H. L. Hyde, and after the roll call and other preliminary business, Rev. I. A. Blauvelt, the pastor, welcomed the delegates to Roselle.

Then followed the reports, showing a year of good work. The treasurer, Mrs. E. F. Tenney, reported that more money had been raised this year than ever before, a total of $5,318.89, appropriated as follows:

House for Chinese Girls, California, $455.35; Zenana work, India, $177; General Fund, $1,172.70; School work, $1,186; Medical Missionary, Miss Morton's salary, Ningpo, China, $500; Miss Dascomb's salary, Brazil, $500; Miss McGilvary's salary, Siam, $500; debt on Woodstock school, India, $365.91; thank offering, $148.78; life membership, $30; salary of Bible reader in Japan, $90.

Mrs. Tenny read the delegate's report from the annual assembly of Philadelphia Board of Mssnh Chunk.

"Thankfulness" was the subject of an address by Miss E. M. Colton.

The ladies of the church provided a luncheon at noon for the visiting delegates and the service was resumed at two o'clock, as follows: Hymn, "Home for Chinese girls in San Francisco," Mrs. Boyd; prayer, Mrs. Barnes, Mrs. James Holcomb, Ibanez, India; hymn and "Loyal to our Boards," Mrs. L. L. H. Pierson; offertory; reports of committees; prayer; doxology; benediction.

A "HICKEY" CASE IN COURT.

Neighbors' Troubles Aired this Morning.

A neighborly affair occupied the attention of the city court the best part of this morning, the interested parties being Mr. D. MacDonald, Mrs. Hickey and Mrs. Sweeney. They all live in close proximity to each other on Fourth street, near Plainfield avenue, hence the cause of the disturbance. Mrs. Hickey was arrested on complaint of Mrs. McDonald for alleged assault and battery. Mrs. McDonald said that Mrs. Hickey had called her names and told a new neighbor, a Mrs Stiles, to have nothing to do with her, or she would get into trouble." According to Mrs. McDonald's story Mrs. Hickey hailed to her as much as she dressed up a hoe, by putting a hat on it, and placed it in the yard for her to talk to. What the conversation was that passed between Mrs. Hickey and Mrs. "hoe" was not put in evidence.

The thing of testimony was frequently interrupted by "Joe" Willet who was pounding his cell door, thinking it was an enemy. "Joe" had the delirium tremens of the worst form.

After hearing all their grievances, the judge took a hand and gave the women a talking to, which they will not soon forget, and dismissed the case.

Mrs. Hickey's lawyer was Mr. Walter L. Hatfield. Mrs. McDonald was her own counsel.

SCARED BY A PORTRAIT.

A Sumptown Horse Runs Away on North Avenue.

Mrs. Peter Keenan of Sumptown drove to Plainfield, in a carriage, this morning, to do some shopping. She left her horse tied to a post on North avenue. An agent came along carrying a large crayon portrait. He passed close by Mrs. Keenan's horse. This was a new experience for the Sumptown quadruped. Getting a portrait was out of line, and with a sudden jerk the animal broke loose and dashed down North avenue and into Park at a rapid gait. As the frightened beast turned the corner the carriage upset, throwing the stricken Mrs. Keenan from it and left in the wagon, while finishing her business. The overturned vehicle somewhat checked the runaway speed, but it managed to drag its load as far as the railroad bridge, where Dog Catcher Frisbie, ran to the rescue, and, with the assistance of Justice Nash, the animal was arrested. It was not placed in the lockup, however. The wagon was badly damaged, the harness completely demolished. The horse was uninjured. It is not known whose portrait the agent was carrying.

No Charge for Admission.

At Vincent chapel this evening Mrs. Clinton B. Fisk will give the address at the anniversary of the Woman's Home Missionary Society. There will be singing and interesting exercises. All are cordially invited. No charge for admission.

A Worthy Case for Charity.

[From THE NEWS of yesterday.]

The family of the late John E. Yose are in a sore affliction. Saturday night Mrs. Yose's youngest child was taken sick with diphtheria, and Sunday night the mother was also stricken with the same disease. They had no one to nurse them at first, but through the efforts of the members of Gazelle Engine Company and Hook and Ladder No. 1, a woman was procured as nurse. It being a contagious disease it was hard to find anyone willing to run the risk. The firemen are seeing that everything that can be done for the sufferers is done. A little baby is also ill. They are reported to-day as much improved. Dr. Fritts is attending them. Mr. Yose was buried but a few days ago.

The following refers to the above:

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—I wish to call special attention to the destitute circumstances of Mrs. Yose of Second street, widow of the late John E. Yose, buried on Sunday last. I write this to ask that you insert a notice in your paper informing the people of Plainfield of her pitiful condition and also to ask for help in the way of contributions, which can be left at E. M. Laing's No. 5 Park avenue, or at Geo. W. Rockefellow's also of Park avenue. I am sure the request will be liberally responded to by your readers, the good people of Plainfield. Respectfully,

A. B. L.

Col. Elliott P. Shepard's Will.

Colonel Elliott F. Shepard's will, filed for probate at New York, yesterday, disposes of $1,350,000. The will puts the bulk of the property in trust for his wife and children. The Mail and Express and his other corporate interests form part of the trust.

He gives his wife a life interest in all the real estate and household furniture, etc., in lieu of dower. To the trustees of the Presbytery of New York is given $100,000, and a further sum of $50,000 for the Seventh Presbyterian Church. To the St. Paul Institute at Tarsus, in Asia Minor, he leaves $100,000. His brother, Augustus Dennis Shepard, of East Front street, gets $50,000.

The remainder of his property is left to his wife, to his brother, Augustus Dennis, and to his son, Elliott F. Shepard, Jr., as trustees, for the benefit of his children. If all the trustees die or become incapable the Central Union Trust Company to succeed them.

Put in Prison for Looking at His Betrothed.

Hasan was betrothed to Fatmah, daughter of Omar Effendi. But trying to see her face one day, he was about to lose her, for the rule of the country is that women should cover their faces before the other sex. Any how he was put in prison because he succeeded at last in seeing her, and consequently lost her for good. Those who want to hear the story in full should go to the meeting of Y. M. C. A. rooms to morrow evening, at eight o'clock, where Mr. Kattish, a native of Syria will describe the customs of carriages illustrating with native costumes. Admission will be free.

Amusements.

The Music Hall manager says: "There are some very pretty musical numbers scattered throughout 'U and I' to be given in Music Hall to-morrow night. The ladies of the company are nice looking, while the male portion is far above the average. Takes altogether 'U and I' is an entertainment well worth seeing, and it is a sure cure for the blues."

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

An Advance of Three Cents in Wheat.

CHICAGO, April 12, (Special.)—The threat of a dollar a bushel for May wheat seemed about to be realized to-day.

Amid intense excitement the market suddenly shot up over three cents on top of the great recent advance of nearly 12 cents.

At 90 cents, however, there was a sudden sheer descent of six cents, followed by a rapid rebound of three cents.

Sliney Frightened the Passengers.

NEW YORK, April 12. (Special.)—Michael Sliney, the murderer of Butcher Lyons, whose sentence of death was commuted by Gov. Flower to life imprisonment on the ground of insanity, created a scene while being transferred to Matteawan. He poked his elbow through a car window, causing considerable excitement among the passengers.

One for Uncle Sam.

PARIS, April 12. (Special.)—The Court of Arbitration on the Behring Sea has decided not to admit for the present the British supplementary report. This is a victory for the American side of the contention on that question.

ELIZABETH'S ELECTION.

Councilmen Favoring the Race Tracks Elected.

Elections were held at Elizabeth yesterday for Aldermen and School Commissioners in the odd numbered wards of the city. The only issue at stake was the race track, and the Councilmen who voted to license the track, in every instance, so far as heard from, came out ahead.

The only doubtful ward was the Fifth, where the anti-race track Republicans put forth big efforts to beat the party nominee, Augustus Peel, because he voted to license the jockey club track. Latest advices, however, indicate that Peel won. The other Aldermen chosen were Lawrence O'Donnell, Dem., First Ward; James Deakyne, Dem., Third Ward; Peyton Horsfield, Rep., Seventh Ward; Francis Ingel, Dem., Ninth Ward, and William H. Corbin, Rep., Eleventh Ward. The latter got a bad scratching from his constituents because he championed the cause of the farmers under the railroad tracks and closed Morris avenue. He won only by a small majority.

The Republicans elected their candidates for School Commissioners in four out of the six wards. The Republicans elected the candidate in one ward, and and the Fifth Ward is doubtful. The next Board of Aldermen as well as the Board of Education will be safely Democratic.

A Republican Cyclone at Rahway.

A Republican cyclone swept Rahway yesterday. They elect Daly mayor, over Judge Hyer, by 120 majority, elect all four Councilmen, water commissioner, two school commissioners, two freeholders, and control the board of education. The result is a handsome endorsement of the wise and able manner in rule after a dozen years of Democratic misrule. The next Common Council will have but two Democratic members out of twelve. Halliday, Democratic freeholder, defeated, is the present director of the board. The Democratic majority in the Board of Freeholders will now be one.

New Jersey's First Locomotive.

Yesterday the first locomotive ever run in New Jersey was run from Elizabeth to South Amboy. It was the John Bull and it drew two of the old-fashioned passenger cars.

For some months the John Bull has been undergoing repairs in the Meadow shops and has been put in condition for exhibit at Chicago, where it will be taken soon. Yesterday's run, the first trial since the repairs have been completed, was to South Amboy and return. The little engine made the run from the Meadows to Elizabeth, a distance of ten miles, in about an hour.

De Voe's Predictions.

De Voe predicts cold weather and danger of frosts even in the South up to April 12. The Summer will be hot with plenty of showers until August. August, September and October will be dry. The severest storms will occur from the 1st to 4th and 5th to 20th of April, both storms will be followed by remarkably cold weather extending into the Gulf States. He expects a very severe snow storm the 17th of April, extending from North Carolina to Maine.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Don't pour your wrongs and sorrows into other people's ears. They have enough of their own already.

When some people get to heaven, they will be surprised to find they do not take nearly so much of a seat as they expected to.

In Emporia, Kan., the men seem inclined to leave the voting business to women. On the spring registration lists the names of women exceeded those of men by 271.

Carborundum, the new material which will take the place of diamond powder for polishing the hardest precious stones, is the invention of Mr. E. G. Acheson of Monongahela, Pa.

Perhaps railroad corporations will give some thought to T. V. Powderly's opinion on the Ann Arbor case. Speaking of Judge Ricks' injunction against the boycotters, Powderly says, "Whatever way it may end, it is in direct line with what the labor organizations have been striving for during the past five or six years—namely, the nationalization of railroads."

The Southern Live Stock Journal says that the 7,000,000 bales of cotton made by the planters this year are worth as much to them as the 9,000,000 bales were that they raised last year, and that they are the gainers by raising crops of corn, cowpeas and other grains and vegetables for home consumption, which they did this year to a much greater extent than usual.

The Bethlehem iron company's employees may feel comfortable in their minds for some time to come. The heavy armor plate ordered by congress for vessels of the new navy will require five years to complete. Two million dollars' worth of this heavy armor has been ordered from the Bethlehem company, and $1,800,000 worth from the Carnegie company. Meantime let us hope the United States will have no war on her hands for the next five years at least.

Count Alexander Sajonkowski, the last scion of a noble house, is a restaurant waiter in New York. People find their level in America—even noblemen—but Sajonkowski had very little common sense. He needed only to make his high rank known in order to marry the daughter of a first class American millionaire. Perhaps that may be what he means to do after all, since he has applied for divorce from his old-country wife. We hereby lay that to before our millionaire young lady readers, so that if one of them wants a count for a husband she can follow up the clew.

The prison parole system will be tried in California. the governor having approved the act to that effect. Under this system prisoners who have served a part of their term and have good conduct during that time to their credit may be released on parole during the rest of their term. If during this time of probation they lead honorable and industrious lives, then at the end of the term the sentence is canceled. They are watched closely during the probation and rearrested and made to serve out the full remaining term if caught in any misdemeanor. The advocates of this plan believe it will encourage ex-convicts to become good citizens. In California 1,000 prisoners will be let out on parole under the new law.

Agricultural Depression.

In this century the price of wheat has not ruled so low as it has done this spring. Cotton was down to the bottom last year, although it is a little better at present. Petroleum and corn are alike depressed in price. All the raw products which America ships abroad share the same fate. The feeling of dullness in agricultural circles is only relieved by the upward tendency of the beef and pork market. If farmers had now only as much valma in fat beeves and hogs as they had excess of wheat last fall, they would be collectively better off by many hundred thousand dollars than they are.

The low price of grain and petroleum is due, economists say, to overproduction. Russia is our most formidable competitor in petroleum, not to speak of the vast wheatfields which she pits against ours. Hungarian wheat is considered in European markets of superior quality to ours. Egypt and India pour the wheat which their low priced labor has produced into the European market. American elevators are still gorged with wheat awaiting sale. Enough of it will undoubtedly be consumed during the World's fair to make an impression on the store. Undoubtedly, too, in another generation our population will have grown to near the line of the country's wheat producing capacity.

But meantime the remedy is for farmers not to raise so much wheat and corn. This country is varied enough in climate and soil to grow almost anything that will grow. If the agricultural experiment stations do not teach farmers how to vary production and make land pay, they will not be worth the money they cost. When everybody raises potatoes, all the world gets sick of potatoes. The way out of the present agricultural stagnation is in varied production, and it ought not to take more than two years to get out. If farmers will use their brains and intelligence, every man can decide for himself on something that will help him out.

A DEAN OF DIPLOMATS.

COREA NEEDS TO BE DISCIPLINED.

Embassador Pauncefote Presented to the President.

Americans Are Treated Badly There and a War Vessel Has Been Sent to the Scene. Secretary Morton Talks About Robert Blaine's Removal—Charges Discussed.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—There was an interesting scene in the Blue room of the executive mansion on the occasion of the formal presentation to the president of Sir Julian Pauncefote in his new capacity of embassador from Great Britain to the United States. Sir Julian in presenting his letter of credentials from the queen said that in doing so her majesty had manifested her constant desire to draw more closely together the bonds which happily unite the two countries.

President Cleveland in replying to the embassador was equally felicitous in speech. He expressed the satisfaction with which the nation interpreted the action of the queen in conferring upon her representative at Washington the highest rank known to diplomatic intercourse of nations as a marked proof of friendly consideration, that tended to draw into the closest amity two peoples having common ties of blood, of speech and of history.

That the government appreciated and cordially reciprocated the action of her majesty was already demonstrated by the prompt elevation of the mission of the United States to England to the same dignity with which Sir Julian was invested. In offering to Sir Julian his personal congratulations the president also desired him to convey to the queen the heartfelt wishes of the people of the United States for her welfare and the continued prosperity and peace of the British people.

Among those who witnessed the ceremony were Secretary Gresham, Assistant Secretary Quincy, Assistant Secretary Adee, Hon. Michael H. Herbert, the first secretary and the attachees of the British legation.

The presentation of Sir Julian as embassador to the United States carries with it the position of dean of the diplomatic corps, a place now held by Baron Fava, the minister from Italy. M. Patenotre, the French embassador, will next be presented.

The Duke Will Be Entertained Well.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Captain F. W. Dickins of the navy, who has been detailed to receive the Duke of Veragua and his party on their arrival at New York and extend them courtesies while here, has in teresting programme mapped out for their entertainment.

The duke and party are expected to arrive in New York the latter part of this week, and Captain Dickins will go down the bay on a revenue cutter and bring them to the city. While there they will stay at the Waldorf hotel and during their stay in the city will be the recipients of much attention. Later the party will come to Washington and on the 24th will be presented to President Cleveland. On the 26th they will leave here for New York, where they will witness the naval review, and after that their future itinerary includes a visit to Chicago via Niagara Falls and another visit to Washington prior to their return home.

Investigated In Secret.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The senate went into executive session almost immediately after it met, notwithstanding the objection of Senator Hoar. The proposed investigation into Senator Roach's career was taken up behind closed doors, and there was a long running debate between the Republican senators, who insisted upon the investigation, and the Democratic senators, who opposed it. At last a spirit of compromise prevailed, and an understanding, which was not put to writing and was differently construed by different senators, was reached, that the committee on privileges and elections should meet and agree upon a compromise resolution proposing an investigation into the charges, but milder in form than the resolution of Senator Hoar. The matter thus went over for the day. The general impression is that the session is certain to continue till the close of the present week and is likely to run into next week.

Concerning Robert Blaine's Removal.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Secretary Morton, speaking of criticisms of him for the removal of Robert G. Blaine from the position of chief of the quarantine division of the bureau of animal industry, said that when he took charge of the department of agriculture he found Mr. Blaine occupying a position with practically no duties to perform and drawing a salary of $2,000 per annum. It was one of the most evident sinecures in the department, and he could not consistently allow it to remain, even if Mr. Blaine's incumbency happened to be the brother of the late James G. Blaine. If he had been the brother of President Cleveland the result would have been the same he said.

A Naval Shake Up.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—It is understood that there will be a general shakeup in the navy department. Secretary Herbert believes in keeping the ships at sea, and a number of changes of stations of vessels will be made.

Admiral Gherardi will be probably detached from sea duty and end his last year on the active list as superintendent of the naval academy. Admiral Walker will also be given a shore berth as commander at one of the navy yards. The command of the north Atlantic squadron will fall to Admiral Benham.

A Warship Sent to Corea.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—News has been received at the department of state that trouble exists in Corea as a result of which some Americans are being ill treated. The officials are averse to discussing the matter or giving out many particulars. The trouble was grave enough to warrant the presence in Corean waters of a United States war vessel. It is understood that Rear Admiral Harmony, commanding the Asiatic station, has been ordered to send a ship in the scene of the trouble.

No Salutes Over Grant's Grave.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Many citizens of New York have expressed the opinion that it would be a fitting tribute to the memory of General Grant to have the ships participating in the naval review in the Hudson river fire a salute at that time over the old hero's grave at Riverside park. Secretary Herbert says that it will not be practicable.

Poisoned by Wild Carrots.

TAUNTON, Mass., April 12.—Manuel Rose, 12 years old, ate wild carrots and died within an hour.

NO REASON FOR CLEMENCY.

Recorder Smyth Writes Governor Flower About the Carlyle Harris Case.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Accompanying the letter sent by District Attorney Nicoll to Governor Flower concerning the Carlyle Harris case was this note from Recorder Smyth:

To His Excellency, the Governor of the State of New York:

The case on the defendant's appeal to the court of appeals, a printed copy of which I am informed has heretofore been forwarded to your excellency, contains all the evidence which was given upon the defendant's motion for a new trial, copies of which the district attorney will forward to you with the accompanying letter, embodying all facts of the case which have come to my knowledge since the trial.

Upon the facts presented upon the trial and also upon the facts subsequently established upon the motion for a new trial, all of which were carefully examined and considered by the court, said motion. I am forced to the conviction that no legal or sufficient reason exists against the enforcement of the judgment pronounced against the defendant. I therefore concur with the district attorney in recommending that the executive clemency asked for in the petitions be refused. I am very respectfully yours,

F. SMYTH, Recorder.

Methodists Condemn Parochial Schools.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., April 12.—The Methodist conference completed its work at the evening session. St. Paul's church was filled, and the service was a lively one. The first breeze was caused by the Rev. W. S. Winans, who offered a resolution on the subject of the admission of women delegates to conference. A committee was appointed to take charge of the matter and report at the next conference. Dr. J. M. King introduced a lengthy preamble and resolution upon the action of the Roman Catholic church in urging, under the direction of Mgr. Satolli, the establishment of parochial with public schools in localities where the Catholic churches are not strong enough to keep their parochial schools on an equal footing with the public schools. He was interrupted by outbursts of applause.

Jordan Gets a Plum.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The president sent the following nomination to the senate: Edward H. Strobel of New York to be assistant secretary of state; Daniel N. Morgan of Connecticut to be treasurer of the United States; Conrad N. Jordan of New York to be assistant treasurer of the United States at New York city; Henry L. Peckham of Rhode Island to be a third lieutenant in the revenue cutter service; Daniel M. Browning of Illinois to be commissioner of Indian affairs; Frank O. Armstrong of Washington, D. C., to be assistant commissioner of Indian affairs.

Governor Flower Gives a Dinner.

ALBANY, April 12.—Governor Flower gave a dinner to the members of the senate at the executive mansion. Besides the senators and the governor the only guests present were Lieutenant Governor Sheehan, Senate Clerk Charles T. Dunning, Speaker Fuller, Assembly Clerk Charles R. Defreest, Leader Quigley of the assembly, Mr. J. B. Taylor of Watertown, the governor's son-in-law, and Private Secretary T. S. Williams.

Silney Smashed a Window.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 12.—Silney, the murderer, who was sentenced to death, but whose sentence the governor recently commuted on the ground of insanity, was taken to the Sullivan county asylum for insane criminals. On his way up from Sing Sing he managed to get one of his arms free and pushed his elbow through a car window, smashing the glass and causing considerable excitement on the train.

The Celebrated Ex-Newsboy's Suit.

CHICAGO, April 12.—The case of Eugene Dunnivant, the ex-newsboy, against Millionaire Orrin W. Potter for $100,000 damages for alleged conspiracy in railroading Dunnivant to the penitentiary on a charge of robbery, was dismissed, the plaintiff refusing to proceed after being denied a continuance. The suit has been pending for several years.

Burned In Their Cabin.

GREENVILLE, S. C., April 12.—News reached here that the bodies of E. W. Hensely, wife, a grown daughter and 12-year-old son were found in the ruins of their cabin. They lived 30 miles above here on the side of Grassy mountain in a remote and secluded section. Investigation is being made.

Backed Off the Dock.

KINGSTON, N. Y., April 12.—John Ryan and David Freer, farmers residing at St. Remy, were drowned in the Rondout creek. They were backing their team of horses slowly, they backed the hay rigging on which they were riding and the team off the dock in the darkness.

The Work Rushing On.

CHICAGO, April 12.—All the men who were on strike were ordered to work. But a heavy rain rendered outdoor work impossible. To-day a larger force than ever will be put on, and the buildings will be rushed to completion.

Tired of Exile.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Fred May, who has been in exile for some years in South America, walks into the district attorney's office prepared to give himself up to answer an indictment against him for assault on a policeman.

Senators Seeing Prisons.

SING SING, April 12.—A delegation of Massachusetts state senators was shown through the Sing Sing prison. The delegation was appointed by Governor Russell to visit various prisons throughout the country.

The Umbrella Blow Was Fatal.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 12.—Charles Lynott, aged 16, while playing with other boys, accidentally hit him in the eye with the rib of an umbrella. Blood poisoning resulted from the injury and death followed.

FOUND DYNAMITE BOMBS

Long Island Anarchists Plotted to Blow Up a Factory.

THE SECRET TOLD FOR REVENGE.

The Workmen In the Maspeth Whisting Works Were Nearly All Anarchists—The Leader Has Gone—A Handful of Dynamite In Each Bomb.

MASPETH, L. I., April 12.—A dynamite was bomb found under R. V. Crandall's Standard Whisting works in this place. It was discovered through the "peaching" of an anarchist, who believed his former associates were ready to betray him.

Mr. Crandall's works were burned to the ground on the night of Dec. 29, 1892. It was believed at the time that the incendiary origin, and Otto Eckhold, 48 years old, was the man Mr. Crandall suspected. It was not until last February that Mr. Crandall felt he had sufficient evidence on which to have Eckhold arrested. The man was locked up in the Queens county jail, in Long Island City, pending the investigation of the case by the grand jury.

He sent for Constable George Koch of Maspeth on Monday and said to him:

"You go to Crandall's works, and under the stable you'll find some bombs. It is not stable you'll find some bombs. It is somewhere about there. I put a handful of bombs and a lot of loose dynamite. Henry Ruppreeht and I put them there."

Found the Bomb.

The constable went to Maspeth as fast as an electric railroad which runs up hill and down could carry him.

"There's dynamite under you," he almost gasped to Mr. Crandall, who only laughed.

The constable finally succeeded in getting Mr. Crandall to listen seriously to the story Eckhold had told. It was decided then to investigate. The whisting works are a series of frame buildings erected on brick supports a few feet above the ground. The stable is in the rear of the Main building. Under the constable and the foreman crawled under it.

They examined the ground very closely and came out with a bomb in their hands, which was torn. Koch to Mr. Campbell's office and inspected with remarkable tenderness. The bundle was in a newspaper and was tied with belt line. W. B. Hastings had been out and the paper removed the three men gazed on what looked like the globe valve of an engine. It was about 3 inches long and 1½ inches thick. The ends were cut off each end and at the top was plugged. In the top plug was drilled a hole, through which ran a fuse. This fuse was wound around the bomb.

Soaked It In Water.

The bomb was placed in a bucket of water and after a night's soaking Constable Koch took it away. He is going to examine it when he has given it another soaking. No trace could be found of the other bombs and the loose dynamite Eckhold said was under the stable.

Eckhold, in the Queen's county jail, said: "I put the dynamite bombs under the stable. Ruppreeht, who was Mr. Crandall's foreman, made them in the engine room of the works. He was the leader of the anarchists of Maspeth. The majority of Mr. Crandall's men were anarchists. Every one of them were afraid of Ruppreeht. I was one of the anarchists, but because I didn't agree with them they tried to get me in trouble. One night about a year ago he and I took the bombs from the engine room to hide them some place. We selected the stable.

"I, being the smaller man, crawled under the stable and hid the bombs there and then put a package of loose dynamite with them. There were two globe valves in the engine room, and Ruppreeht said they were just the things to fill with dynamite and make bombs. He put a handful of dynamite in each globe valve."

Anarchist Ruppreeht left Maspeth about a week ago and has not been seen since.

The Fleet Complete Now.

FORT MONROE, Va., April 12.—When the Bancroft came into the harbor she made three complete circuits, which were watched by the admiral and staff and every jack tar on board. The Bennington, which had been under repairs at the Norfolk navy yard for the past three weeks, arrived at 6 p. m. and saluted Admiral Gherardi's flagship. On signaling for orders she was directed to proceed up the bay and join the fleet outside the Capes for practice drill.

Boston Honors Bishop Brooks.

BOSTON, April 12.—A large and sympathetic audience gathered in Music hall to listen to the eulogy of the late Bishop Phillips Brooks, D. D., under the auspices of the order of Knights of Pythias, delivered by Rev. M. J. Savage. The eulogist selected for the occasion was Samuel Elliots, LL.D., but owing to an attack of laryngitis he was unable to be present and the address was read by Colonel Charles B. Codman.

Married Her Father's Coachman.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Miss Georgie Webster, the pretty adopted daughter of Mr. G. F. Hawley, a wealthy dentist, left her home to wed the man who has until lately been driving Dr. Hawley's carriage and caring for his horses. There was no elopement, but Miss Georgie declared that she loved the man, the man loved her, they were going to be married, and married they were.

Strike Threatened on Lake Shore.

TOLEDO, April 12.—Next Friday the engineers on the Lake Shore, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern will wait upon General Superintendent Cannif with an application for reinstatement. These are the men who recently quit work rather than haul cars of the Ann Arbor road. If Mr. Cannif refuses to take the men back a general strike will follow.

Astor Buys Ancestral Halls.

LONDON, April 12.—William Waldorf Astor has bought Cliveden, the historic estate of Cliveden, on the banks of the Thames, from the Duke of Westminster. The sum paid is said to be $1,250,000. Cliveden is at Maidenhead, Berks, and is one of the ancestral seats of the duke.

The Hardenbrook Election.

HOBENSTOWN, N. J., April 12.—In the election here John O. Hudson, the Democratic candidate for mayor, was elected by five majority. This will be his fifteenth term as mayor. The Republicans have two majority in the board of councilmen.

No Prize Fights In Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., April 12.—Superintendent of Police William H. Brown instructed the police captains that hereafter the law forbidding all kinds of all observers must be observed and all violators arrested.

STARVING IN A FREIGHT CAR.

John Driscoll Was Locked In Almost a Week Without Food or Drink.

PITTSBURG, April 12.—In a freight car standing on a siding on the Allegheny Valley railroad a man was discovered moaning piteously and feebly rolling from side to side. He was in the last stage of starvation.

He was John Driscoll of Buffalo. Last Wednesday night, while partially under the influence of liquor, he crawled into an empty car, intending to pass the night in its shelter. During the night the car was locked and started for Pittsburg. According to the story given he had been without food or drink for 144 hours.

A Nest of Anarchists.

PITTSBURG, April 12.—The headquarters of over 100 Russian anarchists was discovered in this city by the police authorities at a hall at the corner of Fifth avenue and Chestnut street. During the past few weeks circulars condemning everything American were circulated in this city, and the police have been trying to locate the authors. With the aid of a Russian detective the police finally located the reds. As they have committed no unlawful act they were not arrested, but were notified to cease holding any further meetings in this city. If this order is not obeyed they will be driven from the city.

Important Bills Passed.

HARRISBURG, April 12.—The senate passed a bill empowering the insurance commissioner, when satisfied that the assets of any mutual company are insufficient to justify its continuance in business, to direct that the deficiency be made good within 90 days. The house passed bills creating boards of arbitration to settle all disputes between labor and capital, and prohibiting the employment of telegraph operators handling train orders who shall be under 20 years of age.

Returned His Salary to the People.

MEADVILLE, Pa., April 12.—Congressman J. C. Sibley made public a communication addressed to the grangers' alliances and labor unions of Erie and Crawford counties. In the letter the Hon. Mr. Sibley said: "Permit me to most respectfully return to you such sum which you, as the representatives of labor, have chiefly contributed to the government to provide for my salary for the two years to which I am elected, which salary aggregates the sum of $10,000."

Little Trouble Expected.

PITTSBURG, April 12.—The Amalgamated association and the Manufacturers association are busily discussing the demands they will make when the time comes for adjusting the iron scale in June. Both sides are moving cautiously and the desire seems to be mutual that no cause for serious dispute may arise. It is believed that the scale will be agreed upon this year with less difficulty than usual.

Murder and Suicide.

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., April 12.—George Bradley, a well known colored man, went home and flew into a rage at his 7-year-old boy. Picking up a piece of plank the man beat the child to death. Horrified at what he had done Bradley got some rat poison and he and his wife both took a dose of it. Then Bradley cut his throat. Bradley will die, but it is thought his wife may recover.

New Mayor In a Hurry.

CLEVELAND, April 12.—The fight over the possession of mayor's office in this city was ended when the director of law decided that Robert Bliss, the Democratic mayor elect, was mayor in fact. Mayor Rose promptly turned over to him the office, and the members of Mayor Rose's cabinet resigned, and the city went into the control of the Democrats.

Clothing Strike Near an End.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The great fight between the United Garment Workers and the Manufacturers' association is approaching the beginning of the end. The struggle has lasted nearly three weeks, but today a committee from each of the opposing factions are to meet with a view of arranging an amicable conclusion.

An Insane Drummer.

LANCASTER, Pa., April 12.—Undersheriff H. H. Moore of the county prison had a desperate struggle with an insane prisoner who tried to kill him. The prisoner's name was J. C. Van Nostran, formerly of Wilkesbarre, a drummer, who was committed to jail to wait trial on a charge of embezzlement.

Street Cars Crashed Together.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—A runaway cable car collided with a hobtail at Frankfort street and Columbia avenue. Both cars were wrecked, and Mrs. M. H. Truitt was thrown from the motor car, sustaining serious injuries. Eighteen others were badly cut by the flying glass.

Boston Chinamen Hire Lawyers.

BOSTON, April 12.—The Chinamen in this city have held meetings during the past day or two and have decided to co-operate with their brethern in this country in forcing an issue as to the constitutionality of the Geary law, also to engage counsel to protect them locally.

They Will Not Register.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 12. — Notwithstanding the modification of the regulations requiring the Chinese to register the Six Companies are determined that their subjects shall not register under any circumstances and the Chinese are obeying the orders.

Cardinal Gibbons' Many Visitors.

BALTIMORE, April 12.—Archbishops and bishops on their way to the meeting of the board of directors of the Roman Catholic University at Washington have been dropping in to see his eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, for the past two days.

Ask For Fair Play.

HARTFORD, April 12.—The state prison directors publish a card asking a suspension of judgment in the matter of the charges against the management until both sides have been heard by the committee.

A Lake Champlain Hotel Burned.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., April 12.—The Willsboro Point hotel, Lake Champlain, the meeting place of the American Canoe association for the past two years, was burned.

Harris Has Not Yet Accepted.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—Mr. Joseph H. Harris has as yet given no notice as to whether he will accept the presidency of the Reading railroad, though it is well understood that he will assume the position.

Wholesale Slaughter of Bills.

TRENTON, April 12.—On Governor Werts' last day for action on bills passed by the late legislature he killed 49 of them by filing in the state library.

ENTOMBED IN A MINE.

Unknown Number of Miners Dying Below the Surface.

FIRE ADDS HORROR TO THE SCENE.

Explosion In a Welch Mine Caused Many Deaths—Burning Timbers Were Rushed Back by Flames—Two Hundred Men Were In the Fatal Seam.

LONDON, April 12.—A frightful mining accident occurred at Ponty-Pridd, Wales. A spark from an engine ignited the gas in the coal pit near Ponty-Pridd and caused the gas to explode. A large number of miners were at work at the time, and the explosion caused terrible havoc. It was at first reported that 30 persons were killed and many others more or less seriously injured, but later accounts showed the situation to be more appalling than at first supposed. Three hundred men are entombed. The engine house is in timbers, and there is the greatest fear that hundreds may have perished.

The rescuers who went down were driven back without being able to bring up more than five of the dead and the fate of the other miners is in doubt. The most agonizing scenes are witnessed and throngs of men, women and children, relatives of those below, are crowded about the mouth of the coal pit.

The pit is worked in sections, one seam being above another. The fire resulting from the explosion broke out in the eastern section. From this section 70 men succeeded in reaching the surface through the main dip working, led by a miner who knew the roads. They had a terrible struggle to get out, forcing their way through fire and smoke. Many of them were scorched and all were terribly exhausted when they emerged to safety. They brought no good news as to those who were left behind, but on the contrary expressed their dread that all those in the mine had perished.

Two Hundred Men In the Seam.

Flames and smoke gave to the 200 men at work in the seam the first warning of approaching danger. All ran toward the landing. Many were overtaken by the fire and smoke, fell and were left to their fate by their comrades in advance of them. Comparatively few of the men who were in the seam at the time of the explosion reached the landing.

At the entrance of the shaft a rescue party was formed by the pit surveyor. The party got as far as the landing at the seam where the fire started, but was driven back almost immediately by the dense smoke issuing from the seam. The surveyor took his men back to the surface. After a half hour's rest they went down again and forced their way 10 yards into the workings.

They found four dead bodies, which they brought back with them. Attempts to go further into the workings were vain, as the woodwork was burning and masses of ruins were falling incessantly from the roof. One of the rescue party who ventured too far was killed. The men who saved themselves immediately after the fire broke out were too much confused and frightened to observe the positions of their fellow workmen. They are unable to give any clear account of the distribution of the miners, and the work of rescue must therefore proceed under the difficulties of uncertainty. Not only are scores of miners' families at the mouth of the pit, but also the men who were saved and men of the other shifts. There are numerous volunteers to undertake the work of rescue as soon as it becomes possible. At present the flames and smoke would render any such undertaking vain, if not fatal to the party making the descent.

Death by Fire or Suffocation.

There is little doubt, moreover, that most if not all of the men left below have been suffocated or burned to death.

Hand grenades, barrels of water and pipes attached to fire engines on the surface are being used to extinguish the flames in the mine. In two sections of the mine the fire was put out. The extinction of the flames has been followed in each case, however, by the accumulation of gas, and it is feared that explosions may follow shortly.

Another attempt to enter the 4-foot seam in which the fire started has proved resultless. Although the rescue party saw six dead bodies, they were prevented by smoke and heat from reaching them. Where the fire had been extinguished they were also unable to make any progress, as they could not remain in the foul atmosphere.

Fire is breaking out in the seam again, burning in all sections of the mine near the shaft. The service pipe which was used to pour water into the mine burst.

Death of Bloomfield Usher.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., April 12—Bloomfield Usher of Potsdam, who was state senator in 1856 and 1857, died at his home, aged 80 years. He was president of the First National bank of Potsdam.

He Took Strychnine.

AUBURN, N. Y., April 12.—William Impson, 60 years of age, committed suicide at Moravia by taking 10 grains of strychnine.

NEW JERSEY ELECTIONS.

Jersey City Elected a Republican Aldermanic at Large by a Small Margin.

JERSEY CITY, April 12.—The charter election in this city went Republican, but by a greatly reduced majority. Reuben Simpson is elected over Charles W. Allen, but his majority will not exceed 500. Two years ago Allen carried the city by nearly 3,300. The Democrats elect four aldermen and the Republicans two. The new board of freeholders will be eight Democrats and three Republicans.

In Hoboken the Democrats elect Lawrence Fagan mayor over John Tangeman by about 300 majority. The aldermen will be about evenly divided.

PATERSON, N. J., April 12.—Christian Braun, Democratic candidate for mayor, was elected by about 500 majority over Thomas Beveridge, Republican.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., April 12.—In the city election here the Democrats elected Van Cleaf mayor and Dunn assessor.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 12.—The charter election in Passaic resulted in W. R. Bruyn being re-elected mayor by a majority of 100 votes over John J. Slater. Brown was an independent candidate while Slater had the Republican nomination.

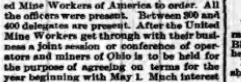
BELVIDERE, N. J., April 12.—The election resulted in the choice of the race track candidate for mayor. It was one of the most hotly contested elections ever held in this town.

Miners In Convention.

COLUMBUS, April 12.—President McBride called the national convention of the United Mine Workers of America to order. All the officers were present. Between 300 and 400 delegates are present. After the United Mine Workers get through with their business a joint session or conference of operators and miners of Ohio is to be held for the purpose of agreeing on terms for the year beginning with May 1. Much interest is felt in other states as to the outcome of the conference between miners and operatives, as the Hocking Valley has much to do with fixing the market for the west.

The Vineland Mystery.

VINELAND, N. J., April 12.—The body of James P. Tynor, the aged miser who was found dead on Saturday last, was buried in Oak Hill cemetery. The stomach of the deceased has been sent to Philadelphia for analysis. Louis P. Keker of Richmond, Tynor's son-in-law, said he felt sure at first that his father-in-law had been poisoned, but now he had his doubts. Thomas Hoard, who was mortally wounded, has somewhat improved. Every effort is being made to locate his assailant, but no distinct clew is yet in sight.



TARTAN WAISTS.

An Addition to the Wardrobe That Cannot Be Neglected.

Speaking of tartan silk waists suggests the great diversity of designs shown now in the silk bodices which have become one of the necessary luxuries of good dressing. The plaided and figured silks are used as well as the changeable taffetas and wash fabrics of silk. There is the Josephine waist, which is gathered all about the neck, down the shoulders and around the bottom. Narrow velvet ribbon is sewn on in the form of a yoke before the waist is made up, and narrow velvet edges the folded belt and is looped in the rosette at the back. Drooping shoulder ruffles and bretelles, which are sloped to a point at the belt, are made of the silk, doubled and cut on the bias, or else the selvedge of the material is used for the edge of the bertha and frills.

The Garibaldi is perhaps the most pleasing design, because it is more unusual than the others. A Garibaldi waist of gray blue silk, with an old rose figure, has a gathered front of plain rose silk. The waist is gathered to a collar formed of narrow strips of satin ribbon and folds of the material. The ribbon edges the point of the waist, which is not fastened anywhere, but opens over the inner waist of rose silk. All the ladies with grownup daughters know just how a Garibaldi waist is made, for the fashion has lost nothing in its Rip Van Winkle sleep of a quarter of a century. It is gathered to the collar and again at the belt. The sleeves are full and gathered to a band not more than two inches wide and finished with a ruffle like the old bishop sleeve. All the pretty plaided shirt waist and blouse will blossom out with the June roses, and fanciful, negligee, picturesque comfort sounds the keynote of the summer mode for mountain and seashore. A few bound slaves of fashion will appear always in bonds and fashionable gowns, but the average woman, and her name is legion, considers the silk shirt waist full dress for summer days.

Directors Bank Officials Near Prison.

BOSTON, April 12.—The consideration of the allowance of the bill of exceptions filed by Asa A. Potter, ex-president of the Maverick National bank, was taken up in the United States circuit court. The result will not be announced until this afternoon. The time for the sentence of Mr. Potter will then be made known. Ex-Cashier Wood and Colonel J. H. French of the Maverick bank will be arraigned on the indictments found against them on Tuesday, April 19.

Received Heavy Damages.

TRENTON, April 12.—Merritt Thorn, a Long Island boy 12 years old, received $13,000 damages from the Western Union Telegraph company. While living in Camden two years ago he was injured for life by attempting to pick up a live wire belonging to the telegraph company. The accident destroyed the boy's nervous system and his memory is gone, and never in the opinion of physicians can it be restored.

A Girl's Suicide.

COLUMBUS, April 12.—Miss Lizzie Miller, daughter of Dr. Miller of Springfield, O., shot herself dead in bed. She was engaged to wed Stewart Graham of Battle Creek, Mich., a cadet at the naval academy. She received a letter from him last night. Another admirer married Lieutenant Clarence Williams of the navy, and another of St. Louis has scored musical triumphs in New York and Berlin.

More Time For Exhibitors.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Director General Davis has extended the time for receiving exhibits at the World's fair from April 20 until April 30. Only about one-third of the exhibits are now on the grounds.

HOMEMADE DESIGNS.

May Be Stamped by the Worker Without Expense.

Etchings on silk, linen or any other smooth material are so popular just now for every kind of home decoration, from the finger doily to the elaborate table cover, that original designs are considered about the newest features in any of them.

Cost of stamping is an item quite considerable to be saved. A blue pencil and various sizes of spools, squares, stars or other geometrical figures readily found in many things about us afford a little originality. Some very pretty designs or groups for corners or border festoons may be stamped and worked by this simple method.

Take, for instance, three sizes of cups, place them one at a time upon the material, circle around with the blue pencil and make a group of circles, one lapping over the other, and work them in shades of the desired color, and you have a design for a fine bedspread, table cover or portiere. This carried out with spools, from the big to the tiny little ones, makes a pretty design for small articles, as doilies or teaches. Another simple design is the 5-pointed star, in sizes that fit one into another. This, worked from the center out in shaded silks, is artistic in effect. Again draw the star in graduated lines, following its points, and finish each line with a V and a group of dots (to be made in French knots), and no prettier design can be found for some simple piece of etching. An endless number of figures may be drawn by making various combinations of circles and stars and crescents, with dots to embellish and fill in the spaces.

To cut a large circle, take a plate or anything at hand that is perfectly round. To cut a hexagon, take a circle, fold it once and then three times and trim off the round edges. To cut a 5-pointed star, take three triangles with the hypothenuse one-third longer than either side. Place them upon one another in position to form five points, fasten them down while you draw the perfect star upon stiff cardboard for your model.

there is much to be said. It is one of the most effective remedies for many ills. If used persistently enough, it will cure nasal catarrh. A weak brine should be made and snuffed up the nose allowing it to run down the throat.

One of the most effective remedies known for a sick headache is to place a pinch of salt on the tongue and allow it to dissolve slowly. In about 10 minutes it may be followed by a drink of water.

There is nothing better for the relief of tired or weak eyes than to bathe them with a strong solution of salt and water, applied as hot as it can be borne.

Salt is most excellent for cleansing the teeth. It hardens the gums and sweetens the breath.

A fresh ink stain on a carpet may be removed by immediately applying a layer of salt. The ink will be absorbed, and when the salt is black it should be removed and another layer applied, repeating the operation until all the ink is removed.

Salt enters into the composition of a sure cure for a felon. Take common rock salt and dry it thoroughly in the oven, pulverize it and mix with an equal quantity of spirits of turpentine. Keep a rag saturated with this solution applied to the affected part for 24 hours, and at the end of that time the felon will have disappeared.

The colored Japanese straw mattings, which are so generally used as floor coverings lately, are best kept sweet and clean by washing them with a solution of salt and water after the weekly sweeping.

An Attractive Corner.

In almost every modern home, the New York Recorder believes, there is at least one corner that can be utilized for what might be called a bench seat. The arrangement shown in the drawing is placed at the foot of the stairway in the

A LESSON FOR ALL.

A Learned Uncle's Discourse on Ananias as a Liar.

My breddren, somewhah in de Sa'me, King David says, "All men am liahs," an den he says, "reputations am often got widout deservin." I want to invite youh t'oughts dis mawnin to de sprance ob one of de liahs showin de truf ob de seron text, "reputations am often got widout deservin."

Ananias was a man, an—he was a liah. But he wahn't a great liah. He wahn't even a right smaht liah. Des a cawmon, enery ch'ry day liah. An yit, my breddrens, look at Ananias today! See de magnifficent reputation as a liah ob dat man! Why, he am d' patron saint ob liahs, an wus bein' you an me wus bohn—'way back, long fo' de wah.

Now, my breddren, we ain' tole dat An anias was a habitnous liah. We ain' tole dat he even pehhimed on'y de one lie, as yit he made the biggest reputation dat a liah or a man—de same t'ing, my breddren —eben made. Why, my breddren, you or me tells mo' lies an bigger lies eb'ry day ob our lives, an yit what kin ob reputations hab we? De mos' ob us none at all.

Probably we ain't got the winnin ways ob ole Ananias. We ain't'y kyar'e nuff to settle fo' goes for as he did. But, my breddren, it wahn't his winnin ways alone dat raised ole Ananias to de pennuckle ob fame. It was his 'predjuice dasta. He might have lived to be es ole es George Washin'ton an nebeh tole anuddier lie. His dyin when he did was the makin ob him.

An now, my breddren, dey is some lessons to be learned fum all dis. If Brudduh Caleb obeh dah 'am notable fo' gin'rosity; if Sister Dinah is notable fo' her meekness, don't you be discon'sged, my po' "Brudduh No'count," kas you isn't notable fo' anyt'ing. Remembeh dat reputatchuns am often got widout deservin; remembeh ole Ananias, wid his mine'bul picayune lie, an do de bes' you kin.

An yo' white folks in de back ob de house, if Brudduh Semmle says he t'anks de Lawd he's honest, if Brudduh 'Rastus tells you he hates de sight ob chicken pie, remembeh dat King David says, "All men am liahs," an keep youh henhouse locked. —Century.

What She Received.

Some years ago a suit was tried before a justice of the peace in a western town in which a lady was plaintiff and a bank defendant.

The evidence on the bank's side was strong, and showed conclusively that the plaintiff had no right to recover. No one could look the shadow of a doubt on this point. Her counsel knew that unless he could get the symmetry of the "squire" for his client her cause was lost. He therefore spoke with gushing eloquence and warmth of his client's rights, and at last succeeded in summoning up two large tears which he suffered to trickle down his cheeks.

At this sight the justice, who was an emotional and tender hearted person, was also moved to tears. The attorney was satisfied that the sympathy of the court was with his client and closed his argument saying:

"It does my heart good to believe that this honorable court in the exercise of a sound discretion will not allow the rights of a noble woman to be trampled beneath the feet of a soulless corporation."

Then he sat down, confident that he should get a judgment. Thereupon the squire rendered the following comprehensive decision:

The plaintiff in this case is a woman, and her counsel has for the last hour touched the sympathy of the court in her behalf, and I am glad of it. But I think under the law that justice is on the side of the bank. I therefore will find in favor of the bank and let the record show that Mrs Blank has the full sympathy of the court. —Youth's Companion.

Friend—Well, I declare! Where were you going?

Young Wife—To prayer meeting.—New York Weekly.

The Bashful Man's Blunder.

A bashful young man had a tender regard for the daughter of a certain farmer living not a great many miles from this city. The young man in question had acquired the habit of visiting on Sunday afternoon the young lady who was the subject of his affection. As time wore on the young man began to feel more at home on his visits to the farmhouse, and from an occasional stopping for supper it grew to be the regular thing with him to eat supper with his prospective parents-in-law. This was very gratifying to the young man, but quite the contrary to the parents-in-law.

He was created coolly by the old folks, but a branch of his own feelings for the young lady and the reciprocity by the young lady was such that a slight coolness was not felt. Upon one of his occasions when the young man was taking Sunday supper with the family the good housewife had prepared a bountiful supply of biscuits. When they had seated themselves at the table the prospective father-in-law passed the plate of biscuits to the bashful young man.

"Have a biscuit?" he said.

The bashful young man set one of the steaming biscuits beside his plate. "Have another; they're small," the father-in-law said.

The bashful young man timidly took an other and placed it beside the first.

"Have another; they're very small."

Again the young man, jacking the cour age to decline, took a biscuit.

The father-in-law to be then dumped the whole contents of the plate in front of the young man, with the remark. "Take them all, you hog!"

The bashful young man stopped his vis its, and during the rest of the meal caused a smile to go around the table at the farm house.—Indianapolis Journal.

A Good Case.

The young fellow about the Jefferson avenue merchant's store had grown from bad to worse, and at last his employer had an open row with him.

"What are you going to do about it?" asked the youth insolently.

"I'll give you," said the irate merchant. "You do and I'll have you arrested."

The merchant gasped.

"Have me arrested?" he exclaimed. "What for?"

"For firing in the city limits without a permit," and the merchant risked it then and there.—Detroit Free Press.

Did He Understand?

He was seated across the room.

"George," she said, "if a fire were to suddenly break out in the house what would be your first impulse do you think?"

"Well, my first thought would be for you of course. I would get you in a place of safety and then do what I could to extinguish the flames."

He would be very nice of you my dear to think of me first, but if a fire were to break out now for instance, wouldn't you lose valuable time in running across the room?"—Exchange.

His Wish.

Detroit has a bachelor of the compulsory sort, but Detroit won't have him long, for another fair one has claimed him as her own. He has been disappointed so many times that lately he has been almost impetuous in his attentions. She is a widow, and an improvement on all her predecessors in his heart. The matter was settled a week ago in a rather roundabout way. They had been talking on women in general.

"I sometimes wish I were married to a young man, but quite the contrary to the parents-in-law.

A great thought came to him then, a thought which in imperial minds would develop into a coup d'etat.

"Would I were a conclusion," he sighed, with such a sigh that within five minutes two hearts were consolidated.—Detroit Free Press.

CHANGED HER MIND.

She Didn't Dare Trust Her Husband With a Folding Bed.

One day as I sat in a lumber company's big general store in the mountains along the upper Kentucky river a tall, sharp faced woman rode up on a skinny looking colt, and the clerk helped her off and she came in.

"I wanter swap that critter out thar for store goods," she said, "but I wanter look round some fust. I've been of them fold-in bedsteds an I wanter see one of you keep um."

The clerk said they had one that they had ordered, and if she liked it they could order one for her. He escorted her to the bed and showed her how it worked.

"I've been they was reaky to sleep in," she said, lifting it half shut and dropping it again.

"Oh, I guess they're all right," said the clerk encouragingly.

"They don't kick, do they?" she asked.

"No."

"Nor buck jump?"

"No."

"Nor balk?"

"No."

"Nor shy?"

"No."

"Wer rare up behint an scoot the perticipant an'in the wall?"

"Not that I ever heard of," smiled the clerk.

"They're pillar wise an broke to bed kivvers, ain't they?"

"Sure."

"Safe for a woman to handle?"

"Perfectly."

"Won't stand unless they're hitched, though, will they?" she asked, giving the frame a flirt that telescoped it.

"You have to fasten them, I guess," admitted the clerk.

"Is purty reaky," she said, walking around it cautiously, as if keeping out of reach of its heels. "Has anybody round here got one?"

"No; this is the only one in this county." She turned and left it.

"Well," she said, "I ain't goin to be the fust to prolick with the pesky thing. I'm almighty afeard of it. I took that 'ar hoss with me it ud take me six weeks to break the old man so's you could lead him up to it at bedtime. He ain't bar fangled for shucks."

Then she went down where the calicoes were.—Detroit Free Press.

A SILVER WEDDING.

Celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smith Last Night.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Smith of Grandview avenue celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage by a silver wedding last night. Dancing was indulged in and a collation was served. The guests were so numerous that a vacant house across the street had to be used in which to partake of the bounteous repast prepared for their guests by the host and hostess. The presents were numerous and beautiful, and were all of silver.

The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. James M. Atwood, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Wilkes, of Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Smith and Mr. Charles Riveley, of South Orange; Mrs. Kittredge, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stetton, Mr. and Mrs. William Sutton, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stout, of Rutherford; Mr. John D. Outealt, of Denver, Col.; Mr. and Mrs. William Hand, Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Bridges, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Morrell, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Randolph, Mrs. D. I. Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Smalley, Mr. H. S. Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Coriell, Mr. and Mrs. Brewster, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Westphal, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. C. Graves, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Winckler, Mr. A. P. Voorhees, and Misses Voorhees, Mamie Steiner, A. Allisson, Etta Batz, Josie Fritz, Lena and Minnie Smalley, Fannie Spencer and Maggie Somers, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Morse, and Messrs. Edward and Robert Clark, John Steiner, J. Smalley, George DeMeza, August Trust, Herbert Schutt, William Morrison, William Woodland, and Mr. and Mrs. David King. The march was led by Mr. Riveley and Mrs. Kittredge. The music was furnished by Conde and Rogers.

PERSONAL.

Mr. S. P. Dunn of East Seventh street is ill with la grippe.

Mr. and Mrs. Bloodgood of Orange are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. VanBoskerck, corner of Plainfield avenue and Seventh street.

Mr. George H. Babcock was married to Miss Eugenie Lewis, formerly a teacher in the Bryant school, Tuesday, at Westerly, R. I.

The marriage of Miss Frances Schomp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Schomp, to Franklin P. Storr, Wednesday evening, April 26, at eight, at the home of the bride's parents, 204 West Front street, is announced.

Cards have been issued for the wedding of Miss Alice Plummer, daughter of John F. Plummer, formerly of Nethermood, to Charles S. Milliken of Tacoma, Washington. The marriage will take place on the 26th of this month at the Madison avenue Baptist church, New York.

The wedding of Miss Emma Josephine Compton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Halsey Compton of Evona, to Mr. James Wager Johnson, of New York, took place last evening at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Johnson, an uncle of the groom, the couple standing in front of a bank of Easter lilies. The floral decorations were beautiful. The chandelier was wreathed with smilax and pinks tied with pink ribbon. There were about 150 guests present. The presents were very handsome.

Iona Council Entertainment.

Iona Council, Degree of Pocahontas, gave an entertainment last night in the Red Men's wigwam, on West Front street for the benefit of the Council. After the rendering of a pleasing programme, the floor was cleared and dancing indulged in. The programme consisted of a vocal duet, Mrs. Westphal and Miss Sears; duet—violin and piano—Misses Wiegman and Feiler; humorous selections, Mr. Vegiard; duet—violin and guitar; piano solo, Mrs. Canfield; selections, the Dresden Trio; solo, Mrs. Westphal; duet, Messrs. Richter and Dressler; and a selection by a quartette, Mrs. Westphal, Miss Sears, and Wm. and Herbert Tallamy. After dancing a collation was served in the banqueting hall.

The Brown-Fisher Muddle.

Some time ago, on complaint of Annie Fisher, warrants were issued by Justice Nash for the arrest of Ferdinand Brown and wife for assault and battery. Brown and his wife were arrested yesterday. He gave bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. His wife was not held by Justice Nash, who discharged her on the grounds that a husband is responsible for a wife's actions in a criminal proceeding, when he was present when the act was committed.

As soon as released Brown had warrants sworn out for the arrest of Annie Fisher and Alice Wood. All the parties are colored.

Threatened to Kill His Father.

About two weeks ago a warrant was issued by Justice Nodyne for the arrest of John Jerolaman, who is charged in the complaint with threatening to kill his father, who is employed by Mr. Emory of West Front street. Constable Moffett was given the warrant, but as young Jerolaman was out of town the most of the time it was impossible to serve it.

On the advice of a friend the accused gave himself up to Justice Nash last night.

The justice held him in the sum of $100 for the Grand Jury.

THE TROPHY PRESENTED.

The Y. M. C. I. A. Given the Prize Last Night.

About twenty-five members of the C. Y. M. I. accompanied their team to Elizabeth last evening to witness the last Journal League game of the season and the presentation of the trophy to the winners. The game resulted C. Y. M. I., 1328; and Y. M. C. I. A., 1498.

When C. M. Sauer, who was the last man on the Y. M. C. I. A. team, stood up to roll the last frame and made a strike, there was a perfect ovation as by doing this he clinched his right to be called the champion bowler of Union county. McCabe of the Y. M. C. I. A. made the phenomenal score of 211 in the match.

The excitement down stairs was nothing to what it was up. After the game all the guests were invited up stairs to the hall, where a repast was spread which all did justice to, after which Dr. Whelan introduced Mr. C. C. McBride, editor of the Journal, to the assemblage, who said that he had spoken before Congressman, before Senators, and stood with race track people on one side and Sunday-school teachers on the other and never felt embarrassed until this occasion, for in the face of fifteen victories he did not know how to express himself.

He congratulated the winners and presented the trophy to them. P. J. Ryan accepted it in behalf of the Y. M. C. I. A. and G. H. Cooley of the bowling league declared the Y. M. C. I. A. champions of Union county, with high average for team work, high average for individual bowling and high average for games and men.

P. H. Charlotte, President E. A. C., J. J. Kenney, L. B. Tucker, E. T. Thomas, A. S. Crane, M. F. Gannon, C. M. Sauer, Francis Engle, and the "prince of rooters," Capt. Collins, all made short speeches. The assemblage broke up at about 12.30 with three cheers for each of the contending teams. Nearly all of the teams in the league had representatives at the supper.

BREVITIES.

—Venino concert at the Casino tonight.

—There were no head pin games at the Crescent League last night as the bowlers did not show up.

—"Shall "U and I" meet in Music Hall to-night and enjoy the fun and the music?" says the manager.

—A man from Finderne was driving along East Fourth street this afternoon, when one of his horses became frisky and began rearing. A broken pole was the result.

—A portion of the ceiling on the third floor of the Methodist parsonage on Grove street, fell, recently. The parsonage is being put in order for the new pastor, who will preach next Sunday.

Trouble Over a Diploma.

Miss Lucy Reynolds of Newark came near being arrested all on account of a diploma, Monday. She boarded until recently with Mrs. Neighbour, of Front street, who had taken preliminary steps to cause Miss Reynolds' arrest, when a doctor's diploma belonging to Lucy's sweetheart, which she was to have been charged with taking, was returned to its rightful custodian.

Dr. Robert L. Tucker, who received the diploma on his graduation, in March, 1892, from the American Veterinary College, of Philadelphia, Pa., had left the sheepskin with Mrs. Neighbour as security for a board bill he owed her. Lucy obtained possession of it for the purpose of sending it to Dr. Tucker.

Mrs. Neighbour says:

"Those girls came back here on Saturday to get some things they had left and they took 'em away. After they had gone I missed that diploma that hung in the pantry where they got their bandboxes. Lucy knew I was holding it for the debt. I found out from their brother's wife that Lucy had brought it there and asked Mr. Reynolds to have it up to send to Dr. Tucker. He wouldn't do it and she went away to Newark with it.

"I went to Mr. Grant, the policeman, about it, and then went after a warrant to Judge Coddington. He said to come the next day. This was on Monday, and the next day about as soon as the sun rose up Lucy's brother brought the diploma back. He went to Newark for it on Monday night."

Laing and Williams to Join Cook and Kenney.

Easter Monday Albert Cook and Wm. Kenney, two well-known characters around town, were sent to the county jail for 60 days, for being drunk and disorderly.

Their only regret on leaving town was that they would have to leave their chums, Hugh Laing and Charles Williams behind.

This morning Judge Coddington sent both Williams and Laing to join them, and the quartette is now complete. The former received 60 days and the latter 30. What good does imprisonment alone do in these cases?

Joseph B. Willis, who was in a cell all day yesterday with delirium tremens, was visited by City Physician Simpson yesterday, and this morning he was able to appear in court. He was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

John Watson, for being drunk and disorderly last night, was fined three dollars.

Dr. Carroll Elected President.

The Board of Trustees of the Grace M. E. Church met last night and organized by electing Dr. H. K. Carroll president, Ezra Loomis secretary and A. A. Taft treasurer.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES

AT THE PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Rev. and Mrs. Pearson of New York Began a Series of Meetings Last Night—To be Continued for a Week.

Evangelistic meetings began last night at the Park avenue Baptist church, led by the Rev. Mr. Pearson and wife of New York. The attendance was not large, so the service was held in the Sunday-school room. Although the congregation was small they made up in spirit what they lacked in numbers. Last night's meeting was, as the pastor termed it, "a preliminary meeting," to make plans for what will follow.

The meeting was opened by the singing of the hymn, "Wonderful Words of Life," which was sung most heartily by all present. After a short season of prayer the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Richardson, introduced Mr. Pearson.

Mr. Pearson made no eloquent address. He simply talked to his hearers in an every-day manner, but he has a way of interesting his listeners.

In praying to God for blessings, he said, we should talk to an every-day way to him. It is not necessary to make an elaborate prayer. The speaker, to illustrate his point, related a story of an old Scotchman and a young man. They were on their way to attend a large convension, and as they walked along the youth proposed that they stop by the way and offer up prayer. The good old man got down on his knees and made what might be termed an elaborate prayer. The old Scotchman in his prayer said: "Lord, as we will be late at the convention, and as I am deaf please give me a front seat; and as I have no money please Lord get me a place to stay at while there, and Lord as my shoes are old and worn, may some one give me a pair of new ones." The couple arose and resumed their journey. They reached the hall, but it was packed with people, and apparently there was not a vacant seat in the building. Finally as the old man stood with his hand to his ear to catch every word uttered by the speaker, he was observed by a gentleman in the front row, and a seat procured for him, while the young man stood in the rear. A gentleman next to whom he was sitting, seeing he was a stranger, asked him to go to his home with him and make it his home with him during the convention. The offer was accepted, and as they were sitting before the fire that night the host noticing his want of good shoes, gave him a new pair. The old Scotchman's prayer had been answered.

We must be more familiar with our God and, like the old Scotchman, ask for things we need.

Mr. Pearson also told of a young man in New York who had been discontented with everything and everybody; had been unsuccessful in business pursuits and nothing went right. He was at a meeting at the Tabernacle, where evangelistic meetings were being held and was finally converted. All his discontentment fled and he is now one of their most active workers.

Mr. Pearson's talk all through appeared to greatly interest his hearers and, as the week advances larger congregations will no doubt greet him.

Mrs. Pearson then made a few remarks and an appeal for unsaved souls.

The meeting closed with prayer by the pastor.

The meetings will be continued afternoons and evenings for a week. The Rev. Mr. Richardson conducted the service in the absence of his co-mover either Mr. or Mrs. Pearson will be in charge.

Finds Herself a Bigamist.

Another Enoch Arden has turned up, this time in Elizabeth. Mrs. Ann Becker, who thought her husband, married a Norwegian carpenter named Eckerson a couple of months ago, and made him master of the house in which before he had been only a boarder.

All of a sudden John Becker, from whom she had heard a word in five years, presented himself before her yesterday, and insisted that he was alive and that she was his wife.

How the affair will end it is impossible to predict. Becker, however, is in the hands of a lawyer, who advises him to get a divorce, and he may decide that that would be the best thing to do.

Two Tours to Chicago.

Instead of the usual August excursion to New England, which patrons of Mr. Honeyman's Summer Tours, long ago popular, have been led to expect every year, two Chicago excursions are announced for this Summer. The first is July 7th and the next August 25, and eight full days are to be spent in Chicago. The route is by the B. & O., and six Pullman vestibule sleepers are to be taken each trip.

Persons desiring to go should write for circulars to A. V. D. Honeyman, 51 North avenue, or address him at P. O. Box 765, this city.

To Insure Pure Milk.

Dairy Commissioner McGuire has sent to the local Boards of Health throughout the State a copy of the law passed by last Legislature, which requires the registry of all cattle kept within the city limits, and a report made upon the condition of the stable in which they are kept, the condition of the animals themselves, how and where watered and how fed and the quality of their food. The object of the law is to insure a more healthy condition of milk.

Pen Sketches from Life.

A resident of the Borough, a prominent man in the New York business world, is fond of hen fruit and has in his yard a few chickens. Not very long ago he went out to the barn, before breakfast, and found an egg. It was particularly large and new and he put it carefully in his pocket intending, doubtless, to have it cooked for his breakfast. Suddenly he was called and ran in, sat down, ate his meal and hurried off to catch the train to New York. He was a regular commuter and, of course, did not mind the little crush getting on the cars nor the way a companion fell against him in sitting down alongside.

He was with some genial friends, and when a game was proposed, he eagerly seconded it and put his hand in his coat pocket for the pack of cards he usually carried. Then he was reminded that he had forgotten to remove that egg. It was all there however. His hand was drawn from his pocket a regretful sort of way and then —!!!!!

Reservations for Pullman Accommodations for the World's Fair on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company announces that arrangements have been perfected whereby passengers intending to go to Chicago may reserve their Pullman car accommodations in advance. Passengers taking a train at New York may reserve the requisite Pullman space one month in advance of departure, those from other points on the system two weeks in advance. This arrangement may be made upon application to ticket agents of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who, after securing the space, will issue tickets exchangeable by the passengers. Passengers thus reserving space in advance will be required to purchase their tickets seven days before the date of departure, otherwise the reservation will be considered as forfeited.

Accommodations in Pullman cars for the entire trip, or any part, may be secured upon application to ticket agents of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

This arrangement will prove a great benefit to visitors to the World's Fair.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Sought Suicide Under an "L" Train.

New York, April 13—(Special).—A young woman sought death in a horrible form early to-day by throwing herself in front of an engine on the Elevated road.

The suicide occurred a few minutes after 1.30 a. m. at the uptown station of Third avenue and Fourteenth street. The corpse is still unidentified and the case is shrouded in mystery.

Racing at Elizabeth.

Elizabeth, April 13. (Special)—The racing scene shifts to Elizabeth to-day, and instead of the Guttenburg nags the race-goers will watch such thoroughbreds as Yorkville, Belle, Don Alonzo, Terrifier, Red Banner and Kingston contest for rich purses at Elizabeth.

Determined to Die.

New York, April 13—(Special.)—At 7.15 o'clock last night Joseph Mooey, aged 29, a patient at the French Hospital, 322 West Thirty-fourth street, cut his throat. He then turned on the gas in his room. When discovered he jumped out of the window. He died at 11 o'clock.

INFRINGED ON HIS "DROP."

Judge Green Renders a Decision in Favor of Edison.

Judge Green, in the United States Circuit Court at Trenton, Tuesday, filed his opinion in the case of the Edison Electric Light Company vs. Westinghouse, Church, Kerr & Co. The Judge decided in favor of Edison. The Electric Light Company in this city used the system of the defendant. The opinion in part was as follows:

The bill of complaint in this cause charges the infringement by the defendants of letters patent No. 264,652, granted to Thomas A. Edison, September 19, 1882, for an "Electric distribution and translation system.

Previously to the issuing of the letters patent, and on or about the 31st day of June, 1881, Mr. Edison duly assigned to the complainant all his right, title and interest in and to the said invention and any letters patent of the United States which might thereafter be granted to him therefor. The invention, which was intended to be secured by the letters patent, is declared by Mr. Edison in the specification to relate to a method of equalizing the tension or "pressure" of electricity through an entire system of electric lighting, or other translation of electric force, preventing what is popularly known as a "drop" in those portions of the system the more remote from the central station.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Tesla has proved that the new substance, carborundum, displays phosphorescence.

It was one of the most unfortunate things that could have happened for the labor cause, the quarrel between the Knights and the Federation.

One of the most rapidly increasing industries in this country is that of sheep raising. The agricultural department at Washington has issued one of its most valuable publications on this industry, dealing with both mutton and wool production. The report can be had free by farmers and breeders.

The salary of the British minister to the United States was a little less than $30,000. Now that Sir Julian Pauncefote has been raised to the rank of embassador his pay will be raised accordingly. The British embassador to Germany receives about $39,000 annually, while the one at Paris gets nearly $45,000 a year, or only $5,000 less than the president of the United States. Our foreign ministers to European governments have heretofore been obliged to spend much more than their salaries, which at the greatest have been only $17,500. That is paid to our minister at London. Our embassadors must have their pay raised at once. The United States cannot afford to skimp in foreign lands her public servants of the highest dignity.

A Strike and a Boycott.

The decision of Judge Taft of the United States circuit court at Toledo in the case of the Ann Arbor railroad suit shows the difference between a strike and a boycott in a way that is thoroughly clear to the mind of a person who is neither a lawyer nor a member of a trades union. A strike is quitting work by employees who are dissatisfied with the terms of their employment. Employed persons have a right to strike, and persons have a right to take or quit work at any time, but in case of railroads the decision of Judge Taft lays down the precedent that the right to boycott the goods of other roads must not be permitted.

The interstate commerce law requires that all railroads shall offer equal facilities to all others in the handling of freight and passengers. Refusing to handle the freight of any road by the employees of another road is unlawful, therefore. The following important principle is laid down: "While doing the work of the company the employee is the company." In brief, Judge Taft's decision amounts to this: Railroad employees may strike or quit the service of a company when they like. As long, however, as they are in the service of a company, doing its work and receiving its wages, they shall not refuse to transfer the freight and passengers of any other road merely because the employees of that particular road are on strike, or for any other reason. The interests of the public will not allow this.

The New Political Policy.

In The Review of Reviews Dr. Albert Shaw outlines what he conceives to be the meaning of the change of political parties in this country. For a period of 32 years, from 1861 to 1893, the Republican party controlled either wholly or in part the political policy of this nation. The period of 32 years represents a distinct phase of progress in our history. It was the period of the development of the national idea. The war settled it that the Union is greater than any state in it and that it has power to maintain our territorial integrity. In the line of national growth and expansion was the protective tariff, which was an inseparable part of a vast plan for "the material expansion and industrial maturing of the great newborn nation of the west."

The policy of the Republican party was distinctively a constructive national policy. The great Pacific railroads, national banking, a huge internal revenue system, pension rolls that lengthened till the country found itself paying out a third of the national income to Union soldiers or their survivors—all this was part of the same magnificent national constructive policy. So were the building of the new navy, the organizing and bringing into the Union of state after state in the west and northwest.

But the reaction came. By what might be called a long continued aggressive constructive policy the Republican government fell under the suspicion of having allied itself too closely with great capitalists and moneyed interests, Dr. Shaw thinks, and the vote last November said, "The Republicans must go." The people proclaimed themselves tired of the long activity and in want of rest and a more negative national policy. In the judgment of Dr. Shaw that is what Democratic control means. He does not think any radical or violent changes will be made, but there will be simply "revision, economy, reform of abuses." Pensions will be severely reduced, and "subsidies and bounties are marked for destruction." The editor adds cheerfully, "It is usually best to dismiss the party of energy after a time, for its activities will tend to become meddlesome and pernicious." Whether the next constructive party will be the Republican, or whether the Republican party will rather itself up and go it again, with a spin after a time, Dr. Shaw seems to consider the chances about even.

DEATH IN THE CYCLONE.

Many Were Killed, but the Reports Came In Slowly.

WESTERN TOWNS STORM WRECKED

Women and Children Swept Away Not to Be Seen Again—Whole Families Crushed Under the Ruins—The Storm Traveled from Kansas Into Missouri.

KANSAS CITY, April 13.—As communication gradually becomes open with the small towns and hamlets through Kansas and Missouri, which were cyclone swept, and as the news, always making accessions to the many lives sacrificed, is received, the real extent of the storm becomes known. It is impossible to get the names of the victims, however, and in most instances the accounts of the destruction were incomplete.

Fifteen people are known to have been killed and 30 or 40 were injured, while numberless houses as well as smaller property were destroyed.

In Kansas the area of the storm was bounded by the three tiers of counties from the eastern border, nearly every one suffering more or less. Montgomery county, in the extreme southeastern portion, suffered the most. Parker, a hamlet 10 miles south of Independence, was almost totally destroyed.

Loss of Life Not Known.

Walnut, a village in Crawford county, suffered severely. A meager dispatch from that place states that it is feared that the loss of life in the outlying country districts has been great. A dispatch from Hiawatha states that the storm wrought great havoc in Brown county in the northeastern portion of the state. Several towns in the county were more or less damaged, and many lives are reported lost. The towns of Willis, Everest and Powhatan were partly demolished and several people injured. Near Robinson E. P. Polton was struck by lightning and killed.

That part of the cyclone which struck Wilmot, Kan., continued northward, and entering Missouri struck successively the small towns of Mayview, Page City and Higginsville, Mo. St. Joseph a cyclone working from west to east and covering a strip of country two miles wide and five miles long caused considerable damage. Several people were killed.

Near Page City six deaths have so far been reported. Will Walker, a prosperous young farmer, was at the supper table with his wife and three children when his brick house was blown over, completely burying him and all his children. Two of the children were smothered in the debris. The third was fearfully mangled. J. W. Hutchinson, an aged farmer in the same neighborhood, suffered the loss of his wife and the complete demolition of his house and was badly crippled. Mrs. H. Y. Lake and brother were killed outright. Farther on, Captain Todhunter's barns were demolished and a small negro girl killed on his farm. There are numerous reports and rumors of deaths at Dover and Waverly, but nothing authentic can be secured.

Blown Away and Killed.

STEELEVILLE, Mo., April 13.—In the western part of Crawford and the eastern part of Bent counties the cyclone killed many citizens. At Hawkins Bank, William Asher, the engineer at the mines, and seven men by the name of Lay were killed. Miss Lay has been blown away and has not been found. A small child was also blown away. A. M. Wilson was seriously hurt. Superintendent Conboy of the mines was badly hurt and his wife is also badly injured. All the dwellings and a bag store were blown down. At Galewin postoffice four men were killed. On Dry creek, Crawford county, the residence of A. M. Green, who was confined to his bed, was torn down by the wind and the old gentleman killed. At Midland bridge Charles Adair was blown from the bridge and drowned.

Flood and Storm.

FARGO, N. D., April 13.—The Red river rose steadily all day long, and the water is up to the doors of the city waterworks. Island park is surrounded entirely by a flood of water 200 yards wide and residents pass back and forth by means of boats. A number of barns and outbuildings have been swept away and scores of houses are already flooded and the residents driven out. A big gorge has formed near the south bridge and men have been at work all day with axes trying to break it. Reports from up the river state that the water is subsiding there. The rain turned to a furious snowstorm and the storm rivals the most severe blizzard of the season.

Storms Caused a Panic.

MEXICO, Mo., April 13.—During the terrific storm the Missouri Military academy was damaged and several of the inmates narrowly escaped with their lives. One end of the building was blown in. There was near being a disastrous panic at the opera house, where a large audience had assembled, but cool heads prevented serious results. At Hannibal, Mo., a tenement house occupied by a negro family was demolished and the ruins set on fire by the explosion of a coaloil lamp. The husband and wife were badly burned and two children were severely injured.

In Indiana and Michigan.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., April 13.—A storm at Rockport blew down the Honig block. The falling walls crushed the grocery store of H. Frank, burying Frank and his wife in the ruins. Frank escaped without serious injury, but it is feared that his wife is fatally hurt.

DETROIT, April 13.—A tornado struck Ypsilanti and caused heavy damage in the business section by demolishing almost all the buildings and several residences. As far as can be ascertained at present nobody was killed, but quite a number of persons were injured.

Wind Caused a Collision.

LONDON, Ind., April 13.—On the Big Four during the high winds and rainstorm a detachment of freight cars were blown from a switch to the main track, down which they ran at a great speed. Just at that time a freight train under full steam speeded along toward London, and before anything could be done to prevent the collision the opposing cars crushed into the engine. The engineer, Bob Brown, was instantly killed and several trainmen injured.

Mississippi Town Wiped Out.

VICKSBURG, Miss., April 13.—Conductor Thomas of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad wires here: The entire town of Robinsonville, Coahoma county, was swept away by a cyclone. All the stores are in ruins. Several negroes and perhaps some whites are buried in the ruins. The depot was completely destroyed and the night operator's wife killed. A colored child was also killed. Only two houses are now left standing.

Over Twenty-Five Killed In Missouri.

ST. LOUIS, April 13.—It is now certain that there was no loss of life in this city, nor were any very serious injuries sustained by any one. The property loss will be great, however, amounting over $500,000. Trains from all sections were from one to three hours late, having been delayed by washouts and landslides. The death list for the state now reaches over 25, and it cannot be foretold how much it may be increased.

GOMPERS WANTED NO ARRESTS.

Manufacturers Decided to Meet the Cutters and Arbitrate.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The executive board of the Clothing Manufacturers' association met again to consider the offer of the locked out cutters, looking toward a meeting of committees from both sides. President Gompers assured the board that he was disappointed because of the arrests, as he was working for a settlement of the difficulty. When President Mendelsohn of the Clothing Cutters' association was told that the arrests did not disconcert the association, but that he could not speak for the executive board.

At the adjourned meeting of the executive committee of the Clothing Manufacturers' association it was decided that the entire board be appointed a committee to meet the committee of five appointed by the American Federation of Labor to consider conciliatory measures for terminating the present lockout of clothing cutters.

The Last of the Aztecs.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 13.—Telegraphic advices from Sonora say troops have just been sent by the Mexican government from Chihuahua to Temohie to exterminate the friends and sympathizers who are emulating the example and seeking to avenge the extermination of the Spartan band of Aztecs in September last. It was the last known tribe of the Aztec race. This little band, fortified within the walls of their village, slaughtered 1,000 Mexican soldiers before the last one of themselves succumbed to the rifle and bayonet. They refused to pay taxes.

Chewed Up the Money Order.

BUFFALO, April 13.—Harry L. Whaley was arrested for passing a raised postoffice money order on the Fifth Ward. The case had been settled in the police court, and the raised money order was placed on Clerk Sherwood's desk. While the latter's back was turned Whaley grabbed the money order, thrust it into his mouth, chewed it up and swallowed it. The act created a great sensation in the police court.

Militia at Salina.

TOPEKA, April 13.—The excitement over the persistent attempt to lynch John Brown, the negro of Salina, has extended to Topeka. A company of colored men thoroughly armed was formed to go to Salina to assist the sheriff in protecting his prisoner, but as they were about to take the train this morning they were informed that Governor Lewelling had ordered a militia company to guard the jail.

Hooted the Prisoner.

CARLISLE, Pa., April 13.—Charley Sailyards, who is charged with the murder of Policeman Martin, was brought here in irons and placed in the Cumberland county jail. Fully 1,000 persons thronged about the jail to see him, and the prisoner was greeted with shouts of "Hang him!" "Kill him!" etc. The prison will be closely guarded.

Another Sailor Saved.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 13.—William Spencer, a sailor from the lost ship King James, swam ashore on Santa Rosa islands from the captain's boat, and has been found by shepherders in an exhausted condition. Spencer makes the fifth man saved. Twelve others were lost.

Burned Hotel and Smoker Too.

DUNCANNON, Pa., April 13.—The Commercial hotel at Liverpool, Perry county, was destroyed by fire, and Michael Hunter, son, a young school teacher, was burned to death. It is thought that Henderson, who is an inveterate cigarette smoker, set fire to the bed in his room.

British Workmen Coming to Visit.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The proprietors of the Dundee (Scotland) Weekly News have made arrangements for sending a large delegation of prominent representative British workingmen, to make a tour in America and visit the World's fair.

The Case of a Deserter.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 13.—William Moore, a deserter from Company H, Third battalion infantry, now stationed in the Indian territory, was arrested in this city. Moore declares he deserted to care for his aged mother, who resides here.

A Coal Boom Started.

SUSQUEHANNA, Pa., April 13.—Coal in paying quantities has been discovered in Auburn township, Broome county, N. Y., five miles from here. Speculators are fast purchasing the adjacent lands and prospecting will begin at once.

Ancient Grecian Temple Unearthed.

ATHENS, April 12.—The excavations of the Archeological institute have revealed the foundations of the ancient temple mentioned by Homer as having been burned 623 B. C. Many priceless antique works of art have been unearthed.

Escape of a Murderer.

ST. CHARLES, Mo., April 13.—The negro murderer named Jack Rice made his escape from the county jail by knocking the jailer senseless. The sheriff and his posse are in hot pursuit.

No Postrooms For Connecticut.

HARTFORD, April 13.—The antigood room bill, which effectually prohibits all forms of pool selling and gambling and games of chance, horse races, etc., was passed in the senate, 21 to 1.

Statutory to Be Released.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The government has decided to make a remission of forfeiture in the 38 cases of valuable statuary seized by the government several months ago.

Caught a River Thief.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., April 13.—George Angel, a river thief, who is wanted at various places, was caught on the Ohio side of the river opposite this city.

New Professor For Cornell.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 13.—Dr Charles H. Hull has been appointed to the chair of economics in the Cornell university.

THE TROUBLE IN COREA.

Native Priests Stirring Up Hatred Against Christians.

THE WARSHIPS ONLY A PRECAUTION

Baron Fava Kissed Mrs. Cleveland's Hand on the White House Steps—Republicans Make Useless Protest Against Schofe's Confirmation—The Ax Swings Merrily.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Secretary Gresham said that the action of this government in directing Admiral Harmony to send a war vessel to Corea had been taken simply as a precautionary measure. No trouble had occurred, he said, but the Christians in Corea had been threatened, and it was to avert possible bloodshed that the United States had sent an armed ship to that country.

It is believed at the state department that the trouble originated through the machinations of native priests. Trouble of a similar nature has been frequent in China, and the recent outbreaks there against missionaries have made the administration see the necessity for quick action in preventing any semblance of an uprising against the whites.

While the information furnished the state department by its representative in Seoul did not report that any outbreak had occurred, but merely stated that an uprising was feared, Secretary Gresham lost no time in seeing that the protection asked for should be furnished. He applied to Secretary Herbert for a ship, and the request was granted immediately.

Admiral Harmony has probably received Secretary Herbert's cable dispatch by this time, and it is likely that one of his vessels has started for Corea.

Kissed Mrs. Cleveland's Hand.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—An incident at the White House is thus recorded in The Star: An old world custom was revived on the portico of the White House to the astonishment of a number of new world natives who witnessed it.

Baron Fava, the Italian minister, was about to take leave of the executive mansion, when Mrs. Cleveland, who had just driven up, alighted from her carriage. She paused a few moments to converse with the retiring dean of the diplomatic corps, and as she extended her hand to say good afternoon to him, Baron Fava made a courtly bow, and raising her hand to his lips kissed it in true parisian fashion.

Mrs. Cleveland seemed slightly embarrassed, the baron retired smiling, and two western congressmen who saw the act almost fell off of the portico with amazement.

Stuck at Ickels.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The nomination of Ickels, the young Illinois lawyer, who was nominated to be comptroller of the currency, was confirmed by the senate in executive session after two hours or more had been spent in discussion. The Republicans, under the lead of Sherman and Morrill, criticised the wisdom of appointing to this very responsible position a young man who knew nothing of banking affairs. Several of the Democrats supported by speeches the president's action, and on a rising vote every Democrat being found in favor of the confirmation, the Republicans did not demand a roll call. Nothing was said about the Bosch case.

Heads Coming Off Fast.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Secretary Gresham cut off the official head of another of his chief subordinates, removing Robert Chilton, the chief clerk. There will be very few Republicans in the higher grades outside of the classified service in office under Secretary Ross Smith in a short time, as he is making changes in his department quite rapidly. Nearly all the chiefs of divisions and heads of bureaus in his department will have to go. In the land office there are eight chiefs of division whose appointment rests with him, and seven out of eight of them have resigned by request.

Choctaws Under a Truce.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—A truce has been declared in the Choctaw Indian troubles, and the militia have been ordered by the governor to do nothing pending consideration of the troubles by the United States government. A telegram to this effect was received from W. N. Jones, governor of the Choctaws, who also stated that a delegation had left for Washington to present his side of the case to the secretary.

White House Policemen In Uniform.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—It has been directed that hereafter the metropolitan police detailed for duty in the interior of the White House shall wear their uniforms. These men, who are known as ushers, have heretofore appeared in civilian dress.

The explanation given for the change in the apparel of the police officers is that difficulty is sometimes experienced in handling the large crowds.

Nothing but a Mayor.

CLEVELAND, April 13.—The affairs of this municipality are in a state bordering on anarchy. There is a mayor and nothing else. The officers that he appointed have not been confirmed by the council, which is Republican, and the chances are they will not be.

Captain Snow Resigned.

NEW YORK, April 13.—At the monthly meeting of the board of trade and transportation was marked by the resignation of its venerable president, Captain Amos Snow, who has been its head for 16 years. Captain Snow is 80 years old.

Legislating Against Gold Cure.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 13.—The patent medicine bill, introduced in the legislature by Representative Yorke, is aimed mainly at the Keeley institute at Dwight and is backed by the enemies of the double chloride of gold remedy.

Millions of Lumber Burned.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Fire in the lumber yards along the North river destroyed between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 feet of lumber. Shipping at the docks was in imminent danger. The total loss was about $100,000.

Women's Foreign Mission.

BUFFALO, April 13.—The twenty-second annual meeting of the Women's Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian church convened here. Delegates were present from all over the country.

The Kaiser Used Dynamite.

BERLIN, April 13.—The cathedral tower was blown up with dynamite in order to make room for a new and magnificent edifice. The kaiser watched the operations from a neighboring castle.

For Women

Hood's Sarsaparilla is Especially Adapted to Cure Difficulties Peculiar to the Sex

The restoring and invigorating properties of Hood's Sarsaparilla, combined with its power to vitalize and enrich the blood, result in perfect health for all troubles peculiar to women—that tired feeling, or debility caused by change of life, loss of appetite, dizziness, headache, nervousness, kidney and liver complaints, are some of the many symptoms it has successfully overcome.

"I was for a long time a sufferer from

Female Weakness

and tried many remedies and physicians, to no good purpose. One day I read one of Hood's Sarsaparilla books, and thought I would try a bottle of the medicine. It made so great a difference in my condition that I took three bottles more and found myself perfectly well. I have also given to the children, and find that it keeps them in good health. I am willing that this shall be used for the benefit of others." MRS. SARAH MUIR, 2d 10th av., So. Minneapolis, Minn.

THE VISION CAME TRUE.

Ghastly Dream of a Waiter Which Was a Reality.

NEW YORK, April 13.—William Featherstone, head waiter in a well known hotel, had a blood curdling vision. He dreamed that he saw his father standing at the foot of his bed. The right hand of the apparition clutched a bloody razor. The index finger of the left pointed to a deep gash across the throat.

The dream troubled Featherstone, and at noon he went to his father's shop. He found the shop closed and locked. With a policeman's aid the door was forced. In a rear room they found the elder Featherstone lying on the floor dead. His throat was gashed in several places, and his head rested in a pool of blood. The position of the body conformed in a startling way to the vision. The right hand clutched a razor, while the fingers of the left, resting on the breast, pointed at his severed throat.

A Letter From the Queen.

NEW YORK, April 13.—A large number of distinguished passengers came on the Majestic. Chief among these were James Bredge, the British royal commissioner to the World's exposition, and Walter H. Harris, who is assisting him in the transportation of an immense shipment of English exhibits for the fair. A large consignment of exhibits from Windsor castle, which are lent to the exposition by Queen Victoria and the Prince of Wales, also arrived. They consist principally of royal Windsor tapestries. Commissioner Harris carries with him a letter written by the queen and addressed to the fair committee.

Salt Over a Floating Island.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., April 13.—During last week's storm a 2-acre piece of land broke away from the mainland and floated out into Lake Chautauqua. C. D. Gifford moored it in front of his farm. It broke away, and after floating around a few hours rested A. Bentley got it aground on his place and refused to give it up. Half a dozen people claim the floating island and have taken the case into court. It originally was the property of Charles H. Wickard's land, and he is suing to regain possession of it.

The Argus Still Policed.

ALBANY, April 13.—The attempt to oust Mr. James H. Manning from the control of The Argus has proved unsuccessful. The paper is still in control of Mr. James H. Manning. Mr. Speer, who claims to be elected a director and editor-in-chief of the company, has been in conference with the Hill forces, but it is thought that no other attempt will be made by him to gain forcible possession of the paper. The Argus building today is under police protection.

The Fish Exhibit.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Live fish by the carload were received at the aquarium for the government live fish display in the World's fair Fisheries building. The finny tribes of all the world are represented in the collection, which is a particularly fine one. The decorative work on the aquarium is just being completed. Each tank presents the proper environment for the special variety of fish which is to live in it next summer.

New Bridge Over Niagara.

NIAGARA FALLS, April 13.—A new steel arch bridge is to be constructed over the gorge near the old suspension bridge. L. Buck of Rochester, who built the steel arch bridge over the Genesee gorge, is the designer.

Archbishop Williams Contributes.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 13.—Archbishop Williams has sent to Rev. Dr. Conaty of this city a check for $500 as his contribution to the fund being raised in aid of the Irish home rule movement.

Life Insurance Man Arrested.

WHEELING, April 13.—E. A. Wilson, representative of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, was arrested on the charges of defrauding both the company and policy holders.

MONTREAL, April 13.—Boston capitalists are after the rolling mills of the Dominion.

THE RIOTS IN BELGIUM.

Workmen Surrounded the Parliamentary Building.

SHOUTED FOR SUFFRAGE RIGHTS.

The Deputies Heard Them and Hastened to Take Up the Question—The Riots In the Mines Assume a Serious Phase. Many Bodies Recovered From the Sewer.

BRUSSELS, April 13.—Immediately after the assemblings of the deputies an excited crowd gathered around the Palais de la Nation. The incessant accession of small groups soon swelled the crowd until it pushed out into the park and up and down the Rue Royale. The parliamentary building had already been surrounded by unmounted police. As the crowd became more demonstrative a squadron of mounted police was called out and held ready to charge. At 4 o'clock the workingmen nearest the parliamentary building raised a shout for universal suffrage and made a rush to break the police line. The police were driven back, and the mob tried to rush up the steps. The mounted reserves charged with drawn swords. The mob met them with repeated volleys of stones, but eventually was being back and partly dispersed. In the conflict several policemen were struck with stones on the head, and many rioters were cut or trampled.

Repeated disturbances followed in the Rue Louvain between the Palais de la Nation and the Boulevard du Regent. As often as they were dispersed by the police the rioters tried to reassemble and fight back with stones the attacking force. In the parliamentary building 15 men were arrested. Less serious disturbances in other parts of the city were also followed by arrests.

The deputies adjourned the debate on the revision of the constitution until after the completion by the special committee of the examination into the plans of suffrage reform that have been submitted.

Great activity is shown among the labor leaders. All their efforts are now directed to bringing about the enormous demonstration against the chamber of deputies for refusing to adopt the bill to establish universal suffrage.

This refusal is a severe blow to the aspirations of the socialistic leaders of the workingmen, who hoped, once universal suffrage was granted, to be elected to the chamber by labor votes. The bill was rejected by the chamber despite the fact that the government supported the proposal made by Deputy De Smet, that suffrage should be regulated according to the amount of rent paid by men of voting age.

Bombarded In a Pit.

BRUSSELS, April 13.—Three hundred miners engaged in the strike perpetrated much wanton damage at Quaregnon, in the province of Hainaut. The strikers made an attack upon the sheds about the mouth of the pit and smashed every window in them. There were many men working in the pit who had refused to join the strikers, and the mob's efforts were directed against them as much as against the owners of the pit.

All sorts of rubbish, old boards, stones and dirt, were thrown into the shaft, the intention of the strikers being to imprison the men in the mine. The pit officials were helpless to contend against the mob, and assistance was asked from the gendarmes. Before the officers arrived at the pit considerable damage had been done. The mob was on the point of attacking another pit when the gendarmes arrived. The strikers finally dispersed.

Rioters Seized the Town.

BRUSSELS, April 13.—Striking coal miners rioted all the a ternoon at Cuesmes, three miles from Mons, in the Province of Hainaut. Four thousand men attacked the buildings near the pit's mouth shortly after noon, drove off the guards and officials, and demolished all the machinery houses and shops. They tried to take by storm the Catholic club, but were driven back by other private citizens and the police.

A communal councillor, who encouraged the mob, has been arrested. The rioters have possession of most of the town. The garrison in Mons has been confined to the barracks, and a call for help is expected from Cuesmes.

Fifty-three Bodies Recovered.

LONDON, April 13.—Up to 2 a. m. 53 bodies had been taken from the Pont-y-Pridd pit. The searching parties had found no signs that any of the missing miners were still alive. The bodies of 11 men were found huddled behind a door, as if they had sought shelter there from a hurricane of fiery sparks sweeping by. Other bodies were found in the return airways, where the victims were caught while trying to escape. All the victims died of suffocation.

A Unionist Garden Party.

LONDON, April 13.—The 1,200 men of Ulster who are coming to England shortly with their protest against the home rule bill have been invited by the Marquis of Salisbury to attend a garden party at the Hatfield House on April 24. Mr. Balfour and other conspicuous Unionists will be present.

An Interesting Discovery.

BERLIN, April 13.—Professor Harris of Cambridge has reported to Professor Nestle at Tubingen that a palimpsest containing the complete Syrian text of the four Gospels has been discovered in the Convent of Mount Sinai.

Failure of a London Bank.

LONDON, April 13.—The English, Scottish and Australian Chartered bank has failed, with liabilities amounting to £2,000,000. It transacted banking and exchange business between Great Britain and the Australian colonies.

Balfour Delays His Speech.

LONDON, April 13.—Mr. A. J. Balfour, the leader of the opposition in the house of commons, has decided not to speak in the debate on the home rule bill until April 21.

Kansas Prairies on Fire.

TOPEKA, April 13.—Reports were received here of terrible devastation and destruction of property by prairie fires in western Kansas during the past 48 hours. Several hundred head of cattle have been caught in the fires and perished, while in one instance 160 head of sheep, inclosed in a ranch which was surrounded by a barb wire fence, perished in the flames.

New York Printers Celebrate.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The two hundredth anniversary of the introduction of printing in this city by William Bradford, was celebrated by the Typothetæ of New York by a banquet at Delmonico's.

PARDRIDGE IS GAME.

He Will Stay In the Fit and Return the Compliment, He Says.

CHICAGO, April 13.—At the close of the session of the board of trade Ed Pardridge admitted that he had been beaten by the crowd. The present deal in May wheat, he said, had gone up, so far as he was concerned, and he was a loser by more than $90,000.

"You done us by my friends," said he, "but I'll get back at them. I don't know what I have lost, but I have $2,000,000 worth of real estate and I'll bring it all up to the front, if so be I try. My wife she has a fortune and we will look me up. I shall stay right here on the floor and give the crowd the racket it has given me."

A great deal of sympathy is expressed for Mr. Pardridge. But he is not alone in misery. Rumor has it that Lynn and Armour are bent on the wrong or under side of the market.

Skirt Dancer's Sudden Death.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—Miss Kitty Ardine, one of the dancers in Rice's Surprise Party, playing in "1492" at the Walnut Street theater, died very suddenly at the Hotel Brunswick. Miss Ardine was at the rehearsal on Monday morning, apparently in excellent health. During the rehearsal she was suddenly taken ill. Her mother, who lives in Boston, was telegraphed, but arrived too late. The cause of Miss Ardine's death was pneumonia and heart failure, superinduced by a severe cold that she contracted recently in Montreal. Her body will be taken to Boston for burial.

Farmers Denounced Daly.

BEDFORD, N. Y., April 13.—Commissioner of Public Works Daly of New York city received some raps over the knuckles at a meeting of the Farmers' club here. The Webster act was also denounced. The meeting was held in Adam's hall, and many prominent farmers of Golden Bridge, Bedford Station, Yorktown, Mount Kisco, Katonah and this place were present. Only two men spoke. Resolutions were adopted condemning the Webster act and the action of Commissioner Daly in enforcing it.

Immigrant Broker Held.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—Philippi Catone was given a further hearing by United States Commissioner Edmunds on the charge of perjury in certifying before United States Inspector of Immigration Conkling in New York that 10 Italian immigrants were not contract laborers when he had himself engaged them in Italy. The commissioner held him in $1,000 bail to answer.

Rapid Transit For New York.

NEW YORK, April 13.—As the result of more than three years' work the rapid transit commissioners unanimously adopted a plan which in their opinion is the best solution of the problem with which they have been wrestling. In brief, it is practically the original Spencer plan for extensions of the present Manhattan Elevated railroad system.

Swindler and Victim Caught.

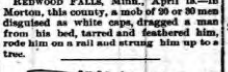
PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—Lewis Harris of New York, an alleged dealer in "green goods," and Alonzo Simon of Mohawk Hill, Lewiston county, N. Y., a prospective victim, were held in $1,000 bail each for a further hearing before United States Commissioner Bell.

Professor Orchardson Married.

QUINCY, Ills., April 13.—Professor Charles Orchardson, who was associated with Vere Ava until her arrest, was married to Mrs. Minervia Merrick, a wealthy widow and prominent leader, 32 years of age. She has $30,000 worth of property and no children.

White Caps' Barbarous Work.

REDWOOD FALLS, Minn., April 13.—In Morton, this county, a mob of 20 or 30 men disguised as white caps, dragged a man from his bed, tarred and feathered him, rode him on a rail and strung him up to a tree.



Notes on the Coiffure.

While torsades and bows of ribbon with upstanding ends are worn in the hair w'h evening dress, the fancy is mainly for combs, combike ornaments, jeweled pins, etc. Our cut shows a handsome form of the latter.

The unmodified 1830 coiffure consists of three large stiff loops and an ornament of some kind arranged on the crown of the head (the front ringlets being parted in the middle and much frizzed on either side), and it is hardly a style to elicit much admiration.

By many the hair is dressed very low in the neck in a large knot, often of "bun shape." At other times it is rolled, twisted or plaited.

Satisfactory accounts as to what form the fashionable coiffure will assume are heard. A very becoming and agreeable new French style reminds one in some respects of the Grecian knot fashionable two seasons ago. The hair is parted in the middle and waved in the same way at the sides and twisted into a loose cursive knot on the crown of the head. Another point of resemblance is the short ends of curled hair drawn through the knot and allowed to fall loose. For a less dressy effect the hair may be drawn back unparted, with loose fluffy curls falling on the forehead.

British Journalists Arrive.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Fifteen British journalists arrived here on the steamer Majestic. They are the vanguard of a large delegation of English editors and proprietors who are coming here for the opening of the Columbian exposition.

Good Advice.

Upon a twig the robin trills
His cheery lay all day;
Unchained will soon be brooks and rills
And verdant grown the lawn.

The sun with warmth increasing glows
And health and strength restores;
The daffodil already blows
Beside the cottage doors.

But spring is like a woman still
And changes oft her tune;
Stick to your winter flannels till
You see the rose of June.

WOMAN AND HOME.

SOME HINTS ON THE KEEPING OF HOUSEHOLD ACCOUNTS.

The Stolen Kiss—Too Much Laugh or Ideal-ism—Care of the Nursery—What Shall Schoolgirls Eat?—The Victims of Vanity. Real Pleasant Women.

Whether or not it is the part of wisdom to keep accounts is an open question; especially is it so with housekeepers and mothers of families. The simplest system that they could adopt would still be a complicated one because of the number of separate accounts, and yet every woman who has kept accounts has decided, after years of experiment, that it is wise.

A very good plan to follow is to have several cheap notebooks, small enough to carry in the purse. The only reason one should have several is that they can be purchased more economically than a single book. Enter in one of these notebooks, which is always carried, every item and expense for the day. This book can do service as a memoranda book. Every day if possible, and certainly once a week, check off these accounts into a ledger. The left hand page of the ledger should represent the income page, the right hand the page of expenditures.

Most women have but one source of income, and for such the income page will be a very easy matter to handle, and part of it can serve as expenditure page. The expenditure page should be divided for the several heads: House, furniture, dress, children's dress, school expenses, books, amusements, church and charities, or in divisions or set of divisions that meet the requirements of the family accounts. These divisions or rulings would best be made with red ink.

It is unnecessary to say that the expenditures of each day in the little notebook must be under dear of that day, and it is very wise to settle accounts on one day of the week. This saves much confusion. Friday or Saturday is usually the best day. There is a certain satisfaction in being able to account for every penny expended in these days when money seems to disappear and leave nothing to show for its expenditure. The second advantage, and by many people considered the primary advantage, is that keeping accounts is very apt to stop unnecessary waste.

There are many husbands who would be much more agreeable in money matters if they could see exactly how the money was spent. To most men the disappearance of income is a source of mystery, if not of annoyance. It is an excellent plan, where possible, to have the husband draw off the accounts from the daybook. Many times he will untangle figures that puzzle his wife, and very often their combined intelligence will see some modifying suggestions or of expending under wiser assignments.

The true secret of managing money is to so divide the income as to keep the best balance in the several departments of expenditure. For instance, decide how much money can be expended for rent, church and charity expenses, dress, etc., and keep within the limit. Accounts help to keep this limit before the mind and serve as a check and satisfaction piece.—Christian Union.

The Stolen Kiss.

Two peach trees in an orchard waved their glossy leaves beneath the torrid rays of an August sun. The one tall, crowded and the other dwarfed, bore nothing but foliage, and that of the darkest, richest green, while his neighbor bended wearily under her load of luscious fruit.

Upon one of the extending branches that was nearest to him was a large, beautiful peach that he had watched ever since she was a sweet, pink blossom until now, when the rains, the hot suns and the gentle dews had nurtured her to the perfection of maturity, and it seemed as if the longer he watched her the whiter grew the lily of her brow and deeper grew the flush upon her cheek that vainly strove to conceal its loveliness beneath a delicate veil of snow white velvet down.

He whispered the wish that was in his heart just loud enough for her to hear. The blush upon her cheek deepened, and she said: "It cannot be. You would take something of my spul upon your lips."

To this he replied that such was the prayer was borne arose to a breeze, and as he bent beneath their sway he stole the coveted kiss, when, let upon his lips he took the down from her cheek. Alas! the sweetness and odor of her delicacy gone that nothing could restore, not even the dewdrops that the evening air was fast distilling there.

The spirit upon which the evening fell, he sighed to think that he might not even kiss her cheek, for the hand just beyond his farthest reach

WORK OF FIRE BUGS.

AN ATTEMPT TO BURN MR. MARCKLET'S BARN.

Kerosene Poured from a Bottle through a Window Upon some Boards and then Ignited—Chief Grant has a Clue.

An attempt was made at incendiarism in this city last night, and it is only by chance that Mr. Markelay's barn, corner of Central avenue and Second street, is standing to day.

The barn is close to the railroad and in the rear is a high board fence.

Last night some one climbed over the fence, broke a window of the barn and poured a pint of kerosene in on some pieces of boards directly underneath, and set it on fire.

The fact that the fire was set on the inside saved the building from destruction. The pieces of board were burned to ashes, and the beams on the side of the building were a little burnt, but there being no draft to fan the flames they died out.

Mr. Thorpe who rents the barn discovered the matter this morning and reported it to the police, who have a clue to the would-be fire bugs, and they may soon be caught and dealt with as they deserve.

Chief of Police Grant has the bottle and also the measurement of the foot prints in the soft earth near the fence.

BREVITIES.

—The Catholic Benevolent Legion held a well-attended meeting last night. One new member was taken into the Order.

—The civil suit of Ogden vs. Walpole, for damages for being bitten by a dog was postponed yesterday until next Thursday.

—The household goods of James Barry of West Third street were levied on yesterday, by Delinquent Tax Collector Nash, for non-payment of taxes.

—A forlorn creature, evidently insane, was wandering about the village on Thursday, and finally took a train for Plainfield, where her home is.—Westfield Leader.

—The 100-mile road race of the Atalanta Wheelmen from Newark to Princeton and return by way of Plainfield and Somerville will take place on June 17. The club has applied for membership in the Metropolitan Association of Cycling clubs.

—Andrew Mantz of Coontown, who has been at Mr. Jacob Voehl's, Somerset street, since his hands and feet were amputated on account of being frozen, has returned home and will live on the farm with his son, who is to be married Sunday.

—Marsh, Ayers & Co., the painters and decorators, of East Front street, have made a contract to decorate the interior of a house at Long Branch. The decorations are to be of cost $250. The work will be commenced at once under the supervision of Mr. W. S. Chase.

—The annual meeting of the Plainfield Boys' Club Association will be held as the club rooms on Friday, April 21st, at eight o'clock p. m. The important matter of the introduction of manual training into the work of the club during the ensuing year will come up for discussion, and it is earnestly requested that the subscribers and all others interested in the club's work will be present.

—The Plainfield Athletic Club will give an invitation dance this Saturday evening. The club was organized in January and has now about thirty-five members. The club room is on the top floor of 29 West Front street. The members have fitted up the room with muscle cultivators and have a boxing instructor to teach them the art of self-defense every Wednesday evening.

DIDN'T PAY HIS POLL TAX.

So Charles McCarty was Arrested by Justice Nash.

Delinquent Tax Collector Nash is causing delinquents, who have owed the city poll taxes for years back no little worriment and anxiety.

Yesterday afternoon Charles McCarty of Plainfield avenue, on his refusal to pay the amount due the city, was arrested and would have been sent to jail but for the length of time required for the City Judge to have duplicate warrants drawn. He was paroled under the custody of Special Officer Allaband, and given until Monday to pay the amount he is in arrears. If he fails to do so, then he will be taken to the county jail at Elizabeth.

Mr. McCarty, it is claimed, owns several houses, but has studiously refused to pay poll tax.

The Gwynette Trouble.

The trouble of the Gwynettes over their household goods and creditors, is becoming complicated. Yesterday the suit of Woodruff against the actor for money claimed to be due him, was tried and decided in favor of the plaintiff. Gwynette's counsel at once gave notice of appeal.

Deputy Sheriff Moffett yesterday served another writ of replevin on Marsh and Kelly of Westfield, and the goods will now be released.

THE VENINO CONCERT.

At the Casino Last Evening, Enjoyed by Those Present.

There was an audience quite gratifying to Mr. A. A. Venino at the Casino last evening on the occasion of his annual concert.

The programme was selected with his usual good taste, and some thought that it made the affair the finest concert of its kind.

Those who took part besides Mr. Venino, as pianist; were Mr. Dannreuther, first violin; Mr. Thiel, second violin; Mr. Schill, viola; Mr. Schenck, violoncello; and Mr. Kahlkopf, double bass.

There were repeated encores which were responded to with very appropriate selections.

Mr. Venino alone did not respond to the warm applause which greeted his numbers.

He came near not appearing at all because suffering from grip, and had already made arrangements with the string quartette to fill the entire programme. At the last moment he decided not to disappoint his audience, which no doubt would have excused him had his condition been known.

PERSONAL.

Mr. L. Sternberg and family of Newark have moved to Sycamore street, this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kaerth of East Second street entertained a few friends last evening.

Mr. George Van Ness, a clerk in the hardware store of Mr. A. M. Griffen of East Front street, is ill at his home on Duer street.

The body of Mrs. Looney, who died at Bayonne, Wednesday, was brought to this city for burial in St. Mary's cemetery, this morning.

Mrs. Charles Howard, Jr., of Broadway was called to New York by a telegram, yesterday, announcing the serious illness of her mother.

Mr. Henry Goeller is dangerously ill at his home on Second street. He was taken sick Wednesday morning, when he had two hemorrhages.

Miss Hagan gave a progressive whist party at her residence, 18 Prospect avenue, last evening. The prizes consisted of dainty novelties in silver.

The Rev. K. P. Ketcham of this city occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church at Dunellen last Sunday, owing to the absence of Rev. A. L. Martinez.

The family of Mr. James T. Closson, a New York banker, returned to their Summer home, corner Richmond and Front streets, yesterday, from New York.

The Rev. Mr. Pierson and wife will conduct the services in the Park avenue Baptist chapel, to-night. There were two stirring addresses last night. The public is cordially invited.

The second sermon in the series being delivered by the Rev. Charles E. Herring, at the First Presbyterian church, next Sunday. The subject will be: "Abishai: Nothing Venture, Nothing Have."

The West End Circle held a social at the residence of G. Elston Lowrie last Friday night. A number of Plainfield guests were present. Music for the occasion was furnished by Prof. Reilly.—Call.

Wallibald Has Fits.

Fred Wallibald, of this city, a prisoner in the Union County jail, was attacked with epilepsy Wednesday night and had twenty violent fits between midnight and yesterday morning. Warden Biere and his deputy, Mr. Smith, and Dr. Miller were up all night with the patient. It took six men to hold him. He was better yesterday.

Wallibald is charged with grand larceny. It is alleged that he stole over $160 from the News Company and the Central Railroad here. Willibald will be tried at the May term.

Under Mr. Sheenan's Supervision.

Mr. John T. Sheenan of West Fifth street will have charge of the laying of the tracks of the street railway on Somerset street. Mr. Sheenan was formerly in the employ of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, and it was under his supervision the tracks of the Lehigh's new road, from South Plainfield to Roselle, were laid. He has had plenty of experience in this line, and is said to be a very capable man.

Paderewski may Visit Plainfield.

"The only, lovely, Paderewski," with his hair and other fascinations, it is said, may visit Plainfield. The authority for this statement is a Plainfield gentleman prominent in the music world. Paderewski's wealth of hair has had almost as much to do in advertising him as his mastery of the piano.

SYRIAN CUSTOMS.

AN INTERESTING LECTURE AT THE Y. M. C. A. ROOMS.

Nijah Hatlbah, a Native of Syria, tells of the Ceremonies and Manners of His People—The Story of Hasan and Fatimah.

There was a large attendance at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening to hear Nejib Hatlbah, a native of Syria, describe the customs of his people in regard to marriage. He said:

"The ancient Greeks made love rule their gods. So did the Romans and the Egyptians, and love was then ruling mankind with a despotic sway. And at the present time—in this civilized nineteenth century—love is still a ruling power, but in a purer and more God-like manner. Love sways for itself a form. In America it has a special mood, in England another, and still another in Syria. I will explain the form in my native land. But intelligent people are not satisfied to have simply the customs related without a word about the country.

"Syria is one of those countries which were so unfortunate as to submit to the yoke of subjection for a long time. The natural growth of civilization being checked, Syria has been united with the successive prevailing powers of the day, by intermarriages and adopted habits. So what is left of the 'Syrian Social Customs' is in reality a mixture of Phoenician, of Persian, of Assyrian, of Greek, of Roman, of Arabian, and of Turkish customs. The country naturally assumed a Mohammedan or Arabian character. Therefore to speak of Syrian marriage is to speak of Mohammedan customs. For the ruling people of Syria is of the latter. Let me describe the Syrian manner in the form of a story.

"Hasan, the son of one of the wealthiest merchants of Damascus, was a perfect type of a Mohammedan. Being he was a small boy he used to rule over his companions, all because his father was rich, for faith has a disposition of tyranny. He had a sister named Leila, who was possessed of remarkable beauty, even for the Damascan race. But Leila, being a female all restrictions of her sex were placed upon her. She had nothing to tell and nothing was told to her, and every one in the family held full sway over her. Even her brothers used to call her.

"Hasan was sent to school when about six years old and kept there until he was twelve. Leila, being a girl, was not educated. At the age of fifteen she was forbidden to leave the house without permission, and was compelled to wear a long heavy wrapper, with a sort of head-piece from which hung a veil. The veil could be raised before her sex only.

"Restriction of women is by no means exercised by Mohammedans only. The Greeks forbade women to leave their homes after sunset; the Romans made their wives work in the fields like men. Liberty of women is traveling westward and declining eastward. In America woman has the same right as man, or nearly so, but not so in England. Her condition is more restricted in Germany, and is still worse in Russia, until you approach China, where a wife is buried with her husband, if he dies first.

"When Hasan was about 16 years old he told his mother one day that he wanted to get married. That night when he went to bed the mother and father talked it over, and the next day the mother and Leila went in search of a pretty girl suitable for Hasan's wife. Fatimah, the girl at last selected, they agreed upon a girl of fifteen named Fatimah. That evening the mother told her husband of the choice of Leila, and that Fatimah was the chosen one. 'All right,' said the father, 'but I don't know whether I like her very well. I guess she's all right.'

"Next morning, while Hasan was in the store, the father went to the house of the Sheikh (Shikh is a Moslem divine) to ask him to intercede in his son's behalf, for the hand of Fatimah in marriage. This the old man agreed to do. Accordingly the Sheik visited Omar, father of Fatimah, and was assured that Hasan should have the girl. Next morning the father was informed of the decision.

"Hasan was told of his engagement to Fatimah. But one day he raised her veil to gaze upon his countenance, and for that he was rent to prison."

The lecture was very interesting and the speaker illustrated it by showing the costumes of the Syrians.

DR. M. B. LONG PRESIDENT.

Of the Union County Medical Society.

The twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Union County Medical Society was held Wednesday evening at Elizabeth. After the business Dr. Mack gave a dinner to the Society. It was an elaborate affair and the physicians and surgeons from all parts of the county were the participants.

At the meeting there were several papers read, and Dr. Mraving presented an interesting post-mortem case.

The new officers of the Society are: President, Dr. M. B. Long, of Plainfield; vice-president, Dr. H. Page Hough, of Rahway; secretary, Dr. Norton L. Wilson, Elizabeth; treasurer, Dr. P. W. Westcott, Scotch Plains; reporter, Dr. Dayton Decker, Woodbridge.

REV. T. A. V. HENRY, Pastor.

The Diphtheria Scourged Family.

Chief Grant and Mr. Andrew Love, Jr., visited Newark yesterday and spent the day trying to secure a nurse for the unfortunate Yose family, but were unsuccessful. In the evening a nurse was secured in Westfield. Chief Grant went in the interest of the Plainfield Board of Health.

Marcelle Yose, the oldest child, died of diphtheria last night.

RARE ZOOLOGICAL SPECIMENS.

Wild Beasts from the Remotest Parts of the World.

P the Barnum and Bailey greatest show on earth, which comes here Wednesday, May 24, it is said, that it owns and exhibits more foreign rare animals and birds than any traveling exhibition in the world, and aside from the attractions of the fine circuses, double museum and hippodrome and the splendor of the "Columbus" display, it is worth many times the admission fee to the show to inspect the zoological wonders.

Using the most modest language possible, it is only truth to say that it is the best and most varied collection of wild, rare and curious animals ever seen in the city. The animals of the ruminant tribe are particularly rare, and here is a splendid specimen of its kind. There is a rare species of gnu, or horned hoke, from the mountains of Africa, and different in many particulars from the lowland gnus usually seen in captivity, being piebald for one thing, while the species ordinarily seen is black. A pair of uncommonly rare African pouplers occupy one cage and an enormous wart hog from Abyssinia another. Rare species of Alpine, African and Asian antelopes are shown, among them an eland and an oryx and a nylgau and a springbok.

The antelope cage is the best in it without question, the finest, whether taken singly or collectively, of any in any zoological garden in the world. There is one cage of three full-grown lions; another contains a lioness and her family of four young, wicked-looking cubs; another has three baby panthers; another an infant kangaroo, and so on, forming a veritable zoologic nursery of most curious babies. There is another cage of three enormous tigers—one of them said to be the largest in captivity. The hoopards are beautiful specimens of their kind—one being black—and there is another cage of ferocious panthers. There is a cage of laughing hyenas and another of Siberian wolves. There are a number of the largest bears in captivity, from the Rocky Mountain silver tipped with claws five inches long, to the huge, giant, restless polar species. There is the only giraffe on exhibition in this country that can reach nineteen feet, and a two-horned rhinoceros; the only genuine zebra ever imported to America, a number of quagga, which usually pass for zebras, being of their family and similarly striped; a pair of white Bactrian camels, ten dromedaries and fifteen elephants, besides the monkey family of 150 members. These are but a few of the beasts in the show, but to enumerate them all is an impossible as is unnecessary. To all of these have just been added a huge black orang and a Bighorned mandrill, both remarkable animals, the former not only one of the rarest on earth, but one more nearly resembling man in every way than any other known.

THOSE CHIMING BELLS.

To be Placed in the Seventh-day Baptist Church.

The new building of the Seventh day Baptist church is nearly completed and will be ready for public worship by Fall.

The work of building the church has been retarded by the fact that at the outset it was decided not to go into debt. Should the money not be forthcoming to carry on the work, the labor was to stop until sufficient funds should be in hand for the purpose. The labor too has been entirely that of day's work, as none but the very best was wanted. The result is a building which will endure for centuries.

The furnaces have been placed in position, the plumbing completed, and by the first of May the decorations of the ceilings will be completed. The pews for the church have been ordered and will be delivered at the same time. A chime of bells will be hung in the tower.

Joseph A. Blair to Alfred L. Smalley		1,150

Changed to the Trinity Church.

Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop's temperance address, at the Academy, Brooklyn, was an unusually able one, and aroused the audience to enthusiasm. The speaker was frequently interrupted by applause.—Ex.

Mrs. Lathrop's lecture will be held in the Trinity Reformed church, instead of the Congregational church, next Tuesday evening. The change is made in order to accommodate a larger attendance.

Another Improvement.

Workmen have commenced excavating for a cellar at the corner of Front and New streets preparatory to the erection of a business block. Mrs. Drier was the purchaser of the property and is having the new building erected. $6,000 was paid for the land. The house originally thereon has been moved to New street.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A King Secures His Rights.

BELGRADE, April 14—(Special)—A bloodless coup d'etat was effected here last night, and King Alexander, the youthful ruler of Servia, who has heretofore governed the country through regents, today rules in his own name. A grand banquet was given at the palace last night to celebrate King Alexander's success in passing the examination prescribed for Servian students.

The Regents, Ministers and many who were known as their supporters were in attendance. Troops were quietly installed in all the public buildings and at midnight all the king's guests were placed under arrest and the king announced that he would rule hereafter.

Cyclone in Vicksburg.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 14th—(Special). A despatch from Jackson, Miss., dated 2:15 a. m., says a cyclone has just struck Jackson and Vicksburg. All wires are down and it is impossible to learn the extent of the damage.

Runs a Sixteen-Year-Old Murderer.

CAMDEN, N. J., April 14, (Special.)—John Hill, the sixteen year old colored boy murderer, was hanged this morning in the Camden county jail here.

TO GUARD AGAINST CHOLERA.

The Plan Decided Upon by the State Board of Health.

The State Board of Health at a meeting at Trenton recently devoted some time to the discussion of the coming of cholera to this country. The members concluded that they could not improve on the plans that they adopted last year. They will instruct all the health officers to watch diligently for any cases, and to report at once to the State Board of Health. They will have special health officers to watch Camden, Jersey City and the steamships arriving at Hoboken.

They will again organize a patrol for the coast, so that no out-of matter from infected ships can be carried inland, and all the refuse matter is to be promptly burned. All suspicious cases are to be taken charge of by the local health officers and bacteriological examinations of discharges of the patients made.

New Jersey News.

Complete and corrected returns from the Rahway election increase the majority of Dr. Daly, the Democratic Mayor, to 366, which surpasses all previous records of any successful candidate for that office by over 200 votes.

Willie Page, a four-year-old son of John Page, living in Highland Park, while playing in his yard yesterday, was severely bitten on the thumb by a large, ragged cat owned by J. Van Naman. The thumb was nearly severed.

The preparations for hanging John Hill at Camden, to-morrow are nearly completed. Hill is firm and says he will not break down when he mounts the scaffold. He is preparing a confession which will be given out before he leaves his cell for the last time.

Westfield Items.

Steps are now being taken, it is said, to organize another Episcopal church at Westfield and let the new Mr. Jennings have possession of the present one.

The Assessor has commenced the registering of milch cows, as provided for by the State Health Board regulations.

Mr. S. W. Reese will give his illustrated lecture on the "Battle of Gettysburg" before the Jr. O. U. A. M. at their meeting next month.

A Struggle in the Union County Board.

There is likely to be a contest for the directorship of the Union County Board of Freeholders at the annual meeting in May. The candidates named are Freeholders Sauer, Moore and Trahon. The struggle is likely to be between Moore and Sauer.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the PLAINFIELD BOYS' CLUB ASSOCIATION, will be held at the Club house, on Friday, April 21st,

at eight o'clock p. m.

The important matter of the introduction of manual training into the work of the club during the ensuing year will come up for discussion, and it is earnestly requested that the subscribers and all others interested in the club's work will be present. 14 0*

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Rule 12."

Rule 12 of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has come into contact with the United States interstate commerce law and got a black eye. Whether the decision of Judge Taft that obedience to its mandate constitutes a conspiracy against the United States and is therefore punishable as such will stand depends on the final decision of the United States courts. The case will be next laid before the United States circuit court of appeals.

Rule 12 of the Locomotive Engineers declares in effect that when a strike has been supported on any given road by the grand chief it shall be a violation of obligation to the order for the engineers of any other road to handle the cars of the route where the strike is on. Chief Arthur approved the strike on the Ann Arbor road and sent out circulars to the connecting roads directing their engineers to observe rule 12.

The Ann Arbor company laid the case before Judge Ricks of the United States district court, representing the injury done to it. Upon the petition Judge Ricks issued an injunction to Chief Arthur commanding him to recall the circular. He did so, but five engineers and four firemen refused compliance and obeyed rule 12 rather than an order from the United States court. They were arrested for contempt of court.

There were two lawsuits. One was the petition praying that the injunction be made permanent which forbids Chief Arthur to order compliance with rule 12. Judge Taft decides that the injunction shall be made permanent because rule 12 is clearly in conflict with the interstate commerce law.

The other case was that against the engineers and firemen who refused to haul the cars of the Ann Arbor road, even after Chief Arthur had issued the circular declaring his order was rescinded. Judge Ricks found by the evidence that four of the engineers and firemen actually resigned their places in good faith rather than transfer freight of the Ann Arbor road. This they could do, because a man has a right to quit his employment at any time. But in case of the remaining engineer the evidence showed that he did not actually resign his place, but evaded the issue. He therefore was found guilty of contempt of court. The result of lawyer Frank Hurd's appeal from this decision will be awaited with interest.

Poor Ross Smith.

The letter left by E. Ross Smith, the murderous lover at Evanston, contains a lesson and a warning. He says that he prayed for the lightening of his grief when Effie Clark refused to marry him, but no help came. Then follows this: "The only hope I have of receiving comfort is to get such control of my emotions that I will keep thoughts from entering my mind."

In the last sentence poor Smith states one of the profoundest truths of metaphysics. To get control of the emotions is indeed the only way of receiving comfort. Ross tried it. He could not, so he murdered the girl who would not marry him and then killed himself. Smith's state of mind was insanity, as his roommate says. True love asks the good and the happiness of the one loved, whether that happiness consists in marrying the lover or not. Smith was jealous. He was in a fever of passion, rage and disappointment, but there was not a spark of true love for the girl in his soul. He was merely the victim of his own ungoverned emotions. The supreme work of every one is to train himself to think or not think of a thing as he chooses.

The man who is governed by it as dead and cold as a log of wood. But the person who has strong emotions and can control them can make the happiness and well being of himself and all around him. It is the secret of all power, all happiness, to rule our emotions and passions, to know just when to use them and when to draw rein on them. We are never entirely comfortable till we learn to sit on ourselves.

France knows how to punish public officials when they are guilty of taking bribes. Baihaut, the corrupt ex-minister of public works, must be imprisoned five years, pay a fine of $150,000, lose his rights as a citizen and pay back to the receiver of the Panama Canal company part of the $75,000 which he took from the company as his price for promoting their interests. Blondin, who was the go between for Charles de Lesseps and Baihaut, gets two years' imprisonment, while Charles de Lesseps gets five years. The three men together—Baihaut, De Lesseps and Blondin—must pay back to the Panama company's receiver the $75,000 which was paid from its treasury as a bribe to Baihaut.

The meanest man on record has been found in New York city. The man who stole copper cents from a dead negro's eyes is excelled by the New York man who goes out of his way month after month to collect $30 in copper cents with which to pay his rent, all because he has a grudge at his landlord. Human nature is awfully mean when it gives its head to it.

Do not say "Oberon was rendered a reception." He could not be tendered. Say "A reception was rendered to him."

HOT ON ROACH'S TRAIL.

The Republican Senators Insist on the Investigation.

CHANDLER WILL LEAD THE FIGHT.

They Demand That the Proceedings Take Place In Open Session—Work on Public Buildings Not to Be Stopped—Captain Guthrie Says Disband the Militia.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—There are indications that the present uneventful special session of the senate may end with some sensational features. A hot fight is not unlikely between the Republicans and Democrats. Both parties are beginning to get irritable over the Roach affair. The Democrats are a good deal worried over the situation and do not know just the best course to pursue. The leaders on that side of the chamber are in frequent consultation, and Senator Roach is called into their conference very often. The Democrats are disposed to stand by Roach, but yet not put in an embarrassing position when it is openly charged that one of their number stole the funds of a bank while cashier a dozen years ago, and they are unwilling to have the matter investigated.

The Republicans are publishing the matter, and with a persistency indicative of their intention to keep it before the country and force the Democrats to go on record as refusing to grant an investigation of the charges or compel them to be sent to an investigation which might have the effect of forcing Roach to resign or evel of lessening the esteem in which the senate is held.

Much of the most interesting part of the rather quiet but none the less determined fight between the two parties in the senate has taken place behind the closed doors of executive sessions, but the Republicans have evinced a purpose to insist hereafter on these proceedings being in public.

Mr. Chandler in the fight line and purposes to deliver a speech in open senate calling attention to the career of Senator Roach. It is intended to propose that Senator Martin's title to his seat be thoroughly looked into, the Republicans putting little faith in Ady's claims, but hoping to have the seat declared vacant. They will also insist upon a quorum of the senate.

Ought to Disband the Militia.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The Interior department received word from the war department that its reports indicated a very serious condition of affairs at Antietam, scene of the late troubles. Captain Guthrie telegraphed that affairs were in a very unfavorable condition, and that he thought at the first opportunity there would be a conflict between the Locke Indians and the militia. The people, he says, are driven to desperation through terror of the militia. He thinks disbandonment of the militia would end the trouble.

Public Work Will Go On.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The fact that Secretary Carlisle has refused to take action looking to the acquisition of the Bowling Green site in New York city for a new custom house and the Chestnut street site for the Philadelphia mint building led to the surmise that the administration has resolved on a policy which would defer work on the public buildings throughout the country. That any such policy had been determined upon was emphatically denied at the treasury department.

Indians For the Fair.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Secretary Smith has granted permission to Buffalo Bill and his Indians to visit Chicago. There will be 100 Indians, and the directors intend to invite as guests the principal chiefs of historic celebrity to visit Chicago and see the World's fair. Major Burke called upon President Cleveland and invited the president to visit the Wild West show when in Chicago.

To Build a South American Road.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The bureau of American republics is informed that Mr. J. C. Gibney of Indianapolis and five others will sail from New York on April 26 for Colombia to take charge of and build the Bogota and Girardot railroad under a concession that was granted by the Colombian government to parties from Pittsburg, Indianapolis and New York.

Terrell Goes to Turkey.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The president sent the following nominations to the senate: State—Alexander W. Terrell of Texas to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Turkey. Treasury—Charles W. Larrabee of Maine to be collector of customs for the district of Bath, Me.

Wanamaker's House Sold.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The I street residence of ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker *was sold to S. S. Belmont, a son-in-*law of the late Augustus Belmont, for something in the neighborhood of $100,000. It formerly belonged to ex-Secretary Whitney.

NEW HAVEN, April 14.—Yale men are to give an opera, a burlesque on "Robin Hood" on May 16. *This is the first dra*matic production given at Yale for some time, owing to faculty opposition.

POISON IN THE COFFEE.

Queer Story Told by a Woman About a Wealthy Widow.

LONG ISLAND CITY, L. I., April 14.—Mrs. Martha H. Dubois, a wealthy widow living at Seacliff, and granddaughter, Lillian D. B. Treadwell, of the same place, were arrested upon a warrant charging them with willfully poisoning food with intent to kill Mrs. Margaret Cooney, a widow, who was formerly in their employ.

Mrs. Cooney's story is that last summer she went to work for Mrs. Dubois, who gave her part of the barn for herself and three children to live in. On July 11 Mrs. Dubois sent her a pot of coffee, after drinking it she and one of her children were taken sick with symptoms of poisoning. They saved their lives by taking antidotes. Mrs. Cooney took what was left of the coffee to Bellevue hospital, New York, and had it analyzed. The chemist said that he found paris green enough to kill 20 persons.

Mrs. Dubois and Miss Treadwell were admitted to bail in $1,000 each. Both women deny any knowledge of the alleged poisoning. No one there believes them guilty of the charge made by Mrs. Cooney, who is said to be crazy.

SUED FOR A MILLION.

The City of Toledo Brings Suit Against the Standard Oil Company.

TOLEDO, April 14.—Today there will be filed in this city the heaviest suit for damages in the history of Toledo. Startling charges of conspiracy are made against many of Toledo's prominent citizens. The title of the case is the city of Toledo vs. a list of about 40 prominent men. All those who appeared in legal proceedings against the city pipe line are included, also many outside capitalists who are known to own stock in the Standard Oil company. The petition charges conspiracy to prevent the city of Toledo from constructing the pipe plant, preventing competition, etc.

There are four counts in the petition, three of which are based on injunction suits began in the common pleas, circuit and United States district courts.

It is charged that none of the suits was entered in good faith, but all were in pursuance of a conspiracy made and entered into for the purpose of damaging the city of Toledo, and they did damage to the amount of at least $1,000,000.

Death of Brooklyn's Postmaster.

BROOKLYN, April 14.—Postmaster George J. Collins died at his home of Bright's disease, from which he had been a sufferer for some time past. Mr. Collins was born in New York city in 1839, when a young man he joined the Twelfth New York militia and served throughout the war of the rebellion. Since the close of the war he has been closely identified with the Grand Army of the Republic and was ex-commander of U. S. Grant Post No. 327, *which acted as a bodyguard over the re*mains of General Grant. He was a member of the Loyal Legion. He was appointed postmaster in July, 1890.

Mrs. Partridge Holds the Purse.

CHICAGO, April 14.—Partridge was decidedly a lay figure in the pit. He has telegraphed for his wife, who is in California. Those who are best acquainted with them say that Mrs. Partridge will never put her signature to a paper involving a dollar's worth of the $2,000,000 real estate standing in her name. This story is that Partridge when pledging himself not to speculate in a line of over $1,000,000. It is equally certain that May whose may go to $20 a week, and Mrs. Partridge and the children will not suffer.

A Western Romance.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., April 14.—John Carnes, recently injured at the Harrington elevator, and now at the hospital, was married to Miss Scott of Armour, S. D. The young couple were engaged, but kept it a secret. Miss Scott was informed she could not nurse him unless a relative or wife, so she married him.

Places For the Public.

CHICAGO, April 14.—The opening exercises of the exposition will be held at the east front of the Administration building. The platform will have seats for only the invited guests. The general public in unto told numbers will be ranged in the plaza in front and on boats in the main lagoon.

Postmaster Barrett's Return.

KEENE, N. H., April 14.—Postmaster Barrett, who disappeared from his home several days ago and was subsequently found in Cincinnati, has reached home in company with his brother-in-law. His mind is perfectly clear now, but he is suffering from nervous prostration.

The Derby Was In Mud.

A BIG TIME ON LAND TOO

New York Is Making Ready to Receive the Blue Jackets.

TEN THOUSAND TARS TO GO ASHORE.

The Naval Officers Will Be Entertained at the Clubs and There Will Be a Big Ball. Route of the Land Parade—The White Squadron's Return From Rio.

NEW YORK, April 14.—There is every prospect that the coming carnivals on land and water, in connection with the naval review here, will be of even greater interest than were those of the Columbian celebration. The land parade of sailors, in which the jack tars of many navies of the world will join, promises to be a brilliant spectacle. As yet only an outline of the programme has been prepared, but there are 100 or more energetic and enthusiastic gentlemen working out the details of a glorious celebration.

A meeting of the executive committee of the mayor's committee of one hundred on the entertainment of distinguished visitors was held in the governor's room of the city hall at noon.

General Horace Porter, chairman of the special committee appointed to confer with the citizens' committee about a ball at Madison Square Garden, reported that a caterer had proposed to furnish a supper on the night of the ball for $1 a plate, this price to include wines and liquors. He said that was a matter to be decided later. General Porter also reported that the collector of the port had reported that the barque of the Duke de Veragua might be taken off at Quarantine and passed without examination.

Arrangements were also making for the Spanish minister to meet the duke in the city. At the suggestion of Mr. Perry Belmont the reception committee of the Chicago fair, including Director General Davis, were made honorary members of the committee of one hundred.

It was decided that for the shore parade on the 28th the marchers land at the foot of West Forty-second street, march to Fifth avenue, down Fifth avenue to Waverly place, thence to Broadway, and down Broadway to the city hall, the reviewing stand to be located at Madison square.

Brigadier General Fitzgerald, General Martin T. McMahon, Commander J. W. Miller, Colonel Daniel Appleton, Adjutant General Josiah Porter and James J. Martin were appointed a committee on land parade.

The committee adjourned to meet in the same place at 12 o'clock on Monday next.

Return of the White Squadron.

NORFOLK, Va., April 14.—A large and expectant crowd gathered upon the wharf to witness the return of the white squadron from their practice manœuvers off Lynn Haven bay.

Upon the mizzen mast of the Chicago there floated itself a tiny white flag bearing two blue stars, the ensign of the admiral. The tall forms of the officers, in their long blue uniforms, began to be outlined against the sky, and from the signal halyards floated a gay array of bunting, which to the uninitiated were nothing but strange and mysterious signals. On the bridge a man waved up and down, and sidewise, lengthwise, a large red flag with a white square in its center. Instantly the Philadelphia, flagship of Admiral Gherardi, became the stage of a lively scene. There was the musical and ringing sound of a bugle, and the marines, who had been gathering in readiness for days since the fleet was first sighted, fell into line. From the bridge a blue uniformed sailor talked rapidly, but how the less unscientific, with the man who was still wigwagging with his red flag on the Chicago. He was telling the incoming vessels the news which had happened since they went to sea.

To Entertain 9,500 Sailors.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Rear Admiral Gherardi arrived here from Fort Monroe. The object of his visit was to consult with Secretary Herbert regarding the entertainments to be given in New York on the occasion of the naval review, and included the numberless details connected with the ceremonies which will take place at the review. It is said that the question of the collation to be given the sailors of the fleet by the New York Chamber of Commerce was also discussed. Naval officers are inclined to think that the Chamber of Commerce has undertaken a bigger task than it imagines—that is, there are about 9,500 blue jackets in the fleet, and if only half of them are allowed to go ashore it will make a big crowd to lunch in the style which the organization giving the affair intends. It is also said that the collation will be served at the Seventh regiment armory, as intended. It is understood, however, that consent will be given the men to accept the invitation.

Tug Boatmen Interested.

NEW YORK, April 14.—A meeting of tug*boat and shipowners generally* was held in the Maritime Exchange directors' room, and steps were taken towards securing some uniform plan to govern the movements of tugs and other boats on the occasion of the naval parade on April 26 and 27. A committee was appointed to devise such a plan and to secure the names of all boat owners and lessees of boats who intend to be on the water on the day of the parade. The treasury department in Washington will be requested to issue a circular embodying the regulations adopted by the committee and calling on all boatmen to observe them.

Union League to Open Its Doors.

NEW YORK, April 14.—The directors of the Union League club decided at their monthly meeting to give a reception to the visiting naval officers who are expected to be here to participate in the naval parade.

Haughty Japanese Actors.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 14.—The two celebrated Japanese actors—Ichikawa Danjuro and Onoye Kikugoro—have received very advantageous offers to play in Chicago during the opening season of the World's fair Danjuro it is said has declined an offer of 5,000 yen a month for his services. It is thought Kikugoro will accept an engagement.

Suffered From Birth
With a Severe Form of Scrofula Humor

"Until my boy was six years of age he was from birth a terrible sufferer from scrofulous humor. Sores would appear on him and spread until as large as a dollar and then discharge, followed by scales, so that the larger part of his body was one mass of sores all the time, apparently severe on his legs and back of his head on his neck. The humor had a very offensive odor, and caused

Intense Itching

We cannot tell how that poor boy suffered in all those years. Physicians did not effect a cure. At last I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, as my druggist recommended it. In about two weeks the Sarsaparilla began to have effect. The sores commenced to heal up; the flesh began to look more natural and healthy. Then the scales came off and all over the body new and healthy flesh took the place. When he had taken two bottles he was entirely free from scales, and there was no sign to show where they had been. Those have all disappeared. We are unable to express our thanks for the good

WHITNEY AND THE PRESIDENT.

Report That They Are Enemies, and That Croker and Mayor Gilroy Are Out.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Under a double column headline reading "How These Democrats Do Love One Another," The Times publishes these items:

"President Cleveland and William C. Whitney, his former secretary of the navy and confidant, are out. This information comes direct from friends of Whitney and Cleveland. Mr. Whitney has not called on Mr. Cleveland since his inauguration, and he has practically had no relations with him for several months.

"Richard Croker, Tammany Hall dictator, and Mayor Gilroy have parted company. They are, as politicians would say, at 'outs.' Their disagreement has arisen over the appointment of a successor to the late Louis J. Heintz as commissioner of the assessed district. The secret that the city's chief magistrate has quarrelled with the supreme leader of Tammany has been carefully guarded."

SIXTEEN KILLED BY THE STORM.

Awful Work of a Cyclone In a Mississippi Town.

ROBINSONVILLE, Miss., April 14.—It is hardly possible to exaggerate the havoc made by the cyclone and fire here. There are parts of two houses and a water tank still standing. Everything else was razed to the ground. The number of killed is 16—1 white and 15 colored—and about 10 more injured.

Probably 100 negroes received slight injuries, but none of them will die.

Mrs. Emma Lusk, the only white person killed outright, was the wife of the night operator. She and her two children and her husband, who was at home, were in their house when the cyclone struck it. The colored preacher, Shippen, was crushed to death. Isaac Chapman was caught in the ruins of his house and burned with three other negroes, who are among the unknown. The dead, with the exception of Mrs. Lusk, are distributed about in negro cabins and will be buried together.

Citizens After the Elizabeth Track.

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 14.—When the Elizabeth council granted the license to the New Jersey Jockey club, R. V. Lindabury secured a writ of certiorari. Copies have been served on President Michael Dwyer, Secretary McIlvaine, Superintendent Brush, Director Frank O'Reilly and Starter William Howe. Detectives are securing evidence for the Citizen's league.

Killed Twenty-eight Thoroughbreds.

NASHVILLE, April 14.—Harper stud, the home of St. Blaise, was the scene of terrible destruction. A bolt of lightning struck a large brood mare barn and completely destroyed it, together with its contents, consisting of a large amount of hay, 2,000 bushels of oats and 28 head of thoroughbred brood mares, most of them in foal.

OUR FLAG TAKEN DOWN.

The Protectorate Over Hawaii Was Ended by Blount.

THE HAWAIIAN FLAG NOW FLYING.

The United States Marines Go Aboard the Boston and the Native Troops Hold the Islands—No Interference of Japan or Other Nations Will Be Allowed.

HONOLULU, April 14.—The stars and stripes which for two months have floated from the government building have been hauled down, and the remaining forces from the United States cruiser Boston have been sent aboard. Nothing indicative of American authority remains in Honolulu save Minister Stevens and Commissioner James H. Blount of Georgia, the latter of whom sits in his easy chair at his cottage, cogitating no one knows what. On April 1 in the presence of a crowd numbering 12,000 persons, Lieutenant Draper, marine officer of the Boston, blew the notes of the retreat from his bugle, and "Old Glory" sank from the sight of the throng and was replaced by the colors of the Hawaiian monarchy, which still remains the flag of the island.

On the afternoon of March 31 the commissioner held a lengthy and secret conference with President Dole and the ministry, at which he notified them of his intention to declare off the protectorate established by Minister Stevens Feb. 1. It is understood that he gave as his reason therefore that the Washington administration did not regard the protectorate as necessary, and, further, that it was incompatible with any diplomatic negotiations that might be arranged between the two countries. The United States, however, would brook no hostile interference in Hawaiian affairs by any foreign power.

The provisional government somewhat reluctantly acquiesced in the commissioners' decision and prepared to order out their forces to maintain the peace.

Down Came the Colors.

The hour for hauling down the American flag had been fixed for 11 o'clock. As early as 8 o'clock in the morning, however, the streets had begun to fill. At Palace square the jumble of natives, Chinese, Japanese halfcasts and Portugese and whites on foot, on horseback and in carriages waited. After it was all over Captain Zeigler marched into the hallway of the building with a Gatling gun and field pieces and stationed them at various entrances. The other troops were marched to the barracks. Lieutenant Draper and his squad of marines proceeded to Camp Boston where they joined the battalion under Lieutenant Laird, which, under orders from Admiral Skerrett, evacuated the quarters they had held so long. They marched to the boat landing and embarked to go aboard the Boston and remain indefinitely. Thus ended another episode in Hawaiian history.

A Crown Prince Coming.

CHICAGO, April 14.—Dr. Emil Blum of Vienna, who is here in connection with World's fair matters, has been directed by the Austrian government to stay in Chicago until July 24 and then leave for Honolulu to meet the Austrian crown prince, who is now on a journey around the world on a man-of-war. From Honolulu Dr. Blum will escort the crown prince to Chicago, arriving here about the middle of August. After he gets tired of the show the prince will go to New York, where he will be picked up by the man-of war again and taken to Europe.

Icebergs Six Miles Long.

NEW YORK, April 14.—The ship Francis, which arrived from San Francisco, had a rough and perilous voyage. She was 117 days in making the trip. Fifty-16 she passed three huge icebergs. The forerunners of a heavy floe, which she met next day. Some of the bergs in this pack were 500 feet high and 6 miles in length. One particularly large berg was estimated by Captain Doane to be 20 square miles in area and its height averaged fully 300 feet. The ship was nearly three days in passing the floe.

AN ORDINANCE

To widen Madison avenue from the southeasterly side line of West Front street to the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey.

WHEREAS, the Common Council judge that the public good requires the widening of Madison avenue between the streets named in the title to this Ordinance, therefore,

Be it enacted by the City of Plainfield by their Common Council as follows:

Section 1. That Madison avenue in the City of Plainfield, from the northwesterly side line of West Front street to the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, be widened and laid out so that said Madison avenue shall be of the uniform width of twenty-five feet on each side of the centre line thereof, which said centre line is described as follows: Beginning at a point in the centre line of said Madison avenue, where the same is intersected by the southeasterly side line of West Front street as now laid out and opened, said point being distant thereon two and 372-100 one hundredths (2.37) feet in a magnetic course of south forty-two degrees and twenty-nine minutes east (S. 42 degrees, 29 minutes E.) from the southeasterly corner of the intersection of said West Front street running from said first mentioned point south forty-two degrees and twenty-nine minutes east (S. 42 degrees, 29 minutes E.) a distance of five hundred and twenty-five and forty-nine one hundredths (525.49) feet to a point in said centre line, in the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey.

The land to be taken for the widening of Madison avenue on the northeasterly side of the same from the southeasterly side line of West Front street as said line of the Central Railroad company of New Jersey includes all that part of the property now owned by Silas Price, Henry Charles K. Austin, Theodore J. Ohlen, John A. Rogers and the Plainfield Electric Light Company which is contained within said northeasterly side line of said avenue as now laid out and opened, and a line parallel with the centre line of said avenue as now laid out and opened, and a line parallel with said centre line and distant thereon twenty-five (25) feet in a northwesterly direction.

The land to be taken and the lines of Madison avenue as the same is hereinabove ordered to be widened are shown on a map made by the City Civil Engineer, entitled "Assessment map for the widening of Madison avenue from West Front street to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, City of Plainfield." Dated 1893. Made by F. A. Dunham, Civil Engineer.

GOOD HEALTH

THE RIGHT AGE FOR MARRYING.

Considered on the Broad Basis of Its Effect on the Human Race.

When we should marry is a question which presents itself in many different lights and admits of as many different answers. Herr Korosi, statistician of Buda-Pesth, has been investigating it from the standpoint of health, to determine what effect early or late marriages may have, firstly, on the two persons joined together by the knot, and, secondly, on their children, which means on the human race at large.

In the past 10 years he has noted the age of the parents in 29,813 registered cases of the deaths of children. These cases he divides into two groups, one containing all deaths caused by hereditary disease, the other where death was due to some disease contracted after birth. From these he finds that the age of the mother is more determining in its results on the infant than the father's age, though the latter is by no means without effect, and that very young mothers, under the age of 20, most frequently give birth to weak children, who are not able to fight the battle of life and die soon after birth. A table of percentages of death from hereditary causes (excluding tuberculosis) is subjoined:

Age of Mother.	Percentage of Deaths.
Under 20 years	22.31
20 to 20 years	14.31
30 to 35 years	12.86
Over 35 years	13.45

Fathers under 25 years old stand on about the same level in these tables as mothers under 20, and the best results on the health of children is seen among fathers whose ages range from 30 to 40.

The following table shows the result of the "age combination" of both parents in deaths from hereditary disease:

Age of Fathers.	Age of Mothers.	Percentage of Deaths.
20 to 40	20 to 35	12.02
20 to 30	30 to 35	12.20
Over 50	over 35	12.62
30 to 40	over 35	12.81
30 to 40	20 to 30	13.24
40 to 50	over 35	13.59
20 to 30	20 to 30	15.36
40 to 50	30 to 35	15.40
Over 50	20 to 35	17.54
40 to 50	20 to 30	18.51
40 to 50	30 to 35	18.98
Over 50	20 to 30	21.21
30 to 20	under 20	21.71
30 to 40	under 20	27.86

This table appears to bring out three important points—first, that men should not marry before the age of 25 if they wish to have healthy and strong children; second, women between the ages of 20 and 35—and this applies with still greater emphasis to women under 20—ought not to contract marriages with men who have passed the age of 50; third, that it is not wise for women over 35 years of age to marry men under 30 years.

The Philosophy of a Boil.

Philosophy and a boil do not at first glance appear to have much to do with each other, but the medical summary bids us "look at the philosophy of the boil, carbuncle and like affections," as follows: Some fault exists in the regular elimination, and the morbid material is collected at some convenient point to force it out of the system in an extraordinary manner, and it will be noticed that a wall of exudiable lymph forms around it to complete the enucleation, and the obvious indication is to assist in this work, which can be done in the early stage by applying the spirits collodion over the hardened, thickened part, leaving the center uncovered.

On drying the collodion contracts and thus firmly separates and protects the surrounding parts from the pestiferous mass. By touching the suppurating points with pure nitric acid and keeping the center of the tumor moist there is a prompt discharge of the pus and a rapid recovery.

ETIQUETTE

LETTERS OF CONDOLENCE.

They Should Be Simple, Sincere and Speedily Sent.

"To write a letter of congratulation on a happy event in the history of a friend is a comparatively easy task. Words of cheer and felicitation fall trippingly from the pen as from the tongue. The letter of condolence requires more care, more delicacy, greater comprehension, a fuller recognition of the friend's character and environment. Many people hesitate to write their thought of sympathy to one who is suffering under the first surprise and bewildering shock of a deep bereavement. The impulse is strong to put forth a hand in the dark and give the warm clasp which means 'I am sorry,' 'I grieve in your grief,' 'I would help you if I could,' but quick upon its heels tread the suggestions of caution. 'I do not know how well enough to intrude,' whispers an instinctive refinement of pity. 'My rude thrusting in of myself would only tear open the wound afresh.' 'Should I attempt to speak words of consolation they would sound like platitudes, appear conventional or perfunctory.' The arguments are often so reasonable in their appeal to common sense that the original tender impulse is resolutely crushed back. One prays for one's friend, but does not directly address her."

"In most cases the silence is a mistake," decides Harper's Bazar, after presenting the case in the foregoing words. "Occasionally it is better than speech, we grant, particularly when those of whom we think are mere acquaintances, not even in the outer circle as yet of friendship, or when the sufferers are specially shy of manner and reticent of nature.

"Usually, however, the letter of condolence, if short, earnest and sincere, is an olive branch of promise borne as by a very messenger dove of peace over the wild whirling waste of snow. The simpler it is the surer its errand of mercy. The sooner it is sent the more speedily its tender balm is laid on the aching heart. On the whole, it is always very nearly safe to trust to the early friendly impulse and to disregard the later detaining hand of caution."

An Evening Gown.

A rich white brocade gown, made in the new fashion, with every seam widening from below the knee and kept out by a batayeuse, composed of two white flounces, with a pink one in the middle, has the puffed sleeves of coral pink velvet and the chemisette of the same, the latter emerging from the brocade front and softened by very delicate passementerie. A gown composed mainly of turquoise blue velvet is cut very similarly. Turquoise blue velvet is the favorite trimming on black bodices.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

PICTURESQUE HONOLULU.

The Delightful Capital City of the Hawaiian Isles.

Honolulu, which is just now attracting the special attention of the outside world, is picturesquely situated on the island of Oahu, facing a small harbor formed by a coral reef, which extends along the shore at the distance of some 100 yards and against which the swell of the sea breaks. Although there is plenty of water inside the quiet inner harbor, which is reached by a narrow channel, large vessels have to remain in the roadstead, which is capacious and perfectly safe. Approached from the sea, the white latticed houses of Honolulu appear to nestle among groves of cocoanut palms, breadfruit, candle nuts, tamarinds, mangoes, bananas and oranges, with the brilliant green of a narrow strip of sugar cane for a background, above which rise the mountains of Koko to a height of 6,000 feet, while in the distance looms a long line of peaks lifted from the bottom of the sea by tremendous volcanic upheavals, riven here and there by green chasms and wide valleys, the latter being carefully cultivated to a distance of six or seven miles from the shore.

The town in its business quarters along the waterside wharves looks commonplace, but Honolulu proper, with its low fronted houses fringing long embowered lanes, shady and cool with overhanging foliage and gay with countless blossoms, presents a lovely aspect. There is no winter in these happy isles, and all the year round the garden feuces are every where brilliant with red hibiscus, pomegranates and oranges, including all sorts of tropical and subtropical trees, including palms of many varieties sweet perfumes filling the soft air around. Sir Edwin Arnold describes the beautiful scenery one meets along the line of the seabench in the most glowing terms:

Every house along the beautiful highway is nestling round in flowers. Head has the glorious sea frontage of the golden sand, the green lagoon, the coral barrier and the gleaming open ocean, and for bathing, boating and hunting delights nothing sky-where could surpass it. We see the canoes of the natives come shooting in like sea arrows from the mists on the white peak of a breaker; the paddles flashing, the men—wild with the pleasure of their strength and skill—singing at the top of their well modulated voices and no more afraid of the milky roll of that vast Pacific breaker than if it were one of their own little white ponies. There are all accomplished swimmers and do not seem at all afraid of the sharks even if cognizant outside the coral barrier.

AVENUE OF PALMS NEAR HONOLULU.

Fleet Street In London.

Fleet street has been one of the main thoroughfares of London for many centuries. The Fleet ditch, which ran into the Thames, was a famous if not a savory stream. The Fleet prison was long a terror to London aspirants. Nowadays Fleet street, leading to Ludgate hill and St. Paul's cathedral, is still the chief thoroughfare from the west to the city. Here the great daily newspapers have their offices, and on either side there are narrow alleys and courts, where are still to be found what were the residences of the rich and the noble, now used for the various purposes of trade.

These old houses are vanishing, for they are being pulled down to give place to more commodious buildings. The city commissioners of sewers have condemned them as unsafe, and their quaint gables and bow windows and overhanging windows will soon have vanished.

It is said that the great fire of A. D. 1666 was staid just before it reached these houses, which even then were counted old. It is almost certain that in A. D. 1570 Henry Elsing began business at one of them under the sign of "The Spread Eagle," and that they were built in the earlier years of King Henry VIII. Inside the old houses the fine balustrades, the huge floor beams and the wainscoting remain much as they were three centuries ago.

All About Allspice.

The island of Jamaica produces about all the allspice of the world. It is known also as pimento or Jamaica pepper. The tree on which the berries grow is evergreen, and the flowers grow in dense clusters. These develop into small green globular berries the size of black pepper. If allowed to ripen, they become pulpy and lose some of their pungency. For commercial purposes the berries are gathered when green, carefully dried in the sun, and afterward packed in bags holding 150 to 180 pounds and shipped. Pimento trees grow in many parts of tropical America, but nowhere do they thrive as in Jamaica. The trees are never planted by man and receive no cultivation worthy of the name. The seeds are dropped by the birds, and the rains and the tropical sun do the rest. Surplus trees are cut down and become walking sticks and umbrella handles. The spice is more mild and innocent than most other spices.

Valuable Mandolins.

The mandolin, which has become so great a craze of late from its great simplicity, is without doubt the easiest to learn of all stringed instruments and therefore an excellent stepping stone to finer study. Old mandolins are very rare and consequently valuable, but the chief value of a mandolin depends largely upon the amount of inlaid work expended upon it. Mandolins are made all over Europe, but undoubtedly the best come from Italy.

The important points of a good mandolin depend greatly upon its depth of body. There should be as many sections as possible in it. These are not put there for mere ornament, as every section inlaid or carefully jointed. The shape of the opening varies, but the best are usually oval, not unlike the violin. Below the bridge the face should sheive away.

THE BIRD OF POWER.

Where the Swift and Strong Eagle Builds Its Nest.

There are several varieties of eagles, some of which build their nests in trees, but the larger kinds build on high crags. They do not take much trouble with their nests. They find a place on the face of a cliff which is inaccessible to men, and there they collect a large quantity of sticks, with no effort at arrangement. When they have formed a tolerably large platform in this manner, they line just a small part in the midst with grass, and here are laid two or sometimes three white eggs. These eggs are much sought after, and bold, skillful eraigmen frequently risk their lives to obtain them.

From the kind of food on which the eagles live you will suppose that the nest, or eyrie, as it is called, is not a very pleasant spot even if you could get to it. The lambs or rabbits or fish which the bird has captured are carried to the nest and torn in pieces for the young, and the remains of dead animals lie thick on and about the nest, making it a very unpleasant place indeed.

The eagle is swift in flight and can readily capture other birds even when flying. Because the eagle is so strong and swift and brave, it has been from the most ancient days used as a symbol of power by different nations. The Assyrians, then the Persians, then the Romans of ancient days, used the eagle as their standard, just as we do in the United States.

Springtime.

There is daw on the grass and the clouds,
There's a gleam on the faraway hill,
The meadows are glistening all over
And merrily ripples the rill.
Come out, come out to the fields and play,
We must welcome the young and gay,
For this is our springtime holiday.

Do you see how the fairies are dancing along,
Singing so gayly and free,
Then in the glow where the bright sunbeams throng,
Frolicking down to the sea?
Let us be happy and merry and gay,
Let us be gladsome and joyous as they,
As to the meadows we hasten away.

Find is the winter and heavy Jack Frost,
Melted the ice and the snow,

The flowers their mantle of sweetness have donned
To the winds that were waiting, I know.
All things are happy, and merry and gay,
All things rejoice in this spring holiday—
We, too, will be glad. Come away! come away!

The Forgetmenot.

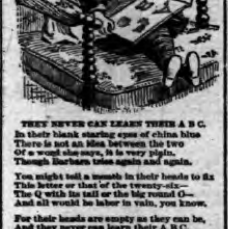
Everybody knows the pretty little forgetmenot and likes the flower more perhaps because of its name than its beauty. How was it so called? The Germans account for it by a tale in pathetic romance. It seems that once upon a time a knight and a lady were walking by the bank of the Danube when the latter asked her "gallant gay" to pluck for her a tiny blue flower which she saw growing in the stream. No sooner said than done, but the knight, overbalancing, fell into the river, and owing to the slippery nature of the bank and the weight of his own armor was carried away by the current. As he threw the flowers ashore to his lady he cried out with his last breath, "Vergiss mein nicht!" ("Forget me not!") And ever since the flower has been looked on as an emblem of fidelity.

Teaching the Dollies.

Barbara sits with her dollies to look,
Filled with delight at a wonderful book,
And here she can read, as plain as can be,
In gay colored letters her A B C.

The early chapter I, and the big round O,
And the Q with its tail a dozen may know,
But this bright maid has a wise little head
And knows all her letters from A to Z.

Now what do you guess is her task today,
Which Barbara thinks much better than play?
She is striving to teach with patient care
Her tow-comart dollies perched up on the chair.



THEY NEVER CAN LEARN THEIR A B C.

In their blank staring eyes of china blue
There is not an idea between the two
Of a word they say, so very plain
Though Barbara tries again and again.

You might tell a month in their heads to fix
This letter or that of the twenty-six—
The Q with its tail or the big round O—
And all would be labor in vain, you know.

For their heads are empty as they can be,
And they never can learn their A B C,
And however busy they sit on the chair
Their time would be fixed in a vacant stare.

Some Pig Stories.

In the south of England the pig is the family pet and pride, and in Hampshire especially his position is as important as that of the gentleman that pays the rent" in Irish cottages. A woman in that county who was dying, after a long illness, expressed her mournful regret that she had never seen the basement dug and added that if her husband had known in time how much she wished it he would have carried it up to her bed chamber. Now, however, it was too large and heavy.

Indeed the local mind seems to be engaged in constant speculation upon this "animal" as he first saw her at her confirmation in a great cathedral.

"And did you get acquainted with her at once and ask her to marry you?" was the question.

"No, do," said he. "I waited till I had two pigs in my sty, and then, sir, I knew I was a match for any woman!"—Youth's Companion.

Now to Mix.

A Bangor family recently engaged a cook who was quite an artist with the kitchen utensils and the raw material at her disposal, although she was not on good terms with the schools, being unable to read. She identified canned goods, for instance, by the pictures on the can labels. But one day the "Boston Brown" did not work, and the result was amusing. A can of desiccated cocoanut was brought to the house by the grocerymen and it bore the well known trademark cut of the monkey dallying with a cocoanut. When her gaze fell upon that can, she was astounded. "Oh, lor'!" she ejaculated, "I have seen canned corn, canned peas and canned beef and everything canned, but bless me if this ain't the first time I ever saw my canned monkey!"—Lewiston Journal.

—The largest auction sale of dry goods that has taken place in New York in years closes with this week The goods were from the well-known house of Brown, Durrell & Co., of Boston, who were burned out in the late Boston fire. The goods were sold by order of the fire underwriters, and among the buyers was Mr. Edward White, of this city, who secured much of the best goods and placed them on sale at prices that seem to make quick sales.

CUT BY A CHISEL.

A Plumber's Helper and a Carpenter Collide.

Warner Pierson, a plumber's helper, met with a peculiar accident yesterday afternoon. He was at work upstairs in Mr. Charles Lyman's new house, corner of Mercer and Washington avenues. He was sent downstairs for something. As he hurriedly turned from the hall into a room, he collided with a carpenter who was on his way upstairs, and who was carrying a few of his tools. As the boy and carpenter came together, a chisel carried by the latter came in contact with the former's arm cutting a painful gash. Pierson went to Dr. Adams' office, where his injury was attended to.

MR. GOODRICH ACCEPTS.

He Will Become a Bound Brook Pastor.

The officers of the Congregational church at Bound Brook have received from Rev. L. B. Goodrich an acceptance of the unanimous call lately tendered to him to become their pastor.

Mr. Goodrich will soon complete his theological course in the Yale Divinity School. He will then begin his duties as pastor on the third Sunday of May.

In June, dame rumor says, he is to marry an estimable Brooklyn young lady, who formerly resided here, where she was a member of the Congregational church, of which the Rev. C. H. Goodrich, brother of the Rev. L. B. Goodrich, is pastor.

A Rainy Night for Mr. Night.

Elaborate preparations were made for an entertaining evening at Vincent chapel last night, but the heavy rain storm prevented a very large attendance. The address that was to have been given by Mr. Night was postponed. There were a few piano and vocal solos. Then those present gathered around a large table in the church parlors. After eating and a social chat the company disbanded and went home feeling well paid for their effort to attend the gathering.

Salvation Army.

On Thursday and Friday, April 20th and 21st, Commander Ballington Booth, in charge of the United States forces, will conduct in the Elkwood Hall, West Second street, "Two Days of Worship," assisted by Colonel Wm. Evans, Chief-of-staff; Major R. Evans, C. D. O., and Central Divisional Staff and New Jersey Field Officers. Meeting will commence each day at 11 a. m., and three and 7.30 p. m.

Engine Works to Start up Again.

Work in the Merrill Engine Works, at Bound Brook, has been resumed. A new partnership has been formed under the name of Frank H. Merrill & Co. An air engine will be made on an improved plan, at a greatly reduced price, and adjustable to any windmill. A number of Plainfielders were employed there when the works shut down about a month ago.

THREE PASSENGERS INJURED.

A Locomotive Runs Into the Rear End of a Train.

An accident happened on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad at Skillman station, between Bound Brook and Trenton, at about five o'clock this morning in which three men were seriously injured. Their names are John J. Hilliard, of Elizabeth; Frederick Francis, of Jersey City, and Claude Flaville, of Philadelphia.

The men were all in the rear car of express train No. 546, which was stopped at Skillman for orders. A minute after the express reached the station, and before the brakeman on the rear car could go back any distance to flag approaching trains, a locomotive rounded the curve and crashed into the train, ploughing half way through the rear car and striking the three men named.

As soon as possible the undamaged part of the train was run to Bound Brook with the injured, where they were attended by Dr. C. R. P. Fisher. Travel was delayed several hours.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Fred Shroeder and family of Brooklyn, N. Y., now reside at 142 Grove street.

Mr. Quidort, of Cleveland, Ohio, is visiting his aunt, Mrs. C. Obitz, of Somerset street.

Miss Eliza Rafferty of Paterson, a sister of Mr. John Rafferty of this city, is dangerously ill.

Major Robert L. Burnett of Hillside avenue entertained a few friends at dinner last night.

There was a children's party at the residence of Mrs. P. M. Smith on Madison, this afternoon.

Mr. Morgan S. Taylor of Rockview terrace is adding an extension to his already large house.

Mr. Charles E. Brooks gave a dinner to a number of friends, at his Crescent avenue home, last night.

A service in memory of the late Miss Agnes Rodman, daughter of the rector, will be held in Grace church to-morrow morning.

Mr. Augustus Van Deventer of Washington avenue has improved the looks of his property by removing the front fence and several large pine trees.

Nellie Rockafellow, a daughter of Constable Rockafellow, died Thursday night of pneumonia. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock.

Dr. Frank S. Wells, of West Fourth street, whose wife died a short time ago, was called to his father's home in New York State yesterday, by sad news. His father was stricken with paralysis and his recovery is doubtful.

The Rev. E. H. Mandeville, D. D., of New York, Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Education of the Reformed Church, will occupy the Rev. Mr. Schenck's pulpit in the Trinity Reformed church, to-morrow morning.

Miss Marie Adele Feytel died yesterday, at the home of her brother, Mr. Charles Feytel, of West Front street. Death was caused by pneumonia. Deceased was 37 years old. The funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon, at four o'clock.

Freeman Shotwell, one of Plainfield's oldest residents, died Thursday night in his 79th year, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. S. Garretson, Central avenue and Third street. The cause of death was general debility. William H. Shotwell of Emily street, North Plainfield, and Mrs. Garretson are the only children. "Uncle" Freeman, as he was known by nearly every one, was one of the few remaining old pioneer hatters of this city.

THIS YEAR'S CRESCENTS.

When a Pitcher is Secured the Team Will be Complete.

The Plainfield Amusement Company has not yet found a pitcher good enough for this year's Crescents, although a number of highly recommended twirlers have been given a trial. One of three or four in view will be signed in a few days, however. The team as now engaged is composed of:

"Effects of Alcohol on the Human System."

Mr. E. B. Matteson of New Brunswick will give an illustrated lecture on "The Effects of Alcohol on the Human System," at the W. C. T. U. rooms, on Broadway, this evening at eight o'clock. He is said to be an interesting speaker, and a large audience is expected to greet him.

Put it up Without Permission.

A large elevator being erected in the rear of Mr. Gavett's store, on East Front street, will no doubt have to be torn down. It is being put up without permission from the city. The owner of the building, Mr. Suydam, lives in New York. Chief Doane ordered the work stopped yesterday.

Engine No. 388 Wrecked.

Engine No. 388 passed through Plainfield to-day on its way to the repair shop. It was in a badly wrecked condition, and was minus a smokestack and cowcatcher. It is said the engine was damaged by falling into an "ash pit" at Ashburn, by the breaking of a turn table.

Old Crescents Play Ball.

Four old Crescent League players have joined the Paterson team and played yesterday against Brooklyn. They were Sneeden, pitcher; Bonner, short stop; Lever, centre field; and Turner, right field. The score was nine to one in favor of the Brooklyn.

Each of the former Crescents played an errorless game, and Bonner had four "assists" and one "put out" to his credit. The New York Press says:

"The Patersons have a good team, and will make things lively for other clubs in the New Jersey State League."

Crescent League Tournament.

The interest in the Crescent League head pin tournament seems to be waning. No games have been played up to last night for several successive nights, for the reason that many of those who have entered do not put in an appearance, and the members that do attend have all bowled with each other. Last night's game resulted as follows:

	Won.	Lost.
Vandervort	1	1
Tobias	0	1
Van Alstyne	1	0

THE "JOHN BULL" READY

For its Trip to the World's Fair as a Jersey Exhibit.

"John Bull," the famous English make engine of sixty years ago, drawing its train of creaking, low roofed coaches of the same date, is to be one of the exhibits of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at the World's Fair, in Chicago, and is now ready for its mission. It is illustrative of the early prize of the company, their securing this famous old railroad relic that dates back to the beginning of steam travel in this country to show the development in this line. The train will start in June to reach Chicago before the fair opens.

The cars are bright green. The engineer is exposed to the weather, and the brakeman sits in a hood-shaped canopy on the roof of the car and pulls the ball of the signal cord.

The engine was made in England for the Camden and Perth Amboy road in 1831.

Appeals in Behalf of Mrs. Yoss.

The Press is soliciting contributions for the Yoss family of West Second street. One of the proprietors is a member of the Jersey company in which the recently deceased husband of the sorely afflicted Mrs. Yoss was a member. All the members are putting forth strenuous efforts in Mrs. Yoss's behalf and deserve encouragement. A few weeks ago her husband, her sole support, died suddenly of pneumonia, and she and her children were stricken down with diphtheria, of which the oldest child died a few days ago, while another child is in a precarious condition. The family is not only helpless but penniless over him. The furniture of their little home is heavily mortgaged, the rent of the home is unpaid, and there appears no prospect of paying it unless the sympathetic public help her children is a little baby. Altogether the case is a very sad one.

Mr. George Rockfellow, the President of the Board of Health, asks for contributions, and conveniences these may be sent either to Mr. Rockfellow or to the paper mentioned.

Any relief given in this way will, of course, be but temporary. The case must eventually be taken charge of by the city. The Press company has provided a nurse, but, as most of the members are persons of very moderate means, they can do comparatively little alone.

Dragged Under the Wheels.

An unidentified man was killed shortly before noon yesterday at South Elizabeth. He was stealing a ride on a freight train, and undertook to jump off, when his foot caught and he was dragged some distance clinging to the side of the car. At last he relaxed his hold and rolled under the wheels. Ten cars and the caboose passed over him. They found, when taken up, was able to speak, but would not tell his name. He said he had no home. He lived an hour. The body was taken to Jensen's morgue.

To Attend Drake's Band Reunion.

Prof. Guttman has received an invitation for the Plainfield Cornet Band to attend the re-union of Drake's Band, Elizabeth, next month. The re-opening of the armory, which has been undergoing repairs will also take place the same time. The invitation has been accepted, and the band is making preparations to go.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Charges at the World's Fair.

This is a subject in which a majority of the people of America are interested. They will be glad, therefore, to be assured by the director general of the Columbian exposition, Hon. George R. Davis, that they need not fear overcharging in Chicago when they go to visit the fair. He writes about the matter in The North American Review.

He reminds us, naturally enough, that the people of Chicago, for the credit of their city, for the sake of drawing as many visitors there as possible, would refrain from overcharging for lodging and board. Nevertheless it will be the best plan for all who can to engage lodgings before they go to Chicago and have the price expressly stipulated. Thus they will not go it blind and put themselves in a position to be fleeced. There is connected with the fair management a hotel bureau which undertakes to contract in advance with landlords for lodgings for such visitors as may desire their aid. The bureau has already contracted for lodgings for an average of 15,000 visitors daily, with landlords whose charges will range from $1.35 a day for one room occupied by one person to $3.50 a day for a large room occupied by four persons. The large hotels are not included in the list of houses with which the bureau makes contracts.

Estimates show that the city can accommodate 200,000 persons with food and lodging at one time. The large hotels have "an emergency capacity" of 10,000. The average daily attendance at the last Paris exposition was 130,000, the largest number in any one day being 400,000. On the days of largest attendance at Paris it was shown that at least 100,000 people belonged in Paris or its immediate vicinity. The local population was the last to its highest figures. and Mr. Davis expects the same will be the case at Chicago. There will not be so great a local population on which to draw at Chicago, however.

Clubs, societies and religious organizations have made large provision for persons of small means. The Woman's Dormitory furnishes lodgings to 1,000 ladies a day. The price of a share of its stock is $10. It entitles the holder or holders to 25 days' lodging at the Dormitory.

Stay at Home Vacations.

There will be people—some of the salt of the earth, too—who cannot get away for a journey this coming summer. No, not even to go to the World's fair. The outlook is rather a dreary one to those among them who are both tired and sensitive. Many can get apparently no recreation at all, strive as they may. But for those fortunate enough to live in or near the country there is a way whereby they may secure at once health, change and recreation.

We suggest to city stay at homes that they try to get into the country for the summer, a place where those who are compelled to do so may go to and from their daily town work. And to both city and village people who cannot get a vacation we suggest that they try gardening on a small scale. Few persons are so shut in that they cannot find a place where there is ground enough to have a few flower beds. Blooming plants may be put in if the stay at home cannot plant flower seeds early enough.

It will be interesting to those who have never tried it to find out just how beautiful they can make some neglected patch of ground. Rising early in the morning and cultivating the flowers before the serious workday begins will fill the lungs with air, and the fragrant soil will breathe a blessing upon the person who tries to make it grow lovely flowers. The bees will hum about the flowers and thank you for giving them that much more honey. The landscape will become more beautiful for your efforts. The fragrance of blossoms you have made manifest will float upon the air, bringing sweet perfume to jaded spirits.

And Sundays you will have time to lie in the shade and yourself contemplate this joy and beauty you have brought into existence.

Industrial enterprises are on the up grade in the south. During the first quarter of 1893 the manufacturing establishments started in the southern states exceeded those for the same period in 1892 by 126. The increase was especially noted in cottonseed oil mills and wood working factories. This month the governors of all the southern states met in convention at Richmond to form plans for the industrial development of the south. It is certain that they will take pains to impress upon the public the few fixed all round principles on which the prosperity of every community depends. Mob rule and crimes of violence must be suppressed and law and order maintained first. Then there must be good roads. Next there must be good schools. The climate, soil and natural resources of many parts of the south are not exceeded even by those of California.

The latest trust is the Typewriter trust, consisting of a union of five of the leading writing machine companies. Two things it is to be hoped in mercy to humanity they will not do. One is to put the prices of typewriting machines higher than it is now. The other is to compose of all the strong young women and form a pretty typewriting girl trust too.

IT WAS ORDERED DOWN

The Flag Was Lowered According to Instructions.

CARTER IS SURE OF ANNEXATION.

How the Affair Is Viewed by the Senators. Republicans Criticise Blount's Action Severely and Democrats Try to Account For It by Theories.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—A dispatch to the New York Herald reads: "That Commissioner Blount acted under instructions to withdraw the marines from Honolulu and haul down the American flag from the provisional government house is now officially admitted for the first time. In explanation of their reasons for not making the admission before, the officials say they were afraid the withdrawal of the protectorate established by Minister Stevens, previously announced, without proper explanation to the Hawaiians, might have caused the provisional government much embarrassment and possibly occasioned bloodshed.

"It is officially admitted now that Mr. Blount was given explicit instructions to withdraw the marines and haul down the flag, but that he was also given discretion as to the time when this should be done. He was not to make the move until he deemed it safe for the interests of this government to do so. That the flag was hauled down is therefore regarded as a favorable indication, as it signifies that Mr. Blount is satisfied that the provisional government is secure.

"It is now openly confessed that Mr. Cleveland and his cabinet have from the first disapproved the act of Minister Stevens in hoisting the flag of protection over the islands. It is not only considered to be against the traditions of this government, but in absolute violation of international law."

Carter Still Hopeful.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Up to the hour of closing the department of state no information had been received there regarding the action of Commissioner Blount in ordering the United States flag removed from the government building in Honolulu.

This at least was understood to be the case, but it was noted that the cable officers of the navy department who usually handle the state department cipher messages, were very busily engaged.

In the course of the afternoon Mr. Carter, the annexation commissioner from Hawaii, had an interview with Secretary Gresham, which he said was "quite satisfactory." He reiterated his statement that the removal of the flag was due to the condition of affairs in Honolulu, which no longer warranted its floating over the government buildings. "The provisional government exist and ought to sustain itself. I am not at all discouraged over the situation, and believe we shall come out all right in the end," he said.

That this is Mr. Carter's sincere belief is borne out by the fact that he is arranging to make a tour of the south to investigate the subject of negro labor, and the probabilities of the successful cultivation of the country for Hawaii. He says in explanation of this trip, that the knowledge a necessary to this government and the people of the islands, for if annexation with the United States is consummated, the present contract system by which Chinese and Japanese laborers for the sugar and rice plantations of Hawaii are secured, must be abandoned, and southern negro labor will be the most available substitute.

What the Senators Said.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The news from Honolulu that Minister Stevens' act, done at the hand of senators, although there was much reticence manifested when an effort was made to draw them out. The Democrats refrained from all utterance to what appeared to be their real sentiments and reports equally cautious said more for private ears than they were willing to see reproduced in cold type. Members of the foreign affairs committee were naturally averse to any discussion of matters over which such committee they have jurisdiction, when the senate is called upon to act.

Senator Palmer of Illinois sees no reason for alarm in the action of Commissioner Blount. "I can scarcely see," said the senator, "how the act of Mr. Blount can be construed as an abandonment on the part of the present administration of all intentions concerning the islands. It, to my mind, signifies rather that precaution which the importance of the situation suggests, so that the matter of annexation or the establishment of a protectorate can be discussed with sober deliberation. By hauling down the flag there passes from view that coercion which might be supposed to exist if the marines were permitted to remain as a gun rid and the flag was always floating in the capitol of the provisional government. This apparent coercion being removed, the situation would be cleared and the commissioner of this government and the authorities of the islands can face the conditions from an unprejudiced and unbiased point of view. There is no occasion for any alarm."

Should Have Kept Up the Flag.

Mr. Morrill does not condemn the proceeding unqualifiedly, but it is easy to see that he disapproves of the act which results in the lowering of the American colors. "I may come out all right," he said. "It may be that the administration wants to be in a position where they can act, as they believe, freely and without prejudice."

"On general principles," said Mr. Proctor, ex-secretary of war, "I believe in holding up the flag. I hope this action of Commissioner Blount does not menace the future of that country nor the abandonment of the principle to which the public has up to this time given its hearty assent. But just what it means I cannot say, and I presume we must wait until we are made acquainted with all the facts."

Senator Cullom deprecated the act of the commissioner and said: "I am not surprised that the present Democratic administration should other the stars and stripes to be hauled down. They have taken the flag down whenever they had the opportunity, and there was a time when they had it down in the states for quite awhile. The dominant power in the Democratic party caused the flag to come down then in the southern states, and they are performing the same act elsewhere. It is not the first time by any means that Democrats have ordered down the flag of this country."

Calls It a Sugar Trust Intrigue.

CHICAGO, April 15.—Hugh Morrison, manager of the great Makaweli sugar plantation at Kauai, the northernmost of the group of Sandwich Islands, who was at the Great Northern hotel here, en route to Europe, expressed the opinion that commissioner Blount made a mistake in lowering the American flag in Honolulu. Said he: "I have a strong suspicion that the American Sugar trust is by intrigue at Washington seeking to bring about the conditions toward which the preliminary steps have been taken, if the dispatches are correct. The trust fears that if the American protective tariff be established sugar refineries will be started on the islands. The trust is not a combine of growers, but solely of refiners. At present we do not refine the sugar, but ship it to America in the raw state."

ALLEGED CUSTOM HOUSE FRAUDS.

Colonel Tichenor Asks Secretary Carlisle to Make an Investigation.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The revival of the agitation of the custom house scandals and fraud in the appraiser's stores at this port, has caused considerable excitement among the employes of the custom service.

The interest in the matter was further heightened by the statement of Colonel Tichenor, president of the board of general appraisers, that he had written a letter to Secretary Carlisle asking that a commission be at once appointed to make a thorough investigation of the charges and punish each and every person found guilty of malfeasance in office.

Colonel Tichenor denies that he is in any way connected with the alleged frauds, and says that he thinks the whole matter is inspired by certain employees of the government, themselves guilty of wrongdoing, for the purpose of diverting attention from themselves.

Celebrated the Coup d'Etat.

BELGRADE, April 13.—The details of the coup d'etat were carried out with remarkable swiftness and simplicity. The regent and cabinet ministers responded to an invitation to dine in the old palace. Right were seated at dinner, the king presiding, when the latter rose from the king rose and said to the regents: "Gentlemen—For four years the king, my name, have administered the kingly power. I shall not trouble you to take you have taken. I now feel able to administer the power myself, and will exercise it from this moment. I beg you, therefore, immediately to hand me your resignations." M. Ristics replied that he could not and would not comply with the king's request, which was contrary to constitutions. The king thereupon left the room and sent an aid-de-camp to demand the resignations of the ministers. As they all remained obdurate, he ordered them to leave the old palace and go to the new palace to pass the night. The morning they were conveyed to their residences under guard. The king's assumption of power was celebrated with a torchlight procession and general illuminations.

Got the Plaintiff Drunk.

UTICA, N. Y., April 15.—When the case of Dease against Partridge versus George W. Dease was called in court at Herkimer the plaintiff's attorney stated that his client was unable to appear because she had been made drunk by agent of the defendant. Both parties live in New York. Dease is a lawyer and Miss Partridge has sued him to set aside a deed in which investigation was made affidavits introduced showing that one James Keyes, who Miss Partridge says has pretended to be a lover of hers, entered her room at the hotel at midnight and urged her to settle her case. She refused and then Keyes plied her with whisky and after daylight brought Dease into the room. Dease produced a paper which he tried to make her sign. Judge McLennan ordered contempt proceedings brought against Keyes and Dease and placed Miss Partridge in charge of the sheriff. The case against the men will come up next Tuesday.

The Cause of Her Suicide.

LONG ISLAND CITY, L. I., April 15.—Mrs. Willis, who committed suicide by throwing herself in front of a fast elevated railroad train in New York city, lived with her husband here. The mother of Mr. Willis said that Mrs. Willis was of a liberal disposition until the death of her mother in Kentucky. She did not get there in time for the funeral and has been given to spells of melancholy and crying since her return. On the day before her suicide she went to New York after her supper, promising to soon return home.

They Got No Answer.

CLEVELAND, April 15.—A committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers waited upon General Superintendent Canniff of the Lake Shore railroad, and formally presented a request for the reinstatement of all strikers and firemen who left in preference to handling Ann Arbor freight cars. Mr. Canniff did not promise the men an answer inside of any definite period, but they expect to know their fate soon.

A Swindled Landlady.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Drs. James Cook and Cleveland W. Goff were arraigned in police court here, charged with conspiring to defraud Mrs. Mary Alice Kieff, a boarding house keeper, out of $2,500. They pleaded not guilty and were held for examination. Mrs. Kieff told the court that the prisoners had induced her to advance money to the Cook Manufacturing company of which Dr. James Cook was the vice president.

A Victim of Grip.

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 15.—John Roury committed suicide by swallowing a large quantity of carbolic acid. Grip affected his mind.

THE VOTE ON THE ISSUE

Senators Agree to Settle the Roach Matter Definitely.

SHEEHAN'S WHITE HOUSE VISIT.

The Lieutenant Governor of New York Said He Was Satisfied and Said Nothing More—"There Must Be a Reciprocity." Says a Friend of the President.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The session of the senate was its longest in open session and the most interesting since the present extraordinary session began. The day was passed in debating the proposed Roach investigation. Unless the plans of the leaders of both parties miscarry today will see the session at an end. In the executive session just before the adjournment a hitch occurred between the Republicans and the Democrats that today there should be a vote on the resolution proposing an investigation on Senator Roach's career while cashier of a bank here. The calendar cleared of the nominations and that a committee should notify the president the senate would adjourn at once unless he desired it to remain longer. It is understood that the Democrats will vote down the proposed investigation of Mr. Roach, the Republicans being willing the session should close without an investigation if the Democrats will go on record to that effect. When the senate met Mr. Roach arose and said that he was perfectly willing the investigation should be proceeded with and had refrained from proposing it on advice of his Democratic colleagues.

Chandler Urged the Investigation.

Mr. Chandler spoke in favor of an investigation and Voorhees replied for the Democratic side, denying the constitutional right of the senate to make the inquiry. In his personation he said he preferred to take Mr. Roach with all the allegations against him, he never having gone to Canada, but having lived a proper life since the alleged embezzlement under his country's flag, where a warrant could be brought against him, in preference to taking those people who have preferred the charges at this time. He wanted it to go to the country as the attitude of the Democratic party that it was ready to investigate the charge of a senator during his term, but not prior to his election.

Mr. Hansbrough of North Dakota called attention to published statements that a man named La Moore, who was one of the 10 Republicans who voted for Mr. Roach, had come here with a bagful of affidavits "to blow him up" (Hansbrough). As it was said Dease and Partridge had been turned over to the senator from Maryland it was only fair the senator should lay them before the senate, said he asked Mr. Gorman to do so, with a view to investigation.

Mr. Gorman then made a statement denying that he had any such purposes, and that so far as he knew no one here knew that he was not the repository of the scandals, and shunned such vipers.

Mr. Sheehan Says but Little.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The developments of the next few days in New York state politics will be largely settled by politicians and others. They must be looked to for the clew as to what occurred at the much talked about interview between Lieutenant Governor Sheehan of New York, who came on here for the purpose by appointment, and President Cleveland.

Mr. Sheehan and Senator Murphy were received by President Cleveland in the cabinet room at the White House at 5:30 and spent two hours with Mr. Cleveland behind closed doors. The whole of the time was presumably spent in the discussion of New York patronage and the political situation. They did not dine with the president.

"We had a pleasant interview," said Mr. Sheehan to the reporters. "A highly satisfactorily interview," he replied in answer to other questions, and beyond this not a word could be obtained from Sheehan or Senator Murphy as to their visit.

The only clew which can be had as to the treatment Mr. Sheehan and his followers will receive was furnished by a remark prior to the interview made by a friend of the president's, who said that the state Democratic committee of the United States Democratic committee of the United States Democratic in the state better before they can expect the administration to treat them better.

Hoke Smith to Visit Georgia.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Hon. Hoke Smith, secretary of the interior, left Washington for his home in Atlanta on a brief visit.

To Protect the New Hebrides.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The executive commission of the western section of the alliance of the reformed churches holding the Presbyterian system is in session here. One of the important matters discussed is the co-operation of the United States government with Great Britain in sending firearms and whisky to the New Hebrides.

Trial of a Valentine Sender.

ROCHESTER, April 15.—The examination of Charles D. Benham, charged with sending comic valentines of a defamatory character to Benecs Carroll, was resumed here. David C. Benham, the father of the accused, swore that the writing on the envelopes was not his son's.

The Navahoe's Big Center Board.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 15.—The steel center board of the Navahoe was shipped here. It is expected now that the next trip of the boat will be on Sunday. The center board is a steel plate about 1½ inches thick and is 17 feet long and 10 feet wide.

"I Owe My Life to Hood's Sarsaparilla"

"Words are powerless to express the gratitude I feel toward Hood's Sarsaparilla for under God, it just and honest that to this medicine I owe my life. Twelve years ago I began to bleed, followed by nausea of the stomach, and later, with severe pains in the abdomen, accompanied by severe pain. This continued for about three years ago. Physicians told me the trouble was

Caused by a Tumor

For several months I had been unable to retain any food of a solid nature. I was greatly emaciated, had become a mere skeleton, and was satisfied the doctors were right in saying my days were numbered. I was induced by Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. OGDEN SNYDER, No. 10 Judson street, N. Y.

I Began to Feel Hungry

Could, after a time, retain solid food, increased in weight, the sallow hue left my skin, the bloating subsided, and I felt better all over. For the past two years my health has been quite good, and I have been able all the time to do the housework for my family. After what I have said I feel it impossible to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. OGDEN SNYDER, No. 10 Judson street, N. Y.

ANOTHER SOUTHERN CYCLONE.

Many Negroes Killed and Plantations Laid Waste.

THIBODEAUX, La., April 15.—About 1 p. m. a cyclone passed near this city. It struck the Arcadia plantation of Congressman Andrew Price a couple of miles distant, and eight negro cabins near the big brick sugar house were scattered about in small bits. The summer residence of Mr. W. H. Price, the congressman's brother, was also laid flat. Mr. Price managed to get outside before the building fell. A negro servant was caught in the timbers and seriously injured. Two negroes aged 4 and 14 years were killed. Eight Italian laborers were more or less seriously injured, as were several negroes. Two of the negroes will die. On the site owned by Franklin brothers negro cabins and outbuildings were wrecked, and a son of T. F. Barnals and a negro lad were killed. Several negroes were injured. The residence of John G. Fleitas was demolished and he was badly bruised. Serious damage is reported from Ridgefield and St. Bernard plantations adjoining.

POOLROOMS MUST GO.

The Saxton Bill Passed Almost Unanimously.

ALBANY, April 15.—There was a spirited fight in the assembly over the Saxton bill, to forbid betting on races apart from race tracks. The opponents of the measure, under the leadership of Messrs. Rice and Sullivan, essayed to defeat the bill by having it amended so as to forbid pool selling at any place or time. The amendment failed by a vote of 29 to 66, and then the bill was passed—ayes, 112; nays, 7.

Under a suspension of the rules, amid great excitement, Mr. Ainsworth tried to introduce a bill to repeal the Ives pool law. Mr. Dinkelspiel objected, and as the speaker sustained the objection Mr. Ainsworth gave notice that he would move to suspend the rules Monday night, so as to permit the introduction of the bill.

Fort Monroe Already Crowded.

FORT MONROE, Va., April 15.—All of the hotels and boarding houses on the government reservation and every available place of shelter within 10 miles of here is taxed to its limit. The tide of travel has reached the limit and hundreds of persons who came from the east and north have been unable to secure shelter and left for their homes. What this place will do next week when thousands would like to be here and see the naval pageant is a mystery that no one can solve.

Chicago's New Pump Started.

CHICAGO, April 15.—The city's new pumps at the Bridgeport pumping station, one of which began operations today, are likely to attract considerable attention in the engineering world. They are constructed upon "undulating motion," whereby the water is lifted up an incline gradually by means of points which raise in rotation. One of the pumps is expected to raise 100,000 cubic feet of water a minute.

Hundreds of Chinese Land.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—On the China steamer which is due here today will be 220 Chinese on their way to the World's fair at Chicago. They consist of actors, acrobats, artisans, priests, etc. Five hundred and thirty more will arrive on the next steamer. They will be admitted under the act of congress granting all nations permission to send representatives to the World's fair.

The Telephone Girl and the Synod.

COLUMBUS, April 15.—It was decided by the Charleston presbytery here that Miss Sadie Means should be dismissed from the Second Presbyterian church because her work at the telephone exchange required her to be there four hours on Sunday. She complained to the presbytery, which decided against her, and an appeal was taken to the synod.

Not an Official Report.

LONDON, April 15.—In response to questions in the house of commons Sir Edward Gray, parliamentary secretary to the foreign office, said that the stenographic report of the proceedings of the Behring sea court of arbitration bore no official character, but was simply for the convenience of the arbitrators and the counsel.

Cutters Conceded a Point.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The conference between the clothing manufacturers and the cutters adjourned to meet again next Thursday afternoon. The manufacturers practically won the first bout in the fight, the cutters withdrawing the demand made in the preamble—that the manufacturers should employ only union men.

German Warships Arrive.

HALIFAX, April 15.—The German warships arrived from Kiel via Queenstown for New York to take part in the World's fair naval review. They report having experienced a very rough passage and put into this port for coal. They sail for Hampton Roads on next Sunday.

Disaster In a Mine.

DEADWOOD, S. D., April 15.—Disastrous fires are raging in the Homestead, Terra and Highland mines. Thirty miners have been asphyxiated. The mines are being flooded. Divers suits have been wired for. As the timbers have been burned cavings are imminent.

The Bride of a Week Dead.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., April 15.—The coroner is investigating the death of Mrs. William Brown, who died suddenly at Pemberton under suspicious circumstances. It is supposed she was poisoned. Mrs. Brown had been married only about a week.

Nonpartisan Banquet to Dawes.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., April 15.—There were 350 present at the banquet given to ex-Senator Henry L. Dawes at the Cooley House. The affair was under the auspices of the Springfield Republican club, but was nonpartisan in character.

Wright Convicted Again.

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. Y., April 15.—The jury on the second trial of Charles Wright for the killing of Mrs. Tay or near Port Kent brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree.

BLOOD IN THE STREETS!

Brussels' Socialists Threw Up a Barricade and Defied Police.

HOUSES FILLED WITH WOUNDED.

Many Persons Crushed to Death In a Conflict Between Mounted Officers and a Procession of Socialists—Bloodshed Followed a Charge of the Chasseurs.

BRUSSELS, April 15.—The capital is in an uproar. The police issued orders for all citizens to retire early and not show themselves on the streets if they could help it.

In spite of that everybody poured out into the streets and the crowds were tremendous. The civic guards, the mounted gendarmes, the fire brigade and the police were out in full force, ready for any emergency, but their appearance in the streets and squares only aggravated the mob. The majority of the processionists were bound for the Navalome, where a giant meeting had been arranged. The proprietor of the hall, however, had been instructed not to open the doors, and thus the crowd was disappointed.

Twenty thousand people assembled about 5 o'clock in front of the hall and refused to believe that the meeting was declared off. Finally, when all demands by the police to disperse were disregarded, the gendarmes charged upon the assemblage in order to clear the street.

They met a solid body of people, who were unable to move or get out of their way. Many were injured and wounded, and in the panic that followed several men were crushed to death. The drug stores and private houses in the neighborhood of the hall were filled with wounded people in charge of numerous physicians.

Later on the dispersed crowd reassembled at the Grande place and at the Groote market, where they held impromptu meetings to protest against the violent conduct of the police and gendarmes. While these meetings were in progress detachments of gendarmes and chasseurs made an attempt to clear the Square St. John, which the socialistic procession was just attempting to cross.

Made a Barricade.

The attack was sudden and numerous socialists were wounded. Meanwhile somebody had extinguished the lanterns and street lamps in the district, and the utmost confusion reigned. The crowd of socialists and other malcontents seized a quantity of building material lying in the street and began building a barricade.

The mounted gendarmes finally drove them off after many bloody encounters. At the Old Corn Market theater serious disturbances took place during the performances. After this was over the crowd issuing from the places of amusement hooted the police and gendarmes, which fired the street in front of the place, and the military at once charged upon them, causing considerable bloodshed. The strikers' movement is assuming alarming proportions in the Mons district, where 16,000 men are idle. A band of 400 strikers rushed into the Levant Flenu colliery and broke the windows of the building. They fled on the arrival of a detachment of cavalry.

Drawn Swords For Socialists.

AMSTERDAM, April 15.—The socialists of this city have recently been making nightly attempts to hold a demonstration in front of the Royal palace. They succeeded in gathering in force while a reception was being held in the palace. The socialists were ordered by the police to disperse, but they refused to move. The police then charged and scattered the crowd with drawn swords. Several persons were wounded.

The Czarewitch to Come.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 15.—The czarewitch and the Grand Duke Alexis will start for America toward the end of May.

The Borden Murder Case Waits.

FALL RIVER, Mass., April 15.—City Marshal Hilliard, when asked about the Borden case, over which the public is again becoming aroused, stated that Medical Examiner Dolan was sick, and that he was also sick. The illness of both, he said, was due to overwork on the famous murder case. Everything now depends on Attorney General Pillsbury, who has been recovering from his recent illness. It is not thought, however, that the case will be reopened for six weeks yet.

A Runaway Cable Car.

CHICAGO, April 15.—A runaway cable train with passengers aboard was whirled uncoupled 10 squares through the most crowded portion of the city. Its wild career ended by a plunge down grade into the La Salle street tunnel, when the train was derailed and the wrecked cars strewed across the track near the bottom of the sharp decline. Four people were injured seriously.

CONDENSED HAPPENINGS.

Mayor Gilroy of New York denies that he was unfriendly with Richard Croker, the Tammany leader.

BURNED AT THE STAKE.

A Georgia Mob Roasted a Negro Murderer Alive In a Bonfire.

ATLANTA, April 15.—Bob Burnett, a country merchant, who slept in the store near Fort Gaines, Ga., was murdered by a negro, who entered the store for the purpose of robbery. The murderer was captured and carried back to the scene of his crime, where a large mob had collected. He confessed the murder and all preparations to burn him alive were made.

A fence was torn down and the rails piled around a stump, and the prisoner tied and laid upon the pile. Kerosene was poured over him and on the pile of wood. The negro begged pitifully to be spared, while the crowd yelled with delight. Some one touched a match to the wood and the flames shot 20 feet into the air. Amid the crackling of the flames and the screams of the victim, pistol shots were fired into the air and dozens balls perforated the body of the helpless wretch.

The negroes formed a majority of the mob and did the most of the work of preparing the bonfire. Negro men and women with long poles stood around and plied the chunks on the roasting flesh. The victim of the cremation was a negro whose name was unknown. Young Burnett, whom he murdered, was one of the leading young men of Quitman county.

Coroner's Jury Accuses Mrs. Parkhurst.

OSWEGO, N. Y., April 15.—The coroner's jury in the case of Charles Parkhurst rendered a verdict that Parkhurst's death was the result of arsenical poisoning, and that the poison was administered by his wife, Carrie Parkhurst, with criminal intent. The jury exonerated James Bowen, who was charged with being an accessory to the crime.

FASHIONS.

THE NEW JACKETS.

Some Decided Novelties In Cut, Trimming and Material.

In jackets there is a decided revolution to chronicle. Tailors are for the most part avoiding last year's mistake of making the jackets too long and too heavy. Care is taken in cutting them that the basque shall be full and have sufficient spring to allow any width of skirt beneath them. Many are also cut shorter in the waist to accommodate the short waisted gowns. A new feature, to be seen in the jacket or blazer here illustrated, is the extension of the broad revers to form a cape over the shoulders.

Usually these capes form a separate trimming. They are of velvet in fawn and green, dahlia and other leading tints, and appear to start from beneath the revers, for they may simply form a triple heading to the sleeves.

Parisian caterers in dress are quoted as predicting that sleeves will be so large that only capes will be possible for wear with them. But young ladies at least are not likely to abandon the stylish and becoming jacket.

Cheviot and sacking figure among materials used, while black satin and black silk, with lace trimmed, represent a decided novelty.

An average length in spring jackets is about 40 inches. But Pingat has sent them out as short as 32 inches to accompany short walking dresses.

One thing appears absolutely necessary in a spring coat. Whether it be short or long, close fitting or loose fitting, it must have a collar round the shoulders.

A BIT OF GEOMETRY.

An Easy Method of Tracing an Oval With an Ordinary Compass.

When an oval is required to be traced, it is generally done by making two arches, which fit into each other, although there are some expensive and complicated compasses by which such a figure may be obtained by a continuous stroke. Here, however, is a method by which you may, with the aid of an ordinary compass, trace such a figure in one unbroken line:

Take a piece of pasteboard, which may be easily bent in any shape, and roll it up in the form of a cylinder; then lay your sheet of paper on this cylinder, roll it up so that only one side hangs over, and now with your compass trace your oval on it in this way: Place the dry point of the compass at the point which is to be the center of the oval and trace on this paper with your pencil or drawing pen a figure which would be a circle if the paper were lying flat on the table, but which is an oval by reason of the paper being rolled out on a cylinder.

This method of tracing an oval is employed in certain work among painters and others. The curve obtained depends upon the radius of the cylinder or cylinder and the opening of the compass, and in certain cases it sufficiently resembles an ellipse for an unwary eye to be deceived by it. Of course details cannot here be given on the correct geometric form of the curve, which is at the intersection of a sphere and a cylinder, but it may be mentioned that the radius of the cylinder in order to trace an oval of a sphere ought to be larger than half the diameter of the sphere —that is, the opening of the compass.

Smokeless Coal Dust Firing.

The problem of the smokeless combustion of coal appears to have been solved by a recent German invention which is reported as arousing much attention in Berlin. In this patented firing apparatus the coal is no longer burned in lumps, but is reduced to powder by means of the ordinary centrifugal mills. The new system, which is called "automatic and smokeless coal dust firing," is extremely simple. At the place where hitherto the coal was introduced into the fire grate—that is to say, at the furnace door—there is a movable pear shaped apparatus, working principally of a fire chamber lined with fire brick. One aperture of this hollow pear opens, in the direction of the axis of the boiler, into the mouth of the hitherto employed furnace, from which the fire grates, fire bridges, etc., have been removed. The opposite aperture of the hollow pear is intended to admit a current of air. By means of an ingenious automatic contrivance, coal dust, supplied through a funnel placed above the current of air, is continuously conveyed into the current of air and thence into the fire chamber, where it is immediately brought into combustion by means of the small fire which is placed there. When this has once taken place, the coal dust conveyed by the current of air continues to burn in one regular, intense flame. Each particle of fuel floats in the air and is brought into contact with the oxygen necessary for its combustion, so that it is totally consumed the moment it enters the sphere of combustion. The proof of its being totally consumed is seen in the *fact that not even a trace of smoke is per*ceptible.

The Long Distance Writing Machine.

The telautograph, or long distance writing machine, appears to have added one more marvel to the list of remarkable electrical inventions. Practical tests of its working have been lately made in New York and Chicago, and a great future is predicted for it. The structure of the telautograph is simple. As described by the New York Herald, it consists of a transmitter and receiver, whatever is written at one end of the circuit being produced in fascimile at the other end. Arbitrary signs, pictures, diagrams, figures, tabulated statements and plain and shorthand writing are transmitted as well as ordinary handwriting, and the sender and receiver each has a record of every message sent and got.

The transmitter is an ordinary lead pencil, near the point of which two silk cords are fastened at right angles to each other. These cords connect with the instrument, follow the motions of the pencil and regulate the current impulses which at the distant station control the receiving pen.

The electrical impulses coming over the wire move the pen of the receiver simultaneously with the movements of the pencil in the hands of the sender. An ink tracing is left as the pen passes over the paper, which is always a fascimile of the sender's motions.

A Curiosity In the Owl Family.

This is the pygmy owl, of which a correspondent in Science writes. One variety is quite often seen in Oregon. They are well named pygmies, as they are only about 7.35 inches in length and 14.3 in extent of wings; tail, 2.80; tarsi, 1.10; bill, greenish yellow, with lighter tip; feet and claws brownish black. This little owl appears very much like a miniature barred owl, as it has a smooth head, with no ear tufts, and is marked much like the barred owl, being of a slaty brown, thickly barred and spotted with white, darkest on the wings and back, lighter on the under parts. This little owl, I think, is more of a day bird than most of the family, as it may quite often be seen on cloudy days out hunting for mice and small birds or even moths and insects, which, I think, sometimes form part of its food. It no doubt breeds in hollow trees, but I have never found its nest.

Notes In Science and Industry

We usually trust to our senses to indicate the presence of foul air in a house, but the suggestion is made in a scientific journal that a "bad air indicator" affords a good chance to the inventor and chemist.

The rapid destruction of what were once looked upon as inexhaustible forests of India rubber trees is reported by the Brazilian department of agriculture, with the suggestion that the planting and cultivating of the trees would insure enormous profits to planters.

A "noiseless coal hod" may mitigate to some extent the sufferings of those afflicted with nerves. It is an ordinary coal box lined with linoleum; the lid falls on rubber, and the shovel case is lined with felt.

A FEW WOMEN RIDERS

ONE OF MRS. CUSTER'S TRIPS ON HORSEBACK IN A BLIZZARD.

Several Noted Women Who Take Much Pleasure and Exercise In Horseback Riding—A Southern Rider—Miss Jordan's Riding Outfit.

The privilege of horseback riding was one not generally accorded to women until within our grandmother's time, and it is not until our own day that the canons of propriety dictate the liberty of a woman riding without an escort.

Thus custom has made it impossible, speaking generally, for women to have become accomplished in the art of riding, although there have been a few like the famous maid of Bregenz, Joan of Arc and the nautch heroine, Frieda, who have saved nations by their daring horsewomanship.

Much has been said about woman—that she is fickle, wavering and sentimental—but her worst enemy gives her the powers of endurance, justice and courage.

These are just the qualities which go to make a perfect rider. French women as a rule do not take to riding; they prefer driving and less fatiguing sports. But the German, Russian, English and American women seem as though born to the saddle when once they are initiated into its properties and pleasures.

The empress of Germany sits a saddle like an amazon and rides a horse but few men dare mount. She appears on gala occasions by her husband's side and looks ever inch—what she is—the wife of a ruler and the daughter of a queen.

In London the Prince of Wales' daughters are fair riders and have covered much ground, while Princess Mary of Teck is far famed for her skill as a horsewoman.

In Washington, or to be more local, in New York, there lives one woman who has eclipsed all her nineteenth century sisters in horsemanship, for to her riding is a necessity, not a luxury. She is Mrs. Elizabeth Custer, the wife of the late celebrated general who gained so many victories on the frontier, and who died valiantly fighting for his country.

Mrs. Custer loads a very quiet, uneventful, peaceful life in her home quiet, fascination at present, with only a few months' sojourning tour and an occasional trip abroad to break the monotony.

After her stirring life upon the frontier one wonders that everyday domestic life suffices her. She has eaten breakfast, dinner and tea to the tattoo of a drum and the warwhoop of Indians. She has lived in the saddle for months at a time. She has traveled over all the broad western states in their crudest and most primitive condition, and proven the statement that women can stand hardship as well as men.

Mrs. Custer is of the opinion that women, when the occasion calls for it, manage horses with more judgment than men. She thinks that some of the sensitiveness of the horse's nature, its animal-like intelligence, and he realizes that he has a precious burden in his care. Then, she says, a woman is so much lighter on a horse, and so very much more graceful in moving in harmony with the animal, whereas a man weighs down heavily upon the back, and from his very carriage necessitates a tremendous load.

The Indians have rewarded Mrs. Custer, "ride like beings of supernatural lineage, throbbing with life, spirit and muscular elasticity."

A famous ride of Mrs. Custer was made through the mountains of North Dakota, where she was the life of the party and participated in many a wild, but delightful, spattering way, as only a woman could. Any one who knows aught of a Dakota snowstorm is aware of its peril the Custer party were in—miles and miles from a station and with no means of making known their distress. The snow, ice and cold pelted round them like unrooted monuments anxious to bury them beneath their huge bases and leave only the howling winds to tell the story.

Hours and days passed without a sign of the storm's abatement. The skies took on the deathly color of sorrowful gray and the low cries of animals in pain rent the air. Through all this Mrs. Custer, terrified time the brave woman lay wrapped in her blankets telling simple, interesting tales in a charming way and keeping the anxious minds from thoughts of hunger and of death from the bitter cold.

Mrs. E. S. Beach, teacher of riding at the New York equestrian school, is one of the most graceful and robust of the New York equestriennes. She first became acquainted with a horse when a girl of 6. She has made that animal her best friend ever since. She spends 10 hours a day in the saddle and declares that she does not know the meaning of the word weariness or pain.

"My longest ride was through the big tree district in California," replied Mrs. Beach to a question put to her in regard to long rides. "I was in the New Domain for several weeks steadily and rode over much rough country."

Elizabeth Jordan, the talented writer, spent over a month on horseback in the mountains of Virginia and Tennessee. She started out with a long riding habit and all sorts of fashionable paraphernalia, but gradually dispensed of these accessories and came down to a short gown and a pigsack.

"The greatest trouble I found about riding in the southern mountains," she said, "was that the distances between towns was too great, and the darkness came over the paths too quickly. I enjoyed every hour of my trip and studied the characteristics of the people with interest and curiosity."

Miss Alice MacGowan, the daughter of a well known southern editor, has won quite a reputation in her native state, Tennessee, and in Texas for her wonderful riding powers. She rode a thousand miles at a stretch over two ago over the Tennessee mountains and through North Carolina, carrying only such baggage as could be attached to the saddle, depending for brief stays at humble mountain cabins. She has spent months in the Texas cattle and sheep country on lonely and remote ranches in typical cabin towns and frontier settlements, riding the range, attending roundups and roping contests, visiting sheep camps and living as completely as possible the wild, untrammeled life of a frontier woman. Miss MacGowan, who taught school in Texas, was obliged to ride 20 miles a day to and from the schoolhouse.—New York Telegram.

Letting Children Alone.

In order to thrive children require a certain amount of "letting alone." Supreme faith in the mother, few toys, plain food, few drugs and early to bed are the best things for making them happy. It will be necessary to begin very early in their lives to teach the little ones to be contented with simple pleasures. When the baby first sits on the floor, a teacup and spoon or a tin box with a cover will amuse him better than a high priced plaything. When older, give him rice, sawdust or meal to measure with a spoon, or in any way that pleases him.—Exchange.

"OH, MOTHER."

"Oh, mother, I want my bonnet tied"
"My hat has lost a wing."
"And I be Bobby Barnes' horse!"
"Is sis your pitty wing?"
"May, will you rake us chicken pie"
"Somebody's hid my gaiter!"
"See what an ugly rent, mamma;
I tored it on the gate!"

"Oh, mother, Mamie's coming in,
With Moll and Bess and Fred;
Can we have cream and cake tonight,
And send the boys to bed?"
"Dear mother, may I borrow your shawl?
I'm going for a drive.
If Charley should propose, mamma,
May I ask him in at five?"

"Oh, mother, mother, should you cease
One little hour the care
That day by day, year after year,
For this dear brood you bear,
It soon would be a heap of ills must stop.
Rich mother love! It springs,
A free, sweet fountain, and it lends
The comforest duty wings.

A Bottle For Baby.

A novel and pretty baby rattle is made of four yards of cap wire, half a yard of ribbon, nine bells, a strip of sateen, some cotton wool and a short length of macrame twine. Commence with folding the wire into four and bend it into the shape of a racket; over this wind the cotton wool, then bind the sateen all round to make it neat. Now take the macrame twine and thread it across each way to form the network in the center. Procure one ounce of double Berlin wool in a pretty color, and crochet over the edges of the racket with four double crochet in each space between the network. Work round the edge again with one row of crochet in every other stitch; fasten off.

For the handle work three chain, eight double crochet into loop, two double crochet into each of eight double, and continue working one double crochet into each of 16 stitches until a sufficiently large piece for the handle is worked. Slip it over the handle and sew it to the other part of the crochet work, tie a bow of ribbon to hide where it is sewn, and sew the nine bells at regular intervals all round the racket. Make a ball by working double crochet round and round until it is the desired size, then decrease it by taking two double together. Stuff it with cotton wool and sew it to the network of the racket.—Brooklyn Chronicle.

Cooking Steaks and Chops.

A steak or a brace of chops must be well trimmed. Some fat is always left on the beefsteak unless it is a tenderloin; but the chops should be trimmed quite free from all suspicion of tallow. They should be laid on the gridiron, laid close to the bars, not one, first on one side and then on the other, to sear over the surface. Then they should be raised from the fire about three or four inches, and left to cook, turned every two minutes. When a steak an inch and a half thick has cooked 12 minutes, it will usually be ready to serve. Every time a drop of fat falls into the fire the steak must be lifted up to allow the blaze to pass off. If the dampers are all turned on, as they should be in broiling, this will take but an instant. Beefsteak and mutton chops are always improved by running them with a little sweet oil, seasoning them with salt and pepper and dusting them with flour before they are cooked. Nothing shows so quickly refinement in matters of the table as the proper cooking of simple dishes.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

About Having the Last Word.

A young girl once heard a bit of wisdom from the lips of a very aged woman—a woman who had rounded the full term of 90 years, and with eyes still bright and clear looked out upon the strolling waters of eternity. The girl was impressed by the emphasis with which the venerable dame said to her, "Bessie, never insist on having the last word." The determination to have the final word leads to more quarrels and more bitterness of feeling at home than almost anything else in domestic life.

The fact is that one may so control her tongue and her eyes that she may allow her opponent the pleasure of this coveted concluding thrust and yet placidly retain her own opinion, and in the homely colloquial parlance of the up country, where one finds strong willed people living together in great peace with the most pronounced diversity of characteristics, "do as she's a mind to."—Harper's Bazar.

A Wrap For the Sickroom.

An invaluable wrap for a convalescent is the nightingale house sack. It is easily slipped on and over a nightdress and also adjusts itself to fit the figure closely, affording ample protection. The making of these useful garments is a simple matter. Hem the ends of 2½ yards of elder down flannel or French flannel; fold in half and take a plain deep enough to form a pointed back; sew a bow here and strings in front to confine it at the neck; fasten each end together for about two inches to make loose sleeves. One can even procure the made of cream white flannel, and pieces of old rose quilted silk had been laid over neck and sleeves to form a broad collar and cuff effect. This treasonable wrap is not at all necessary, the garment being quite complete without it.—New York Times.

A Game For an Evening.

"I Love My Love With an A" is a new game, and all the fun depends upon its being kept up briskly. Any player who refuses to keep up, pays a forfeit or is called off. One begins: "I love my love with an A because he is able. I hate him with an A because he is abject. He took me to the sign of the Anvil and treated me to artichokes and absinthe." The next continues: "I love my love with a B because he is bankrupt. I hate him with a B because he is bald. He took me to the sign of the 'Backelor' and treated me to biscuits and bananas." So the game goes on through all the letters of the alphabet, although the unfortunate "X" must be ruled out, and "Z" and "Y" will be found almost as impossible.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

What a Veil Does.

A veil wonderfully enhances a beautiful face and helps out ugly or plain features. A veil of any description is worn as much skill as a fan. How daintily one little birdlike rabies it to touch her thread lace toy handkerchief to her kissable lips or the tip of her little nose wounds. It's a cute, cunning contrivance with small meshes, although the unfortunate "X" must be ruled out, and "Z" and "Y" will be found almost as impossible.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

OUR TWO NEW PASTORS

THEY OCCUPY THEIR PULPITS YESTERDAY FOR THE FIRST TIME.

The Methodists Greatly Pleased with Them—Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, for the First Church, Rev. D. F. Randolph for Grace Church.

The Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D., the new pastor of the First Methodist church, is a native of New York city, although most of his life has been passed in New Jersey. He has been a student in the public schools, the Grammar school of Columbia College, the Fort Edward Classical Institute, Troy University, and the University of the City of New York of which he is an alumnus. He has also served as instructor in public school, and taught one year in the preparatory department of Drew Seminary, Madison. His principal work as author is the "Hand Book of Bible Biography." He was received into the Newark Conference in 1865, being a classmate of the Rev. J. L. Hartbut, D. D. Among his appointments are three in Jersey City, one in Newark, Madison, Presiding Elder of the Paterson District, and the First Church of Hoboken.

Dr. Barnes is a manager of the Board of Education and of the Clerical Life Insurance Association of the Newark Conference, also of the Sunday School Union and Missionary Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mr. Barnes occupied the pulpit of the First church yesterday morning and evening, and was accorded a hearty reception by members of the church and congregation, as his ability well deserved.

In the morning he preached from Isaiah 64 8—"But now, O Lord, thou art our Father; we are the clay, and thou our potter; and we are all the work of thy hand," his theme being "The Divine Potter."

He said, "This is the language of unquestioning trust and absolute submission. The prophet in the fact of God's fatherhood found an answer for every doubt, an antidote for every fear. Recognizing the evil in Israel, and their need of divine help, he proposed that Israel place themselves in the hands of Jehovah as unresistingly as clay, to be molded according to his pleasure. This involved no surrender of will on their part. To place oneself in God's hands, to decide to be safe, to allow Jehovah to exercise his judgment, required the highest exercise of the human will.

Mr. Barnes then instituted a comparison between the treatment of clay by the potter, and of his children by the Divine Father.

He spoke of the preparation of the clay. It was moistened, and cleansed from all foreign substances, so as to be more easily worked, and that the resultant vessel should be without flaw. The Holy Spirit brings the man to sense of poverty, penitence and prayer. The Holy Spirit removes the damaging bits of selfishness and sin. The Psalmist prayed "Cleanse thou me from secret faults."

2. The moulding of the clay. The clay is placed upon the wheel, that as it revolves, the clay may be shaped into the desired form. As we watch the potter we find his foot always upon the treadle, and see that the wheel is guided by his intelligence and will. Men talk of the "Wheel of Fortune," and seem to imagine that blind chance decides their destiny. The Christian is placed upon the wheel of Providence, Divine love and skill watch over his way in life and cause all things to work together for his good.

The picture of the vessel to be formed is in the mind of the potter. The ideal for every man exists in the thought of God to be wrought out, incarnated by the operation of the Holy Spirit.

Respecting the hardening of the clay he said:

The yielding material must not only be moistened and softened in order to retain its shape, and fulfil the maker's wish. It is placed in the kiln, and watched with care, that the heat may be so graduated as to perfect and not injure the vessel.

So Christians need hardening. The world needs sturdy, valiant defenders of of the truth. It needs men with strong characters to withstand the temptations constantly besetting the church. God allows us to be placed in the furnace, but always enters with us to temper the fire of trial.

As the artist is called in to add by his art beauty to the vessel formed by the potter, so God beautifies his children. Nothing in all the universe is so beautiful as Christlike character. Let every man pray, "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us."

Remember, that in this day of machine work, the Christian is the handiwork of God. Every graceful line of character is the result of the moulding power of the Divine hands. And moving them is the heart of infinite love, the skill of omniscience."

In the evening, Mr. Barnes preached from Ecclesiastes 4:9—"Two are Better Than One."

Grace M. E. Church.

The new pastor, the Rev. Herbert F. Randolph, preached his first sermon in the Grace Methodist Episcopal church, Park place, North Plainfield, yesterday morning. It was not only the first sermon of the church's first pastor, but it was the preacher's maiden discourse. He is a young man and has not yet finished his college studies, but judging from the outspoken approval of his discourse by his congregation, at the conclusion of yesterday morning's service, he will make his mark in Christian work. He is a son of Rev. W. D. R. Randolph of Jersey City, and is a student at Dickinson University, Pa.

Mr. Randolph, before beginning his sermon, congratulated the members of Grace church on their prosperity and growth in such a short time. He took for his text I Chronicles, 29: 5—"And who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?"

He said: Some people have an idea that to become a Christian they must give their will to the Lord, that their entire form must change. All the Lord requires is that you consecrate your will to Him. He does not take a man's will away from him, for a man without a will is like a ship without a rudder. Look at the mighty Niagara Falls. Of what use would this tremendous waterfall be but for man's will. God does not want to take away what is the making of the man, but simply have you consecrate it to His service.

Consecrate means concentration, and when you consecrate yourself to do the Master's work, there is a concentration of forces and the work done is doubled. It is not that He will be made more powerful that the Lord asks you to consecrate yourself to Him, because He is omnipotent—it is not to make Him more perfect, because He is already omniscient. But it is for your own spiritual welfare that He asks you to become consecrated.

To consecrate ourselves to God we should consecrate the whole work to him. Many of us are too apt to do his work while in the church, but in daily life if we meet a fellow being in trouble we should lend a helping hand, and not act selfishly and pass him by.

You all remember the story of John Maynard, the pilot on a Mississippi boat. The boat caught fire and the panic stricken passengers did not know what to do. There was one man that could save them, that was John Maynard. The boat was headed for land. The captain called down "John Maynard." The answer came, "Aye, aye, sir." "Can you hold out?" "Till try sir," came the reply. As the boat was fast being developed by flames again the captain shouted "John Maynard!" "Aye, aye, sir." "Can you hold out?" and again came the answer "I'll try, sir." The boat was steered ashore and the people landed safely, and John Maynard was still at the helm, but his arm was burned and he died shortly afterwards. This is what consecration is. John Maynard was consecrated to God. All the Master expects of you, when he asks your services to Him, is the answer "I'll try, sir." The speaker made a strong appeal to those unsaved to consecrate themselves to God.

BICYCLE CLUB FUN.

A Free and Easy, Go as You Please "Racket."

As announced in THE NEWS last week, there was a "stag" at the Bicycle Club house on Saturday night. There was a goodly company of club members and a few favored friends gathered to pass a jolly hour or two and they passed nearly four. Lights were out and "the banquet hall deserted" before the stroke of twelve, in order that Sunday morning should not be encroached upon.

The nature of the entertainment was a free-and-easy, go-as-you-please "racket." There was smoke, of course. There was music. The solos were furnished by William Runyon and the choruses by the club. The piano was one of Hulett's latest and best.

A funny finale was a boxing match between the colored janitor and a fellow "artist."

POLICEMAN CHARLES GIESE.

Wins the Prize as the Most Popular German.

The set of Shiller's Works offered by the Somerset Boys to the most popular German in Somerville, Bound Brook, Plainfield or North Plainfield, was won by Policeman Charles Giese of this city. The contest closed Saturday afternoon. Two North Plainfielders were also entered. The highest men and those of this vicinity stood as follows:

Giese, Plainfield	8,850
Raemer, Somerville	6,261
Kuntz, Bound Brook	4,265
Bintz, North Plainfield	300
Dressell, North Plainfield	220

BREVITIES.

—Sheridan Jones, colored, was fined three dollars, for being drunk, by the City Judge this morning.

—At the regular meeting of the Home Building and Loan Association to-night a new series will be opened.

—Gazelle Engine Company has been presented with a $220 building lot to be raffled off for the benefit of Mrs. John E. Yoke.

—The Plainfield Lyceum Wheelmen have ordered their suits, which are to be gray in color and are to be ready by the first of May.

—Charles Grader reported to the police that some boys had broken into the pavilion at his grove, near Evona, yesterday, and had demolished the contents of the place. A warrant was issued for their arrest.

—The reception to welcome the new pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. Dr. Barnes, will be held in Vincent chapel, Thursday evening. The ladies wish all the members and their friends to attend.

—Mrs. Lothrop has made a great conquest over the New Orleans public. It is universally conceded that Mrs. Lothrop is the most brilliant woman in England or any man lecturer who ever addressed a New Orleans audience, and that perhaps is as high praise as any woman ought to ever hope to win. While she speaks interests never flags, attentive is never distracted, and never grow weary.—Ex. She will lecture here to morrow night in the Trinity Reformed church.

CORRESPONDENCE.

About that Diploma.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—In reply to the article in your columns, headed "Trouble Over a Diploma," I will say that I would have it distinctly understood by the public that the young lady spoken of is a lady in every respect and that the only relation she bears to me is that of a sincere friend, and in obtaining the diploma she did it, not thinking for one moment that she was incriminating herself, but knowing that it would be of great benefit to me in my new field of practice, she thought she would send it to me as a friend.

REV. FATHER McKERNAN TO LEAVE.

A Change of Pastors at St. Joseph's Church.

At the masses yesterday, Rev. J. McKernan, pastor of St. Joseph's church in North Plainfield, announced that he had asked the bishop to assign him to another parish, and that such request had been granted. He will go next Thursday to Sea Isle City, N. J., to take charge of the parish there. The name of his successor has not yet been made public.

The friends of Father Cushing are anxious to have him placed in North Plainfield, but, as he has no faculties in the Trenton Diocese, such a thing is quite improbable. It is understood that a younger priest will assume charge early this week. Father Cushing has been relieved from his duties as assistant of St. Joseph's.

Since Father McKernan has been in charge, he has done considerable toward improving St. Joseph's property, and has made the church one of the prettiest in town.

PERSONAL.

The next lecture in the Afternoon Courses at All Souls' church will be given by Mrs. J. F. Waller of Yonkers, N. Y. on "Voltaire."

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Fairchild of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield, are visiting Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Weeks, of West Eighth street, Trenton.

The body of Miss Marie Adele Feytel, who died at the home of her brother, Mr. C. J. Feytel, of West Front street, was taken to Greenwood cemetery for burial this morning.

Miss Eliza Rafferty of Paterson, sister of Mr. John Rafferty of this city, whose serious illness was noted in these columns last week, died Saturday night. Funeral services will be held to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.

Mr. S. P. Dunn of East Seventh street, who, had for some time past, been confined to the house by a serious attack of of the grip, has now so far recovered as to be able to attend once more to business in New York.

Miss Marion Mesniter of Elizabeth gave an afternoon tea Friday in honor of Miss Leontine Munoz Mesde, of New York. About seventy-five of her friends were present and a delightful afternoon was spent. The rooms were prettily decorated in pink. Miss Caroline Simpson and Miss Edith Hinds played several piano duets. Miss Frederika Suydam sang and altogether the afternoon was thoroughly enjoyed. Miss Mesniter was assisted in receiving by Miss Munoz, Miss Georgia Bellinger and Miss Margaret Lewis. Miss Edith Clapp, of Plainfield, and Miss Florence Mesniter presided over the tea table.

The Greek Department of Vassar College will give a representation of the Antigone of Sophocles in the original Greek at the Pompeiian Opera House on Friday evening, May 26, at eight o'clock. The parts will be taken entirely by students of the college, and the play will be performed as nearly as possible in the manner of an Athenian tragedy of the time of Sophocles. Mendelssohn's Antigone music has been adopted for the choruses, and will be sung with full orchestral accompaniment by a regular chorus of fifteen, assisted by a supplementary chorus, all made up of students of the college. The play, as is well known, centers about Antigone, who goes to her doom because of her deep and tender love for her brother. The King Creon has forbidden any one, on penalty of death, to bury Polyneices. Antigone, his sister, buries him, having sought first, but in vain, to enlist the help of her sister Ismenee. She is discovered and brought before the King. Creon's son Haemon loves Antigone. By his orders she is entombed alive, and hangs herself in her rock-hewn tomb. Creon will be played by Miss Bartlett of Providence, Antigone by Miss Slade, Quiney, Mass.; Ismene, Miss Van Syckle, Hoboken, N. J.; Haemon, Miss Treadwey, Providence; Eurydice, Miss Macauley, Louisville; Tiresias, Miss Cooley, Plainfield, N. J.; Guard, Miss Mathes, Memphis; First Messenger, Miss Jolliffe, San Francisco; Second Messenger, Miss Tyrrel, Cambridge. Leader of the chorus, Miss Berry, Forestville, N. Y. Members of the chorus are the Misses Barnes, Bennett, Cumming, Crampton, Curtis, Fletcher, Edmands, Hemenway, Lockwood, Lamed, May, McCarthy, Morgan, Myers, Parker, Pratt, Redmann, Sanders, Simmons, Thompson, Tilden, Ulzer, Van Syckle, White, Wood. Attendants are the Misses Enos, Chester, Jones, Waite, Mann, Warren, Douglas, and Maggie Taylor. A special train will run to New York after the play.

Fined One Dollar.

William Leach was fined one dollar by City Judge Coddington this morning for riding a bicycle last evening without a lantern.

A MILK WAGON WRECKED.

A Runaway Accident Early this Morning.

Shortly before seven o'clock this morning Milkman Schwartz of Evona left his team that I would have in distinctly understood by the public that the young lady spoken of is a lady in every respect and that the only relation she bears to me is that of a sincere friend, and in obtaining the diploma she did it, not thinking for one moment that she was incriminating herself, but knowing that it would be of great benefit to me in my new field of practice, she thought she would send it to me as a friend.

ARREST OF JOCKEY CLUB MEN.

Suits Brought Against Dwyer and McIntyre for $25,000.

The second day's races at the grounds of the New Jersey Jockey Club took place Saturday, and the most noteworthy incident of the afternoon was the service on President M. F. Dwyer and on Secretary H. D. McIntyre of papers announcing to them that a suit for $25,000 had been brought against each on the information of Charles H. Bagley of Elizabeth for a violation of the lottery laws of 1878.

The papers were served by Sheriff Hicks.

The warrants are on a civil suit for violating the betting laws. If Bagley succeeds in winning the suits he will, under the law, get half of the amount of the suit. If he loses, the New York pool room men, it is said, will have to pay the costs.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In Alabama it is mentioned that less than 20 per cent. of the negro voters pay taxes. That is nothing to speak of when it is remembered that the vast majority of voters in our largest northern cities are in the same condition.

The American civil war which inaugurated the period of this nation's greatest prosperity began 32 years ago the 12th of this April. The boys who fought in it are getting pretty gray now. They are beginning to drop out of the ranks pretty fast too. It can scarcely be said any longer that there are more soldiers now on the pension roll than there were soldiers in the United States army under the three months' call.

The New York legislature appointed a joint committee to examine carefully into the methods and rates of taxation in the state and recommend such changes as in its judgment would equalize the burdens of taxation and increase state revenues in the easiest way. The committee's report is worth noting. A change in the mortgage laws is recommended for one thing, so that mortgages shall be subject to a specific state tax of half of 1 per cent of their value. The members of the committee make no recommendation in regard to changing the law that requires mortgaged property to be taxed to its value. There is already an inheritance tax on personal property in New York. The committee advises that this inheritance tax be extended so as to include also real estate and be made progressive, causing larger estates, both personal and real, to pay more proportionately than small ones. On all real estate inheritances above the value of $50,000 a tax of 1 per cent is recommended. This progressive inheritance tax is already levied in England.

It costs a king $1,000 a week to visit Queen Victoria. That is the amount he pays her majesty's servants in fees. A person of moderate means could not afford to accept an invitation to visit a wealthy British family. Every one of the servants must be feed handsomely when the guest leaves, so that the hospitality costs more than the guest's board would do at a first class hotel. It is very old that English people, proverbial for hospitality, will permit such an outrage to go on generation after generation and the fees to grow larger constantly. It is a poor way to give to a person an invitation that costs him heavily and do it under the guise of friendliness. If the hungry swarm of servants must be feed, the host ought to do it out of his own pocket. It is neither graceful nor gracious to make the guest do it. The custom actually puts a heavy tax on people for being one's friends. If there is anything that we ought in mercy to pray to be delivered from in this country, it is the outrageous practice of feeing persons who are supposed to be paid for their services by the man who employs them.

Involuntary Recollection.

Under this head James W. Donaldson contributes a suggestive paper to Science. He says that a person who will examine somewhat into his own mental processes will find much to interest and confound him.

He mentions that experience which has occurred to everybody—how, in the midst of intense mental preoccupation with any subject, one finds himself suddenly humming some old tune that he learnt in his childhood, or often indeed a frightful discordant jangle that he has tried time and again to forget. The truth is that we can really forget nothing, except perhaps what we most want to remember.

Another common experience is that in a moment, without warning, there arises into view across the mind scenes, words and events that have no connection in the remotest manner with anything the individual has in hand at the time. He may be thinking how to increase his bank account when all at once it will come back to him how he fell into the water and narrowly escaped drowning when he was a boy. On the whole it is the recollections of one's earlier years that will most come back unbidden. Perhaps events are pictured in the thought ether and hang about our atmosphere forever, ready to pop before the mind's eye at any unguarded moment.

But it is the unhappy recollections, the miserable scenes, that one would blot out forever which haunt us most persistently, the grisly skeleton at the feast. If young people knew how often grisly skeletons intrude on the mind in later years, they certainly would be more chary of doing things that are not creditable to remember. Mr. Donaldson says:

It is often happened that these unexpected visitants are of a character to cause us much discomfort and humiliation, for we have found by sad experience that we may not easily "shut the door on memory," nor can we "close out the hidden troubles of the brain," and, worse than all, that the "damned spot" will not "out," however fiercely and agonizing may be our entreaty. Indeed it is impressed upon us that, if there be any of our number who always are more pensive and persistent than others, it is the erratic or disreputable ones which we have thoughtlessly garnered and forced into unnatural companionship with our graver and better impressions. These evil memories will not be driven out, and it seems as if with unerring intent, they often select as choosing opportunities when it is most inconvenient and mortifying. Or it may be that some time when in the midst of a circle of fancied worth and delight the ghost of an unavailing memory or the shadow of an error in our life full of crime and agony may suddenly appear to sadden and solemnize the moment of merriment.

MORE GOLD IS WANTED.

Secretary Carlisle Must Decide Where to Get It.

NO DANGER OF A FINANCIAL CRISIS.

Many Coveted Offices Still Remain Undisposed of—Secretary Morton Intends to Boom the Sale of American Tobacco, Corn and American Meat in Europe.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—It looks as though the secretary of the treasury would this week be confronted with the necessity of demonstrating what will be his financial policy. It is expected by treasury officials that there will be gold shipments during the coming week sufficient to wipe out the free gold balance in the treasury and force action to be taken to maintain the parity of all issues of currency of the United States. The secretary, when free gold is exhausted, intends to obtain gold from the banks to tide over the emergency, must determine whether he will use the gold reserve of $100,000,000 held for the redemption of outstanding greenbacks, or will take measures by a bond issue to replenish the stock of gold. The fact that there is not the slightest doubt of our ability to get gold by means of a bond issue whenever desired is pointed to as an evidence of the needlessness of alarm over the situation.

Mr. Carlisle maintains almost absolute silence as to his purposes, and will not state in advance what he proposes to do. The issue of gold certificates has been stopped, except that persons who deposit gold will continue to be paid in gold certificates, but no indication of this intention was given until after the order was issued, and it was not announced until the close of business at the exchanges. It is said that the secretary is inclined to use the gold reserve if necessary rather than to issue bonds, but the probabilities are that he is not committed in his own mind irrevocably and will not reach an absolute decision until the time for action has come.

Meanwhile all the preparations for a bond issue have been made in order that no delay may occur in securing the gold should it be found necessary to issue bonds. Only $5,000,000 of these bonds have been prepared. One issue of bonds, however, would almost necessarily have to be followed by another, as transfers in New York and elsewhere would doubtless force larger issues because of the profits to arise therefrom if the treasury should once enter on the bond issuing policy in a small way.

The present policy of the treasury department is one of putting off definite action to the very utmost in the hope of conditions which show some slight indications of betterment may improve sufficiently to make it unnecessary either to issue bonds or to use the gold reserve. The trade balance, it is thought, will shortly become more favorable to us. The appointment of Mr. Jordan as assistant treasurer at New York, it is said, was made for the especial reason that it was thought he could aid materially by reason of his experience and relations with bankers in increasing our gold supply.

The General Finances Good.

The condition of the treasury, aside from the gold situation, is gradually improving, owing to the fact that customs receipts are increasing beyond expectations, while the expenditures are being kept as low as possible.

Representative Springer, chairman of the ways and means committee, when asked what should be done, said he did not know what action Mr. Cleveland would take, but that he himself was decidedly in favor of making use of the gold reserve.

Some persons who were talked to said that they regarded the reserve as a pledge; that it would be held there to meet payment of greenbacks, and that therefore it should be kept intact. The general opinion is that after the treasury had actually reached the point where there was no free gold that there would be not nearly so great a shock as has been so freely predicted.

Some Choice Plums Left.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The president will soon distribute three choice plums in the shape of Indian commissionerships, and there is already quite a struggle for these places. The last Indian appropriation bill provides for the appointment of a commission of three persons to continue the negotiations with the five civilized tribes for the cession to the United States of their remaining lands in the Indian territory. It provides that the commissioners shall be paid at the rate of $5,000 a year in addition to traveling expenses.

A great many important places in the government service yet remain unfilled. Almost a score of foreign missions are still held by the Republican incumbents, the most important being Russia, Italy, Brazil and Hayti. In the interior department Assistant Secretary Spaulding's successor has not been named. In the war department Secretary Lamont has not yet selected his assistant secretary. There are several assistant attorney generals to be named in the department of justice. Postmaster General Bissell has named only one of the higher departmental officers, viz.: Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Maxwell. Secretary Smith has pretty well cleaned up the presidential appointments in his department.

Outside of these departments Civil Service Commissioner Roosevelt's successor and the successor to Public Printer Palmer are the most important places to be filled in the near future. Mr. Roosevelt is anxious to be permitted to retire, and Mr. Palmer will not be disturbed until his term expires in May.

To Boom Tobacco and Meat.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Secretary Morton has determined to energize the corn propaganda in Europe. State Senator Mattes of Nebraska having accepted the appointment proffered to him by the secretary, will shortly be in Washington for conference as to carrying on this work abroad. Among other things, Mr. Mattes will be instructed to investigate the tobacco laws in force in European countries, and to ascertain whether it is not possible to secure a freer market for the sale of American tobacco in foreign countries. Mr. Mattes will also investigate the question of the sale of American meat products in Germany and France.

Trouble Brewing For Chinamen.

CHICAGO, April 17.—Many Chinamen now on their way to this country will be liable to meet with trouble in San Francisco. A special measure was passed through congress last year granting the commissioners permission to import 300 Chinese, who were to take part in the Chinese exhibit. More than 300 cannot be admitted unless they can produce certificates from the Chinese government certifying that they are of the merchant class and not laborers.

THE STEAMER BLEW UP.

Eight Persons Were Scalded and Bruised, and Some May Die.

WINAMAC, Ind., April 17.—The passenger steamer Nellie Bly, while making a trip down the river, blew up, seriously injuring eight persons. George Crane, proprietor of the Eagle Machine shops of this city, had both legs broken and crushed and was severely injured internally. The others were less seriously hurt. None of the passengers escaped injury. The boat was entirely demolished and sank immediately after the explosion.

Others who were seriously and possibly fatally injured are: J. F. Flaherty, proprietor of the boat, scalded and hurt internally; Clarence Fletcher, his son, badly scalded; Daniel Rhodes, badly bruised and internally injured, and James Long, badly scalded.

When the accident occurred the boat was in shallow water. The pilot had discovered that there was something wrong with the machinery and was steering for shore. But for this fact it is probable that every person on board would have been lost. Daniel Rhodes was blown 20 feet inland and completely covered with wreckage. His recovery is doubtful. James Long was blown into the river, and his rescue was accomplished with great difficulty by those who were not injured.

A Tragedy in New Mexico.

KINGSTON, N. M., April 17.—In the little Mexican town of Monticello, in the northern part of this county, William Hardin, the foreman of a cattle company, attempted to take a whisky from Gil Sisneros. A struggle ensued, when a Mexican interfered and Hardin shot the Mexican. The murdered man's people in the vicinity came, where he was overtaken by a mob, captured and shot, and his body mutilated in a horrible manner.

To Sell the Keeley Gold Cure.

CHICAGO, April 17.—Unless some unforseen obstacle comes in the way the famous Keeley cure for the habit for drunkenness will pass out of the hands of the Leslie E. Keeley company today. The price to be paid is $1,000,000, and a New York syndicate of capitalists is the purchasers. All the institutions in the United States are included in the transaction, and Dr. Keeley is now in New York to bring matters to a close.

In Memory of General Grant.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Secretary of the Navy Herbert has written that with the exception of the Dolphin the ships of the naval review fleet will anchor at least a mile distant from Riverside park, but that the Philadelphia, so soon as the review is over and the president has landed, will take a position opposite the tomb of the late General Grant and there fire a salute of 21 guns in respect to his memory.

MOB RULE IN BRUSSELS

The Mayor Almost Killed by a Crowd of Socialists.

THE CITY BESIEGED BY RIOTERS.

The Situation So Serious That Germany and Austria May Interfere to Support the Belgian Government—The Troubles In Armenia Are Being Settled.

BRUSSELS, April 17.—Sunday was a day of extreme watchfulness and anxiety on the part of the authorities throughout Belgium. Reports from all points indicate that the strike is spreading rapidly and that the power of the strikers is growing worse. In this city the morning passed without disturbance. Several suffrage meetings were held, but they were orderly, and the speeches were not violent. In the afternoon, however, the scenes of workingmen had a turbulent meeting on the road to the race course outside the city limits. The advertised object of the meeting was to denounce the proclamation of Mayor Buls prohibiting public demonstrations in favor of universal suffrage.

Volders, the extreme socialist leader, who was arrested and released on April 13, made an incendiary speech in which he applied the most obnoxious epithets to M. Buls. The crowd then became excited, started for revenge upon the mayor, and encouraged Volders to still more intemperate language. The police ordered the crowd to disperse. The workingmen answered with cries of defiance. Volders urged the crowd to advance toward the platform. Some of the crowd fired revolvers, and a few threw stones, but the rest retreated without show of fight toward the city. Nobody was injured.

Tried to Kill the Mayor.

Mayor Buls was walking home on the Avenue Louise with Mayor Henri Maus, when some 200 socialists returning from the meeting, came down the street. They hooted and jostled him, but allowed him to pass. After he had left the mob about 50 paces behind him, three men ran out, and one of them struck him a heavy blow with a stick on the head. As Buls turned he received another blow on the back of the neck. He fell bleeding and unconscious to the pavement.

A resident of the Avenue Louise who had seen the first of the encounter and had run for the police, returned with help just as the mayor was struck down. The police charged the socialists and after a fight of 10 minutes dispersed them. Two of the crowd were arrested, but it has not been ascertained whether or not they are of the three who struck Buls. A witness of the mobbing informed the police that just before their arrival a workingman fired seven shots from a revolver at the prostrate mayor.

M. Buls was still unconscious when taken to his home. He recovered consciousness this morning and probably will be able to resume his official duties within a few days. King Leopold has inquired twice by special courier after his health. It is reported that 100 persons were arrested for his part in the meeting which preceded the assault.

In the evening turbulent crowds fought the police in several districts of the city. In the Pue de la Baviere, near the Maison du Peuple, the mob became so threatening that mounted police charged them with drawn sabers. The strikers threw jars of Greek fire and repeated volleys of stones among the police. Many of the mob were cut or trampled by horses. Several of the police men were bruised and burned.

The city is as if in a state of siege. All places of amusement are closed. The police and the rioters have the streets to themselves.

A dispatch from Mons said that the rioters had possession of many streets there since early in the afternoon. Re-enforcements of soldiers were sent from this city.

Talk of a General Dock Strike.

LONDON, April 17.—Thousands of dockers and other riverside workers met in East London to consider what attitude they might best adopt toward the Hull strike. Chairman Edwards said that he was bitterly opposed to the immediate ordering of a general strike at all ports of the United Kingdom, as had been proposed. The meeting eventually approved a resolution calling upon the executives of all the unions to ascertain the views of the men as to the expediency of a general strike, the amount of money available to support a strike and the best manner of resisting the federation.

Armenian Officials Removed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 17.—David Thompson, United States minister to Turkey, will attend the trials of the Armenian prisoners in Angora. In consequence of his protests against the conduct of the Turkish authorities during the recent anti-Christian riots in Asiatic Turkey, many officials in Cesarea and Marsovan have been removed. Hundreds of Armenians have been released from prison, but many of them, although many are still confined in Erzeroum.

Royalty's Wedding Presents.

VIENNA, April 17.—A committee representing all the conspicuous Jews of Bulgaria have ordered in Budapest an album inlaid with diamonds, rubies and emeralds, which they will give to Prince Ferdinand on his wedding day. The album will cost 220,000 francs. The pope has sent a diamond ring to Princess Marie Louise of Parma, the intended bride of Prince Ferdinand.

Germany and Austria Alarmed.

PARIS, April 17.—M. Bource, French ambassador to Belgium, has returned to Paris in response to a telephonic message from the government, who wish to confer with him as to the revolt of the Belgian work. ingmen. The revolt has become so threatening that it is believed Germany and Austria will be justified, under the treaty of 1831, in interfering to support the crown.

To Hoist Paul Jones' Flag.

NEW YORK, April 17.—At noon on April 25 the American flag will be hoisted for the first time on the 150-foot pole erected between the two lights at the Highlands of Navesink. The first flag to be hoisted will be the original one carried by Captain Paul Jones of Bon Homme Richard fame and lent by Mrs. S. B. Stafford of Cottage City, Mass.

Carriage Makers to Strike.

BEDFORD, April 17.—A conference was held between George L. Brewer and Clarence, Lowell & Co., two leading carriage manufacturers, and a committee of carriage workers employed at these shops. The employers refused to accede to a demand from the men for nine hours a day, and today 130 men will strike.

Both Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla

Catarrh, Kidney Complaint, Heart Disease, Liver Troubles.

"I think it my duty to voluntarily tell what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for myself and wife. Last spring my wife was in a very bad way with kidney complaint; felt and could hardly get around the house. She began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in one week she was improving. When she had taken but three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she was entirely cured. I was troubled with Catarrh, Heart Disease, Liver and Kidneys, and so intensely that at night, nor get any rest through the day. As soon as I lay down, my heart would beat so hard that I would rise up in bed. I had very severe pains in the small of my back and pain in my head also. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Within a week after I began taking it, I have improved rapidly and can now sleep soundly all night, my heart does not beat so hard as it used to. My pains are all gone and I feel like a new man. We praise for we think there is no medicine like it." HENRY C. and MARY E. RICHARDSON, Sloan, Erie County, N. Y.

Miserable All the Time

I Could Not Sleep

Hood's Sarsaparilla

SCHARDT BROKE THE BANK.

He Was Cashier and Is Short From $40,000 to $50,000.

NASHVILLE, April 17.—John Schardt, cashier of the Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust company, is short in his accounts from $40,000 to $50,000. Schardt is sick at home and not allowed to talk. The directors have been in session all day behind closed doors, and will not talk. From one, however, it is learned that it is believed the shortage is $50,000. The bank will make a general assignment. It is a case of stealing and affects none of the other banks of the city.

Schardt has been cashier about three months; before that he was the teller of the bank and was thoroughly trusted. It is stated that the discovery of a probable shortage occurred when a check for $4,000 was presented and the teller could find no funds for its amount.

Almost Done at Albany.

ALBANY, April 17.—The legislature began its last session tonight. The most important bill to be considered is the Farquhar blanket ballot bill, which is a special order in the senate. The fate of the governor registration bill is uncertain. The senate is about up in its work while the assembly has several hundred bills up on the calendar, nearly all of which are local. Three sessions of the house will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday. The state comptroller is engaged in the preparation of his financial statements, upon which the state tax rate will be determined by the legislature on Thursday. That will be about the last legislation of the session.

A Fatal Serenade.

NEW CITY, Kan., April 17.—Three persons were killed at a charivari near this city. A crowd of neighbors serenaded a young man named Anderson and his bride. A drunken cowboy fired a load of buckshot into the cottage where the wedding was being celebrated, slightly wounding the bride. This angered Anderson and he fired both barrels of a shotgun into the crowd outside. Two men were instantly killed and a third was fatally injured.

Foot Race Ended In Murder.

NEW YORK, April 17.—James Collins, 25, is dying in St. Michael's hospital, Newark, from a pistol shot wound inflicted by Patrick Dolan, a saloon keeper at that place. Collins is a professional runner and lived in this city. Collins entered in a foot race with another runner named Green. Dolan was Collins' backer. He bet heavily on his man. Collins lost and Dolan dropped $900. Dolan charged the runner with selling out the race.

The Dying Fratricide Confessed.

LIMA, O., April 17.—Several years ago the body of John Sigler was found at Osceola, with the throat cut and a knife clasped in his hand. Although there were some suspicious circumstances in connection with the case, a coroner's jury brought in a verdict of suicide. Now a brother of Siegler's has made a deathbed confession to the effect that the supposed suicide was a murder and that he committed the deed himself.

ALL READY FOR REVOLT.

Cuban Revolutionists Organizing In New York.

THEY HAVE MEN, MONEY AND ARMS.

An Expedition May Be Started at Any Time to Strike a Blow For Cuban Independence—Their Veteran Generals Will Lead Them to Battle Once More.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The Herald today prints the following story: "In New York is brewing today what may develop into a revolution in Cuba within the next few months. The project is one of long standing. The possibility of its climax within a short time is the result of the recent elections in Cuba, which were unsatisfactory to the people there and to Cuban patriots in America. Instead of starting an expedition from Key West or Tampa, Fla., it is probable that if one is undertaken it will be organized here, if not actually started from this city.

"In Hardman hall, Fifth avenue and Nineteenth street, was organized last evening the New York Cuban revolutionary party. Its avowed purpose being to uphold the movement for independence and a lasting republican form of government in Cuba.

"Delegate Jose Marti, a well known Cuban patriot and member of the council of direction, presided at the meeting and Gonsalo de Quesada acted as secretary. Quesada is secretary of the council of direction. By a unanimous vote the election of the party's delegates in Cuba was approved after which the situation in the island was discussed at great length. The speakers were Estrada Palma, ex-president of Cuba; Juan Fraga, president of the New York branch of his party; Delegate Marti, Carlos Zahonet, Secretary Quesada and Treasurer Benjamin J. Guerra.

Ready For Action.

"While of course no open declaration was made that it was contemplated to start a revolutionary expedition to Cuba in the near future that idea was clearly conveyed by statements that money in plenty had been collected to send men, arms and ammunition the moment it should be decided that extreme measures were the only resort.

"Men enough to fit out not one, but five, six or seven expeditions, and arms and accoutrements are within reach it declared. Delegate Marti and the council of direction alone stands between the government and immediate insurrection. When they are convinced their plans are perfect and there can be no chance of failure, as in the 10-years' revolt ending in 1878, then the word will be given, and leaders of the insurgents 15 years ago the armies of the Cuban patriots will begin their fight for absolute independence.

"Since its organization, about a year ago, the party has grown until in the United States alone there are now 97 clubs or organizations contributing to the funds and ready to give active assistance to their compatriots of Cuba. In New York there are 16 clubs.

"The New York clubs generally meet in Military hall, 103 Bowery, and their total membership is more than 500. The enrollment of all the clubs in the United States is considerably more than 5,000.

Plenty of Funds.

"Treasurer Guerra said:

"'The party has plenty of funds, and when the time comes there will be no lack of money to carry on the revolution. The war may start at any time. It may come next month for the matter of that, but we are prepared for it. These reports of expeditions from Key West that have been sent out are malicious falsehoods. Our party has not been fitting out an expedition to start from Key West or anywhere in that vicinity, and for that purpose the stories have been circulated I don't know.'

"The Cubans in this city believe that once in possession of their island they can put it on a good, solid war footing in 10 years. They estimate the net income of the island at $40,000,000 per year. This amount they propose to invest in a navy, calculating they can at least purchase 10 cruisers or battle ships every year."

Dropped Dead on the Pier.

JERSEY CITY, April 17.—Among the cabin passengers who arrived at Hoboken on the North German Lloyd steamer Werra was W. D. Ashagh, judge of the eastern judicial district of Manitoba, who had been spending the winter in Italy. Judge Ashagh walked leisurely down the gang plank to the dock, but he had barely stepped on the dock when he threw up his hands and fell dead. The ship's surgeon gave heart disease as the cause.

Schenke's Third Attempt.

BUFFALO, April 17.—For the third time within a week an attempt was made to smuggle into this country from Canada Schenke, one of the 400 immigrants from Hoboken infected with Hamburg, who landed at Halifax a week or so ago. The third attempt was made to bring Schenke into this country by way of the ferryboat which runs between Buffalo and Fort Erie. Captain Thomas Newman discovered Schenke aboard his boat disguised and ordered him off.

A May Day Demonstration.

NEW YORK, April 17.—At a meeting of the Central Labor Federation it was announced that the May day demonstration will take place April 29 in Union Square. Thirty organizations will parade, including the United Hebrew trades.

Left Notes For His Friends.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 17.—Zeno F. Young was found dead in bed at the Hotel Bismarck in Decatur. Some empty morphine bottles told the story. He left several notes of adieu to his friends and his son.

FATAL FEUD OF MINERS.

Huns and Italians Engaged In a Desperate Battle.

HAZLETON, Pa., April 17.—The trouble which has been brewing between the Hungarians and Italians of Milnesville and vicinity for some time terminated in a bloody battle. As a result, two men are dead, two missing—supposed to be lying at the bottom of a mine hole—and three others seriously injured.

About 10 p. m. a party of four Hungarians were coming into Harleigh, when they were attacked by 11 Italians. The firing of a shot was the signal for a concerted attack on the part of the Italians, who seemed to swarm from the woods on every side. About 300 yards further down a half dozen other Hungarians were met at the schoolhouse, and on the Harleigh road near by other Hungarians were met.

The fight that ensued was terrific. The Hungarians, who never go on the road at night unarmed, after the first onslaught, prepared to defend themselves, and a volley of bullets sent into the attacking Italians served to check them for a moment. It was only for a moment, however, as the next instant they closed in upon their adversaries and a fierce hand to hand conflict ensued, the Italian stiletto playing havoc with the Hungarians. The latter were outnumbered largely, and possessing disarmed knife and fled precipitately.

The yells and whoops of the victorious Italians attracted a number of villagers to the scene. All the party of

THE HOUSEHOLD

DECORATIVE NOTES.

A Cosy Hall Nook—What to Do With a Double Door Space—Tetaway Tables.

The walls of the hall may be converted into the coziest of corners, just adapted for a quiet chat. This is arranged by fitting into the corner a triangular settee, which a carpenter can make of the same wood in which the hall is finished. Then you can cover the seat with down cushions, covered with some pretty dark Japanese silk. The back should also be cushioned as far up as the head will reach when one is seated. Over this again you may have two panels of canvas, tinted pale green and painted with bunches of pink clover or any other motive you desire, and tacked with gilt headed nails to the woodwork. Over the panels have a shelf just wide enough to hold a vase, a plaque and a small panel or any other bric-a-brac. Have an odd table, with books, etc., and here is a nicer nook and a joy forever, says The Decorator and Furnisher, in which the following suggestions are also found:

A double door space in a country house was designed with the fish net, which comes now in various soft shades, and a few yards of cord finished with tassels. In the angle of the two walls at the left of the doorway were suspended two Japanese umbrellas in tones of gray. The umbrellas hung bottom down, like inverted toad stools, tipped to show their dusky soft color. Beneath these stood a 5 o'clock tea table of white enamel finish, covered with a dainty tea-cloth and set with a Japanese tea service, with bright flowers in an old blue china bowl for a touch of color.

The little English "cuckaways" are most convenient for tea tables where space is an object, as it is in so many city homes. They are round and very tiny and fold up perfectly flat.

A novelty in the way of hanging draperies over windows is a swinging rod like a cane, from which the drapery is suspended. They swing to and forth and are fastened at one end only.

Cleaning Floorcloths.

With regard to cleaning floorcloths, the worst thing for them is too much water. At the best of times some of it must find its way underneath, where, having no air to dry, it gradually but inevitably damages both boards and coverings. This fact is being much more generally recognized, and a drier mode of cleaning is being adopted. It is this: Rub linoleum, etc., with a cloth wrung out of warm water and when dry polish it with thin beeswax and turpentine, as they do stained floors. The effect is most satisfactory, to say nothing of the fact that the length of the wear is almost doubled. Another very efficacious polishing mixture is one made of equal parts of linseed oil and methylated spirits. Sour milk used sparingly cleans linoleum admirably. Matting should never be scraped. Take it up, brush and dust it well on both sides, then wipe it with a clean cloth wrung out in fairly strong salt and water. Be careful to rub it dry with the palm of the other hand as you proceed. In this way none of the moisture will be retained. This does not apply to cocoanut matting, which should only want regular brushing and shaking.

Hot Cross Buns.

Take about 3 pounds of flour, to which add a heaped teaspoonful of mixed spice and barely 1 oz. of salt. Rub into this 16 ounces of butter. When thoroughly mixed, make a hole in the middle and pour in nearly a pint of warm milk in which rather less than an ounce of German yeast has previously been dissolved. Gradually work the whole mixture into a stiff batter, gathering all the flour well detached from the basin. Sprinkle thickly with dry flour, cover and stand near the fire. When the dough has risen, work in a half pound of moist sugar and three-quarters of a pound of currants. If the dough is too stiff, add some milk to make it of the right consistency. Cover again and stand near the fire for half an hour. Make it up into buns, cut a cross on each, as before, and bake for 20 minutes. This quantity should make about three dozen buns.

Palm Pancakes.

Well beat 3 fresh eggs; then mix 3 table spoonfuls of dry flour with a pint of new milk. Pass it through a sieve into the eggs. Put a half ounce of lard into a clean frying pan, and when it is quite hot pour in a little batter as thin as possible. Scatter over it some finely minced candied citron peel; then cover with more batter as thin as before. Fry a light brown; drain, dish and serve very hot with half lemons. The pancakes must not be larger than the palm of the hand.

A Fashionable Bag.

Perpadour effects being now quite in favor, an attractive pompadour bag is here illustrated. It may be in satin or moire silk, drawn with double strings to form an effective heading of deep flutings. In the center is embroidered the monogram or motto of the owner.

A POMPADOUR BAG.

The lower part is encircled with brocade divided into convenient little pockets by beads of antique wrought. This pretty receptacle makes a nice birthday gift, especially if well filled with bonbons.

A Dollhouse.

What do you think of a doll's house built entirely of cardboard boxes and painted to look exactly like one of those red and white brick houses so familiar to your eyes? The house has four rooms in it, and, as the advertisements say, is "elegantly furnished throughout," the materials used for the furniture being principally cardboard too. The drawing room is upholstered, and the tiny chairs and couches look so pretty with their green plush coverings. The dining room is "solid oak," fashioned from ordinary wine bottled corks. Little rounds of cork varnished over form the seats and backs of the chairs and couches and the tops of the tables. Stout pins covered with brown wood are used for all the legs. The effect, I can tell you, is splendid.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Chinese Children.

Kind ladies stop before the children in the street in Chinatown, says a San Francisco paper, chuck them under the chins and—and then the youngsters talk back in Chinese as they go flying through the doors or back into the alleys. The first ambition of the very young Chinese boy these days is to handle firecrackers and burning punk.

At from 10 to 12 years of age the girls begin to turn their thoughts to dress, and to gradually drift away from the joys of childhood. The boys remain children much longer. From 12 to 16 they are not content with firing anything less than a pack of crackers at a time.

The American toy balloon is a thing that appeals to the childish Chinese fancy, and the venders do a big business. Little wags one are constantly met, and yesterday one boy had an automatic tin horse that ran on the sidewalk whenever the owner could find room for it.

In their enjoyments the children of the Chinese are about like any other children. They have few sports in the local settlement to amuse themselves with, but they get as much satisfaction out of whatever comes in their way as anybody could.

A Bird That Lives on the Water.

"Little Peter" is the real name of the petrel or bird that lives on the sea. The hardest thing to do with Peter is like it, and the more noise the sea makes the louder he cries.

The sailors, who are all so jolly, never like to meet a petrel. They are so dismal in their coal black coats, and seamen think they bring them ill luck too.

You could easily guess how the petrel sleeps. He first makes of himself a feather ball and sits on the water, just as your canary does on his perch.

Why doesn't he sink? Because his feathers are so oily he can't.

These birds grow so fat that to the poor islanders in very cold countries they are invaluable food. After they are dead a wick is drawn through their bodies and set on fire, and you can hardly believe how well this queer kind of lamp lights up their huts.

The petrel never goes on shore except to build her nest, which is hidden snugly away between rocks or in the sand. There she lays her one egg and brings up her baby. All day the petrel lives on the water, but she never forgets at night to feed it.

Sometimes they are called "Mother Carey's chickens." If you ever go across the water, you may see them some day.—Montreal Star.

Miss Muffet the Third.

Little Miss Muffet sat on a tuffet,
Her curds and whey all eating;
But Little Miss Muffet the second or third
Is always dancing and gay
And not for a holiday!

Little Miss Muffet sat old
With a basting bowl and her whey;
Miss Muffet the third is eating bonbons,
Sweet as the honey bees buy
When a rose is budding and gay.

Little Miss Muffet sat old
Was frightened by Bridget, the grime;
But Little Miss Muffet the second or third
Would dance with Bridget and bless.
Bound him away in a trice!

Now which would you rather be?
The first or the second or third?
Ah, 'tis a question of taste and of style.
Indeed 'tis very absurd!
For I'm sure I'd be clad in the second or third
And not for a holiday!

—Housekeeper.

Bright Little Walter.

One bright morning Walter, who is a very wise little fellow, and his auntie were sitting out on the cool porch, and Walter was trying to explain to her the difference between a Hilliput and a pygmy. "You know, auntie," said he, "that both pygmies and Hilliputs are little bits of people. All Hilliputs are pygmies, but all pygmies are not Hilliputs." "Why, how can that be?" said auntie, pretending not to understand and trying to test the little fellow, who thought for a few moments, and then looking up with a bright smile said, "Well, auntie, you know a ship is a boat, but all boats are not ships." His auntie thought he was a very bright little boy to make such a clear explanation, as he was only 8 years old.—Youth's Companion.

Tobogganing In Canada.

The popular winter sport in Canada is tobogganing, and the "grownups" as well as the children indulge in the exhilarating amusement. The following described as "Swish! swish! Walkee back a mile."

A toboggan is a light sledge made of wood, usually 5 or 6 feet long, very much in the form of the Lapp or Arctic sledge, except that it is about 20 inches wide. On this perch one, two or three people, the front one squatting, the back one trailing his feet to steer the toboggan in case it gives signs of leaving the track. If there is only one, he lies prone on the toboggan. The start is very steep, not for short or perpendicular, so as to give the proper impetus.

Of course there are smaller toboggans for the use of small boys and girls—such as the one shown in the accompanying illustration. Wrapped up good and warm, the children are enjoying their ride down a long slope.

NOT A BOSTON GIRL.

I seal the letter, write her name—
It's very dear to me—
And then I add beneath the same
Two letters—M and D.

I see you smile in quick disdain,
You think of glasses, too,
And little corks, for very plain
What "M. D." means to you.

But she is neither stern nor cold,
As you perhaps may think.
She's young and fair, and merrier and old,
Nor does she scatter ink

On notes of lessons that are said
Before a learned class,
And from her dainty tips of red
No long orations pass.

The only studies that she reads
Are letters that I write.
The only lectures that she heeds
Are those that I indite.

You wonder how it all may be
And do not understand.
She lives in Baltimore. "M.d."
Means simply "Maryland."

Didn't Know the Language.

They were housecleaning, and the carpets were out on the line in the back yard, when a genteel, well dressed, well shaved tramp came along and invited himself to eat.

"If I give you some dinner, will you shake those carpets?" asked the lord of the manor, who had staid home from his business to move the furniture around.

"I will indeed, sir," responded the tramp in English. His quick ears and Greek in an equally finent manner. He was given an excellent dinner from the top of a flour barrel, which he ate standing—not the board, but the dinner. When he had finished off with a pail of clear, refreshing hydrant water, he folded his vest like the Arab and silently stole away. The master of the house stole after him.

"See here, my friend, you said you would shake those carpets."

"Did, sir."

"Did what?"

"Shake them."

"Why, you never touched them! How dare you?"

"Soft, me good sir. Methinks you are not familiar with the language you speak. If you mean what I mean, I mean that you give him the goby. The same with carpets —understandes vous?"

He dodged a bilin of wood and disappeared into the unknown, while his kind entertainer went back to hunt in the debris for the dictionary.—Detroit Free Press.

Her Way.

"Miss Skivvens thought she was having fun with me," said Willie Wishington complacently, "but she wasn't."

"What's the matter?"

"But I wasn't. What she meant was that she found me a bore."—Washington Star.

Dense Ignorance.

A Correction.

"You are the only girl in all the wide world that I have ever loved," he said to the Boston maiden.

"I am delighted to hear you say so," she answered, "but I think you are hardly correct in saying the wide world. Round world would be better. The world is round, slightly flattened at the poles."—New York Press.

The One Exception.

Herdit—No, sir.

Thinkit—Well, did you ever see two men simultaneously reach for a 50-cent piece on the sidewalk?—Detroit Tribune.

WOULDN'T STAY.

Where He Heard the Facts in the Case He Paid His Bill.

"Put down a dollar to be called in time for the 4:30 train in the morning." He said as he leaned gracefully over toward the night clerk of an Arizona hotel.

"Case of life and death?" inquired the clerk.

"Why, no, but I want to go to Denver before noon."

"Hadn't you better wait for the 9:30 train?"

"What is it to you?"

Nothing, but the excitement and noise, and I shall probably have to testify at the coroner's inquest."

"I—I don't exactly catch on."

"Come up stairs and I'll explain."

When they had ascended to the first sleeping floor, the clerk continued:

"This is room 26, as you see. There are five bullet holes in the door. Man in here last week wanted to be called for that early train. Room 26 has seven bullet holes, but those stand for two men. This paper piece in the carpet here is where a man fell and bled to death. Down here"——

"But who kills off the guests?" asked the traveler.

"Oh, the other guests. As soon as the nigger comes and knocks and hands out, Colonel Shaw, who owns the house, reaches for his shotgun. Over in 99 Judge Heavens slips out with his revolver. Major Brooks, who is in 23, always comes in a good third with a 6-shooter, and the rest of the fusilade along the hall are always more or less well loaded."

"Did I say call me for the 4:30 train?" queried the traveler.

"I believe so."

"Well, never mind. I'll pay my bill and secure my breakfast in three minutes."

And he did.—Texas Siftings.

Sudden Death.

There was a man named Peter Poke
Who had much woe to bear,
He bought a gorgeous necktie once
Which made his friends all sad.

He wore this necktie out one day
Along a country road;
There was a bull, whose presence there
No good to him did bode.

Now when that bull beheld that tie
Did he run from Peter Poke
And did he toss poor Peter Poke
Right up into the air?

Oh, no. When he saw Peter Poke,
He lifted his left hind foot
But when he caught sight of that tie
He simply dropped down dead.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

$5 per Year in Advance. T. W. Morrison, Editor and Proprietor. Office, No. 9 Somerset street. Printing of All Kinds. 10 Cents per Week, Delivered.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, APRIL 18, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

BREVITIES.

—The United States Express Company moved to day from 20 to 28 North avenue.

—Albert Coombs of Westfield was fined one dollar, to-day, for riding a bicycle last night without a lantern.

—The "Olde Folkes Concert," which was so successfully given in Vincent chapel, Friday, April 7th, will be repeated in the chapel Tuesday, April 25th.

—On Wednesday and for the balance of the week the sectional plan and picture of the extension to North Plainfield school will be on exhibition at the store of Mr. Jas. K. Arnold, Somerset street.

—The special evangelistic services are to be continued this week in the Park avenue Baptist church, under the direction of Rev. and Mrs. Pierson. After-noon service at 3.30; evening at eight o'clock. Public cordially invited.

—The regular "Y" devotional meeting will be held in the "Y" rooms Wednesday, April 19, at four o'clock. Subject—"Grandfathers." Dr. Lewis who was announced to speak is out of town, but it is expected will be present at the May meeting.

—The Plainfield Water Supply Company is probably not aware of the fact that it is losing daily a quantity of water. The pipe, under the Washington avenue bridge, leaks and the water runs a stream into the brook.

—As Riggins' stage was passing along Park avenue last night, the whiffletree bolt dropped out, letting the whiffletrees drop on the horses' heels. The driver was pulled from his seat, but not injured, as the team did not attempt to run away.

—Perseverance Lodge, 74, K. of P., has completed arrangements for a sociable to be tendered the members and their friends on Friday, April 28. A programme has been prepared of vocal and instrumental music. Refreshments will be served in the banquet room.

DOGS VS. ENGINE.

Two Reckless Canines try to Stop a Locomotive.

This morning the express, which passes through here at 7.58, struck two dogs at the North avenue station. One was a pug and the other a fox-terrier. They belonged to a young man who was waiting for a train to New York. The canines had followed him to the station and were running along the track as the "flyer" came through. All efforts to get them off proved unavailing. Men whistled and called to the dogs, but they would not heed. The cowcatcher of the engine pushed the terrier to one side, and he was uninjured. The pug was not so fortunate. One of its legs was cut off, as was also its tail and another of its legs broken. It had to be killed to end its suffering.

A VICIOUS BULL DOG.

A Little Boy Badly Bitten at Dunellen.

Sunday evening, at seven o'clock, a bull dog belonging to Mrs. J. King, savagely attacked her seven year old son, nearly destroying the sight of one eye and badly lacerating the child's cheek, necessitating the service of Dr. Brakely, who took several stitches in the wound, after cauterization, as it was feared the dog was mad. It was with difficulty the dog was made to release its hold.

The brute was immediately killed by two charges from a shotgun in the hands of the father.

How Dr. Barnes met "Peter Smith."

At the Sunday-school, last Sunday, Dr. Barnes, the new minister of the Methodist Episcopal church, as is the usual custom, addressed the children. He wished to particularly impress his desire to be friends with them all, so he said, "I may not recognize you at first, but if you meet me on the street, walk right up to me and shake hands and say "How do you do Dr. Barnes? I'm Peter Smith."

Monday he had occasion to walk by the Plainfield school house. As he passed a group of school girls, one bright faced, smiling young lady stepped out, and said, extending her hand, "How do you do, Dr. Barnes? I'm "Peter Smith."

Evenings With Whittier,

The third in the series of "Evenings with Whittier," at All Souls' Church, postponed from last Friday on account of the storm, will be given on Wednesday evening, with a paper by Mrs. Florence Howe Hall on "Whittier in the Anti-Slavery Conflict." The fourth evening will be, as originally announced, Friday evening of this week, the subject being "In War Time and After," a paper by Mrs. T. J. Mumford.

A Suit for Wages.

Before Justice Crossley of North Plainfield, yesterday, the suit in which Edward Robinson was plaintiff and Matthias Giddis, defendant, was tried. Robinson sued Giddis for wages he claimed were due him. Ex-Judge W. H. Codington appeared for the plaintiff and Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh was counsel for the defendant.

Decision was reserved.

Yesterday's Fire.

A spark from a pile of burning rubbish in the rear of Vogeler's butcher shop, on West Front street, yesterday afternoon, set fire to the roof of his barn. An alarm was sounded from box 12, calling out the department. The fire was extinguished by a member of the Hook and Ladder Company, with a patent fire extinguisher.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

In Progress at the Park Avenue Baptist Church.

The evangelistic meetings, conducted by Evangelists Pearson and wife, in the Park avenue Baptist church are increasing in interest, and attendance. As the people become better acquainted with these workers and their methods, they win their hearty approval.

The meeting of last night was one of the best held yet. Fully three fourths of those present advanced decidedly in Christian experience, much to the delight of Pastor Richardson and the evangelists.

Not "Religious Sensation," but deep interest and enthusiasm characterize these meetings. Those most interested say the indications now are that a great and good work will be accomplished by these extra services.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Meeting of the Home Building and Loan Association.

At the sixth annual meeting of the Home Building and Loan Association, at No. 12 East Front street, last evening, the following officers were elected:

MR. NORTHUP'S SWIFT RIDE.

His New Horse Takes him to Evona in a "Jiffy."

Northup & Connolly, the Broadway butchers, had a new horse on trial this morning, but the trial trip did not prove very satisfactory, although made at a lively pace. The horse was hitched to the delivery wagon and driven up in front of the store. Mr. Northup had just time enough to get seated in the wagon when the horse started on a run. He turned into Fourth street at a mile-a-minute clip. The driver could not stop the animal, but he managed to keep it in the centre of the street. The horse ran to Evona before it was stopped, and then only because it was tired.

THE OLD LEE HOMESTEAD.

The House where the Old Hermits Died, Sold.

The old homestead of Frazee and Daniel Lee, the old hermits, who died some time ago at Two Bridges, between here and Rahway, was sold by Master in Chancery Frank Bergen at Bridgeton, yesterday. It was purchased by Mr. Albert Ryno of Dog Corners. The buildings are over a century old. Mr. John L. Darby, of Plainfield, bought a 13 acre plot belonging to the estate, and Mr. David Hand of Netherwood bought a large plot of woodland located at Short Hills, which was also a part of the estate.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. James B. Searing of Madison avenue, is dangerously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Northup have moved from Front street to the house corner of Crescent avenue and Second place.

Next Friday night Miss Raymond of Kensington avenue will chaperon a whist party at the Coles' residence on East Front street.

Mr. Horace P. Bradley, aged 78 years, died yesterday at his home in Dunellen. Funeral services will be held at 44 Jefferson avenue, Dunellen, Thursday afternoon, at three o'clock.

The Martins Here.

The martins have arrived at their old quarters on Front street, opposite Music Hall. The first installment of this bird family arrived Sunday, April 8th, and had the usual fight with the sparrows that always take possession when the martins leave in the Fall, and, with the usual result—the sparrows were compelled to vacate.

Following is the record of their arrival for nine years:

In Justice Nash's Court.

Summons have been issued by Justice Nash, and served by Constable Moffett, in the following civil suits:

Guttman vs. Staats, landlord and tenant, returnable Monday, April 24th, at two p. m. Haven vs. Allen, landlord and tenant, returnable Monday, April 24th, at two p. m.

A Horse Dies Suddenly.

One of James Totten's horses died suddenly last night. The cause of death is a mystery. The animal had been used all day to a cart. At about six o'clock it was driven to the stable and before the harness could be removed the horse dropped dead.

ELIZABETH PRESBYTERY.

This Evening's Session to be Addressed by Dr Richards.

The Presbytery of Elizabeth met in Westminster church, Elizabeth, at 11 a. m. this morning. The opening sermon was preached by the retiring moderator, Rev. William Hoppaugh, of Springfield.

The afternoon session was devoted to business. This evening at 7.45 a popular meeting will be held in the church, to be addressed by two very able and eloquent divines, Rev. Wm. R. Richards, D. D., of the Crescent avenue church in this city, and the Rev. George L. Spining, D. D., of the Phillips church, New York. Dr. Richards is a member of the Board of Foreign Missions, and Dr. Spining of the Home Board. The latter has an extensive knowledge of mission work in the great West.

The Wednesday services of Presbytery will be given to business, with the exception of the first half hour in the morning, which will be spent devotionally.

Commissioners to the General Assembly will be chosen at eleven o'clock Wednesday morning.

A Company in which Mayor Saunders is Interested.

The Ingersoll Sergeant Rock Drill Company will, on May 1, remove its business offices from No. 10 Park place, N. Y., to a handsome suite of seven rooms on the tenth floor of the new Havemeyer Building, Church, Cortlandt and Dey streets. This company has the most extensive manufactory of rock excavating machinery in the world. It has made over fourteen thousand rock drills, in addition to air compressors, coal mining machines, channeling machines for quarries and tunneling machinery. The Ingersoll Sergeant Company has supplied complete plants for working mines and quarries and driving tunnels in every country on the globe. One of their patrons is the British Government, which buys machinery for mining in its Anglo-Indian possessions. The company has branches in England, Africa, Mexico, Australia and South America. The company's directors includes ex-Mayor Grace, A. B. Boardman, W. L. Turner, R. W. Chapin, John H. Morse, H. C. Sergeant, and Mayor Wm. L. Saunders, of North Plainfield. Henry C. Sergeant is the inventor of the company and Charles H. Denman the cashier.

"Our Strategists."

The Gilberts, who appear at Music Hall Thursday evening, have won an enviable reputation. The Brooklyn Standard Union of Nov. 3, 1892, says:

"The Gilbert Dramatic Society gave a wonderful presentation of the above comedy last evening, filling the Academy of Music completely. The cast was an exceptionally strong one, including the ever popular Messrs. Darling, Dore, Reade, De Xanthis, Quinn and Wilson, Miss Libbie Healy, Miss Carrie Turner and Miss Mamie Sloat. Mr. Dore, as Jack Rutledge, exemplified his belief in the maxim that "All's fair in love and war," and all other means proving unavailable determinated to try strategy the object of his devotion, Nellie Howard. It was a difficult role but Mr. Dore succeeded in carrying himself through the intricate mazes with great credit. Miss Healy as Nellie Howard, the fair instigator and accomplice in the strategic campaign was very clever and natural in her acting and made a "big hit" in her unsuccessful attempt at a little strategy on her own account.

Altogether the performance was one of the best the Gilberts have put on the stage this season."

Plainfield's New Pastor Elected President.

The New York Preachers' Meeting of the Methodist church at its session yesterday morning elected these officers for the ensuing year: President—the Rev. C. R. Barnes of Plainfield, N. J.; Vice Presidents—the Rev. A. J. Palmer of St. Paul's, and the Rev. J. W. Chadwick of the Sumner avenue church, Brooklyn; Secretary—the Rev. J. W. A. Dodge of the Chelsea Methodist church, New York.

The Water Company's New Office.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company has moved its office from the Dime Savings Bank building to ex-Judge Ulrich's building on North avenue, near the corner of Grace street. The store formerly used as a drug store by Mr. Mallinson, who has moved next door, has been fitted up in good shape and the company's officers occupied their new headquarters yesterday for the first time.

A Dunellenite in the Tolls.

A Dunellenite yesterday visited Plainfield and spent the day with friends in having a "jollytime." They imbibed too freely for the Dunellen man, and so he started for home last night he was hardly able to "navigate." At any rate, the police thought so, and he was placed in the lockup for safe keeping. A five dollar fine squared matters between him and the city this morning.

Music Hall Notes.

The attraction at Music Hall next Saturday night will be the famous Hermann, the eminent prestidigiteur, in his marvelous entertainment of magic, mirth and mystery. His programme this season includes many new and startling wonders. Chief among which is "Inkoyo" the great Chinese emigration mystery, which the Professor claims as his masterpiece.

THE "JOHN BULL SPECIAL."

The Old Train Leaves for the World's Fair.

The "John Bull special" left the Jersey City station of the Pennsylvania Railroad en route to the Columbian Exposition at 10:10 a. m., yesterday carrying a number of railroad officials and newspaper men. The locomotive developed a possible speed of thirty miles an hour, but will be run through to Chicago by easy stages.

One of the two coaches forming the train was constructed by the old Camden and Amboy road in 1836 and having been taken out of service, came by right of purchase about twenty-five years since, into the possession of a New Jersey farmer who, until quite recently, used it as a chicken coop, when it was purchased by the Pennsylvania railroad.

It was amid the tooting of whistles, waving of handkerchiefs, the ringing of bells and the cheering of a throng of the curious and interested, that the old locomotive pulled away out of the depot. Flags waved from every available spot on the train from the pilot of the locomotive to the rear guard of the last coach, and a truly unique and novel picture the train presented. Bear Brakeman Tim Gallagher, who officiated in that capacity in 1869, and is now a passenger conductor, had his hands full in keeping uninvited guests off.

All the morning the train had been inspected by incoming passengers, who were allowed to pass through the cars, but exactly at leaving time Conductor Bailey took out his old time watch and shouted "All aboard!"

Among the guests on the train were several railroad officials from Philadelphia, who will leave the train on its arrival there. Attached to the train is a modern sleeper.

Invitations have been extended to the Governors of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, and they are expected to join the party at various intervals. Mayors of all the cities through which the train passes will also be asked on board.

Conductor Bailey carries with him the time table upon which old No. 1 ran in 1835.

Concerning Creeds.

The current Independent publishes an invaluable symposium on Christian union in a plan for denominational consolidation. H. K. Carroll, LL.D., of Plainfield, special agent Eleventh census for the Churches, is prominent. The latter has articles for the reunion of the Protestant divisions of Christianity are freely discussed, and the reunion of all the main intention admitted. But those articles have forced the consideration of the question upon the church at large, and it is thought that out of the discussion will come a real advance.

The plan for grouping the 163 distinct denominations arranged in family groups, all vices that all ideas of papacy and prelacy should be set aside with a view to first uniting these family groups. He shows, for example, how the twelve different Presbyterian denominations might be reduced to three, and so on.

"The Gilbert Plan for the Union of Dr. Carroll's scheme," according to the New York Herald, "is that these family feuds are the bitter.

"It would be easier to unite the Methodists and Baptists than the old order of Dunkard River Brethren with the United Zion's Children River Brethren, or the Protestant Episcopal with the Reformed Episcopal Church.

"Union will not come in this way from the present religious bodies and churches. But when that which has occurred in New England is manifestly true in the whole country that the Roman Catholic Church has become numerically greater than all the Protestant families combined, and consequently is fast going to become the great national church of America—when that comes to pass, as it will be in a few decades, there will not be any gush about a religious war, but questions of peace, quality and denominational division will melt like the snow, and three various sects of Protestantism will wonder that they were not one long ago.

There is no other sign of Protestant Church union in the sky.

Westfield to Have a Ball Team.

Westfield is to have a ball team this year. The W. A. C. directors have appointed Charles N. Codding and W. J. Alpers, last year's managers, as a committee, to secure a team.

The season will probably open May 6th. John McLaughlin of North Plainfield will play this year, and Rice and Sansom of Westfield are also booked for positions. Games have already been arranged with a number of clubs and a series of four games with Somerville.

None of the towns that were interested in the old Central League will present professional teams this year, except the Crescents.

Colored People Fight at Round Brook.

There is a colored church in South Bound Brook where all the colored people of the vicinity congregate.

Sunday night, just after service was over, John Shipley and an unknown negro had an altercation. The unknown drew a razor and used it freely on Shipley, cutting him badly.

The rest of the crowd "jumped in" and a free fight ensued.

The fight was renewed at the Central station in Round Brook, but was stopped. No arrests were made.

Located on Lyman Avenue.

The lot given to the firemen to be raffled off, and the proceeds to go to Mrs. John E. Yose, is located on Lyman avenue, near the Evona station, and is 25 feet wide by 125 feet deep. The tickets are to be 25 each.

A Building on North Avenue Sold.

The brick building, No. 14 North avenue, was sold this afternoon to Benjamin F. Moore. The price paid was $6,500.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals ought to get after that Chicago chimney. It will try to make the lumberjacks of his Eskimo village lap themselves in sealskins during all the hot weather of the World's fair. If the established theological view is the correct one, the heat under which that showman makes his Eskimos sweltter is nothing to the torrid temperature he himself will be called on to endure one of these days.

The British house of lords cannot certainly last much longer. The rising tide of democracy will rise and overwhelm them. They have lately made themselves more than ever obnoxious to the people by voting down a bill providing that where there was no will children in Great Britain should share equally in the real estate of their parents. This would be a modified decree to destroy the right of primogeniture, which has lasted so many centuries in Great Britain. The eldest son would indeed have his title, but nothing to maintain his state. The house of lords evidently believe the dictum of the old colored preacher that "self preservation am de first law of nature."

A Happy Old Boy.

A correspondent of the New York Sun seems to be enjoying the Mexican old age. It is such an age as all mankind will enjoy, say, by the end of the twentieth century. It is an old age without physical pain or weakness and with all the mental powers at their best and with the spiritual joy of a mental which trusting faith in the world always gives to the right minded person. The correspondent alludes to the pope and Gladstone, both beyond 80, both doing an amount of work never exceeded in their best years. He mentions also Verdi, 79 years old, of whose latest opera, "Falstaff," the London Saturday Review says, "it is hard to believe that the new opera is not the work of an impetuous young man in the heyday of life." As to old age's being a burden, the correspondent remarks:

I do not find it so. It is to me the happiest period of my life that has been rich in happiness. It has been so because from it have been removed the cares of business. The mind is master of itself, and just as lively and vigorous as ever. The spirit seems to be quickened, the senses are preserved, the brain and hands are under the impulse of an energy that I have never known before, and which I have sought as a stick, and which has proved to be the instrument that it bore all its days. I have no knowledge of the sensation of weakness, and do not feel the infirmities of old age. I am in the heyday of youth. I have many companions of a similar age, and none of them who have lived so long, and enjoyed the blessings which could make life possible, beauty, peace, harmony, love, wine, a bucolic game and a magnificent Ride fountain to be just outlined, but the bond that carries me knows how to oblige. Constables tasteless and ungainly. The entertainment of one's friends is the pleasure of the play. To visit the fountain one need walk little more than a mile, and all the land are to me. Time was when I could not find satisfactory. Life is beauty; existence beautifully happiness in existence will be years.

The Florida Phosphate Boom.

"The boom is back. The bubble is inflated," writes Col. Hallen in The Cosmopolitan of the Florida phosphate excitement. While it lasted it was a serious only equaled by the gold fever of California or the earlier oil-well excitement in Florida itself. But it is over now, and Mr. Allen is glad of it. Thousands of speculators and some hundreds of bona fide people have been ruined, the price of phosphate rock has dropped to the Liverpool market from $23 to $12 a ton, yet now the bubble is dead Colonel Allen is glad of it. He is glad that those who invested to make—not sell—will be sure of their profits."

The bright side of the speculative fever remains to be judged from the fact that although the output from the Florida phosphate mines does not equal the demand, yet the price is going down steadily. "In this steady mastery rather than progress has been heard the sound of falling companies." The discovery of the plastic rock was made in Hardee county, Fla., in June, 1883. The land undoubtedly underlies a large portion of central and southwestern Florida. This substance is worth more than gold in some regions, for it will restore productiveness to exhausted soil. Crops take from the earth immense quantities of phosphatic rock. This the Florida soil does not contain. If the rock supplies a proper ratio of lime with the phosphate the speculative fever crop took off.

Fortunes were made and lost in phosphates, as in the gold regions. The Florida natives clearly call the rich rock "phosfate," and it has proved fat indeed to some of them. In Citrus county many were prospering. For a grand exodus to a rapidly developing region where fortunes were made. The phosphate rock is found in the poor pine lands. The Citrus county natives would have been glad to sell their farms for a dollar an acre. In a few weeks the mineral discovery made the poor land in some instances to $5 an acre. The natives sold their property, and had at one time more money than they ever expected to have all their lives. Some held themselves by drunk," as New Yorkers say. It is probable that more of these paupers per dollar are to be found in the country than in any other section. Many of them were suddenly made rich by "phosfate." One tried the experiment of trying to salt the surface of their land with the rock hauled from the mines. But the experienced prospector quickly detected the little game. Farmers are not alike in other people.

CABINET TALK OF GOLD.

The Shortage an Important Subject For Discussion.

MAY SURRENDER THE CHILIANS.

Gresham and the President Talked of Hawaiian Matters—To Dispossess 8,000 Negroes in James City—Two Weather Bureaus Will Be Reorganized.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The usual cabinet meeting will be held today. The financial policy of the administration and the effect on the treasury gold supply of the continued exports of gold will almost unquestionably be the main topic discussed.

Secretary Carlisle has been besieged to know what his views are and what he intends to do, but at this juncture he maintains silence and will not talk publicly or privately to any save a very few persons, whose confidence he can rely on. All appointments connected with the department an injunction of secrecy has been laid, so that it is extremely difficult to get any accurate information as to financial matters from the treasury department. Some time ago Mr. Carlisle intimated that his views were when the gold in the treasury was at about as low an ebb as at present.

He said then that he thought the gold exports would cease before a great while, and that if it became necessary he would use part of the gold reserve and replenish it by a bond issue if the treasury did not regain gold naturally. This probably indicates the secretary's present views. Should this bond issue have been prepared. It is understood that the president is more favorably inclined to a bond issue than in the secretary.

What the Bonds May Be.

If bonds be issued they will have to be 4 per cents. A premium will be asked on them, so as to make the net interest about 3½ per cent. The issue will be delivered to a syndicate of bankers probably for the reason that bankers can guarantee gold for them, whereas if it was a public issue open to general subscription greenbacks, silver or other money might be tendered. It is understood that the department now has under consideration the redemption of treasury notes issued under the silver law of 1890 in silver alone. It is believed that this would tend to ease the situation somewhat and aid in keeping gold in the treasury.

May Surrender the Refugees.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The secretary of state and the president have under review similar questions. The surrender to the Chilian government of the two Chilian refugees to whom Minister Egan granted an asylum in the legation building during the Balmaceda trouble. They are still domiciled within the precincts of the legation building. The president is awaiting some fuller information as to the charges against these two refugees before taking final action.

Some decided views are entertained on the subject by the president. The two refugees are charged with the crime of attempting to blow up the government buildings and the secretary believes that this is a political offense which could alone justify the interposition of the United States in this behalf. The custody of these two men has become quite a serious matter and there is no telling how long the present state of affairs might last if some decisive steps were not taken. Now that the revolution in Chili has ceased it is believed the refugees can be assured of safe treatment and trial under Chilian laws, while their surrender might restore better relations between the two republics.

To Dispossess Inhabitants of James City.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—A special from Raleigh, N. C., to the governor of this state will probably be compelled to call out the state guard to dispossess 8,000 negroes, who are squatted on land which the county courts have decided to belong to a white man, and who refuse to submit to legal process. When the federal authorities captured Newberne during the war they located most of the negroes out of the town into a tract of land opposite it belonging to James A. Bryan. The negroes have continued to squat there ever since. And it is now known as James City. The population of this black village is 8,000. The supreme court after long litigation sustained Bryan's right to the lands. The negroes refuse to pay even nominal rents and have risen en masse against the civil officers who attempted to eject them.

The President's Busy Day.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Monday is the one day in the week the president reserves exclusively to himself, and the fact has become so well known that the most unpunctilious office seekers stay away from the White House on that day. The president saw a few cabinet officers and hardly any other persons, except Senators Gorman and Gray. The president spent most of the day going carefully over applications for pardon.

Secretary Gresham had an extended conference with the president. Hawaiian affairs and the Chilian refugee question are understood to have been the topics under consideration.

No Boat For the Commissioners.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The World's fair commissioners who desire to attend the naval review in a government boat will have to look elsewhere than the treasury department for such accommodations. Secretary Carlisle has informed them that there is no boat at the disposition of the department that is available for the purpose desired.

To Reorganize the Weather Bureau.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The weather bureau of the government in this city will be thoroughly reorganized before long as a result of the investigation made by Assistant Attorney General Colby into charges made against the bureau.

Death of Carl Schurz's Comrade.

ROCHESTER, April 18.—George Arnoldi, a soldier of Richmond for 48 years, died here, aged 73 years. He with Carl Schurz, Frederick Hecker and Fred Knapp fled to Germany in 1850 after the downfall of the revolution, which they led there.

STRUCK ALL ALONG THE LINE.

Resolutions of the Union Pacific Leave the Shops From Omaha to Portland.

DENVER, April 18.—The threatened strike of the machinists, boiler makers and blacksmiths employed in the Union Pacific shops did not occur. The men are in the dark in regard to the cause of the trouble and a committee was sent to Omaha to straighten things out. It is probable that no definite movement will be made until the committee's report is received.

At Laramie, Wyo., about 30 men quit work. They are all members of the Federation of Machinists, Boiler Makers, Molders and Pattern Makers, a trades organization for strike purposes.

At Cheyenne, Wyo., 68 machinists and boiler makers went out according to the orders received from Omaha. The blacksmiths and men employed in other departments remained at work. The men who struck have no local grievances, but went out through sympathy.

At Salt Lake, Utah, 50 boiler makers, machinists and blacksmiths out of a force of 200 employed went out at noon. Half of the strikers are nonunion men and it is claimed will not strike today. Advices received at the Salt Lake Union Pacific headquarters report that the strike is general over the system and extends to Butte, Utah on the Northern, to Portland along the Oregon short line and to Cheyenne along the line in Wyoming.

At Salt Lake City 500 machinists and helpers at the Union Pacific shops at this place and about 50 at North Platte struck under orders of the Federation of Machinists' Union, because the company has refused to sign an agreement to make more binding an agreement signed eight months ago, providing a plan for the mediation of differences and eight hours. The Knights of Labor posted a notice calling on its members to stay by the company, but its effect is not apparent save in preventing sympathetic strikes.

New York's Naval Review.

NEW YORK, April 18.—At a meeting of the executive committee of 100 it was announced that the Massachusetts Naval brigade of 500 men, accompanied by Governor Russell, would attend the above parade on April 28. General Josiah Porter could not say whether President Cleveland would attend the ball. He would come here on the evening of April 28 and leave for Chicago on the morning of April 29. Mayor Gilroy announced that the tickets for the ball would be sold at $10 each, with $5 for each ticket admitting an extra lady. The number of admissions would be limited to 4,000.

A Fleecent Iceland Winter.

BOSTON, April 18.—A letter received at Gloucester, dated at Dyrsjoeln, Iceland, from Captain Andrew McKenzie, of the schooner Maggie F. McKenzie, the first American vessel of the season to put in there, reports that the winter in Iceland has been very pleasant. There was no frost in December, January or February, and all the cold weather came in between March 11 and March 20. The coldest weather experienced was 12 degrees above zero.

FIGHTING IN BRUSSELS.

The Civic Guard Fired on a Mob With Deadly Effect.

THE ENTIRE MILITIA CALLED OUT.

Many Soldiers Were Sent to the Hospitals. The Aristocracy Anxious For Concessions to Be Made to the People—Fight With Strikers In the Streets of Antwerp.

BRUSSELS, April 18.—The dynamite explosion at Mons seems to have acted as an incentive to the strikers to commit further outrages. The strikers filled the drinking places and indulged in all manner of threats against the government, and as the day wore on they became emboldened and determined to take possession of the town for a labor procession.

The government has issued a decree calling out all the militia for the defense of the state. This means the mobilization of about 45,000 troops against the workingmen.

Their intentions were known to the authorities, who have many spies among the workmen, and when the mob, singing "Carmagnole" and the "Marseillaise," attempted to march through the streets, they were met by a strong detachment of the civic guard. The usual order was given for the strikers to disperse, but no attention was paid to it by the strikers. Hooting and yelling they attempted to march on, when the order was given for the civic guard to prepare to fire. The mob defied the guards to fire upon them and threw heavy stones, bottles and other missiles at them. The guard fired upon the crowd, but this did not effect their dispersal. On the contrary, it only infuriated them and a charge en masse was made upon the guard.

A Desperate Hand to Hand Conflict.

A desperate hand to hand conflict ensued. The main body of the strikers was broken up, but groups of struggling men could be seen in the side streets leading from the main thoroughfare.

The battle was long and bitterly contested, but finally the civic guard were victorious. It is believed that four of the miners were killed. Many of the rioters were wounded and a number were taken to the hospital. Fifteen soldiers were wounded. Three will not recover. They were removed to the hospital, where there antemortem statements were taken for the public prosecutor.

The Dead Line Drawn.

Extraordinary military measures will be adopted today to preserve order in this city. Strong re-enforcements of chasseurs and carabineers arrived on every train. All officers have received a city map on which is marked a neutral zone from which the crowds are to be excluded. In this zone the palaces of the nation, where parliament meets, all the ministerial bureaux and the royal palace.

It is understood that the premier has proposed to the king that parliament be dissolved and a general election be held. Jansen, the Red cal leader in the chamber, is said to have demanded an audience with the king.

The anxiety is intense. The news from Mons and Antwerp has stricken the more progressive members of the chamber with a general tendency to make the deputies to decide speedily the question of suffrage and grant the bill bearing of concessions to the popular demand.

Barricades at Antwerp.

ANTWERP, April 18.—The situation grows more threatening hourly from noon. The strikers gathered repeatedly in large crowds throughout the northern district before Schiller Park. As often the police dispersed them they run mound hundreds more to their aid and reassembled. Shortly after 3 a squad of police, riding with drawn swords against the workingmen, were overwhelmed with showers of stones and timbers.

The police rested in confusion. While the reserves were being summoned the strikers threw up barricades in the side streets. Women and children hastened from the houses with firearms. When another squadron of police, supported by a detachment of the civic guard, tried half an hour later to drive back the mob they were met with volleys from the revolvers and rifles of the men behind the barricades.

Many of the soldiers were wounded and were removed to the hospital. More military were summoned and after two charges carried the barricades. The strikers retreated firing, gathered in the northern district and the fighting is expected

Riots at Belgrade.

BUCHAREST, April 18.—Hundreds of workingmen and their wives made a demonstration before the parliament building against the increase of taxation. The minister of public works was attacked as he rode from the chamber, stones were thrown for might the carriage windows, and three men tried to drag him into the street. Several policemen were injured with stones while trying to protect the minister. A squadron of cavalry, which was sent to aid the police, rescued the minister and cleared the open space before the building. Two cavalrymen were knocked from their horses with stones. Half a dozen rioters were arrested.

Public Meetings Prohibited.

ERZERUM, April 18.—The governor of the province of Erzerum, in which this city is situated, has instructed the governors of cities and towns within his administrative district that they must prohibit all public demonstration for universal suffrage

FASTEST OF HER CLASS

The Detroit Develops Great Speed on the Trial Trip.

SHE IS A NINETEEN KNOT WONDER.

The Test Was Made on Long Island Sound With the Best of Conditions—She Can Beat Any Boat of Her Class In the World. One Mile In 3 Minutes and 12 Seconds.

NEW LONDON, Conn., April 18.—The new cruiser Detroit is a grand success. During her final run on Long Island sound she developed an average speed of 18 42-100 knots an hour. To this the additions and deductions in consequence of the tide will be made by naval officers, and it is safe to say that a speed of 19 knots was maintained. Having made this record the Detroit bears the distinction of being the fastest of her class in the world.

The contract calls for 17 knots an hour, and having developed 19 the Columbian Iron Works and Dry Dock company of Baltimore, the builders, will receive a premium of $900,000, which will be the largest premium ever paid by any government upon the completion of a vessel.

The cruiser was steamed from New London harbor at 8:15 in the morning The gigs and whaleboats were hauled on deck, the ventilator caps were taken off and everything possible was removed which would offer the slightest resistance when the cruiser began her final run.

When the starting point was reached the steam gauges showed a pressure of 163 pounds, and the Detroit crossed the line with Captain Thomas Lewis at the helm.

With Six Minutes to Spare.

The course is from a point 2 55 nautical miles south of Stratford Shoal lighthouse to the intersection of the Reybrook range with line joining Faulkner island and Plum island lighthouses. The course is 35.98 nautical miles long, and the entire run of 71.96 miles was made in 3 hours 24 minutes 48 seconds. The time allowed by the government was 4 hours. Therefore when the finishing point was reached the Detroit had 6 minutes and 12 seconds to spare, which was greatly to her credit.

During the run the average time for a mile was 3 minutes 21 seconds. The fastest time was made in 3 minutes 4 seconds, which was the first mile run after the Detroit turned of Stratford shoal. The run could not have been made under more favorable conditions. A slight breeze was blowing from the northeast, and the tide was beginning to ebb when the course was reached. Naval Constructor Foster pronounced the mean draft of the vessel 14 feet 6 inches, and further stated that she was beautifully ballasted. Admiral Belknap leaned orders prohibiting any except the officers on duty from going forward of the poop deck.

A Beautiful Sight.

Like a huge white racer the beautifully modeled cruiser began her run. She went through the water with ease and the vibration was very slight. The officers of the board stated that her motions in this respect were wonderful considering the high rate of speed. The engines fully developed the 5,400 horse power for which they were designated. The steam pressure was maintained throughout the run at 163 pounds with the throttles wide open, and the efficiency and safety of the boilers were thoroughly demonstrated.

No accidents of consequence occurred during the trial beyond the bursting of one auxiliary exhaust pipe in the starboard engine room, which did no damage and did not in any way retard the workings of the engines. After the run was completed Admiral Belknap grasped President Malster's hand and congratulated him on the Detroit's actions.

The Engineer Jumped and Was Killed.

CANANDAIGUA Depot, April 18.—Train No. 13, the fast mail on the Auburn road, which is due in Rochester at 5:40 p. m., loaded with passengers taken from the Empire State express at Syracuse, ran into an open switch at Shortsville and crashed into a line of freight cars. Engineer John McMannis of Rochester applied the air brakes, reversed the engine and jumped from the cab just before the crash came. His head struck a projection on the mail car and he was instantly killed. Clarence Aldrich was the fireman and he remained in the cab, crouching close behind the boiler, and escaped with no serious injuries. None of the passengers were hurt.

As Viewed In England.

LONDON, April 18.—In a leader concerning the case of Judge Ricks in the case of the Ann Arbor boycott, The Daily Chronicle says: The Toledo decision gives a great stimulus to railway nationalization. The American railway monopolists, anxious to escape the Scylla of workingmen's dictation, have fallen into the Charybdis of public control, for the decision can be defended only on the principle that the railways are practically public property

Waiting to Compromise.

NEW YORK, April 18.—The locked out clothing cutters have not yet been served with the injunction papers said to have been issued by Judge Barrett forbidding them to issue boycotting circulars against Sinsheimer, Levinson & Co. The reason that the injunction papers had not been served was because the manufacturers had hoped to be able to effect a compromise with the men.

Fighting In Honduras.

NEW ORLEANS, April 18.—Advices from Honduras confirm the report of the success of the rebels. A SHORT, HOT FIGHT.

It Took Less Than Three Minutes For Smith to Knock Out the Australian.

CONEY ISLAND, April 18.—The Smith-Williams prize fight was short and hot.

Tom Williams of Australia was looked after by Warren Lewis of New York and Tom Burrows and Arthur Walter, both of Australia. Mysterious Billy Smith of Boston was seconded by Alex Greggains of San Francisco and Billy Penrose and Jimmy Kelly, also of the same place.

The fighting was unquestionably fast and furious. Both men stood up like stone walls and gave and took without the slightest presentions of trying to avoid a single blow Williams was his clog down sever al times before he received the knockout blow Each time he came up gamely, but showed greater signs of it time.

Smith, too, was quite modeady on his feet, even when he planted the final blow with his right on the point of Williams' jaw. Time, 2 minutes, 35 seconds.

The crowd arose and shouted like a pack of fiends. "Smith, Smith!" they yelled. Some of the spectators, who had evidently bet on Smith, took chairs and began dancing in the aisles. Williams was a much used up man, while Smith was little better.

A Compromise to Be Offered.

LONDON, April 18.—A compromise proposal concerning the Hull strike has been drafted by A. J. Mundella, president of the board of trade; Charles Wilson, M. P., one of the owners of the Wilson line; Joseph Havelock Wilson, M. P., president of the Sailors' and Firemen's union, and Mr. John Burns. After a prolonged conference the proposal was signed by all four with the understanding that it should be submitted to the unions and the Shipowners' federation. It is believed that the proposal will be acceptable to both employers and employed, and that further trouble will be prevented by it.

Poisoned by Ice Cream.

NEW ORLEANS, April 18.—Richard Denis and his family of nine children, R. G. Flaspoller and his family of four, neighbors, bought each a small quantity of ice cream from a wagon, and an hour later were writhing in horrible agony. All but Mrs. Perez, Mrs. Denis' mother, are out of danger.

THE CLEVELAND ROLL.

Are Bangs Doomed to Retirement?—A Hard Matter to Decide.

It is a fateful day for bangs. They are trembling in the balance, so to speak. And they have not yet decided whether to turn backward or forward.

THE ROLL.

The majority of the cabinet women, headed by Mrs. Cleveland, wear their hair roundly back in what is designated this year by the hairdressers as the Cleveland roll. To accomplish it the side hair and the erstwhile bang are curled fastidiously. All is then combed over back and drawn into the general knot. The loose front hair, if too long to stay back of its own accord, is fastened back, and there with small hairpins with heads set with turquoise—the fashionable spring gem. The hair is fluffed a little around the face with the hands to give the roll effect. The beautiful Miss Herbert has of late pinned loosely back the luxurious bangs of which she is possessed.

But, while this balolike style of hairdressing is generally becoming to faces in a drawing room, it is very trying when worn with a hat. Only small beaver or people with exceptional taste in millinery can do it.

Take the butterfly hat, for instance, which, coming toward you, looks like a butterfly or bird with small, outstretched wings. A hat like this cries out for a fluffy cushion upon which to rest, and so, in spite of the popularity of the Cleveland roll, there still survives a becoming curly coiffure known as the simone. The curls are curled at the sides and front. The front is pulled down in curls, making distinct curves on the forehead, and the sides are brushed back. Over the ears the side curls are clipped to show the curl.

The Queen's Cousin Writes.

DENVER, April 18.—Henry C. Carter, a cousin of Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii, writes a Denver paper from Honolulu: "There is no patriotism in the Hawaiian revolution. The only people who have had no hand in it are the Hawaiians. The whole movement is the result of a 6-months-old plot conceived in Kalaka'ua's time, and awaiting the favoring moment for carrying out in the words of a Kanakuk sugar ranch officer as he pointed to the sugar cane, 'There is the whole question.'"

Mrs. Mayberick Tried Suicide.

LONDON, April 18.—A report has been circulated and generally credited in Woking that Mrs. Florence Maybrick tried to kill herself in the Woking prison on Saturday She is said to have stabbed herself severely in the throat and chest with a table knife, which was taken from her barely in time to save her from inflicting mortal wounds.

Peanut Roaster Explodes.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 18.—A steam peanut roaster exploded, sending the machinery crashing through the heavy plate glass window of the store. The proprietor, who stood behind the window, was showered with the flying glass, and his face was slashed with seven deep cuts. Passers by were more or less seriously cut by flying glass.

Scalded to Death.

WACO, April 18.—A cattle train on the Atchison and Arkansas Pass railroad ran into an empty train. The cattle train engine was completely wrecked, and Fireman Smith was caught in the ruins and scalded to death. Engineer Browning was scalded, had his left arm broken and received internal injuries.

Zante Shaken Again.

ATHENS, April 18.—Two more heavy earthquake shocks have shaken the whole island of Zante. The people are fleeing from all the towns to find safety on the plains and hillsides. All are terror stricken. Thousands are without shelter and few have sufficient food.

Married to Escape Debts.

LIMA, April 18.—A lot of colored men imported to work on the Ohio Southern railroad were threatened with garnishment. They found that under the Ohio laws if a man can not be garnisheed, and 19 of them were married under one ceremony.

MOURNING FASHIONS.

EVEN WIDOWS HAVE ESCAPED THE TYRRANY OF CRAPE.

What Fashion Decrees For Costumes, Bonnets and Materials Used in Mourning Outfits, With All the Other Little Touches For Which Women Are Noted.

It is a grave religious and philosophic question whether we who believe that all things are ordered for our good have any right to put on the habiliments of woe. But fashion ordains mourning dress, and her followers must wear it. One of the best arguments in favor of the custom is its protection against thoughtless remarks. Seeing a friend in mourning, one understands the case at once and guards against questions and allusions which might give pain.

Mourning is neither so deep nor worn for so long a time as formerly. The tyranny of crape is over, and unless she chooses even a widow may mourn without it. Physicians so utterly condemn crape veils as inimical to health and eyesight that now in this country they are in nearly every case replaced by nun's veiling, a soft, pretty material, which costs less than crape and lasts three times as long. Even that is hurtful to the eyes, and if the face must be covered it should be done with a bit of plain brussel's net or illusion.

For first mourning plain lusterless goods, like henrietta cloth or bombazine, should be used. In the second stage, or what some witty writer has called the condition of mitigated affliction, woolens and lusterless silks can be worn, and by way of trimming the dull finished jet can be used.

The length of time for which mourning should be worn is not really arbitrary.

FASHIONABLE MOURNING.

but two years is the term usually considered proper for a widow to wear black, although there are women who for reasons best known to themselves keep it on for the remainder of their lives. For a parent it should also be worn two years; for a sister or brother, one year or longer; for other relatives, a lesser time, according to the action in the matter of other members of the family.

The street dress illustrated is a combination of plain henrietta cloth and heavy crape cloth. The sleeves and skirt trimmings are of crape cloth, the small pelerine and cuffs of coque feathers.

The two styles of mourning bonnets illustrate the graceful disposition of the veils. Clasps or pins for holding the veils in position are found in dull jet and in the jet composition which imitates crape.

Housemade Candy.

Butter Scotch—Boil a cupful of sugar, a cupful of molasses, half a cup of butter, a tablespoonful of vinegar and one-fourth teaspoonful of soda. Stir frequently and as soon as the syrup will snap between the teeth after being dipped in cold water remove from the fire and flavor to taste. Pour upon a buttered tin one-fourth of an inch thick and when nearly cold mark off in strips or squares and wrap in paraffin paper. This is excellent.

Lemon Drops—Boil a pound of sugar, a cupful of water and one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar until a little dipped into cold water will snap between the teeth without a suspicion of stickiness. Remove from the fire and add tartaric acid to the taste and flavor highly with the oil or essence of lemon; oil is preferable if obtainable. Drop the candy from a spoon upon buttered tins to form drops or pour into an oiled pan and mark off in squares.

Old Fashioned Molasses Candy—Pour into a large kettle a quart of molasses; boil for one-half hour over slow fire, stirring to prevent it from boiling over. When a little dropped in water becomes brittle, add one-half teaspoonful soda, stir quickly and pour out to cool; turn in the edges as they cool, and when cool enough to handle pull until it becomes a golden color.

These last three recipes make candies that grow very sticky if exposed to the air after the syrup is cold, but which will keep indefinitely if put in glass jars or tin boxes, with tops securely fastened to exclude the air.

An oiled cloth wiped around the edge of a kettle in which syrup is boiling, making an oily streak just below the rim, will prevent its boiling over, and must be looked to in candies which cannot be stirred.

Sentimental Girls.

An idea which will commend itself to many, because a little uncommon, is to choose some suitable device and to embroider it as a sign or mark, instead of the usual initial or monograms on table

HANDKERCHIEF CORNERS.

linen and bedding for the thousand. Girls with flower names, as Lillie, Daisy, Marguerite, can work a tiny spray of their particular symbol in one corner of all their handkerchiefs in the style of those in illustration. A secondary advantage of these designs is that they are somewhat simpler for an inexperienced needle woman to manage than the letters, which are not very easy for a beginner to render with the necessary accuracy and evenness.

Not Everlasting.

Do not expect everlasting wear out of any umbrella, no matter of what cost and in the next place treat it well if you wish long service. It looks neater to carry it furled on the street, but it should be unfastened and shaken out when not in use to prevent the folds from splitting. An occasional coat of varnish over the ferrule and will save it from looking shabby, as the tick will get marred there. When wet, dry partially with the umbrella closed and resting with the handle down. Clean a black umbrella, when spotted with mud, with ammonia and water.

Needle Books.

New needle books for dainty workbaskets have the covers of white or colored kid or leather. They are circular in shape and embroidered with gold thread and cord or with embroidery silk. The design upon the covers is often a large flower outlined or in long and short stitch. The edges have a cord of rope silk or gold or are buttonholed with the deep stitches set far apart. The usual flannel leaves are inside the covers, which are lined with silk. Other books for needles are made upon the forms of Hague dolls having heads about the size of an English walnut and outstretched arms. The upper part of the body is fitted with a simple waist of satin ribbon about 2 inches wide, and two long pieces of the ribbon are continued to form the skirt.

The ribbons are not sewed together at the sides, and beneath them are half a dozen flannel leaves of the same length and a little narrower. The flannel leaves are buttonhole stitched to finish the edges.

A Word on Hats.

Of hats there are so many different shapes, it is difficult to tell which will prevail. They are certainly smaller than those of last summer, but while some have a straight narrow border, others have comparatively wide and fancifully twisted in and out brims. Birds, wings and feather aigrets, combined with large bows of ribbon, are the styles of trimming most in favor. As for capotes, they remain quite small, but are trimmed very high en panache.

Tomato Soup.

This is a capital soup if made exactly according to recipe. Take one quart can of tomatoes. Put them in a stewpan, with one pint of water. Put in the frying pan one generous tablespoonful of butter, and when a rich brown add an onion cut in fine slices. When the onion is colored, stir into the butter one tablespoonful of flour. Add then the tomatoes, a tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt and pepper to taste. Put all on the fire and boil slowly for half an hour. Color with a little browned sugar, and strain. Before sending to the table cut some bread, not too fresh, in small, square pieces, fry them in hot lard and then add one minute before serving.

GOING TO THE FAIR.

How a Cynic Proposes to Enjoy Himself Through the Papers.

"If you see any good articles on the World's fair" said the cynic, "or hear of any good exhibits around here which are going to be sent there, just let me know about them, please."

"Much interested in the fair?" asked the other.

"Very much," he answered dryly.

"Going to study it all up before you go, so that you can see and examine things intelligently?"

"Exactly."

"Aren't you afraid it will detract from your pleasure?"

"Not in the slightest."

"Don't you think that half the pleasure of such things consists in the anticipation and the other half in the surprise, the novelty of the thing?"

"Not a bit."

"So you are grinding up on it already, as we used to say in college when we were getting ready for examination."

"Yes, sir, that's what I'm doing. If there is anything about the buildings there that I don't know, I'd like to hear about it. I can tell you the square feet in every one of them. I have studied all the maps and diagrams of the grounds and can redraw all the buildings for you. I know where every state is going to be and who made it and what it is supposed to represent. I can describe all the facades, all the friezes, the entablatures, the columns and all the other architectural features.

"I am an expert regarding the marbles and the bronzework. I can give you all the measurements of the silver statue. I know what and who are going to be in the German, the Swiss, the Russian and the Swedish villages. I have taken account of every one of the exhibits that has come from Spain. I have a carefully prepared list of the exhibit from the Vatican. I am familiar with the collections of armor which have come from the foreign nations for the fair. I know all about the jewels which are going to be shown there. I can even tell you where the best and refreshment counters will be on the grounds."

"Well," said the other, "you are an enthusiast. I suppose that a man who is so interested as you in the fair will be in Jerusalem all summer at the big show. You certainly have made a good start."

"I flatter myself that I am doing pretty well," said the World's fair expert.

"And you are still hungry for more knowledge?"

"Want every bit I can get."

"When do you expect to go to the fair?"

"My dear friend, were you ever in Chicago in the summer?"

"Yes, I've been there."

"Were you ever in a hotter place?"

"It is pretty warm sometimes. Oh, I see you aren't going till fall, so you want to be able to go through the whole business in short order—say in a couple of weeks in October, when it's cool and pleasant."

"Pleasant, eh! Don't you know that everybody will go to the fall to miss the hot weather? Were you ever in a Chicago crowd? Do you think I want to be torn to pieces? Do you think I want to stay at a hotel where they will sleep 60 in a room? Do you think I want to stand around a dining room for three hours waiting for a chance to get a seat at a table? Do you think I am going to get up at 5 o'clock in the morning to get room on a street car when I went to go anywhere? Do you think I want to engage cabs six months in advance at $125 a day? Go in the fall? I guess not."

"Of course I see. Going in the spring?"

"Going in the spring!" howled the New York man. "Going in the spring when Chicago is a breeding place for malaria and typhus fever, when a man's life is in danger every time he fills his lungs with Chicago air, when life wouldn't be worth living under any circumstances? Not exactly this spring."

"Well, when are you going then?"

"When am I going? Do you know how I'm going to the World's fair? About the 1st of July I'm going to start for the fair; only I'm going to a quiet place on the seashore. I'm going to swim, fish, and take life easy. I'm going to read the papers once in awhile, just to see how people out there in Chicago are suffering. I am going to gain 45 pounds. About Sept. 1 I'm coming home fat and contented to gloat over the miserable wrecks that have got back from Chicago. I am going to tell them how I enjoyed the fair. I'll know all about it—more than they will know. I'll declare the fair was a perfect success. Nobody will ever know that I was not there. I'll be in good health and about $1,000 in pocket. That's the way I'm going to the fair. And as for patriotism—well, that's the kind of a patriot I am."—New York Tribune.

A Bee Story.

An Irish landlord appointed a day to receive his tenantry, and the agent presented each one to his principal, who inquired into the condition of the unfortunate ailing and diseased recipients of his favors. Things went on pretty smoothly, until at length a tenant presented himself whom the agent declared was in a bad way, and he had turned to the figure before him, which, with face and head swollen out of all proportions awaited him with sullen silence.

"Who are you, my good man? What has happened to you?"

"Faix, and it's well you may ask. My own mother wouldn't know me this blessed mornin. 'Tis all your own doin entirely."

"My doing!" replied the astonished landlord. "What can I have to do with the state you are in, my good man?"

"Yes, it is your doin, an ye may well be proud of it. 'Twas them blessed bees yer gev me. We brought the divils into the house the night, an we had a fine time but in the pig's corner. Well, after Kitty an the childer an meself was awhile in bid, the pig goes rootin about the house, an it wasn't easy till he found his nose in the hive an spilt the bees out about the flure. An then when I got out of bid to let out the pig Casey was a-runnin through the house the bees settled down on me an began sting in me, an I jumped into bid again, wid the whole of them after me, to Kitty an the childer. An thin, what wid the bees a-buzzin an a-stingin us under the clothes, out we all jumped agin, an the divil sorch a night was ever spint in Ireland as we spint last night, what wid Kitty an the childer a-roarin an a-bawlin, an the pig tarin up an down like mad. An Kitty wid the besom at meself wid the fryin pan flattenin the bees ag'in the wall till mornin! An thin the night we wor in the mornin! Begorra, it's ashamed of yourself ye ought to be!"—Dublin Journal.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

BREVITIES.

—An exchange says: "Umbrella manufacturers are making a large-sized article for the crinoline girl."

—A ten-mile road race will be held on June 10, open to wheelmen of Union county. A lot at Lorraine will be one of the prizes offered.

—The price of seats in Music Hall, Saturday night, will be the same as usual, except in the front orchestra rows—$1, and the box chairs at $1.50.

—Sprinkle salt around the edges under the carpet if you would keep rid of moth. They will not go where there is salt, says an old housekeeper.

—A boarding-house keeper, in an advertisement has "Plain boarders wanted." The presumption that lack of beauty and lack of appetite go together, would seem to be a firm belief there.

—The opening of the World's Fair at Chicago is fixed for May 1, and it is said that everything will be in readiness. President Cleveland is to press the button and Chicago is to do the rest.

—Those who have watched results say that a wet April brings a dry June, but a dry April brings both a wet June and a wet Summer. Judging from the April weather so far June should be very fair.

—The next holiday will be Decoration Day. It falls on Tuesday, May 30. Both Grand Army Posts will, as usual, perform the sad ceremony of strewing flowers upon the graves of an increasing number of comrades.

—The people of Lorraine and Aldene are making strenuous efforts to have First avenue opened and paved. If this is accomplished there will then be a continuous road from Plainfield to Newark without a railroad grade crossing.

—An anti-race-track meeting was held Monday night in Westfield. The purpose of the assembly was to organize and to lay out a plan of action to fight the race-track evil by educating the people as to its effect on the morals of the people of this country.

—It is reported that the Jennings homestead, corner of Park avenue and Central avenue, bought a few months ago by Mr. James W. Jackson of Crescent avenue, has been sold to New York parties who are to erect a five story brick building for stores on the plan of R. H. Macy & Co's. The report could not be verified.

—Our Strategists" at Music Hall, to morrow evening, is said to be better than "Mixed Pickles" by the same author, and no lover of farce comedy should miss seeing the "Gilberts." The popular demand required them to put on at three times last Winter in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, and each time to crowded houses. There will be no advance of prices.

Rev. Mr. Newell Elected Moderator.

Rev. Mr. Newell of this city, was elected Moderator at yesterday's session of the Elizabeth Presbytery.

The Presbytery re-elected Rev. S. Parry as stated clerk, and Rev. John T. Kerr as permanent clerk.

Rev. B. F. Billington, D.D., of Washington, D. C., was elected a corresponding member of the Presbytery.

In the evening at 7.45 o'clock a popular meeting was held, addressed by Rev. Dr. Richards, of Crescent avenue church, Plainfield, and Rev. Dr. Spinings, of the Phillips church, New York. Dr. Richards spoke on Foreign Missions, and Dr. Spinings in the interest of the Home Board.

To Send Exhibits to the Press Club Fair.

The Camera Club met last night in their rooms over the post office. The president appointed a committee consisting of Messrs. A. W. Rand, J. H. Doane and C. Gotheil to secure an exhibit of three frames of the members work to send to the New York Press Club fair.

The exhibition committee reported that the following classes would be exhibited at the club's exhibit, in the new rooms, next Fall. Landscape and marine, figure studies, including portraiture, architecture, interior and camera work; animals, flash light work, transparency and composition.

Worsted in a Horse Trade.

In 1889 a livery stable keeper named Allen in Orange traded horses with a man named Tinson, who agreed to pay $225 to boot, provided the horse which was lame, became sound. The horse continued lame, and Tinson refused to pay the balance claimed. Suit was thereupon brought in the Somerset County Court, and the case was tried yesterday, Hon. Alva Clark appearing for complainant. The jury retired about four o'clock in the afternoon, and after wrangling over the case for nearly six hours, it was decided that they could not agree, and they were discharged last night at ten o'clock.

North Plainfield Licenses.—Where is This Thing Going to Stop?

North Plainfield licenses were granted yesterday, at Somerville, to Mr. Demler of the "notch," and also to Mr. Blatz old hotel at Greenbrook road and Somerset street.

Samuel Allen applied for a license for his "farm" on Mountain avenue. That was laid over till Saturday.

License was also asked for the Searing Summer hotel in the mountain.

A Brakeman Injured.

Richard Harding, a brakeman, while coupling cars to-day at the freight depot, was caught between the "bumpers."

One of his hips was badly injured. He was taken to his home.

HOLY CROSS CHOIR ENTERTAINMENT.

The Chapel Filled with a Delighted Audience.

The Holy Cross choir entertainment took place last night in the chapel.

Miss Etta Ravbert was unable to be present, and at the last moment, Mayor Saunders of North Plainfield consented to take her place. He was, as usual, most entertaining. He related, his experience in a balloon. In 1870, he formed one of a party of nine, who started from the Centennial grounds in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, and made the first and only trip ever taken in a balloon from Philadelphia to New York. They were above the clouds from four o'clock in afternoon until nine the next morning. Some of the experiences met with were both exciting and amusing, especially as told by the Mayor.

All the other artists were very good and added much to the success of the evening.

The chapel was filled and the audience showed their appreciation of the different features of the programme by hearty applause.

The programme was arranged by Mr. Milner, who has charge of the Boys' choir of the church, and who is also to lead the "Old Folks Concert," which is to be repeated in the M. E. church next Tuesday evening.

The following interesting programme was given in the chapel of the Holy Cross church last evening:

PRESIDENT MURRAY ATTENDED.

Semi-Annual Meeting of the Madison Y. M. C. A.

There was a large attendance in Association Hall, Madison, Sunday night, at the semi annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association of that place. The reports of the various committees showed the association to be in a promising condition. The attendance at the Sunday devotional meetings for the past six months was 1,331, an increase of 279 over the corresponding period of last year. A similar increase was reported by the reading room and library committee, while the treasurer congratulated the association on its financial prosperity and encouraging outlook. W. D. Murray, of Plainfield, gave an educational lecture on Japan. Mrs. A. Courson sang several selections to the piano accompaniment of Mrs. E. P. Holden. A handsome amount was collected in aid of the Christian boarding-house in Tokio, Japan, which is conducted under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. of that far distant city.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Ross of Grant avenue returned home from Atlantic City yesterday.

The eight-months old baby of Mrs. John E. Rose died yesterday afternoon of diphtheria. Mrs. Rose is reported better.

The wife of Walter E. Smith of Dunellen, Sunday night, presented her husband with a daughter. Mother and child are doing well.

Mrs. David Krymer of Annandale has returned home after a pleasant visit with Mr. and Mrs. John H. Krymer of West Second street.

Miss Alice G. Spangenberg of Netherwood will speak at the East Third street mission on Sundry evening, April 23, at 6.45, on the subject of Christian Endeavor. It is proposed to establish a Society at the mission on the same evening. A cordial welcome is extended to all.

Music Hall Notes.

Magician Hermann, the wonder and delight of young folks and an ever-popular amuser of the people will appear at Music Hall next Saturday night. Hermann is without a rival in his line of entertainment, and those who like to be made to believe that they know is impossible and to have their sense of sight contradict their common sense, will find an evening spent under the magic influence of the conjurer's wand a very pleasant one.

The programme includes "Yakoyo", spirit seance Tararaboomdeay done to death, slave girl's dream and other features.

Cock Fight on Mountain Avenue.

On Mountain avenue, last night, a cocking main took place between Netherwood and Fanwood birds. Two battles were fought, for $50 a battle. The Netherwood birds won them both.

'HOME AGAINST SALOON'

THE SUBJECT OF MRS. LATHROP'S ADDRESS LAST EVENING.

The Trinity Reformed Church Well Filled to Hear an Interesting and Instructive Talk Given Under the Auspices of the Plainfield W.C.T.U.

Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop, President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Michigan addressed a large audience in the Trinity Reformed church, on "Home Against the Saloon," last evening.

She was introduced by Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, president of the Plainfield Union.

Mrs. Lathrop gave a very interesting talk. She said:

"The conclusion that we have come to is that the only way to fight the saloon question is in politics. The place to stop making our young men victims of the saloons is at the ballot box. Christianity and philanthrophy have been tried, and, with all due respect to the church, for it has done much in this line, we find that the saloons are daily on the increase, and that they are remaining to put down this iniquity is through politics. Men must be elected to our Legislatures who stand against the saloon, and as they Legislate laws to put down the saloon, then men and women may be released from the bondage of drunkenness.

How can the church reach this class of men when the majority of them are prowling around after rum wells divine services are being held in His sanctuaries. We shall never be in ignorance again about men's appetite for drink, for God has selected men that have been down in the lowest grades of sin and drunkenness.

"What do you propose to do about it?" This is a question that has been ringing in the ears of the people for years and years. Four millions of people have quailed before it. Our Sabbath has been desecrated by this saloon curse, and now "What do you propose to do about it?" The church has lost its grip on men. At our prayer meetings and will seen three or four women to one man.

Labor and capital have been agitated by this question, but we shall mourn and mourn and keep on mourning until the ballot box says what the church preaches. The difference between men at church and these same men when they go to the polls to vote, is as great as the difference between heaven and earth. They pray to God, when attending worship, to abolish this great evil of the saloons, and go the next day and vote to put the saloon men in power. This disgusts the men who would try to do better if these places were not voted to be open by church members.

"Men of Plainfield, you have two consciences. One is refined and in favor of all that is pure and holy, while the other is that of the politician and conforms to all that is unrighteous and vile. One is for God's kingdom and the other for the devil's.

Look back to the time of the landing of the Pilgrim fathers at Plymouth Rock. They stood there with nothing but forests in front of them while behind them was the foaming sea. Why did they leave their pleasant homes? Was it for money or to seek for notoriety? No, it was for liberty to worship God according to the dictates of their own hearts, and not to worship the devil according to the dictates of their appetites as the men of to-day are doing.

We have decided that the only way to accomplish our object of abolishing the saloons is in politics, and we have reached this conclusion after a thorough trial of all available resources. The church has been working against this evil for many years, but the church is a divine and not a human institution. God walks in the church. Sincere hearts beat not from opinions of men but from heaven. It is a sad fact, but the truth nevertheless, it cannot check what is legalized.

The past shows that the church can do no good against a legalized traffic. While it is true the church has done a great work in saving men from drunkards' graves as individuals, it can do nothing against it as a whole.

You send your children to Sunday-school to learn the gospel and then you vote to license a saloon near your own door. The child is at Sunday-school for awhile one day in the week, while the remainder of the time it is forced to pass the open saloon when going to the public school.

There are four millions of church people in the United States that favor the saloon, at any rate they vote to keep the liquor men in power. Men go to church and vote. This is a thing "to be" a thing to continue," and then go to the polls and vote to make the time longer are the principles of the saloon men. Either the prayer or the vote ought to be reconstructed.

The best people ought to rule in the United States. A citizen who says his morning prayer with his family, goes to the polls and votes as bad as the United States, and walks to the polls and votes as bad as the worst. This man may favor the saloon, is a traitor to his family and to God. He with his lips dewy with prayer, goes to the saloon with his breath moistened with beer meet at the ballot box and vote the same way. Some one gave the first to the saloon keeper.

If bad men conspire, good men must combine or fail.

You can't make legally and governmentally right what is morally wrong. "Which way do you propose to do about it?"

As Mrs. Lathrop closed she was greeted with prolonged applause.

Hannah Clark Sent to Elizabeth.

Constable Moffett, this morning, took twelve-year-old Hannah Clark to the county jail. She was committed by Justice Nash, for larceny, with the recommendation that she be sent to the Reform school.

CHARLES WILLIAM GIESE.

The Most Popular German Gets the Schiller's Works.

[Translated from Der Somerset Bote.]

"Saturday afternoon at four o'clock the contest closed after six months for the most popular German in Plainfield, Dunellen or Somerset county. The prize was four books of Schiller's Works. Charles Giese of Plainfield won it, having 6,330 votes.

Charles William Giese was born in December, 1841, in Usnel, Germany. When seventeen years old he came to New York and secured an engagement as an actor in the German Theatre and went with the troupe through the South. When the war broke out in 1861 he came from Virginia to Plainfield and carried on a saloon business until '66, when he married Elizabeth Snyder of Scotch Plains. He then went to Newark and became a tobacco importer. From there he went to Westfield and was engaged as detective to ferret out fire bugs. In the year 1879 he came back to Plainfield and kept a restaurant for eight years, after which he secured a position as regular policeman. He showed himself to the Germans as a man of honor and helped many of his fellow countrymen out of trouble, by acting as interpreter for them in court, and they all honor him for it."

THE WORK OF TRAMPS.

Attempt to Burn the Stitt Homestead at Westfield.

While John J. Collins, of Westfield, was riding home from Rahway on his bicycle about midnight Monday night, he came upon two men who had apparently just run out of the old Stitt homestead, half a mile out of Westfield on the county road. Mr. Collins' approach had been noiseless, and the men did not see him until he almost ran them down, when they made off across the fields. He noticed a light about the house, and, knowing the place was unoccupied, dismounted and made an investigation. He found that one window just off the piazza had been smashed and kerosene poured over the floor inside and out outside. He could detect the smell of the oil as soon as he approached.

The men had evidently just applied the match, but the fire was making rapid headway along the oil-soaked sill and floor. Mr. Collins hastily summoned aid, and after some difficulty the flames were extinguished. No trace of the two men could be found, nor has any one the slightest clue to their identity, but it is believed they are tramps, a dozen or more of whom have established a camp a mile below here in the woods.

Early yesterday morning one of the railroad flag houses was broken into, but nothing of value was taken.

Prof. Doolittle Dead.

Yesterday morning Dr. T. S. Doolittle conducted the services at the chapel at Rutgers College, New Brunswick. Last night he was dead. His death was due to heart failure. The indications of it yesterday took the form of fainting spells.

Deceased was born at Ovid, Seneca, Co., N. Y., in 1826. He entered Rutgers in 1855, graduated in 1859, took a course in the Theological Seminary, graduating in 1862. He was pastor of a church at Flatlands, N. Y., for two years. In 1864 he became Professor of metaphysics, rhetoric and logic, was made vice president in 1890, and served as president during the interim between the resignation of Dr. Gates and the appointment of Dr. Scott.

He leaves a wife, but no children.

A Live Wire Injures four Persons and Kills a Dog.

By the moving of a frame house through the streets at Somerville, Monday, the electric light poles on Main street were disturbed, and it was necessary to put a guy wire from one of them to a post on the sidewalk. In some way the guy wire became heavily charged with electricity.

A little boy, Walter Schenck, grasped the wire with both hands and had to be torn loose by bystanders. He was seriously injured. John Steiner, John Allgair, and an Italian all touched the wire and fell to the ground. Policeman Vaneman's dog rubbed against the wire and was killed. The wire was finally cut by a lineman.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

The Orangoutang Arrives in Port.

New York, April 19, (Special.)—The steamship Vega, which arrived late last night from Lisbon, Portugal, brings the orang and black mandril purchased by Barnum & Bailey. The orang was captured last January in Papua, a large island of the Eastern Archipelago. Both the animals arrived in good condition.

The orang is the largest specimen in this country.

TO PUBLISH THE LAWS.

List of Papers Designated by the Governor Yesterday.

The New Jersey papers which will publish the laws passed by the last Legislature were designated yesterday.

The law under which the designation is made, was intended to enable the people to know the new laws they were expected to obey by publishing them in newspapers of widest circulation, so far as known, dividing the selection as equally as possible between Republican and Democratic newspapers, but the Democratic politicians in full power pervert the law, like all other good laws, to serve their own base ends. In this county for instance, only one Republican newspaper is selected, while in Plainfield no observer, weekly, and a more obscure monthly, not a newspaper at all, are selected, while the dailies which the people read, are ignored. In a state which tolerates gambling laws, we must be surprised at nothing. The list is as follows:

BRADLEY—At Dunellen, Monday, April 17, 1893, Horace P. Bradley in his 78th year.

Funeral services at his late residence, at Jefferson avenue, Dunellen, Thursday, April 20th, at 2 p. m. 15*

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Speech by Frederick Douglass.

There has always lain latent in the heart of Frederick Douglass one particular ambition of a personal nature. He has had ambition for his race and given his best years to their aims. During the war he sent his sons to fight and maintained their families himself while they were in the army. The fame he has won as orator and public official has been quite as much satisfaction to him on account of his race as on his own account. But there remained the one ambition that he cherished on his own account, and nobody can blame him who knows what that was. It was that after his life work was well nigh done he might go back to the county in Maryland in which he was born and reared a slave, buy one of the handsomest old plantation places there and end his days as one of the first citizens.

His wish is to be gratified. He has negotiated for the purchase of one of the finest estates in Talbot county, Md. Recently while on his way to The Villa, which is the name of his new place, he stopped at Easton and made a short speech to the colored school children there. The best part of his remarks was that they are to be commended to white children as well as black. Mr. Douglass said:

I never had a little colored boy whose mother and father died when he was but 5 years of age. He was a slave and had no one to care for him. He slept on a shuck floor in a shed and in cold weather would crawl into a meal bag head foremost and leave his feet in the ashes to keep them warm. Often he would roast an ear of corn and eat it to satisfy his hunger, and many times has he crawled under the barn or stable and secured eggs, which he would roast in the fire and eat. That boy did not want treasures as you do, but a new linen shirt. Schools were unknown to him, and he learned to spell from an old Webster spelling book and to read and write from copies on cellar and barn doors, while boys and men would help him. He would then preach and speak and soon became well known. He became presidential rector, United States marshal, United States recorder, United States diplomat and accumulated some wealth. He were broadcloth and did not have to divide crumbs with the dogs under the table. That boy was Frederick Douglass. What was possible for me is possible for you. Don't think because you are colored you can't accomplish anything. Strive earnestly to add to your knowledge. So long as you remain in ignorance so long will you fail to command the respect of your fellow man.

American Slang.

When analyzed, much of it will be found to be no slang at all, but good Idiomatic English, conveying by metaphor a meaning more vivid than any other set of words could do. We may exclude altogether as real slang and unworthy the words that mean nothing at all, but are a mere gabble of sound. But let us take up some of the expressions that are condemned by self styled writers of classical English. There, for instance, is the popular phrase, "He is in it," or "Not in it," as the case may be. Sometimes it is made more emphatic by the variation "in it with both feet." Does not this suggest at once ample measure, as when one is walking through deep snow or sand? It is not only suggestive, but actually imaginative and poetical.

There, too, is the phrase to "get it in the neck" when a misfortune has happened to one. Was not cutting the head off the old way of executing people? The phrase "get it in the neck" is therefore an allusion and even a classic allusion to a custom that is still the vogue in France. Take that saying, "He is out of sight." If you are extremely fortunate and happy, what more natural than that you are so covered with good luck as to be out of sight, or with misfortune in the same way should the contrary be the case?

It is true that one would hardly use any of the above phrases in a funeral sermon or at college commencement oration. But those phrases when they have become familiar are not classic English. We would not wish to be understood as recommending for common use, however, the expression, "He is talking through his hat."

Perhaps before the Cleveland administration ends we shall have an Indian state where the Indian Territory now is. A bill is before the Cherokee council, and it has been favorably reported, authorizing Chief Harris to appoint five commissioners to a conference which will consider the forming of one of the regular states of this Union from the Indian Territory. There are five civilized tribes in the territory—the Creeks, Cherokees, Choctaws, Chickasaws and Seminoles. It is proposed that each of these shall appoint five commissioners to meet at the conference and discuss the question of uniting under one state government. The United States government has made a proposition to the civilized tribes looking to this consummation.

Has the United States estate the moral right to negotiate a treaty of any kind with any foreign nation whatsoever and not let the whole American people know exactly what that treaty contains? In connection with the objections to the Russian treaty the senate has spent considerable time discussing how much of its contents they will reveal to the outside public and how much not. Let us have it all. Every American citizen is interested in knowing what the servants he has hired to do his lawmaking for him are about. Is this Russia, pray, and is the United States senate the czar?

Queen Victoria is studying Hindoostanee, and even at her time of life improving her intellect. We commend her example to her son, the Prince of Wales.

SOCIALISTS WON

All Belgians Granted the Right to Vote.

STRIKERS RESUME WORK.

Wealth's Plural Vote Is Now to Be the Issue.

Four Forced the Frightened Deputies to Pass the Measure and the Riotous Mobs Were Pacified — Belgium Was Saved From Anarchy Just In the Nick of Time. More Fighting Near Antwerp — Four Strikers Died on the Bayonets of the Troops.

BRUSSELS, April 19.—The Belgian revolution has succeeded. The reigning aristocracy has surrendered, and Belgium will hereafter be governed by the people. The victory for universal suffrage has cost several lives and serious bloodshed; but, considering the terrible sacrifices which until the last moment it seemed would be necessary, the price paid is not a great one. The right of self government has not been granted willingly. It was wrung from the present authorities by a display of revolutionary force such as has not been seen in Europe since Paris was in the hands of a committee.

The chamber of representatives reassembled at Brussels after the preparation of the report on the revision of the constitution, and by a vote of 119 against 12, with 16 abstentions from voting, adopted universal suffrage, with a provision for plural voting by the classes owning property, according to the amount and situation of the property.

Cheers within the chamber were followed by prodigious acclamations from the enormous crowd that awaited the result of the voting outside the chamber. The greatest enthusiasm was displayed everywhere, and the people joined in a jubilee in honor of the great triumph which they had achieved.

It is expected that the decision in favor of universal suffrage will have an allaying effect upon the popular excitement and agitation, which had been rapidly assuming the dimensions of a general insurrection. The dread of a terrible uprising of the people, similar to that of the French revolution in its resistless rage against privilege and power, had the effect of bringing the chamber of representatives around to the popular side. There is no doubt in many minds that had the chamber not acted promptly there would have been a revolution in Brussels.

Will Follow Up the Victory.

In view of the action of the deputies the labor leaders resolved to advise the abandonment of the general strike. At the same time they decided to issue to the people a manifesto against the Nyssen bill, which proposes the combination of plural voting and universal suffrage. The leaders will urge the people to follow up their victory by agitating unceasingly for universal suffrage, pure and simple.

Rioters Set Fire to Cotton.

BRUSSELS, April 19.—The scene of the trouble in the manufacturing area located in the northern part of the city is the vicinity of the great basins. Here are located the Bassin Asia, the Bassin de la Campine, the Bassin Austria, the Bassin d'Amerika, the Bassin Afrika, the Grand Bassin and the Petit Bassin, all of which are usually busy with commerce from all parts of the world. One of the principal quays on the River Scheide in this part of the city is the Quai du Rhin, on which a quantity of cotton is stored.

Some of the more desperate strikers determined to set fire to this cotton, and, eluding the vigilance of the police, they passed through the Rue d'Amsterdam to the Quai Quest, and thence through the Rue du Bresil to the Quai du Rhin. The cotton was set on fire and the dense smoke attracted the attention of the gendarmes, who hastened to the scene, where they came upon the strikers, who were still engaged in applying fire to a pile of 400 bales of cotton.

A conflict between the strikers and gendarmes followed, and the former were by repeated charges driven from the quay. An alarm was given upon the discovery of the fire, and the firemen are actively engaged in fighting the flames started by the rioters.

There can be no question that the strike at Antwerp will have a decidedly depressing effect upon the commerce of that port. The shipping trade is not the only one affected. Work has ceased in the factories and mills of Verviers, employing a great number, and the revolutionary movement is constantly gaining fresh supporters. Not all of those who are taking part in the strike, however, indulge in the violent demonstrations. Hundreds of workmen have quit their employment as a protest against the refusal to grant them the right to vote, but they steadfastly refuse to take part in any overt act against property or the government.

Died on the Bayonets.

BRUSSELS, April 19.—The most serious disturbance of the day was reported from Bourgernout, a village a short distance from Antwerp. Many candlemakers are employed in the village, and a majority of them joined the movement in favor of universal suffrage. Those who remained at work were attacked by the strikers, and the troops were called upon to protect the workers and restore order. The appearance of the soldiery had little or no effect in quelling the riot, and the orders to the rioters to disperse met with no attention. The strikers continued their attacks upon the "blacklegs" as though no troops were present.

The officer in command of the soldiers ordered his men to fix their bayonets, and then followed the order to charge. On a full run, with leveled bayonets, the soldiers charged upon the rioters and drove them away. Four of the strikers, however, were killed, and 15 others received wounds of a serious nature, some of which are fatal. It is certain that some of the wounded will die.

Great excitement prevails in the village, and the strikers threaten vengeance for the death of their comrades. Here, as in other parts of the country, the men are in many instances spurred on to riot by the women.

Help From the French Frontier.

PARIS, April 19.—The French government has instructed the governors of the northern industrial towns to expel any foreigners who may be organizing to assist the revolution in Belgium. The Belgian socialists at Roubaix have resolved to disregard these measures and have sent and passed a resolution declaring their readiness to subscribe and otherwise assist their brethren in Belgium.

A large proportion of the miners at Roubaix, Armentieres, Pas-de-Calais and other districts adjoining the Belgian frontier are naturalized Belgians, and the French socialists are making efforts to induce them to strike in order to assist the agitation in Belgium by stopping the supplies of Belgian customers.

End of the Riots Near.

BRUSSELS, April 19.—Police and workingmen had several encounters during the evening and six rioters were seriously injured. Nevertheless the end of the riots is believed to be near. The decision of the labor leaders to abandon the strike has produced a general feeling of relief. The police have worked night and day and are completely exhausted. Were the strike and riots to continue a few days more the preservation of order would be left entirely to the military, as the police could not endure the strain 48 hours longer. Many arrests of socialists are reported from the provinces.

French Lawyers Suspended.

PARIS, April 19.—The Bar association has suspended from membership for three months Senator Renault and Senator Allou because of their connection with the Panama scandal. Each was the recipient of Thierree checks.

The Pope and the Laborers.

ROME, April 19.—The pope received 3,000 Catholic workingmen from France. He urged them to be loyal to the republic and to labor zealously for the prosperity and solidity of its institutions.

Threatened the Burgomaster.

BRUSSELS, April 19.—Edmund Picard, a barrister of this city, was arrested for making a speech, in the course of which he used threatening language against the burgomaster.

Emperor William Will Visit the Pope.

BERLIN, April 19.—Emperor William has started today for Rome. Before visiting the pope on Sunday Emperor William will take luncheon with the Prussian minister.

The Victims Number Seven.

BRUSSELS, April 19.—Two men injured in the Mons riots died later in the evening. Altogether seven men have died in Mons of injuries received in the suffrage riots.

Author and Publisher Join.

LONDON, April 19.—It is rumored that Jerome K. Jerome, the playright, will join partnership with S. S. McClure, publisher, of New York.

They Will Resume Work.

BRUSSELS, April 19.—At meetings of strikers in and around Ghent resolutions in favor of resuming work tomorrow were passed.

Tramps as Highwaymen.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 19.—A strange man entered the engine room of the Knowles Steam Pump works at midnight, and at the point of a revolver demanded the fireman's money. The fireman had no money and the robber appropriated his dinner pail, joining another man outside. The fireman then rang in the fire alarm, calling out the department, and a large number of citizens started in search of the outlaws. It is believed that they are the tramps who shot Chief of Police Fitzgerald of Ware last Saturday.

Wrecked the Fay Train.

BRAZIL, Ind., April 19.—It is believed that the attempt to wreck the pay train on the Chicago and Indiana Coal railroad was made. The train, hauling a large sum of money, was thrown from the track two miles east of this city and at the edge of the big trestle over Otter creek. The engine was badly damaged and the occupants of the train were shaken up and bruised. The money, however, was brought here and heavily guarded all night.

Two Killed by Nitroglycerin.

LIMA, O., April 19.—A terrific explosion of nitroglycerin occurred at the High Explosive company's magazine two miles from this city. As far as is known there was torn off and Benjamin Dowe, the man who had a huge gash blown in his side three months ago, was blown 40 feet and so badly injured that he died before he was taken to the ambulance. The force of the explosion shook houses and broke windows two miles from the scene.

Tobacco Smugglers Discovered.

NEW YORK, April 19.—There is a big scare among the crew of the steamer Mexico, one of those members was caught on shore with 5,000 packages of smuggled cigarettes, and five of the firemen have disappeared. Special Customs Inspectors Donohoe and O'Neill went into the chief cook's room, where they discovered 2,500 cigars and about 35,000 cigarettes. The inspectors found the smuggled goods to the custom house.

Big Coffee Firm Suspends.

NEW YORK, April 19.—The suspension of Thomas M. Barr & Co., wholesale coffee merchants of 107 Front street, was announced at the Coffee Exchange. Thomas M. Barr & Co., it is said, operated for Kleinbach, the European coffee plunger, and the heavy decline in the coffee market here and the failure to receive remittances from Europe precipitated their suspension. The liabilities are said to be large.

Dangerous Convict on Deer Island.

BOSTON, April 19.—Edward Burnham, a prisoner at Deer island, tried to murder Officer Edward A. Marsh by stabbing him in the head with a knife. Burnham was overpowered after stabbing another officer in the hand and locked up. Burnham has been sent to the island 36 times, mostly for drunkenness.

Connecticut Legislature.

HARTFORD, April 19.—In the senate the bill to create a state commission of lunacy was rejected. The senate passed the comprehensive bill amending the charter of the city of Hartford and a bill regulating next of kin to support indigent relatives.

Afraid of So Much Dynamite.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., April 19.—The citizens of the pretty little village of Pelhamville, adjacent to this town, are well nigh terror stricken over the storage of some 2,000 pounds of dynamite inside their village limits. The dynamite is the property of the contractors for the improvements on the line of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, between this place and New Rochelle.

The Detroit Goes to Baltimore.

NEW YORK, April 19.—At her highest rate of speed the new United States cruiser Detroit, fresh from her successful trial tests at New London, rounded the Battery and proceeded down the bay on her way to the builders' yards at Baltimore.

WONDERS OF THE FAIR.

A Great Crystal Cave Lighted by Electric Bullseyes.

FIGHT BETWEEN IRISH AND ZULUS.

Algiegens' Gallery With Pictures of 40,000 Criminals—The Commercial Travelers to Visit the World's Fair 50,000 Strong. Turkish Mosque Not Open to Visitors.

CHICAGO, April 19.—The edict has gone forth today that after tomorrow the World's fair grounds are to be sacred from all excavation. There is a determination to have the great park in prime condition for the opening day. With that end in low piping and all other underground work about the park must be completed by Thursday night. After that time no one will be allowed to turn a spadeful of earth.

A large force of men is at work fixing up the driveways and walks. After Thursday the force will be greatly increased.

One of the most brilliant spectacles of the exposition will be a mammoth crystal cave beneath the great mound covered with rare palms and ferns in the center of the Horticultural building. It is to be a reproduction of the cave in the Black Hills near Deadwood. From the sides of its chambers hang great shafts of crystal, 300,000 pounds in all, glistening like diamonds in the light thrown from numberless electric bullseyes. There are seven chambers in the cave and a number of winding, bewildering passages.

In the largest crystal chamber John Thorpe, chief of floriculture, intends to grow vegetables and bloom flowers by electric light. If they bloom at all it will have to be by electric light, for the light of the sun within the cave. This experiment has never been publicly tried before, and Mr. Thorpe is confident that it will be successful and will interest a great number of people.

The Mosque Locked Up.

The furnishing of the Turkish mosque has just been completed and the door was immediately locked upon its rich tapestries and decorations. This means that the unallowed feet of the Christian unbeliever shall never again tread within the sacred portals of this pretty model of the famous Mosque of St. Sophia. The key will be delivered over to the muezzin, who will hold it until the fair closes and then close the edifice, when the Moslems have completed their summer's sojourn in Chicago. Ten days from today the mosque will be dedicated and the whole colony will be out in dazzling costumes to assist. The members of Medinah Temple (Chicago) of the order of Mystic Shrine have been invited to be present as special guests.

Wilson McClaughry, son of Chief of Police McClaughry returned yesterday from a trip which has occupied him for several months.

A Madmoth Rogues' Gallery.

He was sent all over the United States to procure pictures of every crook of any notoriety for the Criminal gallery in anticipation of the fair. It was realized by the chief of police that with the fair here crooks from all quarters of the country would flock to it merely to prey upon the hundreds of thousands of strangers who will come to see the exposition.

The trip has been successful. Over 4,000 good likenesses of crooks have been secured for the guidance of the Chicago police. The work done by Wilson McClaughry is of much more than an ordinary character. It was the idea of Chief of Police McClaughry, and the knowledge that one may see how the detective suit it is thought do more to keep criminals away from this city than anything else.

Educational exhibits are coming into the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building faster than the large corps of workmen can handle them. The German educational exhibit, consisting of 600 cases, has arrived and is being arranged as fast as possible. It will be divided into two distinct sections—one for the universities proper and one for the technical schools. The exhibits of the Pennsylvania School of Design for Women, the Academy of Fine Arts, the Spring Garden institution and the Industrial Museum will fill School of Industrial Art were among the arrivals.

The Drummers to Parade.

Ex-Congressman Frank of St. Louis arrived in Chicago with a delegation of commercial traveling men to arrange with Secretary Culp for the Travelers' Protection association's special day on June 10.

The travelers' day programme has not yet been arranged in detail, but its general scheme is settled. "Vice Presidents Stevenson has consented to come," said Mr. McCrew, "and we will have the governors of 30 or 32 states. There will be a parade and music and everything else to make the day merry. The members of the association, 10,000 strong, will come in from the national convention at Peoria in special trains. We expect that fully 50,000 commercial travelers will be on the grounds for the day."

Zulus and Irish Fight.

Four Zulus started out to "do" the Midway plaisance and got into trouble. The men at work on the Irish village have a grudge against the colored population since one of them was stabbed by a colored boy.

One of them was from Tipperary, where they learn to throw stones with sufficient precision to knock a policeman out at 30 yards. This gentleman picked up a piece of granite with which he quickly stunned and bit a Zulu in the jaw with it. The Zulus have practiced throwing assegais and things, and are not unhandy with a brick. One of them deftly delivered an imbrot on the Irishman's waistcoat and bowled the Tipperary man over like a tenpin.

A roar of "Will somebody kindly hold me coat!" arose from the castle of Killarney. The Zulus began to utter war cries and by in an ammunition of cinbs and rocks. Just then Captain Horace Elliott came down with some secret service men and separated the parties.

I took him twice during that time to the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles street, but their remedies failed to do him the faintest shadow of good. I commenced giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and it soon cured him. I have never doubted that it saved my boy's life, even if it has not his very life. Desperate Dash For Liberty.

ATLANTA, April 19.—Three police officers and a negro murderer had a desperate struggle here. In a quarrel between Lee Thomas and Steve Catchings, draymen, Thomas struck Catchings with a crossbar. Later Catchings died. Thomas escaped. He was found in a house shortly before daylight. Three policemen were in the room with him and he was dressing, when suddenly he put out the light and made a dash for liberty. A desperate struggle followed, both in the house and out in the street. The negro was beaten and the officers nearly all hurt. But the negro finally made his escape, although 17 shots were fired.

A Quorum by Force.

LOUISVILLE, April 19. — Councilman Mathes of New Albany was dragged to the council chamber, and he will enter damage suits against Mayor Brookes of that city and Sergeant Featheringill and Policeman Strack, who arrested him. The city council had a hard time getting a quorum and finally succeeded after 11 o'clock by having John Mathes dragged up stairs by a policeman. He was arrested on a warrant issued by order of the mayor at his home, nearly two miles from the city hall. Similar warrants were issued against other absentees.

Sam Jones Makes a Hit.

BOWLING GREEN, KY., April 19.—A religious wave has swept over Bowling Green and has carried everything before it. Sam Jones was hired by some of his admirers to come to this city and rescue it from its depths of sin. For $2,300 he undertook the job and seems to have earned his money. He preached 10 days, and during that time more than 2,400 people made professions of religion, 300 of the number joining the various churches Sunday and were baptized.

The State Prison Investigation.

HARTFORD, April 19.—The special committee of the general assembly, charged with investigating the management of the state prison at Wethersfield and the conduct of Warden Chamberlain, gave the first public hearing in the hall of representatives. The O'Donoghue Suicide.

CHICAGO, April 19.—The remarkable suicide of wealthy Horace O'Donoghue, supposed to be due to a sudden insane impulse on hearing his wife read an account of the death of Elliott F. Shepard, was probably the result of large financial embarrassments involving a number of Chicago publishing houses.

Mob Wanted to Lynch Them.

DUBUQUE, Ia., April 19.—L. W. Healy and Hugh McRobbard were brought in from Greeley, Ia., and are believed to be the murderers of Officers Frith and Talcott. An immense crowd gathered about the jail and talked about lynching. The sheriff placed guards around the jail.

Slavin Will Fight Hall.

NEW YORK, April 19.—The following special cable was received from London: "Jim Hall and Frank P. Slavin signed articles of agreement to fight for £1000 a side, a purse of £1,200 and the championship May 29. Charlie Mitchell will train Hall at Brighton."

Lucy Larcom's Funeral Thursday.

BOSTON, April 19.—It is understood that the funeral services over the remains of Miss Lucy Larcom, the dead poetess, will be held Thursday morning in Trinity church. The body will be interred at Beverly, the birthplace of the deceased.

Clan-na-Gael Not Disbanded.

NEW YORK, April 19.—A gentleman well versed in Irish affairs says the reported disbandment of the United Brotherhood, better known as the Clan-na-Gael, in consequence of Mr. O'Sullivan's home rule bill, is indignantly contradicted.

Suicide In a Slaughter House.

ST. LOUIS, April 19.—Charles W. Heitzberg, manager of the St. Louis Dried Beef and Provision company, committed suicide by hanging himself in the slaughter house.

The Blind Boy Was Drowned.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 19.—Frank Hutchin, a blind boy, disappeared from Passaic on Jan. 11. His dead body was recovered from the Passaic river.

The Albany Argus Dispute.

ALBANY, April 19.—The hearing on the ownership of The Argus property was continued before Referee Sharpe; slow progress was made.

WITH THE WARSHIPS.

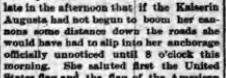
Naval Officers of Many Nations Dine on the Dolphin.

THE PRIDE OF GERMANY'S FLEET.

The Big Kaiserin Augusta Arrives at Hampton Roads With Her Sister Ships. Tars and Midshipmen Had Fun In the Harbor—Landmen Crowd the Shore.

FORT MONROE, Va., April 19.—The German squadron steamed into the harbor so late in the afternoon that if the Kaiserin Augusta had not begun to boom her cannons some distance down the roads she would have had to slip into her anchorage officially unnoticed until 8 o'clock this morning. She saluted first the United States flag and the flag of the American and English admirals as she steamed slowly to a place near the Russians. Behind her came the Zeadler, a small gunboat of 1,800 tons.

The Kaiserin Augusta is the most modern warship now in the fleet and presents many points of interest. Her captain speaks English fluently and said: "The



THE KAISERIN AUGUSTA.

Kaiserin Augusta is now in American waters for the first time. This is her maiden trip. In fact, she was launched at Kiel in March, 1892, and her engines were tried for the first time on the 10th of last month. She went into commission on the next day and on the 19th of March, a little over 30 days ago, started for the United States. This is the third port she has entered, for she stopped at Queenstown and Halifax on her way here."

The Pride of the Fleet.

The Kaiserin Augusta is not only one of the most modern ships in the harbor, but she is the only vessel with three screws, one on each side of the rudder and the third extended some distance out from the center of the stern. The engine for each screw is independent of the others, and is built in water tight bulkheads. With these screws she has made a record of 22 knots an hour.

The American officers played the part of hosts. Our senior rear admiral entertained the high commanding officers, and the junior officers did the honors to their fellow officers on the visiting ships. The cabin of the Dolphin presented a brilliant appearance when these guests of the government were seated according to their respective navies, with Vice Admiral Sir J. O. Hopkins, K. C. B., of the English fleet on his right and the Russian captain, the next officer of the fleet, on his left.

Dinner on the Dolphin.

The table decorations were elaborate and consisted chiefly of American colors blended with those of England, Russia, France, Italy and Holland. The menu card was unique and the engraving of the different courses was a work of art. And thus every officer on board the foreign ships in the roads, except the Germans, who arrived too late to be invited, were the guests of the American navy.

The dining by the fleet had its effect upon the customary gayety of the hotel. There were few officers ashore, and for once the army and civilians were forced to dance with the girls and temporarily amuse them, while the bluecoated sailors acted as hosts to the visitors.

The large crowds at Old Point Comfort are entirely beyond the capacity of accommodations there and in neighboring towns and country houses. The prevailing prices for everything, especially boarding, lodging and conveyances, are accordingly very high.

Games by Tars, Young and Old.

The boat race between the crews of the Chicago and the Philadelphia resulted in a victory for the Chicago men. There was a baseball game in the fort between the Chicago midshipmen and a nine picked from the rest of the American fleet. It was won by the midshipmen of the Chicago. At Norfolk boat and hurdle races were among the features incidental to the rendezvous.

Twenty-six war vessels are now in the roads. The weather continues good. Many excursion steamers, tugboats, sailing vessels and craft of every description enliven the harbor. The visiting between the ships and to and from the shore present a lively and impressive picture—one that has never been equaled in that capacious anchorage. The Hygeia hotel lobbies and parlor at night are crowded with naval officers in full uniform and beautiful young women in the latest creations of dressmaking.

A Scene at a Funeral.

JERSEY CITY, April 19.—James J. Rey nolds, a Pennsylvania freight brakeman who was thrown from a freight car at Lawrence and killed Friday night, was buried from his home here. There was an exciting scene at the funeral. Mrs. Rey nolds, the dead man's widow, to whom he was married 30 months ago, was apparently crazed by grief. She denounced the engineer of the train as the murderer of her husband and alleged that he had purposely stopped the train so suddenly as to throw him to the ground as he was walking along the top of the cars.

Photographs of the Eclipse.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—Director Holden of the Lick observatory has just received a telegram from Professor Schaeberle that the Lick Observatory expedition to observe the solar eclipse in Chili has been successful in every respect. Fifty photographs were secured by the professor and his assistants.

The Liquor Dispensary Case.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 19.—The fight against the dispensary law in this state was brought up in the supreme court on a case from Chester, where two barkeepers ask that the city be compelled to issue them a license for the year. The court reserved its decision.

The Political War In Buffalo.

BUFFALO, April 19.—James Hanaran charged with a very serious violation of the city charter, was deposed from the position of city councilman by Mayor Bishop. The affair caused a tremendous sensation at the city hall.

American Trotters Go to Europe.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Oscar Hefner, the Chicago sporting man, sent two trotting stallions to Europe on the steamship Lahn. The horses will compete on the courses of Germany, France, Austria and Italy.

NEWS OF NATIONAL AFFAIRS.

The Curtailment of Gold Payments Denies Secretary Carlisle.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The statement is made that the treasury officials contemplate the advisability of stopping the payment of gold coin for the treasury notes issued under the act of July 14, 1890. Several small offers of gold have been received from the west. These offers aggregate less than $500,000 and will not appear on the treasury books for several days. At eastern points a slight increase in gold is noted, the free gold having increased $25,000, making the total, as shown by the books of the treasury, $25,580. There is said to have been a slight increase in New York, which will not be shown until today.

Information received at the treasury indicate that the gold shipments for next Saturday will not be heavy, and none may go out at all. Sub-Treasurer Jordan's bond was not received here yesterday as expected, and he will not therefore assume charge of the New York subtreasury today.

Postmaster General Bissell has issued a notice to all postmasters that there is now in operation in the government buildings on the grounds of the World's fair a branch of the Chicago postoffice, known as the World's fair station.

The president has not decided whether or not he will attend the naval ball in New York on April 27, but it is probable that he will do so.

Santa Fe Strikers Active.

TOPEKA, April 19.—The striking Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe shopmen are doing all in their power to induce other organizations to join them. They have heard the rumor that the company has broken all agreements. The men say that if it is true all organizations will strike and all traffic on the system will be stopped. The officials of the road say the company will stand by all of its agreements, and that the object of the reports is to create sentiment in favor of the strikers.

The Circus Maximus Out West.

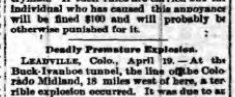
SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—The people of San Francisco are enjoying this week an entertainment, which for uniqueness and magnitude surpasses anything ever seen on the Pacific coast and perhaps in the country. It is the Olympic Club's circus maximus, which is the exact reproduction of the Roman holiday in the time of Cæsar, and the pavilion has been arranged to represent the coliseum at Rome.

Boston Chinamen Aggressive.

BOSTON, April 19.—A Chinaman registered in compliance with the Geary law. The leading residents of Chinatown held an indignation meeting because of his action, and a deputation of Chinese went to the federal building to upbraid their countrymen. If their rules are carried out the individual who has caused this annoyance will be fined $100 and will probably be otherwise punished for it.

Deadly Premature Explosion.

LEADVILLE, Colo., April 19.—At the Buck-Ivanhoe tunnel, the line of the Colorado Midland, 18 miles west of here, a terrible explosion occurred. It was due to an accidental discharge of a blast which communicated with other powders. Reports received here are that five men were killed and several seriously injured. Physicians left for the tunnel at once.



OUR GIRLS.

What They Wear, How Made and of What Material.

A pretty gown of soft wool in pale gray is made with a plain gathered skirt, with two folds of gray, each with an inch wide ruffle of gray, lined with pink standing up from the fold, has an 1830 waist, the ruffle falling well off the shoulder and lined with pink crepe de chine. The waist inside this ruffle is of the pink crepe shirred in a round yoke with five or six bands of white beading threaded through with pink satin ribbon, which makes rosettes at a finish at the back. Plain sleeves show a little pink puffing at the wrist, drawn up on the ribbon and forming a little ruffle against the hand. A twist of pink covers the jointure of the waist and sleeves.

A DAINTY FROCK.

A simple frock is made as illustrated, yellow crepon being used, with royal blue velvet ruffle and trimming.

For the dainty grandmother silks and chine challies, what could be so pretty as the girlish modification of the empire waist, with its becoming cross plaits over the bust, its high mounted sash of silk, its short sleeves with their frills of fine needlework and the bit of needlework gathered over the shoulder, and inside, just to make it look girlish and pretty, is the white guimpe of sheer nainsook gathered to a band of insertion at the neck and another at the wrists, beneath which a ribbon shows its color? This is the very best Sunday gown and may have for dressy occasions two bands of insertion around the skirt, with the chemisette underneath and tied in bows at one side of the front breadth. Sometimes one or two little ruffles edge the skirt, or a ruche plaited through the center may be used as a finish. But the plain, simple gowns are always best for every day wear, and are more sensible, for the little maids take on young lady airs quite soon enough.

Makes an every-day convenience of an old-time luxury. Pure and wholesome. Prepared with scrupulous care. Highest award at all Pure Food Expositions. Each package contains large plain and full instructions—and lasts—in having the NONE SUCH brand.

MERRELL & SOULE, Syracuse, N. Y.

Struck Concealed Dynamite.

MINNEAPOLIS, April 19.—While some men in a mine blacksmith shop at Tower were engaged in breaking up a lot of old gas pipe with a steam hammer an explosion took place which killed three of the men and injured nine others. It is supposed there was a quantity of dynamite in one of the pieces of pipe.

Mayor Harrison's First Act.

CHICAGO, April 19.—One of the first acts of the new mayor, Carter Harrison, was to secure some dockage concession on the lake front from the Henry syndicate, which under the previous administration had secured a practical monopoly of the lake traffic between the city and the World's fair grounds.

Another Western Cyclone.

LITTLE ROCK, April 19.—News was received here of a fearful cyclone in Fourche valley, Scott county. The town of Boles was almost entirely destroyed. Seven persons were killed and a large number injured. The path of the storm was a half mile in width, and everything was swept before it.

An Easterly Gale Caused Damage.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 19.—A heavy east erly gale, accompanied by snow and rain, has been raging here with damaging force. A number of vessels in the harbor dragged their anchors, and considerable damage has been done to shipping generally.

The Man.

Penelope—Does he write poems?
Perdita—No, I don't believe he ever wrote anything but a check in his life.
Penelope—Accept him.—Vogue.

Considerate.

Old Skinflint—I believe, Mr. Smith, that you commenced to buy the third-first year of your connection with the house.

Smith (in a flurry of expectation)—It is very kind of you to remember it, sir. I made the first entry in your books on Enter Tuesday, 1853—just 30 years ago.

Old Skinflint—Exactly. Now, Mr. Smith, we are a bout to reduce the number of our clerks, but in consideration of your long and efficient term of service I have decided, in consultation with my partners, to waive our right to discharge you, and you will be permitted to resign. You may use the office paper. No, thanks, Smith—I will not permit it. Now go, and God bless you!—Truth.

Are You Insured?

If you are 21 years old $60.80 paid annually for fifteen years would entitle you to $1,000.

If 22 years old, $67.

If 23 years old, $67.10.

If 24 years old, $67.20.

This sum of $1,000 is payable to the insured, if living, at the expiration of fifteen years, or at his death, if prior.

FOR A LIFE POLICY, of $1,000 the annual payments to continue during life, the payments for young men between 21 and 24 are between $18.60 and $30.

FEMININE FANCIES.

AN AFTERNOON'S WORK AND THE HOME BEAUTIFIED.

By Patience and Ingenuity a Pretty Receptacle For Fancy Work, a Piece to While Away an Hour or Two and an Addition to One's Tea Table Can Be Made.

The latest design for my lady's work table is as dainty a trifle as any we have had for many a long day. It is shown in white, blue, pink and all the delicate tints, with the commodious bag placed ready for use, or can be purchased in its embryo state and painted and fitted up at will.

The shape is the simplest possible and consists of two sets of crossings and a folding top, but the advantages are many none the less. The ample bag of silk that hangs below the top is sufficient to contain a generous supply of work, and the top itself can be opened or closed so as to form a writing table, as the owner may happen to prefer. Altogether the table is a most attractive one and would tempt the veriest idler to the use of the bright hued silks.

In its completed form it is not too costly to become a general favorite, and the frame can be completed by any woman of taste at very trifling cost.

Inviting nooks are not only fashion's latest craze, but a genuine comfort as well. By the simple device of arranging a movable crane at right angles from the wall a secluded spot free from all draft can be curtained off in any room.

AN INVITING NOOK.

The crane, which is only a pole that requires support at but one end, allows the erection of an instrument partition at will and so provides for protection from all unwelcome blasts. The couch can be built upon an ordinary wire cot, or can be purchased in the most elaborate form as may be preferred. Any arrangement that bespeaks ease and relaxation is thoroughly in place, and so long as soft cushions abound, books are at hand and the curtain does its work the corner will be an assured success.

Delicacy and beauty in table napery have come to be recognized as essential to every well equipped household, and the latest development shows clearly that the fashion is still at its height. The 3-cornered doily is made of fine white linen with some design in either flowers or fruit embroidered as a border to its longest two sides. The straight edge is fringed to the depth of one inch, and the embroidery, which is buttonholed on all its outlines, is cut on the outer edge.

A THREE-CORNERED DOILY.

The effect is not only novel but really charming, and the 3-cornered bits of linen give promise of becoming quite as general favorites as are their square and circular rivals. They are used for finger bowls, for flowers, for the dainty dishes of olives and salted almonds, and, in fact, for every use to which a doily can be put.

Ganzes.

The grenadine gauzes in varicolor, striped, with satin bars in black or in black with crinkled baby ribbon bars of color and in watered and figured designs, are quite pretty enough to justify the prediction that they will prove one of the most popular of the thin fabrics. Their gayety is of the modest sort that pleases the women who are given to sober gowns, and they are a relief from the all black grenadines, nets and laces. The latter, however, will be worn largely, their ornate designs displayed conspicuously over white and light silks and over colors.

Bisque of Clams.

Boil 50 clams in their juice for about five minutes; drain and chop them very fine. Put in a saucepan on the fire 4 ounces of water with 2 of flour. Stir together; then add the clams and afterward the juice. Season well with salt and a little cayenne pepper, stirring in very slowly 2½ pints of milk. Let all come to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from the fire, strain and serve.

TWO NICE JOKES.

A Man Who Shot His Own Hens and Took a Curious Note.

Ex-Congressman Loren B. Sessions has seldom been accused of being gullible, but he admits with becoming magnanimity that he was bested on two occasions.

Living next door to him in the little village of Pennino is a man named John Baker. Baker glories in the title of counselor at law, but when the legal business is dull he is never averse to taking a painting or whitewashing contract. Both Sessions and Baker keep hens, and it was their custom to allow the hens to run at large during the early spring months and late in the fall.

Sessions had finished planting his garden at the rear of his house and shut his poultry up in the hennery. One morning he discovered, much to his disgust, that Baker's hens had paid him an early visit and scratched up a large quantity of seed. He went to Baker with his trouble and told him in his usual good natured way that unless he kept his hens confined they would be shot and thrown into his yard. Baker chuckled to himself and promised that his hens would cause no more trouble to the newly planted garden. Early the next morning Sessions again liberated the ex-gentleman's hens, which were soon enjoying themselves on the forbidden ground.

Suddenly he heard several reports from a gun, and glancing from a window saw Sessions approaching his house, bearing a number of the unfortunate victims. "John! John!" yelled the elated legislator. "I've kept my promise, and there are your hens. You'd better catch the rest of them or I'll bag them too."

"Why, Lo," said Baker, "my hens are all shut up in the roost. Those must belong to some other person."

"Go on!" returned Sessions. "Your hen and mine are the only ones that ever come into my yard, and mine haven't been out of the house since I made my garden."

"Well, you'd better look and make sure of it, anyway," said Baker. So the pair jumped the fence and went to Sessions' roost, where the chagrined congressman discovered how he had been sold. Sessions gathered up the dead hens and took them to his own house, where they were nicely prepared, and the entire Baker family was invited over to dinner.

Sessions declared he would get even and made several fizzle attempts to do so, but soon played into his neighbor's hands again. Baker went to his friend one day and said: "Lo, I want a load of hay, but I haven't the ready money for it. Will you take my note?"

"I don't suppose you'll ever pay for it, but I'll take your note for 30 days," said Sessions jokingly.

The hay was transferred and the note given in payment. At the expiration of the 30 days and the courteous three days extra Sessions asked Baker if he would pay the note.

"Certainly, when it becomes due."

"It's due now; the 30 days are up," said Sessions.

"I say it isn't due," retorted Baker. "Read it and see."

The congressman read the note, examining the date line closely, and detecting no flaw in it said, "This note has run the stipulated time, and I want the money."

"Read it again," said Baker.

"What's this 'Thirty days after death'—Confound you, what do you mean by that? Don't you intend to pay this?"

"I will surely keep my contract," said Baker. "Call around 30 days after I'm dead and get your money."—Buffalo Courier.

Drawing the Line.

Mrs. Fort Dearborn—Alfred, what are you doing with the family album?

Mr. Spoonie (quickly, and another photograph)—Expurgating it, my dear.

"I don't understand."

"I am getting up an edition of this album to be used in sending out invitations for this summer. The line, my dear (pulling out another), is to be drawn at fourth cousins."—Chicago Tribune.

What He Wanted.

Hungry Henry—Say, boss, now I don't want you to get the misleading idea that I'm going to send you for nothing to eat. All I ask of you is just a few points.

Proprietor of Chop and Oyster House—"A few potato?" What do you mean by "a few potato?"

Hungry Henry—Well, say a few Blue Points.—Boston Courier.

No Singer.

Mr. Poghlight—Truly, Miss Philteeth, since I have moved next door to your house I have greatly enjoyed hearing your daily singing.

Miss Philteeth (confused)—Pardon me, Mr. Poghlight, but I rarely sing. Er—pa is a dentist, you know, and his office is right off our parlor.—Chicago Record.

Some Difference.

Mrs. Mann—It is strange that you cannot hold the baby for a few minutes, when you used to be able to hold me on your lap for hours at a time.

Mr. Mann—The young one is restless. He squirms and kicks all the time. You didn't kick the least little bit.—Indianapolis Journal.

A Good Reason.

"I didn't know Mrs. Denton's husband was dead. I thought he only run away from her."

"He did only desert her."

"Then why has she gone into mourning?"

"Because he came back."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

He Was All Right.

"I suppose," said the householder to the plumber, "that with the departure of winter your profits cease?"

"Not at all," said the plumber. "I am the owner of a patent tonic to cure spring fever."—Harper's Bazar.

Made Him Tired.

"My employer makes me awfully tired."

"What's the matter?"

"Why, I have to work for him."—Chicago Record.

The Rivals.

"It is folly for you, Micky McCloskey, to throw your offerings at my feet. Yonder goes the one who has long won my heart from you. He has all the attributes of a man. He wears long pants and chews as well as smokes."—Truth.

FINKENBINDER'S HORSE.

It Was a Good Horse, but He Will Now Sell Him.

"There he is, Fan! Isn't he a beauty?"

Mr. Finkenbinder pointed with pride to a chestnut sorrel horse he had led into the back yard from the stable. It was an animal he had just purchased through a friend who was a good judge of horses.

"Size him up, Fan," he said, leaning back against the fence, with his elbows on the top board. "Look at his eyes. Not a blemish anywhere! Clean limbed as a deer! And I got him for $125!"

"That seems to me a pretty high price for a horse," mused Mrs. Finkenbinder, "unless he's got a pedigree. Do you know whether he has a pedigree or not?"

"What do you want of a pedigree when you're buying a buggy horse?" retorted Mr. Finkenbinder somewhat impatiently. "He'll pull the phaeton all right, and I couldn't do any better if he belonged to the first families of Kentucky and had a ancestral tree as big as a house. What your idea of a pedigree anyhow? Do you think it's something like dappies, or crupper, or a surcingle, or an insurance policy?"

"I know what it is as well as you do, Lemuel. But are you a good judge of horse?"

"I know a good horse when I see him. I a horse's points are all right I can tell 'em as well as anybody. And this horse's points are all right?"

"How old is he?"

"Six years."

"How do you know?"

"How do I know? The man I got him from says so; that's how."

"Did you look at his teeth?"

"What's the use of looking at his teeth? You can't tell anything about a horse's age by his teeth. A good horse den madam, can fix up an old plug so his teeth will look like a yearling's."

"I never heard of a horse dentist, Lemuel," said Mrs. Finkenbinder doubtfully. "I don't believe there's any in this town."

"There's lots of things in this town you never heard of. The best way about this horse," said Lemuel, stroking the animal's shoulder, "is that—whoa, Billy! His name's Billy—he's just any woman can drive him. He's as gentle as a kitten. He's got plenty of spirit when you get him started though. That's what Mike Downing says. He got the horse for me, and what he doesn't know about a horse you can put in your eye. Whoa, Billy! Don't forget, Fan, that his name is Billy. A horse always likes to be called by his right name. I think I'll hitch him up and let you drive him. Go in the house and get your things on."

Mrs. Finkenbinder complied and Lemuel took the horse back to the barn and hitched him to the phaeton. In due time the entire outfit made its appearance in front of the family dwelling, where Mrs. Finkenbinder was patiently awaiting it.

"You take the lines, Fan," said Lemuel encouragingly, after he had taken her seat in the phaeton and he had tucked the robe comfortably about them both. "You might as well begin to drive him right now. He's got to be a family horse, and I can't be here all the time to do the driving."

Mrs. Finkenbinder took the lines and chucked at the animal.

"Don't try to drive him too fast at the start," cautioned Lemuel. "He's been on oats for about a month and hasn't had anything to do. He's perfectly gentle, but it won't do to crowd him at first. Don't let him get the start of you. Hold him in."

"He doesn't seem to need any holding in," said Mrs. Finkenbinder, as Billy, after proceeding a few rods at a gentle walk, stopped promptly at the first pull on the lines. "Hadn't you better touch him with the whip?"

"Not for worlds!" exclaimed Lemuel. "Get up, Billy!"

Billy started on again with the same pace as before.

"It's a risky thing," said Mr. Finkenbinder, "to touch a spirited horse with a whip—g'lang, Billy!—when he isn't looking for it. Many a runaway, Fan, has been caused—get up, Billy!—by that very thing."

"Why doesn't he go, Lem?"

"Why don't you drive him?"

"I am driving him as well as I can. Cluck! Cluck! Go on, Billy! Get up!"

"Hi Billy! Get out of this!" said Lemuel, his voice becoming somewhat loud and imperative.

Billy walked on at the same gentle gait.

"Let me take the lines!" ejaculated his owner. "Some women can never learn to drive a horse! Now, then, Billy, pike along! Get up! Get up! What do you mean, you lazy, cursory, good for noth—Look out, Fan! I'm going to touch him with the whip. Hold on to the dashboard!"

He seized the whip and laid it gently along Billy's flank.

Billy switched his tail, heaved a patient sigh and walked on.

"You low down, baseborn scrub!" roared Mr. Finkenbinder. "You milk livered son of a dray horse—watch out now, Fan! I'm going to raise him—Mike Said!"

He brought the whip down with all his might. He smote him hip and thigh, lengthwise, crosswise and diagonally.

"You walking ghost!" he shouted. "You lumbering old corpse! How do you like that! How does that feel, you"—

"Let me get out!" screamed Mrs. Finkenbinder.

Lemuel paid no attention to her. He kept on yelling at the horse and wielding the whip.

And Billy? At the first blow he pricked up his ears. At the second he stopped in his tracks, bowed his head and stood still till Lemuel was tired out and the storm was over.

Then he pricked up his ears and started on again, at the same unobtrusive, patient, leisurely walk.

And Mr. Lemuel Finkenbinder has a horse, warranted kind, gentle and perfectly safe for a woman to drive, that he will sell to anybody that wants him for about 'steen dollars, with a good halter thrown in.—Chicago Tribune.

Too Many Flies.

Holman Hunt, who began life as a clerk to an auctioneer and could not spell, was constantly drawing portraits when he should have been drawing up leases, and in his closest profession he was never slow to seize the flying moment. "I won't buy your oranges," he said to an old woman who had entered the office in search of a customer, "but I'll paint your portrait." Old Hannah was delighted, and thereupon she was put on paper in her habit as she lived, her basket on her head and an orange in her hand.

But one incident of this tedious yet ambitious period of the artist's life never ceased to afford him amusement. The windows in his room were made of ground glass, and as he had little to do he spent much of his time drawing flies upon their roughened surface. A blot of ink sufficed for the body, and some delicate pencil strokes for the wings, and at a distance the deception was perfect.

Day by day the number increased, and one morning his employer came in, stopped before the windows and exclaimed:

"I can't make out how it is. Every day that I come here I see more flies than were seen to be more and more flies!" and taking out his handkerchief he attempted to brush them away.—Youth's Companion.

DIED FIGHTING FIRE.

ALBERT DRAKE OF DUNELLEN KILLED BY EXCITEMENT.

He Went out to Quench a Brush Fire and two Hours Later was Found by a Neighbor—Heart Disease Supposed to Have Been the Cause of Death.

Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock some boys wantonly set fire to the dry grass and underbrush in the rear of Mr. Albert Drake's barn on the outskirts of Dunellen. Mr. Drake, seeing the flames extending in every direction and thinking his barn and stock would be destroyed, hastily drew two pails of water and started to fight back the fast spreading flames.

Two hours later a neighbor called and asked to see Mr. Drake. Mrs. Drake told him he was at the barn.

The neighbour found Mr. Drake lying near the barn on his face, dead. The two pails were upset by his side. Heart failure, brought on by the excitement, is supposed, caused his sudden death.

Deceased was about 55 years of age, a brother to Daniel Drake who formerly resided in Plainfield.

He leaves a wife, two sons and a married daughter, the latter the wife of Aaron Brower.

PERSONAL.

Miss Louise Leary of New York city is visiting her cousin Miss Slevin of Franklin place.

Frederick Willett of Craig place is visiting relatives and friends in Middletown, N. Y.

The Rev. Dr. Barnes, the new pastor of the M. E. Church, will be tendered a reception in Vincent chapel to night.

Mrs. Charles A. Reed of North Plainfield has been spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Clark of Somerville.

Mrs. James L. Slevin of Franklin place is spending the month of April in Cincinnati, Ohio. Having gone there on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Crother.

John P. Emmons, the builder, has broken ground for Mr. A. D. Cook's residence, to be erected on East Seventh street, adjoining the property of Dr. Endicott.

Mr. Ballington Booth expects to be the guests of Mr. Samuel Milliken on Central avenue during his short visit. Mr. Milliken will be glad to see any of the friends of Mr. Booth during the latter's stay.

The third of the series of "Six Evenings with Whittier," at All Souls' church, took place last evening. "Whittier in the Anti-Slavery Conflict" was the subject. A paper was read by Mrs. Florence Howe Hall.

The death occurred, yesterday, of Mrs. Hester A. Packard in the 74th year of her age. She was the eldest daughter of the late James Brooks. Funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon, at three o'clock, at her late residence, No. 9 Grove street.

Mr. A. E. Kenney has resigned the position of assistant agent and cashier at the Central Railroad freight office in this city, and has accepted a position with the Catholic Benevolant Legion, and will travel in the Order's interest. Mr. Kenney has held several positions of trust in this city, and has held the place he now resigns for three years.

A Chance to Meet Dr. Barnes.

There will be a reception at Vincent chapel this evening. Dr. Barnes, the new minister of the Methodist church will be the distinguished guest of the evening. He is a very genial gentlemen and is desirous of meeting all the church members and their friends. His invitation to children who recognize him to walk up and say "How do you do, Dr. Barnes? I'm "Peter Smith" is now well-known.

He will doubtless meet many "Peter Smiths" to night.

The ladies of the church have been to great trouble preparing suitable refreshments for all who call.

Scarlet Fever in City and Borough.

There is one case of scarlet fever in the city and two in the borough, that have been reported to the health authorities.

Mrs. Lawrence Kane of West Third street is ill with the disease. She is a widow, and has eight children. The house has been quarantined. The two cases in the borough are in the families of Mr. Smith on Manning avenue, and Mr. Sutterlin on Glenbrook road. Both the houses are quarantined.

Mock Trial at Washingtonville.

There was a mock trial at the Washingtonville school house last night. The suit was for $500 damages, which complainant alleged were due him from the defeased, who ran his "bob" in plaintiff's wagon. The jury brought in a verdict in favor of the plaintaiff for "six cents damages, a plug of tobacco, a pair of goggles for his optics and two months' at Dr. Cooley's Sanatarium."

Allen's Stage Upsets Again.

A front wheel of Allen's stage came off, as the stage was making the trip from the mountain to the depot, late yesterday afternoon, causing the vehicle to upset. Two passengers were in it at the time, but were not injured. This is the same one that upset nearly a year ago when a lady was injured.

—Young people of Bound Brook gave a sociable at the Watchung House, last night, which was largely attended by young people from Bound Brook, Somerville and Plainfield. A very enjoyable time was had, and the party danced until about five o'clock this morning. Prof. Guttman of this city, furnished the music, consisting of harp, violin and cornet.

—"Brother John," the new American play which William H. Crane has made so popular, closes its season at the Star Theatre, New York, on April 29th. The play has been more successful since it was first produced, a short time ago, and has become well known to all theatregoers. The last few days of its translation by actor Crane and his excellent company are marked by crowded houses and it is quite probable that there will be many who will regret having missed it through procrastination. The scene of the first and last acts is that of "Brother John's" country home and is not a bit stagey. The scenery in the second and third acts, representing the interior of a Long Branch villa, is very handsome and artistic, and the moonlight that plays on the ocean waves most realistic.

Found Dead in Bed.

Miss Mellie Randolph, died suddenly last night, at the home of Mr. George Randolph, Duer street, North Plainfield. She returned as usual last night and was found dead in bed this morning. Miss Randolph had been troubled a great deal with heart disease and it is supposed that was the cause of death. Deceased was a sister of Mr. Henry Clay Randolph of Short Hills and an aunt of Mrs. G. Frank French of Somerset street.

Willibaid Said to be Dying.

Frederick Willibald, of this city, nineteen years old, an inmate of the county jail, is said to be dying from epilepsy. Every day he has several spasms, and now is so weak he cannot eat. One day last week he had twenty-five in twelve hours. He is held for trial for robbing the Union News Company in this city.

RAILROAD EXTENSIONS

THE CENTRAL AND PENNSYLVANIA INVADING EACH OTHER'S TERRITORY.

The Central to Build a Branch from Bound Brook to Perth Amboy—The Pennsylvania Will Retaliate by Coming to Plainfield.

The Central Railroad Company of New Jersey has begun work upon a branch to run from Perth Amboy to Bound Brook. The preliminary survey was completed a short time ago. The new branch leaves the Central tracks just north of Raritan river bridge and follows the north shore of the river to New Brunswick, thence to Bound Brook. The new route will shorten the Central's time between Philadelphia and the shore about forty minutes.

The Pennsylvania has heretofore had a monopoly in that region.

The Central was led to this course by the threats of the Pennsylvania Railroad to tap the Central territory and the belief that the Pennsylvania's new extension to Plainfield and adjoining territory is practically determined upon.

Plainfield is one of the Central's best paying districts, and the only reason why the Pennsylvania has not forked it in the past is that there has been a mutual understanding not to trespass upon each other's grounds.

As THE NEWS has stated before the proposed line of the Pennsylvania will no doubt pass along the edge of the mountain.

In a very short time there will be evidence of the abolishment of agreements in the shape of actual construction. Besides a line to Plainfield a road to the Orange has been planned.

What will become of the Raritan river road, extending from New Brunswick to South Amboy, is a question of interest. It has been offered to both the Central and Pennsylvania, but neither company seems to have been satisfied with the price. It is thought by some that before the Central gets far with its new line the Raritan River road will be cheaper.

McCready Sykes One of the Orators.

The Faculty of Princeton University at a meeting last evening announced that, as a result of the contests held in the two halls, Whig and Clio, the following men had been appointed to take part in the annual junior oratorical contest, to be held on Monday evening of commencement week:

From Whig Hall—James Maclin Broadnax of Mason, Texn.; Herbert Herschel Fisher of Peoria, Ill.; Ernest Farwell Keigwin of Wilmington, Del., and Edward Reed Laughlin of Pittsburg, Penn. From Clio Hall—Alexander McGaffin of Belfast, Ireland; George Stewart McCants of Omaha, Neb.; Benjamin William McGregor Sykes of South Plains, N. J., and Donald McCall of Caledonia, N. Y. These men were chosen from forty-two contestants.

Mr. Chase Protects Himself.

Certain discharged employees of Mr. Richard F. M. Chase of Somerset street, thought to impose upon him by bringing suit and claiming a large amount of money, when in fact they were indebted to him. Mr. Chase is not the kind of man to submit to imposition of this character. He retained Craig A. Marsh to defend the action with instructions to carry the matter to the court of last resort, if necessary. The case was heard yesterday and resulted in the discomfiture of the plaintiff. Mr. Chase had the case dismissed with costs of suit. The loss of time and annoyance to Mr. Chase were considerable, but the community is indebted to every man, who will submit to the inconvenience and annoyance of a lawsuit in order to show such people as the plaintiff that employers have some rights.

Lodge Meeting and Birthday Reception.

At a regular meeting of Iona Council, Degree of Pocahontas, held in Red Men's hall, last evening, there were four candidates initiated and a committee appointed to make arrangements to hold an apron and necktie social early in May. A birthday reception was also tendered Mrs. Wm. Klein. Music, recitations and singing were the features of the evening. This was one of the most pleasant evenings this council has held. They are meeting with success and their meetings are largely attended. A piano is the latest addition to the wigwam's attractions, and the keeper of records, Mrs. Canfield, delighted them all with her selections last night.

An Old Man Injured.

As the train which leaves here at 11:09 a. m. for New York, was leaving Bergen Point yesterday morning, a stone was thrown through the window into one of the cars, striking Mr. John McCandless, an old man, on the side of the head, cutting an ugly gash. A Plainfield gentleman, who was in the seat with him, helped to wash the blood off the wound and cover it with court plaster. When the train reached Jersey City he was taken to a physician.

A Beef Company Employee Injured.

One of the employees of the Armour Beef Company of East Third street, named Carrington, was injured yesterday. He was cutting a piece of meat, when the knife slipped and the point of the blade ran into his leg, cutting a gash just above his knee.

WORK OF THE PRESBYTERY.

Delegates Appointed and Other Business Done.

Rev. Mr. Sewell, the new moderator of the Presbytery of Elizabeth, presided at the service Tuesday afternoon.

Rev. W. C. Carrington, the temporary clerk, read the minutes of the previous meetings and they were approved.

The report of the state of the church was then read by Rev. J. M. Bourne of the Madison Avenue church. There were several indications of substantial advancement along the various lines of Christian work. The Sabbath school interests have been greatly increased. Parents have shown fidelity to the church in presenting their children for baptism, but as to family worship only a portion have established the family altar. The financial reports show an increase in the contribution to benevolence.

In the narrative referred to the pernicious influence of the race tracks and the necessity of increased exertion and concentrated battling against it. It was adopted and the Stated Clerk directed to forward a copy to the General Assembly.

The conversation on the condition of the churches occupied the balance of the afternoon session.

In the evening the meeting was largely attended. The services were of much interest and were held in the mission cause. Eloquent and instructive addresses were made by Rev. Dr. W. C. Richards, of the Brown memorial church of this city, who is a member of the Board of Foreign Missions, and Rev. Dr. Charles H. Spaeling, of New York, who represents the Home Board.

The Presbytery resumed its business session yesterday morning. The first half hour was taken up with devotional exercises after which there was routine business.

At eleven o'clock the election of delegates to the General Assembly which will meet in Washington, D. C., on May 18th, took place.

The ministerial delegates who were elected by ballot were Rev. Dr. J. G. Hammer, of Lamington, and Rev. N. W. Cadwell, of Westfield.

The alternates chosen were: Rev. Dr. E. P. Ketchum, of this city, and Rev. George Hallowell, of Rahway.

The delegates to represent the elders were B. C. Squires, of this city, and Hon. William D. Corwin, of Elizabeth.

Tuesday afternoon the Elders' Association held its annual meeting and elected officers as follows:

Moderator, David R. Dowset; clerk and treasurer, Joseph Reeds, of Perth Amboy. Executive Committee, B. C. Squires and J. M. Botman, Plainfield; James Lee, Rahway, and Edward Quackenbush, of Roselle.

Pen Sketches from Life.

A phlegmatic German carrying a canvass bag over his shoulder was an object of interest on Somerset street this noon.

Every little while the end of the bag would bob around in a frantic way while from within came scraps of cat "cussewords," remonstrances, challenges and a choice collection of opinions, all delivered in a high pitched tone—sometimes above tenor. The German walked on as calmly as if nothing unusual was happening. Once or twice when the end of the bag evinced a tendency to go four or five ways at once and would slide off his shoulder in the attempt he would swing it over to the opposite shoulder and smile complacently.

In response to a question he said "Oh, Yah! Meester Smahley he left ein cat as mein house, which I of him bought. I vas yust to Meester Smahley dose cat bring. Ha! Ha! Dose cat like it, aind't it?"

Death of a Former Jerseyman.

Word has just reached the friends of Watson Shurts by telegraph from Joliet, Illinois, informing them of his sudden death. Deceased was about 60 years of age and had just returned to his home in Joliet after seeing President Cleveland installed and paying a visit to his relatives in New Jersey. He was on the staff of the Governor of Illinois and his numerous friends were booming him for official honors in his State.

He had many acquaintances here, having been in the employment of Hunterdon county, and was an uncle of Mrs. D. S. Campbell of Dunellen. Mr. Shurts leaves a wife but no children. He was said to be very wealthy.

Liable for Damages.

In a late opinion the Supreme Court says that if an engineer on a railroad engine, approaching a point where it is his duty to sound a whistle, as required by the statutes, observes near by on a highway a man struggling with a team of horses hitched to a wagon, and can see from the surroundings that sounding a whistle will make the team unmanageable and greatly endanger the team and man, it is his duty to desist until the danger point is passed, or if necessary, to stop the train, and if he does not, but needlessly sounds the whistle and persisting in so doing, causing the team to run away, the company is liable for the injuries inflicted.

Suits Against the New Jersey Jockey Club.

Quasi criminal proceeding have been begun in the Supreme Courts, at Trenton, against Michael Dwyer, Hugh McIntyre and a score of bookmakers operating on the Elizabeth race track to recover penalties amounting to nearly a million dollars for violating the anti-gambling law of 1874, which provides for a fine of $5,000 for each case where a lottery is conducted.

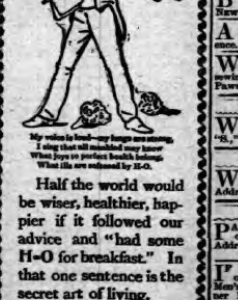
The suits are brought by Charles H. Bayley, Patrick Coleman and others, representing the Law and Order people. The suit against Dwyer and McIntyre is for $892,000 for 626 violation, and the amount of their bail is fixed at $50,000 each.

The bookmakers are John B. White, William Snow, George Lovell, William Nixon, John Fredericks, Orlando A. Jones, Frank A. Arnhold, George Smith, H. Stedeker, Fred Lenz, John Fernandez, Samuel Spencer, William Riley, Patrick J. Murphy, Rob't Irving, Joseph Redmer, George Morgan, Charles Dimond, Michael Goodwin, and Henry Simon. Suits are brought against each of these latter for $12,000 for six violations, and bail in each case is fixed at $6,000.

The ball is made so high on the ground that the descendants are non-residents of New Jersey.

Music Hall Notes.

Herrmann, the magician, one of the cleverest public entertainers of modern times, will appear at Music Hall Saturday. Herrmann is a great master of the "Black Art," but he works his spells with such finish, and ease, and grace, that one sits quite content to be humbugged. He is the foremost of prestidigitateurs, and although Dante would have condemned him to eternal punishment, as he does all magicians, the theatre-goers hope that Herrmann will live long to dazzle with his wonders. He announces this season a most remarkable entertainment, which includes his great Chinese masterpiece called "Yakoyo" the emigration mystery.



My voice is loud—my lungs are strong,
I sing the call of "New Arrival"
When boys or girls look into the world
What life are ushered by H-O.

Half the world would be wiser, healthier, happier if it followed our advice and "had some H-O for breakfast." In that one sentence is the secret art of living.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Choctaw Troubles.

The two political parties in the Choctaw nation, southeast corner of the Indian Territory, have shown their capacity for the white man's statehood. They prepared to fight for their respective rights, as contending parties in some of the sovereign states of the Union have done. The treaty made in 1865, however, between the United States on the one hand and the Choctaws and Chickasaws on the other provides that the United States shall protect the two nations from internal disorder as well as outside attacks. In pursuance of the right given by the treaty our government has sent regular soldiers to keep the peace.

There are two political parties among the Choctaws—the conservative, called the National, and the Progressive. The National party wants to draw the tribal line sharply and discriminate against negroes and outsiders of all kinds. Between red, white and black the Nationals decide in favor of red and against white and black in the matter of privilegesof residence, citizenship and trading. The Progressives, on the other hand, encourage a generous policy of immigration and citizenship. Their influence has been so strong in the national councils that some years ago citizen's rights were given to the negro men among the Choctaws.

Since 1890 the Progressives have been victorious at the polls. W. W. Jones has been twice elected governor, but last August the Nationals made a fight over the counting of the votes. This is the origin of the present trouble. The votes were counted again at the council of the nation in October, and the office again was given to Governor Jones. In the bitter quarrel immediately following the election in August four Progressives were assassinated by Nationals. Ever since then there has been imminent danger of a pitched battle until the United States troops were sent to keep the peace. Several Nationals were arrested for the murder of the Jones men. It was in the attempt to arrest others that the battle took place at the house of Dick Locke, a National. The arresting and attacking party was composed of the Choctaw militia, called out by Governor Jones. Several were killed and wounded on both sides. After that Dick Locke built a fort and armed and provisioned it and defied the whole Jones power.

Descended From Columbus.

Don Christobel Colon de Toledo de la Cerda y Ganta, duke of Veragua, marquis of Jamaica and admiral and adelantado mayor of the Indies, is his name, and he is thirteenth in direct descent from the great discoverer of America. In spite of both name and descent, however, Don Christobel Colon de Toledo, etc., etc., etc., is a good deal of a man. For this reason quite as much as because he is descended from Columbus the Duke of Veragua comes to us as chief of the representatives of Spain at the Columbian fair. His ancient blood is indeed no great thing in Spanish eyes, for the real yellow old grandees of Spain trace their blood back centuries before Columbus was born.

In appearance the Duke of Veragua resembles somewhat our own Chauncey Depew. He does not take to oratory and railroading, however, but to agriculture and livestock breeding. He is a Liberal in politics and at one time was royal commissioner of agriculture. He is chiefly admired among his fellow countrymen because he breeds the champion animals for the public bull fights at Madrid. The Veragua bulls are the most ferocious and famous of all those that appear in the ring in Spain—among the most savage that ever killed their man or horse before the eyes of a delighted audience. A thousand dollars is a not uncommon price for the Duke of Veragua to receive for one of these animals. He is a good financier, and partly from ancestral estates, partly from live stock breeding and other business operations not beneath the notice of a noble duke, he has managed to accumulate an annual income as large as the salary of the president of the United States.

It will be great fun for outsiders if at the next session of the senate the case of Senator Roach of North Dakota should be taken up for investigation. Democratic senators declare if it is thus taken up they will unearth every mean thing every Republican senator has done in his life and lay it before the public. Merely to get even of course the Republican senators would be compelled to take the same course with regard to Democrats, and between the two there would be a merry go round such as the country has not witnessed in years. We shall see who is afraid and who dares not.

We honor North Carolina above nearly every other state in this Union. She is a great and good state. The railroad commissioners of North Carolina have issued an order that baggage smashing on the roads of that state shall be stopped henceforth. So far as we can discover these gentlemen are the first railroad commissioners or railroad officials of any kind to take measures to prevent expressmen and brakemen from playing baseball with passengers' trunks.

William Lummis, 92 years old, of Rocky Plains, Ga., says he never took a ride in a railway car in his life. William ought to be ashamed to tell it.

DUE TO KING LEOPOLD.

The Suffrage Bill Was Passed at His Command.

URGED BY ENGLAND AND THE POPE.

Now the People Will Insist on a Single Suffrage—What a Plural Vote Really Means—Brussels Quiet After the Riots. still Another Earthquake in Zante.

PARIS, April 20.—It is reported that the Belgian deputies were moved to accept the Nyssen proposals by King Leopold's threat to dissolve the chamber. Both the pope and Mr. Gladstone urged the king to take this position. As England was a party to the agreement neutralizing Belgium in 1837, her ministry felt warranted in interfering to dissuade the king from incurring the grave responsibility of forcing the people to revolution.

Brussels Is Quiet.

BRUSSELS, April 20.—The city is as quiet as though there never had been a strike. Most of the men have resumed work, although there are many who are not yet satisfied. The vote of the chamber of deputies does not go far enough for those men, for while it nominally grants universal suffrage, it permits plural voting based upon the extent of one's possessions. Many extremists here say that the strikers, emboldened by their success, will shortly demand the further concession of a "single suffrage," such as prevails in the United States. There are not wanting signs which indicate that the fire is only smoldering.

On the Verge of a Revolution.

This makes the condition of affairs critical, for if by any combination of circumstances the Belgian government should be overthrown, even conservative statesmen admit that there would be a serious danger of a general continental European war, with France and Germany as the first parties involved in the struggle for the possession of Belgium.

Reports which have come in indicate that the strike was much more serious and cost more lives and wounds than has been generally stated. The king is in favor with the populace. His oft expressed views on the question of universal suffrage have made him popular, but the extreme labor leaders say that no feeling of friendship shall deter them from achieving their ultimate object. One alarming fact developed by the strike is that the Belgian officials would be unable to cope successfully with a well armed and tolerably organized mob.

What the Plural Vote Means.

The scheme of plural or cumulative voting, provided for in the Nyssen bill, confers a vote on every male citizen, aged 25 years, who has resided at least one year in the same commune and who has never been convicted of a breach of the law. The bill confers an additional vote on those who possess the following qualifications.

First—Every male citizen, aged 35 years, and either married or a widower, paying a government tax of at least 5 francs in amount, unless exempted from the tax on account of his profession.

Second—Upon every male citizen, aged 25 years, who is an owner of real estate of the value of at least 2,000 francs, or who has been inscribed for at least two years on the ledger of the public debt or in the stock-book of a bank for savings, as the possessor of shares to the value of 2,000 francs.

Third—Upon every male citizen aged 25 years, who is the bearer of a diploma of superior education or a similar certificate, showing that he has attended a complete course of higher instruction in a public or private seminary, or that is filling or has filled a public office or is holding or has held a position, or is exercising or has exercised a profession implying superior education, the question as to what positions and professions shall be regarded as qualifying under this clause to be decided by law. No person is to be entitled to more than three votes and voting is made obligatory.

Palace Guarded by Detectives.

ROME, April 20.—Archduke Rainer of Austria arrived here and dined at the quirinal. As rumors of a plot to assassinate King Humbert or the German emperor are circulated persistently, many Austrian and Italian detectives are watching the palace, and the Austrian embassy, and the route between them. More than 350 socialists and anarchists have been arrested since Sunday. All will be detained until the close of the fetes. The radical and socialist newspapers are protesting strongly against the summary measures adopted by the police.

Still Another Earthquake.

ATHENS, April 20.—Zante was shaken by a severe earthquake at midnight. Slight disturbances were felt almost hourly until noon, when another violent shock caused a repetition of the recent panics. The historic houses of the poets Foscolo and Salomos were inundated into ruins. The harbor was thrown into violent commotion and enormous waves broke over the water front. The British warship Inflexible of the Mediterranean squadron has arrived with food and tents.

A Millionaire Perjurer.

VIENNA, April 20.—Simon Oppasich, a multi-millionaire of this city, was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment at hard labor for perjury. Oppasich has just been released from prison, where he had served a term for a similar offense. He is a member of one of the most powerful families of the moneyed aristocracy of Boston.

The Royal Silver Wedding.

ROME, April 20.—There has been an enormous influx of visitors from all parts of Italy. Hotels and pensions are crowded already. The city has been decorated with bunting and flags, and the promenade are gay with the uniforms of regiments from the provinces to take part in the grand military review. The weather is perfect.

Collision of Warships.

MALTA, April 20.—A torpedo boat collided with H. M. S. Nile off the coast and stove a hole in her bow. The warship was headed directly to the docks, where she will be repaired. She leaks badly. The Nile is one of the British Mediterranean squadron. She is covered with steel armor 20 inches thick.

Duchess of Sutherland Ill.

LONDON, April 20.—The doctors in attendance upon the dowager Duchess of Sutherland have sent certificates to the authorities to the effect that the duchess is too ill to surrender and undergo the sentence of imprisonment imposed by Justice Jeune.

ANOTHER OUTBREAK THREATENED

Troops Ready to Go at Once on the Tracy Miners.

NASHVILLE, April 20.—Reports yesterday of unexpected trouble with the free miners at Tracy City, Tenn., were so alarming that Adjutant General Fite at once placed the local military companies under arms and secured a special train, which was kept in readiness to move at a moment's notice. The trouble at the mines grew out of the placing of a new warden and new guards at the Tracy City prison.

The first information of the threatened outbreak came in a telegram to Mr. N. Baxter, president of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway company, the lessee of the state convicts, to the effect that the miners were threatening to liberate the convicts, about 300 in number, at Tracy City.

This message was at once sent to the capital, and then the wires were kept hot to Tracy City. Warden Shrion telegraphed that he thought he had the 30 guards under him could easily hold their own, as they were well armed with Springfield rifles and had 2,000 rounds of ammunition.

A telegram at midnight said that the miners had held a meeting and were very demonstrative. Adjutant General Fite says there will be no temporizing as was witnessed last year.

Reception to the Duke.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The chamber of commerce tendered 500 invitations to the reception at the Waldorf in honor of the Duke de Veragua and his party. From the crowd that jammed and pushed and tramped through the gorgeous apartments of the hotel for three suffocating hours at that very democratic function, it would seem that most of the 5,000 must have been made out of the Hallelooa and then came out and turned their tickets over to their friends on the sidewalk. The affair was a crush.

Confessed to a Murder.

DETROIT, April 20.—In court here Otto Schultkers, a young man in the last stages of consumption, swore he had killed William Knack, a crime for which his uncle, George Bonsenberger, had been convicted and sentenced to prison for life. A new trial was granted on affidavit of Schultkers. The dying man was unable to walk, and sat propped in a chair with pillows. Schultkers was kept on the stand for an hour and a half, and when released he was in a state of profound coma.

Seventh Regiment Veterans Celebrated.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The Seventh regiment veterans celebrated a double event at Delmonico's, the anniversary of the march to Washington and the anniversary of the organization of the regiment 69 years ago. A bronze tablet to be erected in the Fulton building, which stands on the site of the Shakespeare tavern, the birthplace of the regiment, was also unveiled.

Three Bills Were Killed.

ALBANY, April 20.—The bill intended to relieve Carlyle Harris, to allow appeals from refusals of lower courts to grant new trials in murder cases in the third district in the senate committee. The bill to provide for the blanket ballot in New York was defeated in the senate. New York and New Jersey are the only states not using it.

Guarding Against Cholera.

WHEELING, April 20.—The West Virginia state board of health, in view of a possible epidemic of cholera, has adopted stringent measures looking to a thorough inspection at the points of entry of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chesapeake and Ohio railroads, these lines passing through the entire state from east to west.

Union League Club Condemned.

NEW YORK, April 20.—At the last regular monthly meeting of the Twenty-eighth District Democratic association a resolution was unanimously adopted condemning the recent action of the Union League club in rejecting Theodore J. Seligman, an applicant for membership, because of his religious faith.

Tried and Then Lynched.

MORRILTON, Ark., April 20.—The special grand jury indicted Flanagan Thornton, murderer of Constable Pate, for murder in the second degree. A mob took Thornton out of jail about midnight and strung him up in the main street, also firing a few bullets into his body.

Railroad Injunction Granted.

NEW YORK, April 20.—Judge Bartlett granted a temporary injunction against the Brooklyn City railroad. The company is building a trolley line from Newtown to the ferry and the route between them. More than 350 socialists and anarchists have been arrested since Sunday. All will be detained until the close of the fetes. The radical and socialist newspapers are protesting strongly against the summary measures adopted by the police.

Still Another Earthquake.

ATHENS, April 20.—Zante was shaken by a severe earthquake at midnight. Slight disturbances were felt almost hourly until noon, when another violent shock caused a repetition of the recent panics. The historic houses of the poets Foscolo and Salomos were inundated into ruins. The harbor was thrown into violent commotion and enormous waves broke over the water front. The British warship Inflexible of the Mediterranean squadron has arrived with food and tents.

Consul Collins Ready to Sail.

BOSTON, April 20.—Hon. P. A. Collins, consul general to London, will leave Boston this afternoon for New York and will sail from that city Saturday morning. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Collins, his children and vice consul and Mrs. Grace.

Accident to a State Senator.

ST. PAUL, April 20.—James A. Lawrey, state senator and congressman-elect from the First Minnesota district, met with a probably fatal accident. He fell down a flight of stairs, alighting upon his head and fracturing his skull.

Strikers Want Protection.

TOPEKA, April 20.—The Santa Fe strike is becoming more and more serious. At Argentine, near Kansas City, trouble has been threatened, and a committee of strikers called on Governor Lewelling to implore his assistance.

Killed While Shoveling Snow.

DENVER, April 20.—L. D. Reithman came in contact with an electric wire while shoveling snow from the roof of one of his buildings and was instantly killed. Reithman was one of the richest men in the city.

Bishops In Conference.

BALTIMORE, April 20.—The bishops of the Episcopal province of Baltimore of the Catholic church held their annual business meeting and conference at the cardinal's residence. Cardinal Gibbons presided.

Wrecked on the Iron Mountain.

ST. LOUIS, April 20.—A passenger train southbound on the Iron Mountain road was wrecked near Victoria. Conductor Dates, two trainmen and three passengers were badly injured.

Veterans of the Baltimore Riot.

BOSTON, April 20.—The members of the old Sixth Massachusetts regiment celebrated the thirty-second anniversary of their tragic march through Baltimore in 1861.

Death of Rev. T. Sanford Doolittle.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., April 20.—Rev. T. Sanford Doolittle, vice president of Rutgers' college, died of heart failure. His literary works are well known.

TO ABROGATE TREATIES

Reciprocity Arrangements Do Not Suit the President.

WE ARE NOT TREATED FAIRLY.

More Gold Is Coming In and the Situation Is Brighter—The Official Programme For the Naval and Land Parade at New York—Women Officeholders.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The president and his secretaries of state and of the treasury, it is said, do not look with favor upon the reciprocity treaty made by the last administration, and statistics are being collated of their effect upon trade and business of the United States. These investigations, it is said, have almost led to a conclusion to terminate the arrangements with Brazil and with Spain in behalf of Cuba and Porto Rico.

At the state department it was said that the treaties had not yet been terminated, and it is therefore supposed that the matter is still in negotiation with the governments named. The Cuban treaty, it is thought, may perhaps depend upon concessions being made to this country. Complaints have been made that Cuba and Porto Rico are not carrying out the reciprocity treaties in a spirit of fairness, and that the local officials are violating the terms of the agreements.

Flour, it is said, is one of the articles as to which the president does not think it is being fairly treated. The Brazilian treaty can only be abrogated after three months' notice. The inquiry has to do with workings of the reciprocity arrangements with South American countries will be continued, and it is likely that the next year will witness certain decided changes of policy as to reciprocity.

The New York Programme.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The navy department has issued the following programme of ceremonies to be observed in connection with the naval review at New York:

A banquet by the chamber of commerce to the officers of the review fleet on the evening of the 26th.

A reception at the city hall, New York, by the mayor to the officers of the naval review fleet at 9 p. m., April 28. Carriages will be provided by the chamber of commerce to take the officers from Forty-second street, North river, to the city hall.

This reception will be followed by a land parade of marines and sailors from the United States vessels, and from such of the foreign vessels as may be willing to join. The march will be from Forty-second street, North river, march by Forty-second street to Fifth avenue, then to Fourteenth street, then to Broadway, then by the city hall, then to embark at most convenient point to return to ships.

The army steamer General Meigs has been detailed to take the Dukedo Veragua and his suite during the review and will follow in line with the reviewing vessel. Major General Schofield and Rear Admiral Belknap will accompany the Duke de Veragua. Commander Goodrich has been detailed to take charge of the General Meigs.

It has been agreed that the ministers representing the different countries shall present their officers to the president on board the Dolphin.

There will also be given a banquet on the 28th at Delmonico's by the Grant Monument association, at which Secretary Herbert will be present.

Gold Situation Brighter.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—"The free gold in the treasury is now $1,176,000," said Secretary Carlisle when asked by an American Press representative as to the condition of the treasury. This is an increase of more than $500,000 in one day and indicates that the treasury is recuperating better than has been generally known, for the amount is not fully reflected in the department's books at this time. The secretary would not indicate when he expected to do so, nor the gold exports should consume all his free gold and leave the gold supply in the treasury in even a worse condition than at present. He said:

"I am not proclaiming what my policy will be until the issue squarely presents itself. I am disposed to wait and meet the emergency when it arises."

It is fairly evident that the secretary is encouraged by more favorable symptoms the past few days than he had hopes that the scare is over. It is hoped at the treasury department that the gold situation has again passed through another acute stage and that it is believed by many there will be after this week a cessation of foreign gold demands. The increase of free gold was partly secured from Philadelphia and was further swelled by assistance from the west. It is the aim of the department to accumulate sufficient gold before Saturday to meet exports on that day out of the free gold balance and thus to postpone the decision of the question of a change of policy.

Women Officeholders Increasing.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The ninth annual report of the civil service commission has been made public. The noteworthy features of it are the showing made as to the increasing number of women who are entering the public service through the civil service system and the remarks made as to political assessments.

The report shows that during the past year the proportion of women appointed under the civil service laws increased from less than one woman to five men a year. This the report shows that the prejudice against women in the classified service is disappearing and a good feeling prevails as to promotions which are based on efficiency records. During the past year there has been a decided increase in the number of women promoted to the higher grades of work. The commission consider the stand it took in reference to political assessments the most noteworthy feature of its work during the year.

Trumps Must Break Stone.

FONDA, N. Y., April 20.—The board of supervisors of Montgomery county has authorized Sheriff Liddle to set the prisoners in the county jail at work breaking stone. While no money is expected out of the scheme, it is thought that there will be a decrease in the number of tramps who seek quarters at the jail.

gradually growing worse. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and for five weeks I ate scarcely anything. My weight was reduced and I had no more color than a snowbank exposed. Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and I thought I would try it. Before I had finished the first bottle I noticed that I felt better, and after the administration of the third bottle I knew that I was improving. I continued to take it and in a few weeks I was able to walk around the house. After I had taken three bottles I could eat anything without suffering pain. I have gained in flesh and had to cut 5 inches off my coat. I have now fully recovered, thanks to FUN IN HAMPTON ROADS.

Sudden Departure of a British Gunboat From the Festivities.

FORT MONROE, Va., April 20.—There are lively scenes on all the shores around the Roads. The crews from San Francisco are being made the heroes of the occasion, as they won all the international races without exception. With all the social amenities of peace there was a little breeze of war times yesterday afternoon when the British gunboat Partridge left the Roads very suddenly.

It is understood that she had orders to hasten to Nassau, where it is reported there is some difficulty between white inhabitants and some of the colored natives. The crowd at Old Point Comfort continues to increase largely every day. The foreign and American seamen fraternize very readily, and there have been no disturbances. The dance given on the Newark by Miss Benham, daughter of Admiral Benham, is regarded as one of the most brilliant social events of the week, although the reception on the Chicago was also a great event.

Clothing Cutters Advised.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The annual meeting of the Clothing Manufacturers' association was held at the Madison Avenue hotel and was prolonged until after midnight. All the officers and the entire executive board were unanimously re-elected. Commissioner Feeney of the state board of mediation and arbitration appeared before the association and appealed to the members to seriously consider the matter of the lockout and endeavor to make some concession that would lead to a settlement of the differences with the representatives of the American Federation of Labor and the United Garment Workers of America. Mr. Feeney was listened to attentively, but no pledges were given as to the future action of the association.

Editors Elect Officers.

NEW YORK, April 20.—At the annual meeting of the New York State Associated Press, held here, the following officers were elected: President, W. F. Balkam of the Rochester Union; secretary and treasurer, R. R. Soper of the Elmira Gazette; members of the executive committee, James H. Manning of Albany, Charles S. Francis of Troy, J. H. Cunningham of Utica, Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, W. J. Knapp of Auburn, J. R. Platt of Poughkeepsie, Howard G. White of Syracuse and Charles M. Dickinson of Binghamton.

Shot His Mother-in-Law.

MONONGAHELA CITY, Pa., April 20.—About 11:30 o'clock Tuesday night James Barrineott shot and killed his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lettie Troy. Thinking burglars had entered the house he procured his shotgun and without speaking to the intruder fired both barrels. He discovered to his horror that he had blown the head off of Mrs. Troy.

To Choose a Bishop.

BOSTON, April 20.—The committee of five appointed by the Low churchmen met the High churchmen at their conference at the diocesan house, but without result. After a long discussion of the situation and votes that resulted in no choice, the meeting was adjourned to next Wednesday.

Miners' Money Comes to Sight.

HOLLY, Mich., April 20.—Men who have been prospecting on the farm of the dead miners Thomas and John Fagan discovered $7,000 in gold in a 5-quart jug and an earthen quart bottle. This makes about $34,000 in money already found, and still the family expect to find much more.

Court Martial For an Ensign.

BOOTH STRICKEN DOWN

The Great Actor Paralyzed at the Players' Club.

THE FACT CONCEALED FOR HOURS.

His Daughter and Son-in-Law Present at His Bedside During His Last Hours. Only Rallied Once During the Day—His Melancholy Life at the Club.

NEW YORK, April 20.—Edwin Booth, the actor, was stricken with paralysis at an early hour yesterday morning.

One of the pages at the Players' clubhouse, on Gramercy park, where Mr. Booth is living, went to his room about 7 a. m. to awaken him and he discovered the great actor in a semi-comatose condition.

Aid was immediately summoned, and Mr. Booth's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Grossman, were sent for. They answered at once, bringing Dr. Jackson with them.

Mr. Booth's own physician, Dr. St. Clair Smith, arrived soon after with Dr. Ransom, and the three doctors made a most careful examination. They found that Mr. Booth was suffering from a stroke of paralysis, resulting from a rupture of one of the blood vessels of the brain.

His Illness Kept Secret.

Mr. Booth remained in a half unconscious condition all day, only rallying a little about 10 o'clock p. m. He recognized one or two of his friends and his daughter, but the recognition was merely momentary. The fact of Mr. Booth's illness was kept exceedingly quiet, and only his immediate friends and his doctors knew of it at a late hour last night. The actors, of whom there was a large number at the clubhouse during the afternoon and evening, chatted, dined and played billiards, entirely unconscious of their president's condition.

The last four years of Mr. Booth's life have been passed at the Players' club in comparative retirement. During the summer months of 1891 and 1892 he spent considerable time with his daughter at Narragansett.

When He Began to Fail.

It was in the latter year, while making his annual visit, that he was so seriously ill at her house. His friends, particularly solicitous for his health just at that time, had grave apprehensions that he would not have sufficient strength to warrant attempting a return to New York, but with cooler weather came an improvement in his condition, and he returned to the Players' club in October.

From this time those who knew him most intimately remarked a steady decline in his health. A strange apathy which seemed to bind him hand and foot increased during the winter until the slightest exertion was accompanied by pronounced manifestations of exhaustion.

It was this that led Mr. Booth to cling more and more closely to his own rooms, venturing down stairs but seldom, and even more rarely leaving the house either to dine quietly with some one of his friends or with his daughter.

His Life at the Club.

During all this time his weakness appeared purely physical. His memory for names of places and of people with whom he had been associated in former years was unimpaired, and his mind singularly alert to impressions of persons and things with which he came daily in contact. He read constantly, but wrote little, and was extremely heedless in respect to his correspondence.

He has been in the habit of sitting alone in his rooms talking quietly with his friends, or reading, who knows how sadly, his old plays. When he has ventured down stairs or out to dine, it has been with hesitating step and leaning heavily on the arm of a friend, the frailty of his form contrasting strongly with his face, to which the sweetness and peace of advancing years, while it has usurped the place of the flash and inspiration of youth, has seemed only to lend an added dignity.

Letta Wray, a young woman of 20, in St. Joseph, Mo., is held for forgeries amounting to $6,000.

The supreme court judges of Wasington say it has no jurisdiction to try the naval review at Hampton Roads or at New York on the opening of the World's fair.

Four burglars were surprised at work on the postoffice safe at Stapleton, L. I. They escaped.

It has been decided that there is to be a land parade of the naval forces in New York on April 29.

Dr. Walter Scowcis, an expert witness called in the Buchanan poisoning trial in New York, took offense at the cross examination of the district attorney, and wanted to challenge him to fight a duel.

Charles Sly was arrested in Watertown, N. Y., on a charge of swindling. He advertised to secure employment at the World's fair.

Burglars in Sedalia, Mo., dragged a safe 140 yards and blew it open.

The report that Minister Mahaney at Zanzibar had acquired one of the Galapagos islands for the United States is denied.

FOUR FATALLY SCALDED.

The Cylinder Head of a Steamer's Engine Blew Out.

DETROIT, April 20.—A shocking disaster, resulting in the death of two men, the probable fatal injury of a third and the severe scalding of a fourth, occurred on Lake St. Clair. The "straight back" steamer Chester, Captain W. W. Smith, road laden, from Cleveland to Milwaukee, was entering the lake when the cylinder head blew out.

Nelson Chambers, the cook, who was standing nearest the engine at the time, was so badly scalded that he died within 10 minutes. C. Jones, fireman, 29 years old, residence unknown, died after being taken to the hospital. F. P. Thompson, oiler, 29 years old, of Cleveland, was badly burned about the hands and head and in the mouth and throat from inhaling steam. His recovery is doubtful. The engineer, F. Smith, was badly but not dangerously scalded about the hands.

Capitalists After Warner Miller.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The Sun said today: "Rogli-h capitalists who have invested money in the Nicaragua canal project after the scalp of ex-Senator Warner Miller. They threaten that if he does not resign before noon today, there will be a mighty lively time for Miller at a meeting of the stockholders at T. N. Motley & Co.'s office at 43 John street, to be held at noon. This call is issued in response to a call issued by George Charles Knight, who came to this city from England some time ago to represent the English investors."

Union Pacific Engineers May Strike.

OMAHA, April 20.—There may be a walkout of engineers and firemen on the Union Pacific. At least that is what the striking from workers claim. The advisory committee of the strikers held a conference with a delegation from the Engineers and Firemen's Brotherhoods, and although the outcome is not known, one of the strike leaders asserted that the engineers would refuse to handle any engine repaired by "scabs" except those that drawn the last mail. There are no indications as yet, however, of the enginemen going out.

Waiters Want Their Whiskers.

NEW YORK, April 20.—A meeting of Local Union No. 9 of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' National Alliance, which is composed of the waiters who want to wear mustaches, was held at their new club house. Secretary William McKenna presided and introduced John Lee, waiter at the Hotel San Remo, who said it was an un-American demand and worthy only of China and Russia to compel men to shave off their mustaches, and that all the waiters in New York should combine to fight against such a rule.

An Ohio Capitalist Missing.

CHICAGO, April 20.—Lyman L. Lamb, a capitalist, of Akron, O., has been missing in Chicago since Monday noon. Lamb, in company with Lawyer Newman, Lamb drew out of a down town bank $28,000. The money was put into a small hand satchel. At the Sherman house commerce building Lamb gave the satchel to Newman, remarking that he would go across the street and get something to eat. Mr. Lamb has not been seen since that time.

Exchanged Money For Lead.

MILFORD, Mass., April 20.—Samuel Gaskill, aged 80 years, a farmer of East Hopedale, was bunkoed out of $1,183, which he had drawn from the bank. Two strangers persuasively presented to him a mythical land speculation. A joint investor, they worked the three card monte game, and decamped with the money in a tin box before Gaskill opened a similar tin box, which was filled with sand.

Elaborate Counterfeiting Scheme.

CHICAGO, April 20.—The Journal prints an elaborate article suggesting the possibility of the manufacture of silver coin from standard metal if exact imitation of the genuine and its circulation on an extensive scale throughout the United States, the counterfeiters to depend for their profits upon the difference between the bullion value and the legal tender value of the silver after coinage.

Shipley's Resignation Accepted.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.—At a meeting of the board of managers of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad company, held at noon today, the resignation of Samuel R. Shipley as a member of the board was tendered and accepted. John Lowber Welch, who for years has been a confidential adviser and business ally of the Drexels, was elected to fill the vacancy.

Chinese Turned Back.

TACOMA, Wash., April 20.—The examination of the Chinese brought over by the steamship Mogul was finished, and out of 241, 33 were actors bound for the World's fair. No decision has been reached in their case, of the others 75 were admitted and the remainder will have to be deported.

Missing For a Month.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Colonel C. J. Murphy, formerly of Brownsville, Tex., but of late years a claim agent in this city, was found dead in his office. Colonel Murphy had been missing for about a month, and when his office was broken into his decomposed body was discovered.

Killed on the Railroad.

NEWTON, L. I., April 20.—William Wyckoff, aged 16, was killed on the Long Island railroad near Berlin.

What It Was.

One of the chemistry professors grew reimbursed last week and told how a woman came to him some years ago for instruction in chemistry. The class grew interested.

"I told her," said Professor C——, "that we didn't take women students and advised her to go to Tufts. Well, she went. She took a long course in organic chemistry under Professor H——, and at last she married him."

The class looked more interested. Then one member raised his hand.

"Well, Mr. Jones?"

"Sort of chemical union, wasn't it, professor?"—Boston Budget.

The Swell Jacket.

In jackets the great thing seems to be to have the shoulder cape, if not the sleeves, of a contrasting material or color, and on this choice depends your reputation for good taste. When in doubt, take tan or champagne color, which is lighter and very striking, and make the cape of black satin or green velvet. Even a plain black jacket is dignified with stylish distinction when surmounted with pagoda frills of black satin, fine and lustrous. Another distinguishing feature of the new jacket is its full skirt, which is not plaited, but looks as if it must be, so full does it hang. That flare is the indisputable trademark of the high sartorial art. You can't buy it on a bargain counter; you can't duplicate it at a cheap place. The cost in the cut is a particularly dressy affair of pale green cloth, with sleeves and collar of satin. The collar is not plaited either, but cut from a circle with the flaring edge. A fine finish of jet edges it, and the lining is of satin the color of the cost.

A STYLISH JACKET.

Millinery.

A noticeable feature is that most of the hats and bonnets are tilted far back on the head

Rabbit's and donkey's ears are seen on many hats.

The small bonnets have the sides elongated into points which reach behind the ears.

Most of the hats have distinct and sensible crowns, the flat plateau being seldom seen.

Millinery effects are the rage, the colonial shapes being paramount in round hats. These three cornered jaunty effects are especially becoming to youthful faces. The military idea is carried out in the trimming, which consists of a stiff cockade of coque's plumes and an aigret or several black ostrich tips, with perhaps one or two curling coquettishly beneath the brim.

Tired from Head to Foot.

FROM HEAD TO FOOT.

That's what's the matter with the most of us. What's the reason? Poor circulation of the blood. The cause? Impurities of the blood. We have known severe cases of so called rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sore throat, sore eyes, bad dandruff, general debility, in a short time by the use of Anti-Tire. Get up good circulation, healthy action, and your system is pure and you will feel well. One fifty bottle of Anti-Tire will do it. Trial size, 25c. Family size, 50c. All druggists. WOMAN AND HOME.

PLAIN WORDS ADDRESSED TO COMPLAINING WIVES.

False and Genuine Economy—Who Are Newspaper Women?—A Word About Mistresses—Keeping Choice Flowers—Hints For Mothers and Housekeepers.

As I occupy the position of husband, I will speak directly to complaining wives. You who think life is hardly worth living, who think you have the hardest lot on earth, who think you might have done better in the matrimonial field and are blaming your husbands with it all; you who are grieving and lamenting over the "might have been," are the ones I am addressing.

In the first place, have you just cause for complaint? Please think of all your past conduct toward your husband, and if he does seemingly neglect you has not your treatment of him driven him to it?

Have you ever by word or action let him know that you were sorry you married him? Perhaps you have gone so far as to tell him that if you had known "thus and so" you never would have married him.

Whereupon husband and wife have no more feeling for each other than to face each other with such declarations, they cannot properly sympathize with each other in anything.

Let us go back a little to the day of courtship; what were his intentions when he sought your hand and heart? If he was an honest man, his intention was to make you the happiest woman on earth; nothing short of that enters his mind. He vows to himself and perhaps to you that he will work his fingers ends off but what he will provide for you.

You have no conception of the injury done when you first expressed yourself as being disappointed. He may have laughed at the time, but down in his heart there was an awful feeling, and he thinks, "This is the woman that I had tied to for life, this is the woman that I never meant to displease or offend, for whose sake I am willing to sacrifice anything, for whose welfare and happiness I have done all in my power, and she tells me now she is sorry she left her home to go with me!"

Let me tell you, the man that has borne all this, without deserting you, merely for the respect he has for you and himself, the man who has faced a life of such misery and unhappiness, is ready to meet you half way if you will only give him a chance.—"A Husband" in Housekeeper.

Economy That Is Not Real Economy.

Prudence and economy are the cornerstones of the household, but there are economies and economies. Taking good care of everything about the house is one thing, and penny wise and stingy habits are quite another.

It is scarcely worth while to spend hours of time—unless indeed one's time is of no more value than that of the proverbial sitting hen—in working up peelings, bones and other waste wherewith to make into dishes that when they are made have little to recommend them except this mistaken idea of economy.

Every woman's time is worth something to her, or if it is not it certainly ought to be. Of course there are occasions and circumstances where extreme poverty makes extreme measures necessary, but it is not economy that dictates here so much as actual need, and to this class of persons such rules as the foregoing do not apply. There are in the world numbers of fairly well to do people whose economical methods are simply a weariness to the flesh. They nag and literally torture anybody who throws away things that they happen to think may be useful, but they themselves neglect important duties while wasting time and other material on certain of those worthless ingredients.

There is nothing more commendable than judicious economy. It is indeed the secret of success; but, like everything else in this world, it has its uses and abuses. It is scarcely worth while to practice that form of economy that leaves the domestic platter so clean that there is not enough left to feed one cat. Indeed there is much to be commended in the sentiment established in certain families that when the meal is cleared away there shall be enough left for a chance comer.—Baltimore Herald.

Who Are Newspaper Women?

It has been loosely estimated that there are several thousand newspaper women in this country. In reality there are less than 250. There is a distinction between newspaper writing and writing for the news papers, and the young lady who "does a little space work" in the intervals of her social or business engagements was not considered in the compilation of these statistics.

The 250 writers who have been considered are newspaper women in the best sense of the word. They hold staff positions on journals of good standing, or they have had experience which fits them for such positions; they have learned to recognize news when they hear it, and they know how to present it to the public in the most attractive form; they can judge of its comparative value and the amount of space it should be given in a newspaper; they can edit their own copy if necessary; they know something about a composing room and can distinguish between a form and a piece of type; they have learned why it is not a sheer waste of material to write on but one side of their paper; they know that a newspaper office is not a drawing room and that they cannot expect drawing room manners in it; they have learned that the highest compliment an editor can pay a woman associate is to treat her as if she were a man, promptly reprimanding her for a blunder and giving her a word of praise for good work.—To be happy one must think of it. Last and most important point of all, these women earn their living with their pens. This is the crucial test.—Lippincott's.

A Word About Mistresses.

"I wonder if the women who employ us ever think what a trial our first few days generally are." said an unusually intelligent young woman, whose circumstances had forced her into domestic service. "I sometimes think if they did they would be a little more considerate of us. We go into strange places, new faces are all around us, the ways of the house are perhaps quite different from those to which we are accustomed. Indeed, it is rarely that two families do all things precisely alike, and as a natural consequence our duties are not performed to the mind of the mistress of the house. She doesn't always think that all we need is thorough instruction, and that it is to most cases quite as easy for us to do a thing one way as another. When it is done she only has a half hearted approval, and perhaps not even that, although the way may be quite as good as her own. She seems to take it for granted that we do not try to please, when in fact we are doing the best we can and working wholly in the dark.

"If ladies would give a little time to explaining the ways they would like and would try to find out how their servants had been in the habit of doing things, it would save a great deal of irritation and disappointment on both sides. A half hour judiciously appropriated to this purpose might establish good feeling and be promotive of smoother and perhaps long continued relations. Such things really take but little time, and those who have once tried the experiment are never willing to work on any other plan."—Brooklyn Citizen.

Keeping Choice Flowers.

A little brown haired woman stood in front of a florist's shop yesterday and discoursed learnedly on the care of flowers. "You see those jonquils?" she said to her companion, a big, burly man. "Well, we walked five miles to pick them when I was a girl. It was generally very early in spring, and when we returned home they were frozen stiff. We used to throw them into a pan of warm water and let them thaw out and revive. It never hurt them in the slightest. Of course these flowers you see here are kept in cloths and in an ice box at night, and these in the window are 'stock,' which are sacrificed for a show. But ordinarily these flowers an indefinite time with a little care. Violets and roses are so simple—both frail and both expensive—can be kept fresh by letting them soak in salt water until you want them.

"If you dance all night or do anything where you are for a great many hours in a gaslighted place, they won't last, but when I have a bonquet for the theater, I wear it next day in the street, picking out the biggest and finest flowers. You must clip a wee bit off the end of each stem at night, then tie them very loosely and shower with cold water. Over the whole put a large piece of tissue paper so that all air is excluded. You can leave them in a cool place, the bathtub or the icebox, or if there is no frost out the window. You will find that your flowers are as fresh and lovely the next morning as when they were sent home from the shop."—New York Advertiser.

Infection From Pet Animals.

"Do I believe that cats and dogs may carry from one house to another contagious diseases? I think the idea simply silly. My little girl likes to fondle pretty kittens, and I mean to teach her to love dumb animals," said a young mother when a friend questioned her as to the safety of a visitor, a pretty bundle of gray fur, very much alive and evidently somebody's pet.

The scarlet fever was raging in the neighborhood, and the mother had most carefully guarded her little girl from exposure to contagion, having for weeks escaped it.

Baby and kitty had a fine day together, and when pussy took her leave, straight to the house containing three cases of scarlet fever she went. Baby's subsequent attack of fever was not attributed to playing with the gray kitten, though she had no other chance of infection.

During the reign of the influenza a handsome cat, much petted by every member of the family, was fond of sitting upon her master's writing desk. Minette (Gretjon continued) was a privileged character. Wife while he wrestled with an attack of the grip. To before many hours had elapsed after his attack poor puney's throat became sore and very much inflamed, her eyes red and watery, and violent sneezing alternated with coughing added to her afflictions, proving beyond a doubt that she was going to be transmitted from the human being to the lower animal or vice versa.—Philadelphia Press.

A Flower Bedroom.

Flower bedrooms, decorated to match certain flowers, are very popular and very lovely. In the best world pale yellow can no longer be obtained to be too genuine in figure and color, and the idea may be carried out also in toilet ware. A very pretty room may be arranged with yellow poppy paper having a satin ground and a dado of cretonne to match. The curtains and bedspread should be of the cretonne, and all the furniture covered with the same material. The ceiling, paper and woodwork should be of cream white. A carpet composed of varying shades of cream and green, with pale blue flowers, would be appropriate in such a room.

Wild rose paper and wild rose cretonne, with a dull green carpet and white shades, will make a very cool, effective room. Rose papers can also be matched in yellows, pinks and reds, with which a yellow and white drilling paper will always harmonize. A very complete room would require the sheets, pillow cases, towels and toilet covers to be embroidered with the chosen flower in colored wash silks.—Demorest's Magazine.

Chinese Women at Home.

More probably than any other nation in the world, the Chinese confine their women to duties purely feminine. Except in the Chinese women of the lowest rank, perform services of a menial character. An "amah" (woman or maid) of mine, a really intelligent Chinese woman, used to say once: "Foreign women work very hard. Do man's work, wash and scrub and work out of doors. China woman only do woman's work. Never see China woman do like."

This woman had lived with English women in Hong-Kong many years, had traveled as a servant over England, France and Germany and had been a member of the Greek observer. What she said was, from a Chinese standpoint, quite correct, and who shall say that her conception of woman's duties, the care of children and the dainty handicraft of the needle are after all the most purely feminine, and from an old fashioned point of view the most graceful and poetic occupation of women.—New York Tribune.

Punishing Children.

While grave moral faults are often passed over carelessly, a child is frequently very severely dealt with for the tearing of a dress, or the breaking of an ornament, or any other fault that involves trouble or expense, even though the mischief may have been unintentionally done.

Sitting on a chair may not may sound, is it not true that when the angry mother relieves her annoyance by punishing the object of it she is really revenging herself upon it for what it has caused? Certainly it is very provoking to have beautiful things broken and the work that has been the result of much patient labor destroyed through heedlessness and carelessness, yet some time ago when I heard a child who had torn a handsome dress answer sagely to another who took her that "her mother would whip her for tearing it," "No, my mother never whips for clothes," I felt sure she was in wise as well as loving hands.—Motherhood.

Teach Girls How to Use Money.

Would it not be wise if instructions in the mysteries of money were added to the curriculum of every girl's studies? A boy finds it out by actual contact with the public as soon as he is put and a part of it, but a girl may become a mature woman, shrinking then through the habit of long protection, and be thrown on the mercies of the world, with her money, to fall a prey to the first cheat and coxer.

She is taught at school the specters of the stars and the map of Mars. What pity that she should not be instructed in the workings of life on the planet where she lived! That a knowledge of the nature and training and care of money should be made a part of every girl's education is growing more and more evident in this age of enlightenment.

Suppose we begin a real reform by teaching girls how to use money.—Jenness Miller's Magazine.

The Treatment of Silos.

The causes of sties are in general an impaired condition of health and chronic local irritation. Thus children who are scrofulous in their peculiarities or who are anaemic("thin blooded") are liable to them. They often associate with it a more chronic irritation of the lids, or the irritation may be due to excessive light, to dust, to harsh winds, etc. So, too, but more often in older children certain defects of sight, especially that form of long sight known as hypermetropia, may be the source of irritation. The preventive remedy is the removal of the impaired state of health or of the local irritation. If a sty actually exists, warm fomentations, warm water or boric acid solution as strong as can be conveniently made are useful to hasten the course, and if matter has formed and there is much discomfort it should be opened.—Mother's Nursery Guide.

Personal Daintiness.

It seems almost a libel to say that a person's daintiness is not as many women seem to think it takes such a lot of time to keep well groomed that I want to reiterate the contrary fact as often as I get a chance. Take one's bath, for instance. A few minutes a day will keep the skin around the edges. Push it back with a damp towel every time you wash your hands. Fill the glass every night or morning and remember that, everything to the contrary notwithstanding, there is no polisher so good as the mount of Venus in the palm of your hand. The best manicurus always gives the final polish with this.—St. Louis Republic.

A Warning to Hasty Mothers.

Here is a little hint for the woman who believes in whipping her nervous, excitable child whenever he annoys her by his pranks. A lady who lives in a flat or apartment house where the tenants dislike noise and children, the other day seized her 5-year-old daughter, fresh from a long and merry chase through the public halls and jumbling over with excitement. The mother seized the little girl and after soundly shaken administered a sound spanking. It shook her up so that she stammers and stutters ever since when she talks. The doctor says simply: "You upset her nervous system. Don't spank her again."—Buffalo News.

True Art of the Dressmaker.

Why it is concluded that if a certain period be taken for a model in dress all that is bad in that period should be conscientiously adopted is hard to conceive. The idea of smart women and clever modistes is to adopt certain things, in themselves pretty, from the fantastical mass of dress and to remodel them to meet the demands of the great culture and refinement of the present day. To reproduce anything as it was then would be to render it too absurd for serious contemplation.—Cor. Chicago Herald.

Mrs. Potter and Her Hair.

I remember Mrs. Potter was never called beautiful until after she had acquired the knack of letting her hair fall at opportune or inopportune moments. Then people began to talk about her, and after that they discovered that she was a beauty. She has always made the hair dropping a feature. Her gray wig, with its false braids, is the most genuine thing about it.—Cor. Boston Herald.

Keeping Chairs Clean.

Slipcovers for furniture may sound, is it not true that when the angry mother relieves her annoyance by punishing the object of it she is really revenging herself upon it for what it has caused? Certainly it is very provoking to have beautiful things broken and the work that has been the result of much patient labor destroyed through heedlessness and carelessness, yet some time ago when I heard a child who had torn a handsome dress answer sagely to another who took her that "her mother would whip her for tearing it," "No, my mother never whips for clothes." I felt sure she was in wise as well as loving hands.—Motherhood.

When Using Vaseline.

Vaseline, which is largely used not only as a toilet article, but also as a medium for various kinds of ointments, often leaves a brown stain on white goods. If cleaned by the vaseline alone, there should be no difficulty in removing such a stain by a thorough washing with good soap rubbed on the spot and hot water, followed by the usual boiling. This applies to old and obstinate spots. If they are dipped in ammonia with a little hot water, they will also usually disappear.—Exchange.

What French Women May and May Not Do.

A curious state of affairs prevails in France in relation to women. A French woman may become a doctor, a lawyer, a member of the board of education and may even be decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor, but she may not witness a legal document. She occupies an important place in art, business and commerce, but she cannot possess her own earnings if she is married, and she can neither buy nor sell property without her husband's consent.

Charcoal Is Good For Clothes.

If clothes are kept too long from the air, they acquire an unpleasant odor. A remedy that will quickly remove this is charcoal laid in the folds. It is a good plan to keep the closet where your garments are hung well aired. Leave the door open a week at this time and let the fresh outdoor air get in; then there isn't a chance of gowns coming out with a stuffy, shut up odor about them.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Baroness Coutts' Rare Diamonds.

Baroness Burdett-Coutts, who is said to be the only woman created a peeress by herself for her great public services and the first if not the last woman to have received the freedom of the city of London, has in her possession the famous tiara of diamonds that belonged to Marie Antoinette.

In Finland, more than in all other countries, women enter into the business of life. They are clerks, doctors, dentists, builders, managers of small companies and bank cashiers. For the latter office they are especially sought on account of their reputation for honesty.

Mrs. John D. Rockefeller has brought up her daughters very sensibly. They teach in mission Sunday schools, and one, when a student at Vassar, used her pocket money to defray the expenses of a poor girl at the same college.

The constitutional inability of some people to grow fat under the most favorable circumstances found an excellent example in the person of Mr. Lars Sjowalley of Mahanoy City, Pa. His wife's comical distress was the fact at last found vent in a remark which has passed into a by-word in that New England town.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

A SPECIAL MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

The Peace Street Matter Settled and that Thoroughfare Will now be Widened—Ordinances Passed—No Action on the Sewerage Matter.

A special meeting of the City Common Council was held last night in pursuance to call to take action on the tax ordinance, to introduce an ordinance fixing the tax for the public library, for final action on the widening of Peace street and to consider the sewerage matter.

A quorum braved the elements and met in an appearance. They were Councilmen Erickson, Fisk, Frost, Gheen, Millington and See. Mayor Cox was also in later. Absent, Councilmen Bond, Johnston, Marsh and Weber.

After reading the call for the meeting the clerk read the tax ordinance for the third time and it was adopted.

Frost-et Goon stated that he had an application from Mr. Miller for a license for Hotel Netherwood, but that it had not received too late for action at this session.

An ordinance fixing the assessment for the ensuing year, for the use of the five public library was passed on its first and second readings, ordered engrossed and advertised.

A bill of Mr. F. A. Dunham for a map showing the location of the proposed sewerage pipes, about the city, was referred to the Committee on Water and Sewerage.

Several residents of West Seventh street, Grant avenue and vicinity petitioned the Council to run the main sewerage pipe down Seventh street. The petition was referred to the Sewerage Committee.

Mr. Frost reported that a map of the sewerage plan to be published in the official papers, was nearly completed.

The report of the commissioners on the widening of Peace street was read and final action taken on it. On receiving the report was received and ratified by the Council.

Mr. See introduced a resolution, which was adopted, that the collector be authorized to serve notices on the property owners who have not paid for benefits and collect the amount of said benefit.

A resolution was also adopted authorizing $1,558.40 to be taken from the general fund and used in the work of widening said street. When the money is collected for benefits the amount is to be paid back. This was done in order that the work could be gone on with immediately without waiting for money to be collected from those assessed.

President Gioss announced that the committees of the year were the same as they were before Mr. Case resigned, and that the new Councilman, Mr. Frost, would take Mr. Case's position on the committees.

Council then adjourned.

BREVITIES.

—That energetic merchant, Mr. Edward White, announces the continuance of his great sale of goods from the late Boston fire. He reports the largest week's business his house has ever done.

—W. A. Apgar of Somerville, who was hurt so badly by falling from a building, is still in Muhlenberg Hospital, but is improving. He is in a fair way to recovery though it is feared that he will always be lame to some extent. He will not be able to be removed for some weeks yet.

—The Choral Society will hold its next rehearsal on Monday evening, 24th inst., in the Sunday-school room of the First Baptist church, and every member is urged to be present. The society is giving earnest attention to the oratorio of "The Creation," which is to be rendered at its last concert, on May fourth.

—The Gilbert Dramatic Company of Brooklyn appeared in Music Hall last evening, in "Our Strategists," which was given under the auspices of the Crescent League. There was a very small audience on account of the extremely stormy weather. The play was very funny, and those who took part did themselves great credit.

Salvation Army.

A rousing meeting was held by the Salvation Army in their Barracks on West Second street, last evening. Commander Booth and a large staff of officers led the service.

YESTERDAY'S STORM.

IT INCREASED TO SOMEWHAT OF A GALE AT NIGHT.

Considerable Damage Done to Electric Light and Telephone Wires—Trees Blown Down—Damage in Other Localities in this Vicinity.

The storm that prevailed all day yesterday increased in strength as the day advanced until it reached quite a gale at night. Considerable damage was done to electric light and telephone wires, many being torn down by trees falling across the lines.

The telephone company's linemen were kept busy until ten o'clock repairing broken and "grounded" wires.

A large tree at the corner of Fifth street and Madison avenue was blown down, falling across the street and the top lodging in another tree saved it from falling against a house.

Another was blown down at Mr. Fisk's residence, corner Park avenue and Sixth street. A tree at Park avenue and Seventh street also suffered from the gale and was blown over.

As a man was driving along East Third street late in the afternoon. He had a narrow escape from being struck by the top of a tree that struck the ground just behind him.

A big cherry tree in Mr. Powers' yard on Somerset street was broken in two at the middle, the upper half falling over on the ground. A large limb of a tree in front of Mr. Jacob Voehrs, on the same street, was also knocked off.

The water was so high on the meadows near Elizabethport that the Newark branch had to be abandoned this morning by Central trains, and Newark was reached by way of Jersey City.

At New Brunswick the storm yesterday and last night did the most severe damage to the wires. The Postal Telegraph Company was shut off completely except by one wire. The Western Union wires are all right with New York. The local telephone and electric light wires are in very bad shape. Almost all the telephone subscribers are without communication with the Central office, and several electric wire circuits have been destroyed.

At Somerville the low lands were flooded with water from four to ten feet deep. A great deal of damage has been done to the Spring crops, grain being ruined by the wind and newly sown seed washed out by the rain. Roofs of small buildings were torn off and trees were uprooted everywhere.

The river at Elizabeth overflowed its banks, and the Staten Island meadows and Elizabethport were partly flooded. Several houses were cut off from communication with the mainland. At Rahway the water was higher in its banks. People having cattle in outhouses near the river had to remove them to a place of safety, and several of the outbuilding would be washed away.

Willibald Pleads Guilty.

Frederick Willibald plead guilty, today, before Judge McCormick to the charge of embezzling money from the Union News Company of this city. His counsel, George DeMeza, made such a strong argument in the young man's behalf that the judge reserved his decision until the trial on the charge of grand larceny comes up, and reduced his bail to $300.

Merton Holmes of this city, who assaulted Patrick McClymont by plastering his face with black grease, was given a hearing and his trial was set down for next Friday at ten o'clock. As he had no lawyer the judge appointed George De Meza as his counsel.

Decision Reserved.

The case of Peter V. Husted vs. Frank Sohl, involving thousands of bricks was tried before Justice Nodyne this morning. A jury had been secured but as there was no constable present, they could not be held. The lawyers were Wm. M. Stillman for the defendant and H. G. Runyon for the plaintiff. Decision was reserved.

The Methodist Reception to be Repeated To-night.

The fierce storm of last night so greatly interfered with the reception at Vincent chapel to Rev. Dr. Barnes, the new pastor of the First Methodist church, that it was decided to repeat it this evening, when a large attendance is expected.

A Jury Trial in a Church.

A novel service will be held in the Congregational church Sunday evening under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. It will be in the form of a legal trial. There will be a judge, lawyers, witnesses and a jury. The service will be for old and young. A quartette from the Melopoia will sing.

Not a Horse but a Bicycle.

It was stated in one of the papers, not long since, that Marshal Pangborn had bought a horse and was going to hunt tramps on horseback. The marshal didn't buy a horse, but he has purchased a cushion tire safety bicycle and the "knights of the road" will have to hustle if they keep out of his way.

The Kline vs. Martin Case Dropped.

Borough Counsel Charles Reed filed his answer in the Kline vs. Martin Township Clerk case yesterday. To-day he received a telegram from ex-Speaker J. J. Bergen at Somerville, who is counsel for defendant, stating that the case would not be prosecuted.

DR. BRIGGS' CASE.

The Elizabeth Presbytery Votes to Refer it to the New York Synod.

The Elizabeth Presbytery closed its annual session Wednesday.

A large part of the afternoon session was occupied with an interesting discussion concerning an overture to the General Assembly in relation to Dr. Briggs' case.

Rev. Dr. J. G. Mason, introduced the subject by offering an overture asking the General Assembly "to decline to receive and review any appeals made directly from a Presbytery or by a prosecuting committee directing the persons making such appeals to have recourse for relief to their right of complaint to the Synod, the Assembly, if necessary, orders their complaint to be found in order in the Synod."

Rev. Dr. Richards of this city amended by offering a substitute overturning the General Assembly to refer the case of Dr. Briggs to the New York Synod.

Rev. Dr. Kendall, in a short address, advocated the adoption of the substitute. It was adopted by a vote of 20 to 13.

PERSONAL.

Miss Nellie Thorn of Rahway is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Thorn of Craig place, North Plainfield.

Mr. A. J. Stewart of West Fifth street has been ill with the grip for several weeks. Dr. Simpson is attending him.

The Rev. L. E. Livermore and wife of New Market left on Monday morning for their new home in Alfred Centre, N. Y.

Mrs. William Hagan and Miss Lulu Hazan are registered at the "Laurel-in-the-Pines," Lakewood, N. J., for two weeks.

Mrs. James H. Searing, whose serious illness was reported in these columns, died this morning at her home on Madison avenue.

Policeman Flanagan recently bought the house No. 64 West Fifth street from John Darling. Mr. Flanagan took possession last week.

Miss Nellie Humpston, principal at the Washington school, is ill at her home on West Front street. Miss Annie Boorman is acting-principal during her absence.

The Rev. Father McKernan left yesterday for his new charge in Sea Isle City, and his successor, as rector of St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, the Rev. William Miller, late of St. Peter's church, New Brunswick, has taken charge.

Miss Ida Coles of East Front street entertained a party of fifteen young people last evening in a delightful manner. Among the features of the evening's enjoyment was progressive whist. Prizes were won by Mr. Irving Stelle and Miss Lottie Raymond.

Dr. Van Namee, an old resident of this city, died suddenly yesterday morning at his home on Third place. For years he was one of the leading dentists of the country, and had few equals. He leaves a son, a lawyer of Middletown, N. Y., a wife and two stepchildren in this city—Charles Bullman and his sister. The funeral will be to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock.

The annual "stag" dinner of the members of the Union County Country Club and their guests took place at the Casino last evening. The long table was in the shape of the letter U, the two ends near the stage, the curve near the fire place. The honor position of toast-master was filled admirably by Mr. Samuel St. J. McCutchen. He was introduced in a short, witty speech, by Mr. Runkle, after the last course had been served. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, Mayor Alexander Gilbert, Mayor Wm. L. Saunders, Borough Counsel Chas. Reed and Messrs. Wilder and Kaufman were among those who responded to toasts. The speeches were like the wet goods—varied. There were about sixty-five guests. It was a very select affair.

To Test the Fifty-five Hour Law.

Two suits have been begun in the Supreme Court to test the constitutionality of what is known as the Thomas Flynn fifty-five hour law, which was passed by the Legislature of 1892. The law makes fifty-five hours a week's work in factories and workshops, and provides that no male under eighteen years shall be employed overtime.

Lawrence Fell, the factory inspector, obtained judgments for violations of the law against the Benjamin Atha and Illworth Steel companies and Henry S. Fell of Newark, and the defendants "certioraried" the judgments to the Supreme Court.

The Rahway Mystery Recalled.

An unknown woman has ordered a small tombstone to be erected at the grave of the young woman who was found murdered on March 26, 1887, on Milton avenue, Rahway. The stone bears this inscription: "An Unknown Woman, Found Dead, March 26, 1887." The superintendent of the cemetery refused to give the name of the donor, but said that she lives in Rahway.

THE MILES VINDICATED.

MR. HURLEY WITHDRAWS HIS CHARGES AGAINST THEM.

He Had Accused Jacob and William Miles of Forging his Father's Name and of Concealing his Interest in Valuable Property.

After a most bitterly contested suit, which indicated a most protracted litigation, the two suits which were brought in the Supreme Court by William S. Hurley and Catherine Hurley, the son and widow of Samuel A. Hurley, against Jacob and William Miles of North Plainfield, involving nearly $400,000, has been settled, with the approval of Justice Barrett, a satisfactory arrangement having been made between all the parties to the litigation, and orders for the discontinuance of the actions were entered yesterday upon the consent of all the counsel.

Samuel A. Hurley died in 1885. He had been in the tannery business with Jacob and William Miles, and upon his death they settled up the estate. The heirs declare, that they had been deprived of some of their rightful and just property. In the settlement that was made with them, and also that in the settlement of his estate by William Miles, as one of the executors, a proper accounting had not been made.

They brought two suits, one in the name of the widow and the other in the name of the son of Samuel A. Hurley, to compel Jacob and William Miles to render an accounting to recover property which they insisted had belonged to Mr. Hurley, but which had not been turned over to them, to set aside the general releases which they had given, and also to declare void a contract between the Miles' brothers and Mr. Hurley as to their business relations, it being charged that the signature of Mr. Hurley to it was a forgery. This charge was proven false.

The trial of the suits was begun before Judge Barrett, in the Special Term of the Supreme Court, in February. After spending thirty-three days in listening to the testimony Judge suggested a compromise as the best solution for all concerned. Mr. Hurley had accused the Miles brothers of forging his father's name and of having concealed his interest in several pieces of property. The lawyer adopted the Judge's suggestion and obtained an adjournment pending the negotiations.

Ex-Surrogate Daniel G. Rollins informed Judge Barrett yesterday that a satisfactory arrangement had been made, and that suits had been withdrawn and the charges of fraud and forgery withdrawn. The counterchanges of bad faith were also abandoned.

Judge Barrett said in reply he was happy to learn of the settlement. He thought that one remarkable feature in the matter of the signature claimed to have been forged it was evident that Mr. Hurley had come into court in good faith. He was glad to say Mr. Miles had left the court without a stain upon his character.

Base Ball Gossip.

Jack Sharrott is already a favorite in Philadelphia.

The Cuban Giants, the colored champions of the country, reported to Manager Bright yesterday. They will play their first game with the Paterson Club.

The schedule of the Elizabeth A. C.'s team for May is as follows: 6, Murray Hills, at Elizabeth; 13, New Jersey A. C., at Elizabeth; 20, New Jersey A. C., at Bergen Point; 27, Jersey City Baseball Club, at Elizabeth, Decoration Day morning, Pennington Institute, at Elizabeth; Decoration Day afternoon, Murray Hills, at Elizabeth.

It has been decided to open the base ball championship season in New York on Thursday, April 27. This is done to meet what seems the wish of a great majority of the patrons of the game.

The base ball season will be opened in this city May 6th, with a team from Philadelphia.

Somerset Grand Jurors.

The April term of the Somerset county courts opened on Tuesday at Somerville with Judge Magie presiding.

The following is the list of Grand Jurors:

Alexander G. Anderson (Foreman), Wm. A. McMurtry, Andrew S. Corieli, A. Buckley Robb, Wm. N. Hoagland, Josiah Cole, H. A. Vanderbeek, George Moore, James E. Hallenbine, John V. Bunn, Charles N. Cookling, Israel B. Hill, Peter S. Nevius, Francis M. Labow, C. Frank French, Joseph P. Humble, Alexander Thorn, James Pollock, Henry P. Way, Henry J. Garetson, C. V. N. Snydam, Garret Nevius, Francis V. Cruser, John V. N. Van Zandt.

The Sidewalk to be Lowered.

The fence on the Third street side of the Quaker church property is being removed preparatory to the grading down of the bank on that side of the street to a level with the street. The sidewalk is now about two feet higher than the roadbed. The street is to be graded to 300 feet long and four feet wide. After the work is completed the fence will be replaced.

$50 for a Dog's Bite.

The case of Ogden vs. Walpole of Scotch Plains was tried in Justice's Nash's court yesterday afternoon. The suit was brought for $100 damages by the plaintiff who had been bitten in the leg by Walpole's dog.

After hearing the evidence the Justice decided in favor of the plaintiff, and awarded him $50 damages.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

TWO MURDERERS ESCAPE.

Sing Sing Guards Locked in the Prison Cells.

SING SING, April 21, (Special.)—One of the most daring escapes ever made from Sing Sing prison occurred at nine o'clock last night, when Thomas Pallister and Frederick W. Roehl, two condemned murderers who were awaiting execution in the electric chair, escaped from the death house.

The case was not discovered until 5.40 this morning, when the relief death watch appeared at the prison to relieve Keepers Hultz and Murphy, who comprised the death watch.

Hultz and Murphy were securely locked in the cells which had been vacated by Pallister and Roehl.

STORY OF THE ESCAPE.

The story of the escape as told by Hultz and Murphy was to the effect that when Keeper Hultz brought Murderer Pallister's supper to him last night at about nine o'clock Pallister suddenly threw a handful of pepper in the eyes of Keeper Hultz and then dealt the keeper a powerful blow, which knocked him down.

Pallister, who is a powerful fellow, overcame the keeper, took the keys of the cells from him, and also his revolver, and before Hultz realized it Pallister had dragged him into the cell and made him a prisoner by securing the door. Pallister then unlocked the cell door of Roehl, who promptly came out, and seemed to have been fully aware of the plans for the escape.

When Keeper Murphy, Hultz partner in the night death watch, came in he was suddenly surprised by the two condemned murderers, who treated him in a manner similar to the way in which Hultz had been overpowered. Murphy was soon in the cell which had been vacated by Roehl. His keys and revolver had been taken from him, and he was securely locked in the cell, in the same manner as Hultz.

WANTED HARRIS TO GO WITH THEM.

Pallister and Roehl then unlocked the cells of condemned murderers Carlyle W. Harris, Osmond, the wife murderer, and Geoghan, the Brooklyn murderer. Pallister and Roehl invited these three men to go with them to gain their freedom. They refused and remained in their cells. Harris was in a nervous condition, as he was just recovering from a fit of sickness.

The condemned murders then broke through some windows, got to the river, and by means of a boat escaped to the other shore. A general description has been sent out, All boats leaving port are watched.

Arbor Day.

Arbor Day is approaching. If every one should observe this day appropriately all the highways of this country would be beautifully lined with ornamental trees, and soon our counties and States would have just as attractive driveways as those of Europe. Every school child should plant a tree and carefully guard it as it grows. Besides being a pleasant reminder of happy school days in years to come, it would add beauty to the landscape. Parents should encourage children in this noble work. Do not allow fire or other States to outdo New Jersey in this grand work.—Ex.

Lots of Free Advertising.

It is estimated by officials in the Department of Publicity and Promotion that were they compelled to pay even ordinary rates for the advertising matter pertaining to the Exposition, published by the newspapers and other periodicals in the world, it would cost them more than to erect all the World's Fair buildings.—World's Columbian Exposition Illustrated.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When Professor Sargent of Harvard gets his typical American man and woman on exhibition, we shall all know how much of the perfect American figure each of us possesses.

It is a Kentucky woman's idea that the coat of arms of her state ought to be changed. In place of the two men's figures with clasped hands and underneath them the legend, "United we stand; divided we fall," she thinks there should be the figures of a man and a woman with clasped hands, the same motto beneath.

Many microbes that have been discovered have mineral substances which are heavier than water in their composition. Making note of this, an inventor has devised a centrifugal machine which will get rid of microbes in liquids by a whirling process. Gravity separates the microbes from the liquid during this process, so that it is rendered pure. Milk, water and other liquids are thus purified.

By deciding that the city of St. Louis has a right to collect $5 a year rent for every telegraph pole set up in her streets the United States supreme court has settled an important matter. It is that any city government has entire right to say what its streets shall be used for by private companies and also what money they shall pay for such use. This seems a way whereby good revenues may be drawn into city treasuries.

England has gone ahead of us in respect to the establishment of a horticultural college where young people may be trained as flower and fruit gardeners. If some millionaire wants to do good to his country, let him endow such a training college in connection with one of the state agricultural experimbent stations with admission to students of both sexes. Information in floriculture and horticulture is one of the kinds of knowledge needed in this great young country.

Hawaii.

The absolute change of policy in the administration of this government is nowhere more marked than in the hauling down of the American flag from over Hawaii From Jan. 17 to April 1 it floated there in triumph and glory. Had Harrison remained president, Hawaii, for better or for worse, might now have been United States territory. Commissioner Blount has proved that he could keep a secret at any rate, for nobody knew he had orders from President Cleveland to order down the American flag

Commissioner Blount appears to be President Cleveland's political Satolli, not an apostolic legate precisely, but a presidential legate. President Cleveland writes of Mr. Blount:

I have made choice of James H. Blount, one of our distinguished citizens, as my special commissioner to visit the Hawaiian Islands to make a report to me concerning the present state of affairs in that country. He is well informed of our sincere desire to cultivate and maintain the most friendly sentiment the friendship which has so long existed between the two countries, and in all matters affecting relations with the government of the Hawaiian Islands his authority is paramount.

We have the assurance of Mr. Blount that no other nation will be permitted to take possession of the islands. But it will be now more difficult to prevent this than it was before. Blaine, then secretary of state, wrote Dec. 1, 1881, that the possession of the Hawaiian Islands was in the range of questions of a purely American policy, and that if ever there came a time when Hawaii would no longer be able to maintain her own neutrality "this government would then unhesitatingly meet the altered situation by seeking an avowedly American solution for the grave issues presented."

We Only Know She Sailed Away.

The disappearance of the great White Star twin screw freight steamer Naronic will probably remain as the ocean mystery of 1893. She is at last given up entirely, and the insurance companies are paying their policies on her cargo. Not in years has a large ocean steamer dropped from human knowledge like that—never before a steamer so powerful and perfectly fitted to endure all weathers, as was supposed. The Naronic was one of the strongest steamers ever built She was of steel, with three decks, and two engines working independently; so that if one was disabled the other could alone bring her into port. Passenger steamers are not so staunch in build as the Naronic was, for she was constructed especially to bear a great weight of freight, and it was not necessary to sacrifice any considerations of safety to speed. She was fitted for the live stock trade especially and carried 1,050 head of cattle. These she took across the water to England, returning with a load of 4,000 tons of freight.

At the time she disappeared she was on her way to this side with 70 men on board. She could easily have held five times as many as those in which Columbus and his men crossed the ocean, yet this mighty ship has disappeared as utterly as if she had been a phantom ship existing only in imagination. It is not likely now that any trace of her will ever be found beyond the two lifeboats floating bottom upward, telling in that simple fact a story seldom equaled in tragedy and pathos. Did the Naronic strike an iceberg and go down? Did she founder in the heavy waves? Did she come in collision with another vessel, and did both sink with all on board? When shall we know?

CYCLONE SWEPT.

Fierce Winds Scourge the Whole Country.

DEATH AND CHAOS FOLLOW.

Many Lives Were Lost on the Great Lakes.

From Dakota to the Atlantic Seaboard the Wild Winds Did Deadly Work—Fourteen Men Lost Off Milwaukee—Twenty Men Missing From Chicago—A Howling Blizzard In the West Blocked Trains, Paralyzed Business and Broke Telegraphic Connection—But Meager Reports In.

NEW YORK, April 21.—The storm which made life miserable for New Yorkers made itself felt from South Dakota to the Atlantic coast, sweeping across the lake region and as far south as Virginia.

In the eastern portion of this district heavy rains and high winds were the chief characteristics of the storm, while in the west snow instead of rain fell.

The weather along the coast was, in consequence, thick, the wind high and the sea what a woman would term awful to see, with a strong northeaster to boot.

The northeast gale drove the tide into the upper bay until many of the docks along South ferry were under water, and South street itself was flooded. Cellars all along the street were filled with water, and ships rode at anchor with the water line on a level with the piers. Down in the lower bay and along the seashore the gale wrested the waters with white and gave the outgoing fleet an unmistakable hint as to what was to be expected outside. One of the steamer, the Trinidad, bound for Barmuda, put back and anchored to wait for more favorable conditions. Several vessels were due to arrive, but only one of the important ones, the Rhyniand, from Antwerp, came into port.

At Coney island 100 feet of asphalt pavement blocks in front of the Manhattan hotel was washed out. The upper amphitheater at Brighton going to pieces, and it was feared that it would be a total wreck.

The Milwaukee Disaster.

MILWAUKEE, April 21.—In a gale which for years has not been equaled on the great lakes, the crib at the end of the intake tunnel, situated some 2,000 feet out in the lake, was washed away, and of 15 men who were employed there in the shaft, which reaches to the shore, but one is known to be alive. The balance are believed to have been drowned. Some were doubtless washed off by the huge billows which have been tumbling on the shore, and others perished in the airshaft where they sought shelter and which is now filled with water.

The people living along the shore were horrified at daylight when they could see no vestige either of the crib or the house that surrounded it, and fully that trace here and there of the government breakwater that was hidden in the mountainous surf that broke over it.

At 10 o'clock an effort was made to reach the wreck of the crib on a tugboat, but it was unsuccessful. An hour later the tug Welcome took a lifeboat in tow and steamed out to the crib. Only one man was found alive at the crib, and he was brought ashore in an unconscious condition and will probably die. His name is John Miller. A search will be made for the bodies of the drowned men as soon as the lakes become a little safer.

Miller's Story of the Storm.

Miller, the man who was rescued from the crib by the lifesaving crew, was finally able to give the story of the tragedy. He said that the caibhouse was so dangerous that at 10 o'clock p. m. all hands, 15 in number, went down into the airlock. They were quite comfortable there until the house was blown away. They knew it was gone when the air pump ceased working. This was about 6 o'clock. When the pump stopped the air kept growing worse until 8:30, when it became so bad that it was proposed by some to leave the lock and take chances outside. The subject was discussed for some time, and finally all agreed not to, as it was found they could not live much longer where they were.

Accordingly the airlock was opened and the water allowed to come in. McBride, Dwyer, Gregg, Johnson, Leikowitz and Miller succeeded in getting out of the lock and to the surface. To do this they had to climb up through 30 feet of water. The other nine, Miller says, could not find the ladder, he supposed, as they did not get on the crib and were drowned in the lock. When he got on the crib, Miller wound the wire cable, which runs from a drum toward shore, around his arm and was then able to hold on until the lifeboat arrived. Heavy that Dwyer, Gregg, Johnson and Leikowitz held on about half an hour and then one by one were swept away. McBride held on until within 10 minutes of the arrival of the boat, and he, too, succumbed and was washed off with help in sight.

There is a great deal of feeling among citizens over the manner in which the men on the crib were left exposed to the fury of the storm.

Lake Michigan Stirred Up.

MILWAUKEE, April 21.—The seas which lashed the beach and broke against it this point were the heaviest since the great storms of Jan. 1, 1891. The entrance to the harbor piers was a veritable seething cauldron, through which it seemed almost impossible for tugs or even larger craft to force their way safely. The north harbor pier was awash throughout its entire length, and the end of the south was submerged during the height of the storm. The huge waves beat against and over the government breakwater mercilessly and literally demolished about 50 feet of the superstructure of the north end of the outer arm of the structure.

The scow Aurora, laden with hardwood lumber for Racine, began to drag her anchors at daybreak and went ashore alongside of the shore breakwater, a short distance north of Juneau avenue. The crew had no difficulty in stepping ashore from her. The shore line was strewn with wreckage.

Twenty Men Missing.

CHICAGO, April 21.—The united Chicago life saving crew had a terrible experience in going to the rescue of the schooner Danforth, which was wrecked off Monroe street. Their boat was overturned, and all the crew were thrown into the lake, but were rescued. The Danforth was being towed by the steamer A. P. Wright, which was also hauling the schooner R. B. Hayes. Torches were being burned on the Hayes long before the Danforth's hawser parted. It is feared that the Hayes, with 16 men aboard, may have foundered during the night and all hands been lost. The Hayes is owned by J. C. Gilchrist of Cleveland.

Big Freight Depot Wrecked.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 21.—A windstorm is sweeping over central Indiana that has the proportions of a gale on account of its great velocity. At noon yesterday it was blowing at the rate of 39 miles an hour, wrecking much small portable property. At Brightwood, a suburb, the Big Four freight dept, an immense wooden building 250 feet long and 90 feet wide, was razed by the wind and the debris scattered for a great distance. A dozen men were in the building, but received warning and escaped by climbing into box cars. They were finally dug out without serious injury.

Two locomotives and several cars in the building were wrecked by the fall.

High Water Does Damage.

TOLEDO, April 21.—Trouble still broods on the Ann Arbor railroad and it was the worst sufferer from the storm. The terminals here are mostly on made ground along the river bank. The water, which was up above the docks all along the river front, undermined the Ann Arbor tracks and washed them out. One engine was dumped into the water and disappeared in the mud. The Wabash grain elevators were useless. The high water filled the boppers. High water prevented the loading of vessels at some of the Lake Shore elevators, as the vessels were lifted above the spouts.

Trains Snowbound In Wisconsin.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., April 21.—A heavy northeast wind has prevailed here for almost 48 hours. It began blowing in the morning, and the storm has continued all day. By noon the electric street cars had been taken off, it being impossible to get through the drifted snow. Trains on the Northern Pacific are delayed. The Great Northern passenger train was reported snowbound 20 miles down the road.

The Mississippi Rising Rapidly.

KEOKUK, Ia., April 21.—A violent snowstorm raged all day. The wind blew a gale. Mississippi river is rising very rapidly and is almost 12 feet above low water mark. Observer Gofewisch predicts that it will reach 14 feet by Monday. Fears are entertained of a repetition of last spring's floods. Dwellers on the low lands are uneasy and are preparing for the worst.

Wires Down and Business Paralyzed.

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., April 21.—One of the worst blizzards ever known in central Iowa this late in the season began at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, the wind blowing from the northwest with frightful velocity, the temperature gradually falling and snow drifted three feet deep in some places. Telegraph and telephone wires are down, and business is paralyzed here.

The Blizzard Took Off Roofs.

QUINCY, Ills., April 21.—A blinding blizzard raged here for a good portion of the day, and the wind is still blowing a gale. The steamer City collided with a ferryboat in the storm, and the latter was driven on the beach. The river is as wild as it has ever been. Several roofs were blown off.

Wind and Snow.

DES MOINES, April 21.—The storm here has been one of the worst in Iowa this year. After a downpour of rain it turned in and snowed 15 hours. At the same time there was a terrible wind. The thermometer is falling, and the chances are for a freeze. It is feared that fruit has been irreparably injured.

Capsized on the Bar.

BEAUFORT, N. C., April 21.—The sloop Sea Foam, Captain Moore, in attempting to cross the bar capsized. The vessel was lost, with its cargo of fish, but the crew were saved.

A Blizzard In Iowa.

DUBUQUE, Ia., April 21.—Light snow was accompanied by a blizzard. Reports indicate that the storm has been general throughout northern Iowa.

Work of New York's Legislators.

ALBANY, April 21.—The work of the legislature this week has not been so important as that of the last one, was about the same as regards quantity. In the senate 231 bills were introduced, 114 less than last year. Four hundred and thirty-seven of these passed the senate, while but 250 of the 437 got through the assembly. In the assembly 1,206 bills were introduced this year, 74 more than last year, 675 of which passed the assembly, 550 having passed both houses. Up to date the governor has signed 435 laws, 78 more than at this time last year.

New Lighthouse Signal System.

NEW HAVEN, April 21.—An interesting and highly important test of a new system of lighthouse signals was made off this port last night. By an ingenious combination of the usual lighthouse lenses and light, together with a system of shutters, Captain Mahan, the inventor, is enabled to throw any number agreed upon to represent a given harbor to great distances in a horizontal plane. A reference to a "port list" enables them, the master of a vessel his location beyond doubt.

Mrs. Harris' Suicide.

NEW HAVEN, April 21.—Mrs. Oscar J. Harris, wife of the late Oscar J. Harris, committed suicide by shooting herself through the head at her home this morning just died from the effects of a surgical operation. Both Mr. and Mrs. Harris were from Brooklyn, and were well known in society here. Mrs. Harris maiden name was Frances Danyke.

To Ride Across the Continent.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Tom Roe, the well known bicycle rider, says that he will start on May 12 to ride across the continent from New York to San Francisco. He expects to make the trip in 65 days, and will take the most direct route to Chicago, following the line of the Union Pacific railroad from there to San Francisco.

Injunction Against Santa Fe Strikers.

TOPEKA, April 21.—Judge Hazen of the district court granted, upon the application of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway company, a temporary injunction restraining striking shopmen from interfering with the operation of the road or with the men who are at work in the shops.

Hotly Contested Suit Off.

NEW YORK, April 21.—After a bitterly contested fight, the two suits which were brought in the supreme court by William S. and Catherine Hartey against Jacob and William Miles, involving nearly $400,000, have been settled.

Mining Town Burned.

SPOKANE, Wash., April 21.—A dispatch from Wardner, in the Coeur d'Alene mining district, reports the town destroyed by fire.

CARLISLE TALKS GOLD.

The Secretary Defines the Financial Condition.

THERE IS GOLD ENOUGH HE SAYS.

Stern Quarantine Rules to Be Adopted In Anticipation of an Invasion of Cholera or Other Epidemic Diseases—The Chilian Minister at the State Department.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Secretary Carlisle has made public the following statement regarding the financial situation: "In the exercise of the discretionary power conferred upon the secretary of the treasury by the act of July 14, 1890, he has been paying gold for the treasury notes issued for the purchase of silver bullion, and he will continue to do so as long as he has gold lawfully available for that purpose. Under this process the government has been and is now paying gold for silver bullion and storing the silver in its vaults, where it is as useless for any purpose of circulation or redemption as iron, lead or any other commodity.

"The government, in the first place, issues a coin certificate or treasury note in payment for silver bullion, and then the coin treasury note is presented at a subtreasury and the gold is paid out for it, so that the effect is precisely the same as if the gold were paid directly for the silver in the first instance. About $980,000 of the gold which was withdrawn from the subtreasury on last Tuesday for shipment abroad was paid out on these coin treasury notes. No order has been given to stop the payment of gold on these notes, nor has any one been authorized to say that such an order would be issued.

"The purpose of the government to preserve its own credit unimpaired and maintain the parity of the two metals by all lawful means will not be abandoned under any circumstances. In view of the existing legislation the only question for consideration is as to the measures that ought to be adopted to insure the accomplishment of these purposes, and upon this question there is of course room for wide differences of opinion.

More Gold From the West.

The total stock of gold coin and gold bullion now in this country, including what is held by the treasury, as well as what is held by the banks and individuals, amounts to about $740,000,000. When I came into the treasury department on March 7 the amount of free gold on hand had been reduced $87,000,000 by arrangements with western bankers was increased, until on April 1 it amounted to nearly $8,000,000.

"The heavy shipments began to be made and three days ago we had only about $60,000, but now it amounts to $885,000 after deducting what has been withdrawn from the subtreasury for shipment. Arrangements are now in progress by which more gold is to be secured from the west, and I hope that a sufficient quantity will be secured to keep the gold reserve intact.

There is gold enough in the country to meet all the requirements of the situation, and if all who are really interested in maintaining a sound and stable currency would assist the secretary of the treasury to the extent of their ability, the existing difficulties would soon be removed."

Supreme Court Justices Put Slighted.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The statement is made, that aside from the condition of the court docket, there was another and more potent reason which influenced the justices of the supreme court in declining to attend either the naval review or the opening of the World's fair. The justices felt snubbed. They were not satisfied with the position assigned to them in the official programme. They do not think it becoming that they, occupying the conspicuous official position they do, should be huddled with the commissioners, assistant secretaries, governors and numerous subordinate officials of the government. Individually, it is reported, the justices expressed a willingness to be thrown in with the party provided for the steamer Monmouth, but as a body they considered that on an occasion of such great official ceremony as the opening event they should have a place next in position to the president and cabinet.

The Chilian Ex-Envoy.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Senor Don Anibal Cruz, charge d'affaires of the Chilian legation, had a long interview with Assistant Secretary Adee at the state department in regard to the Chilian refugee case. Secretary Gresham announced that a charge was pending against Minister Egan and Holly for violating the municipal laws of Chili, and Minister Egan was instructed to cease sheltering them. This was all the information furnished. Nothing was said as to when the instructions were sent to Minister Egan to cease sheltering the refugees or as to whether they escaped before or after Mr. Egan received these instructions, or with or without his supposed connivance.

Strict Quarantine Regulations.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—An extensive code of quarantine regulations under the quarantine law, passed by the last congress, has been sent out. The regulations were framed by the Marine hospital service, and are designed to meet all questions which can arise, should vessels arrive having disease aboard, or coming from infected ports.

The British Ambassador Receives.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—People on a rainy night society turned out in great force to a large reception given by the British Ambassador and Lady Pauncefote to meet the diplomatic corps, members of the cabinet, justices of the supreme court, army and naval officers and other persons of note were present.

Peculiar Death of a Dyer.

PATERSON, N. J., April 21.—Dennis McLaughlin, 59 years old, a silk dyer, was instantly killed in the flax spinning mill of Rogers Bros. He was looking into an immense iron pot, when a rope holding up the lid broke, and the iron lid, which weighed nearly a ton, drop on him. Every bone in his body was crushed.

Proposed Railway Extension.

LONG ISLAND CITY, April 21.—There is every probability that the Long Island Railroad company will extend its tracks to East Hampton. Assignment and Fort Pond bay. Austin Corbin, president of the company, has promised to build the tracks, if the people furnish the right of way.

Golfers Buy on Brenton's Point.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 21.—The Newport Golf club have taken a year's lease of the Dunnican farm on Brenton's Point. It is possible that another season will see this also a grand society sporting ground.

Deaf for a Year
Caused by
Catarrh in the Head

Catarrh is a CONSTITUTIONAL disease, and requires a CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY like Hood's Sarsaparilla to cure it. Read:

"Three years ago, as a result of catarrh, I entirely lost my hearing and was deaf for many days at a time. I tried various things to cure it, and had several physicians attempt it, but no permanent benefit was derived. Finally Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended. I began taking it and in a few weeks my hearing was restored. I took in all 11 bottles and my hearing is perfect. I am confident that I owe my present good health to Hood's Sarsaparilla, three bottles of my boarding were recovering. I keep on till I had taken three bottles, when I was cured, and can hear perfectly well. I am troubled but very little with the catarrh. I consider this a remarkable case, and cordially recommend

QUIET AT TRACY CITY.

The Officers In Charge Think the Miners Have Had Enough.

NASHVILLE, April 21.—At Tracy City at 2:30 p. m. all was quiet. The troops, numbering 125 men under arms, were entering the stockade and the miners had dispersed. In the fight the night before four miners were killed and five wounded, two of whom may die. One guard was dangerously wounded and Deputy Warden Glover slightly shot. The fight began at 11 o'clock, and after the regular desultory fighting was kept up all the night.

It is believed by the officers in charge that the trouble is over, as the miners had not expected so strong a resistance. The military in this city which did not leave are still awaiting orders.

Prince and Princess Wed.

FLORENCE, April 21.—The marriage between Prince Ferdinand, ruler of Bulgaria, and Princess Marie Louise, eldest daughter of the Duke of Parma, took place at the Villa Pianore, the ducal residence near Viareggio. The ceremony was marked with much pomp and was attended by many personages well known in political and social life. The bride was attired in a gown of white corded silk covered with a network of the finest pearls and wore a necklace of diamonds that formed four circles about her shapely neck. The prince was attired in the full dress uniform of commander in chief of the Bulgarian army and wore upon his breast the stars and ribbons of a number of orders.

Muldoon May Lose an Eye.

BALTIMORE, April 21.—William Muldoon, who is at the Monumental theater here with his athletic combination, met with what may prove to be a very serious accident while he was wrestling with Fritz Thompson, a German, one of the combination. The latter accidentally struck Muldoon just below the right eye with his elbow, cutting a gash about two inches in length. It was later stated that erysipelas has supervened, and that there is danger of its so affecting the eye that the great wrestler might lose the sight of it. Mr. Muldoon appeared at the matinee, but did not engage in any wrestling. His eye was heavily bandaged.

Conductors Tied Up the Road.

LONG ISLAND CITY, April 21.—A few days ago Superintendent Griswold of Steinway and College Point Electric railway issued a notice that the conductors and motormen would each have to deposit $50 with the company, and sign an agreement to forfeit the money should they break any of the company's rules. The order was to go into effect yesterday morning. One man paid the deposit. The others refused to do so, and in consequence the road was tied up all day. Superintendent Griswold advertised for new men. He says that the road will not be taken back. The road is five miles long.

No Settlement In Sight.

LONDON, April 21.—The prospect of a speedy settlement of the Hull dockers' strike is vanishing. The men are expected to reject all the proposals for a compromise drawn up by the president of the board of trade. The Shipowners' Federation, moreover, is about to issue a manifesto warning the strikers that unless they return to work at once their places will be filled with nonunion men.

The Duke Will Visit the White House.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The Duke of Veragua and suite will arrive in Washington tomorrow. The programme for their entertainment has not been announced, but will include a reception by the president and Mrs. Cleveland at the White House. The duke will return to New York to witness the naval parade on Tuesday of next week.

Yale Yacht Club Formed.

NEW HAVEN, April 21.—A yacht club has been formed at Yale, the only one in existence in an American university. It includes a membership of 100 and a sailing fleet of 25 vessels. It is the design of the club to hold weekly cruises on the Sound and to have one grand regatta during each season.

Why Lamb Disappeared.

CHICAGO, April 21.—The Tribune has the following: Jacob Newman is not the possessor of a satchel containing $28,000 left in his keeping by Lyman L. Lamb of Akron, O. Lamb has disappeared all right enough, but instead of his leaving $28,000 in Newman's hands he relieved Newman of that amount.

Dr. Lane's Hallucination.

CHICAGO, April 21.—Dr. J. S. Lane was pronounced insane by a jury and sent to the Kankakee asylum. Dr. Lane is 84 years of age and is laboring under the delusion that Mayor Carter Harrison wants to murder him because of his refusal to take a bribe of $5,000 for his vote.

COLD NEW YORK THIEVES

Robbed the Residence of the Bradley-Martins.

NIGHT AFTER THE WEDDING TOO.

The Burglars Were After the Wedding Presents of the Earl and the Countess Craven, but They Only Got Some Jewelry and Family Plate.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Burglars paid a visit to the residence of Mr. Bradley-Martin, the father-in-law of Earl Craven, and secured about $5,000 worth of booty. It is believed that clever cracksmen were concerned in the robbery, and that they were led to attempt a raid on the house by the notoriety following the announcement of Miss Bradley-Martin's engagement to Lord Craven.

Stories had been published of the costly wedding presents given to the bride by her mother's wealthy friends, and a fairly detailed description was secured of the presents.

There are safes in the house for the safe keeping of articles of value, but this seems to have escaped the consideration of the burglars who planned the raid on the treasures.

The earl and his American wife left this city on Tuesday.

Scaled a Spiked Wall.

The Bradley-Martin residence is at 22 West Twentieth street, and runs through to Nineteenth street. The back of the lot is guarded by a high wall surmounted by a row of spikes. Some time after midnight the burglars bent down these spikes while the storm was raging, scaled the wall, crossed the yard, and unfastened the back windows of the house by cutting out a pane of glass and reaching in and unloosening the catch.

They made their way to the library and the dining rooms and then retired, discovering that most of the valuables were locked in safes that they couldn't crack without too much noise.

A servant, who rose at 6 o'clock to light the kitchen fire, discovered that the basement window had been tampered with and roused the family. An investigation showed that a case in the library containing Mr. Martin's collection of antique watches had been broken into and that 12 watches had been carried off. Silverware had also been removed from the dining room sideboard.

None of the stolen silverware belonged to the Earl of Craven or his wife. It was part of the wedding presents of Mrs. Bradley-Martin, and bore her monogram, "C. S. M." The missing watches are the choicest in Mr. Martin's collection of antiques.

Edwin Booth's Condition.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Edwin Booth's condition was reported early this morning to be such as to call for no immediate alarm. Dr. Sinclair Smith gave out a statement concerning his patient, which, he said, was made at the request of Mr. Booth's family and some of his friends. It was as follows: "Mr. Booth's attack yesterday morning by partial aphasia and some paralysis of his right arm and right side of the face in all probability is due to slight hemorrhage in the brain. At no time has he been unconscious or in any immediate danger. He passed the night sleeping most of the time and has had a restful day. It is impossible at the present time to predict what the outcome may be."

Governor Flower Declined.

ALBANY, April 21.—The following telegram was sent to Governor Flower:

Charges have been preferred to the mayor of Buffalo against Joseph E. Gavin, comptroller, of misconduct in office which, if sustained, would disqualify him from exercising the power of appointing police and excise commissioners, which is given to him by the bill rushed through the legislature yesterday. On behalf of the committee of citizens appointed at a public meeting on last Monday I ask you to withhold your approval of the bill until these charges can be investigated.

J. N. ADAMS, Chairman.

The governor wired back declining to give the hearing. The bill has been signed.

Auction of Boxes For the Ball.

CHAINED HER TO THE FLOOR.

The Way a Virginia Father Took to Prevent His Daughter From Eloping.

RICHMOND, April 21.—Lotta Cale, daughter of John Cale of Covington, was found chained to the floor of the room and released by the police. It is said that her father chained her there two weeks ago to prevent her from eloping. Her lover complained to the authorities during her father's absence and an officer was instructed to free her, which he did against the protest of her aunt and mother, who were guarding her.

A staple was driven into the floor under her bed, to which a chain was fastened, and the other end was locked around the girl's ankle. Great indignation is felt in the community over the inhuman cruelty. Cale is the proprietor of the Cale House, and the daughter is a beautiful girl 17 years old.

The Eccentric Clover Club Dine.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Philadelphia's celebrated Clover club brought its sacred gridiron and its big wooden spoon to the Hotel Waldorf last night, and for the first time in its erratic career held its annual dinner in New York. The fact that Mr. George C. Boldt, a Clover chieftain of long standing, has come to New York to manage the Astor's palatial hotel, was largely responsible for the club's presence here. The gathering was held in the gold and white banqueting room where the Earl Veragua received New York's wealth and fashion Wednesday. The room was transformed into something new and exceedingly strange by the club's household goods. In the center of the room was the traditional clover leaf table, with an apple tree in bloom rising from the center. Two other full grown trees in flowers gave a rosy hue to the entire scene. All the tables were strewn with clover, and the club's white and green clover leaf banner hung from the walls.

Liquor Legislation In Connecticut.

HARTFORD, April 21.—The senate indefinitely postponed the bill permitting towns to vote to exempt manufacturing corporations from taxes for 12 years. The house passed an important measure affecting liquor sellers. It provides that a liquor dealer refused a license by the county commissioners may appeal to the superior court. Remonstrants against a license which is granted may in like manner appeal.

The Duchess Will Go to Chicago.

QUEENSTOWN, April 21.—The Duke and Duchess of Aberdeen and Lady Arnott are passengers on the steamer Teutonic, which arrived here on her way from Liverpool to New York. The Duchess of Aberdeen is greatly interested in promoting the success of the Irish exhibits at the Chicago Columbian exposition.

General Strike Feared In Buffalo.

BUFFALO, April 21.—The builders and contractors of this city are uneasy over the signs of discontent in the labor organizations. From surface appearances there is going to be a general strike of the building trades unless the demands of the plasterers, bricklayers and stonemasons are to be granted.

POPULAR MODES.

Striking Features of Styles Just Now In Vogue—Attractive Materials.

If we are not really going to wear crino line, skirts made very full and caught in with a drawing string in the middle of the length at the back, where a steel is cunningly inserted to make the dress stand out, certainly trenches much on the old mode.

It is said that velvet bodices of distinct colors will be much worn with light skirts—sometimes velvet, for example, with a white gown.

The wider the shoulders are made the smaller seems the waist, and this we rarely forget in modern dressmaking.

A favorite trimming for the front of a skirt is the introduction of large velvet bows at the hem. Velvet will be much worn alone and as a trimming and so will silk. Full bodices and full sleeves with large revers of velvet are decidedly the dominant idea. Where a rounded yoke is used, the frill around it should be very full.

BLACK CHIFFON AND PLAID COSTUME.

Feather stitching is seen on many bodices where plaits have to be kept in place. Skirts are cut in various ways. Some of the styles are only suited to wide materials, the front being plain, the back quite on the cross, so they the skirt stands out full at the back. Others again are a succession of gores. It is no use to think about being stylish if made nowadays; the present fashions demand much, and it is the double with fabrics that cut to advantage.

New materials are beyond praise. There are tea cloths with moire stripes and ondines with a waved cord which are a mixture of silk and wool. Silk crepons are in mixtures, such as black and gold, blue and gold, red and gold, sometimes four tints being blended in one. Figured grenadines have shot silk effects, and some are flecked all over with white spots.

Cloth is cut reproduced a dress quite in the mode, yet not too extravagantly so to please conservative tastes. It is made of black crepon, with a polonaise drawn over the shoulders, brought into the waist both back and front, and fancifully henstitched, falling back with revers of bellotrope and yellow plaid silk. This is draped around the waist by gilt bands, while the sleeves have puffs of the plaid, and the flounce is headed with it.

Mrs. Ward's Bequests.

JAMAICA, L. I., April 21.—The will of Ellen Ellis Ward, widow of the late Lieutenant A. Ward, U. S. N., of Rosslin, L. I., was admitted to probate. The estate is valued at $6,000,000. Among numerous bequests to church and charitable institutions are the following: Protestant Episcopal mission, New York, $15,000; Charity organization and Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, New York, each $5,000; Children's Temporary home, Mineola, L. I., $2,500; Episcopal diocese of Long Island, $2,500; New York Home for Consumptives, $2,500; New York Church Organization society, $5,000; St. George's chapel, Fort George, $10,000. Frederick D. Tappan gets $50,000 under the will. A like amount is left to each of the children of Mrs. Virginia Stuart, daughter of the testator. Mrs. Ward left $7,000 to her gardener, Thomas Watkins, and $1,000 to her maid, Mary Mackim.

Firemen From Greece.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Twenty Turks, Greeks and Armenians, who are on their way to the World's fair, were landed from the steamship San Giorgio, from Gibraltar. Among the Greeks are several firemen, who intend to show the people at the big exposition how fires are handled in the Orient.

Heartrending.

The beautiful young matron bowed her head in her soft white hands and wept, until it seemed to the good old pastor that her frigile frame would be disintegrated by the violence of her sobs.

He smoothed back the disheveled hair from her throbbing brow, and being but a man smashed the roses on her hat in so doing.

"Do endeavor to calm yourself and tell me what this great grief is. Let me try to help you."

The young matron sobbed still, but managed to utter:

"Oh, why am I so punished? Oh, what have I done that this grief should be brought upon me? And I have been so happy!"

"But, dear sister, tell me what it is that troubles you?"

The young matron turned a tearful gaze toward her good old pastor's face and read therein a world of sympathy. At last she controlled the violence of her feelings enough to speak. "Oh—oh—oh, "she sobbed, "Fido is jealous of the baby!"

And again her stricken heart found relief in tears.—Indianapolis Journal.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read first time, ordered to second reading, progressively to its third reading, and time fixed by the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

W. RUNYON, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., April 6, 1893.

AN ORDINANCE

To widen Madison avenue from the northeasterly side line of West Front street to the northwesterly side line of the right of way of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in the city of Plainfield.

WHEREAS, the Common Council judge that the public good requires the widening of Madison avenue between the points named in the title to this Ordinance, therefore,

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do ordain as follows:

SECTION 1. That Madison avenue in the City of Plainfield, from the northeasterly side line of West Front street to the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, be widened and laid out so that said Madison avenue shall be of the uniform width of seventy-eight feet on and after the first day of June thereof, which said premises is described as follows: Beginning at a point in the centre line of said Madison avenue, where the same is intersected by the southwesterly prolongation of the said to be taken for the widening of Madison avenue from the northeasterly side line of West Front street to the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, as aforesaid, and running thence (1) from said point of beginning and along the said centre line of said Madison avenue north forty-two degrees and twenty-four minutes east (N. 42 deg. 24 minutes E.) a distance of five hundred and seventy-five and forty-nine one hundredths feet to a point in the centre line of said Madison avenue, where the same is intersected by the southwesterly prolongation of the said street now or late laid out and opened, said point being distant thirty-two and fifty-four one hundredths (32.54) feet measured south forty-two degrees and twenty-four minutes west (S. 42 degrees 24 minutes W.) from the monument at the intersection of the centre lines of Madison avenue and West Front street running from said first mentioned point south forty-two degrees and twenty-four minutes west (S. 42 degrees 24 minutes W.) a distance of five hundred and seventy-five and forty-nine one hundredths feet to a point in the centre line of said Madison avenue, where the same is intersected by the southwesterly prolongation of the said street now or late laid out and opened, said last mentioned point being distant thirty-two and fifty-four one hundredths (32.54) feet measured south forty-two degrees and twenty-four minutes west (S. 42 degrees 24 minutes W.) from the monument at the intersection of the centre lines of Madison avenue and West Front street; thence (2) north forty-seven degrees and thirty-six minutes west (N. 47 deg. 36 min. W.) a distance of seventy-eight feet to a point in the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, as aforesaid, said point being distant seventy-eight feet measured at right angles from the centre line of said Madison avenue; thence (3) north forty-two degrees and twenty-four minutes east (N. 42 deg. 24 min. E.) parallel with the centre line of said avenue and distant therefrom seventy-six feet to a northerly direction; thence (4) south forty-seven degrees and thirty-six minutes east (S. 47 deg. 36 min. E.) a distance of seventy-eight feet to the point or place of beginning.

SECTION 2. That the lands and the lines of Madison avenue as the same is hereinabove ordered to be widened are shown on a map on file in the City Clerk's office, entitled "A correct map for the widening of Madison avenue from West Front street to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in the City of Plainfield, N. J." Dated 1893. Made by F. A. Dunham, Civil Engineer.

DECAY OF CHIVALRY.

REMARKS OF A MOTHER WHO HAS SEVERAL DAUGHTERS.

The Trouble With Young Men of Today Is That They Expect to Be Courted, and Most Girls Are Only Too Anxious to Humor Them—A Motherly Sermon.

"I don't believe in chivalry," said the spinster sternly. "I believe in simple equality, and I only ask to be treated as a human being."

"It can't be done," said the mother of daughters, "and if I had my way I should teach every young man I knew to be infinitely more chivalrous toward women, and especially toward young girls. If I had sons I should bring them up in the nurture and admonition of a true modern spirit of chivalry. Of course nobody wishes to see a young man wearing his lady love's colors at the tilt ic club or riding a tilt in her honor at the country club races. But I'm not sure that it would not be quite as well for the young man as the present reversal of things.

"Luckily my girls have a mother who looks out for them and invites as many young men in the house that, none can imagine himself especially sought out, but they have numbers of friends, pretty young girls, who positively have to select their own friends among young men, and who say 'Come to see me' with as much readiness as their mothers or aunts. Now, when I was a young girl a young man expected to ask to have the pleasure of a young girl's society; he expected to do a little of the courting himself, but the youths of today have lost all sense of the delicate deference due to girls. Why, down on the North shore in the summer girls who ought to know better will drive up serenely to any friend's house they choose and ask any young man they choose to come for a drive in their carts with them.

"Oh, I know there's a lot of talk about the prerogatives of the young American princess and 'queenly initiative' and all that sort of thing, but I won't let my girls have a bit of it. Carrie wasn't permitted before she was married, neither was Eleanor, and Fanny and Margaret know very well they would get into trouble with me. I caught Fanny trying her hand at it at the Assembly ball. She had been dancing with a young southerner, a Harvard man, who had only been introduced that evening, and she was sitting out a dance with him—right at my elbow too—and I heard her say, soft and low: 'Mamma and I are at home Thursdays. Won't you come next Thursday?' I didn't wait a minute for his answer, but I turned around promptly, not seeming to hear of course, and asked the young man to dine three weeks off. Of course he had to accept my invitation."

"What did your daughter say to you when she got you alone?" laughed her interlocutor.

"Kissed me goodnight, as a daughter should, and told me she thought I was a funny mamma, but always getting the best of my poor little downtrodden daughter."

"But why not let your girls do as other girls do?"

"Because I wish them to help foster the decaying chivalry of New England. It is very, very bad for young men to be courted and admired and run after as they are nowadays. They get so that they think themselves lords of creation before they are out of college. Why, at the Assembly ball one young man came sprolling up to my 2-yeargaret and drawing out, with a manner between chaffing and seriousness, "Well, I suppose I must dance this time with you! 'Not at all,' said Margaret, sweet as a peach, and sitting still, though she knew she was engaged to him for that dance and the next one too.

"She would have sat still the rest of the evening before she would have condoned that condescension. Just then up came another man and asked for the dance, and away went Margaret. She told me that the other one came to her afterward and said: 'What did you do that for?' I intended to dance that waltz with you.' 'You intended!' said she, and made him a little courtesy.

"Now, of course I don't want young men to crawl and eat from a girl's hand, but I don't want them to be insufferably rude. One time at a tea at our house I saw a young man fall in love with a regular little rosebud of a girl of 18, who had never been at any party but the one her mother gave for her when she came out. It was still winter and dark at 5 o'clock, and I, just to help him out, asked him to take her home when she started to go home. She lives only a few doors away and has always been in and out of our house since she was a baby. What do you suppose that young man—and he's 30 years old and ought to have some sense—said to me next time I saw him?

"I expected him to thank me for sending him with her. I'm sure I ought to be thanked, for very woman I know, including the girl's mother, would say I was a sentimental creature and dispensed with all the forms and doing such a thing because I saw he fell in love at first sight. Well, the conceited creature said dejectedly, Miss —— did not ask me to call the next night. I may say I read him a chapter. I told him she would have been scared to death to ask any man to call. I told him that most girls were sweet, retiring girls and mourn over the ideal woman they can't find, and then force the girls of today to do all the seeking and almost all of the inviting, with the mistaken idea that they are themselves the proper object of admiration.

"It wasn't so when I was young. I am sure my husband asked to come to see me the first time he ever came. My girls' grandmother would have locked me up on bread and water for a week if she had heard me say, 'Mamma and I are at home Thursdays,' as I heard my Fanny—to say nothing of the usual modern girl's everlasting 'Call to see me.'"

"You are very old fashioned."

"I am very new style, too, the very latest style indeed. These ways come back into fashion now and then, but I used to embroider, too, when it was quite out of fashion to know how."—Boston Transcript.

Disinfectants.

All the powerful and really useful disinfectants corrode metal and stain crockery more or less. Copperas is the best for household use, a pound dissolved in 12 gallons of boiling water and used hot, being more effective than cold. The valve should be open when it is poured down closets, so that it need not settle in the pan, which should be washed daily with a long handled dish mop kept for the purpose and scalding, strong suds, which it will need no further disinfection. A large funnel should be set in the pipes of stationary washbowls, which, by the way, are unfit for a human habitation and unknown to the best modern houses. When the fine Astor mansion was built, the owners positively forbade a single stationary bowl in the dressing rooms, an example which has since been followed in other high class houses.—Philadelphia Star.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

An Interesting Trick.

Dip a thread in strong salt water, then dry it thoroughly. Do this two or three times in succession, but do it secretly, so that your threat may appear to the audience like an ordinary thread.

Suspend to it as light a ring as you can get, then set fire to the thread, which will burn from one end to the other, and the spectators will be surprised to see the ring remain suspended by the ashes of the string which has just been destroyed before their eyes.

In reality the fibrous part of the thread has been burned, but there remains a small tube of salt solid enough to bear the weight of the light ring attached. Be careful that the operation is not exposed to a draft.

This experiment may be varied in the following manner:

The four ends of thread to the four corners of a square piece of muslin, thus forming a hammock. Dip the whole in strong salt water, then dry it, repeating the operation three or four times.

As soon as the muslin and threads are well saturated with the solution and thoroughly dry, place an empty egg in the suspended hammock, as represented in the illustration. Set fire to the hammock, which, *with the threads, will burn, and if this ex*periment be well prepared the egg will remain suspended, to the astonishment of the audience.—Donahoe's Monthly.

"Something Better."

"Here comes old Simon," cried Ben Davis, as he and his schoolmates met an aged grocer who, having no horse, was obliged to deliver his groceries himself.

"The old fellow is carrying a bag of beans somewhere," cried Fred Brown. "Look! look! he has spilled half of them, and they are all getting a good wetting in the snow. Ha! ha! What fun! Do see the old man try to pick them up. He's about as blind as a mole too."

"Let's give the bag another shake," laughed Rob Maggs." and see the rest of the beans a-fly."

"Oh, no," cried Sammie Beers, "let's do something better than that. Let's run and help him pick up the beans. He isn't to blame for being old and blind."

"Course he isn't," cried Ben. "Who said he was?"

"Nobody," answered Fred. "But, I say, let's help him load up that bag again."

Then the boys told the grocer what they meant to do. They began their task at once, and in a few moments had returned the greater part of the beans to the bag.—Harper's Young People.

A Young Cook.

There is in Brownsville a little Mexican girl 8 years old who hires out as a cook. Her employer is a man who lives alone, and she prepares all the food he eats. She makes tortillas many times the size of her tiny hands, pounding the corn in a metate and doing the entire work alone. It is well known that the making of tortillas is the work of a woman grown. For this service the tiny cook receives her food and the sum of 4 cents per day.

She is a bright little thing, very pretty and modest, and her employer has no fear of labor with ease. A lady visiting the house one evening lately saw the little one returning from her work. A younger Mexican ran apply to warm her, giving her a warm greeting, and the two entered with their arms about each other, the little cook proudly carrying her employer's supper outfit, the latter in a bit of calico.—Brownsville (Tex.) Herald.

The Manly Boy.

The manly, energetic boy is the one who asserts his right to be in the world and who promises to be of still greater service when maturity has ripened his faculties to their fullness and strengthened his mental and physical powers. Such a boy is the hope of the future, and he fulfills that hope. He may not be an immature intellectual marvel, and it is far better that he is not, for these youthful phenomenons are usually a disappointment as they grow older, failing to realize the high anticipations they have aroused, and often, like too early ripening fruit, as quickly and unseasonably going to decay.—New York Telegram.

What Gold Cannot Buy.

"Papa," said Walter, "I wish you'd buy me a whistle like Georgie's."

"What kind is that, Walter?"

"It's one with nothing to it but whistle. He makes an O of his mouth and blows the whistle through it."—Harper's Bazar.

The Angel's Flower Child.

You remember how, when you had to learn your first lessons, you were taught little poems. Among those I was taught was a little German thing which I think so pretty that I must tell you a little about it. It is about a white lily and tells you how it grew out of the ground till it was a glorious flower. And then comes the part about the angel. When the lily is in bloom, an angel comes down from the sky in the silent hours of the night. It gathers the dew that is falling, and then washes the petals of the lily with it. The moon sends her pale beams to bleach the silver white petals still whiter, the sweet breezes of the summer night dry them, and as the day dawns it calls on the world the angel knows its flower child and flies back toward the gates of heaven. Is it not lovely, this picture of what goes on in nature while we are asleep?—Pall Mall Budget.

Women In Societies.

It is frankly admitted that in their clubs and societies and conventions women do make some absurd blunders, but there is no quicker method of learning how to do the right thing than to blunder in the face of an audience that will not fail to observe and comment. It is like a child putting its hand in the fire—painful, but sure to prevent a repetition of the fault.

Women have a morbid horror of being ridiculous, and when they misapply the principles of parliamentary rule and see the mistake graphically depicted in the morning paper, whatever they may do, or whatever offense they may commit, it will not again be just that particular one. They learn parts in one session of a convention than they could acquire by two years' poring over "Roberts' Rules of Order," and in fact it is the only way in which they can learn.

The same is true of clubs. Observe any club of several years' experience, how much more dignified its proceedings become, how much more comprehensive is the programme, the themes selected and their manner of treatment. How a thing really appears to be never be passed until it is submitted to the disinterested. Our friends, our relatives are not competent to pass an unbiased opinion upon either our speech or deed. Their affection blinds them, and their partiality warps their judgment. The stranger has no such sentimental scruples. He sees, hears and knows the stern reality.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Model Hostess.

A woman may possess wealth untold, she may have a kindred of millions, and the brightest of minds, but unless she has absolute control of her feelings there will be some time in her career as hostess that she will display annoyance or worry, and the contagion spreading to her guests will cause an otherwise successful entertainment to die out in undisguised failure.

A model hostess must be equal to all appearances be made of stone, so far as disagreeable happenings are concerned. Even though a guest of carefully planned proceedings breaks a bit of china which can never be replaced, she must smile on as though the loss of the entire set would but emphasize the pleasure of her visit. Her well bred calm inspires her guests with a feeling of confidence, and though in her heart she may be very dubious about certain important details of the dinner or dance, if she does not show her anxiety, everything will pass off to a happy conclusion.

A flurried hostess and nervous host, whose countenances betray the inward worry they feel, can do more toward making the guests uncomfortable than if the soup were served stone cold and the salad dressing were ruled by a too bountiful quantity of vinegar. An imperturbable calm and a ready tact are the two important factors in the making of a model hostess. Secure these by hook or crook, and you need never fear for the success of any of your entertainments.—Philadelphia Times.

The Couch In a Cozy Room.

A room without a couch of some sort is only half furnished. Life is full of ups and downs, and all that saves the sanity of the jostled, jolted and pitilessly buffeted fortune fighter is the periodical good cry and momentary loss of consciousness on the up stairs lounge or the old sofa in the sitting room. There are times by the thousand of the things that distract us should be straightened out and the way made clear if one only had a long, comfortable couch on whose soft bosom he could throw himself, tension and strain, stretch his weary frame, unmindful of tidies and tapestry, close his tired eyes, relax the tension of his muscles and give his harassed mind a chance. Ten minutes after this seeking narcotic, when the head throbs, the soul yearns for endless, dreamless, eternal rest, would make the vision clear, the nerves steady, the heart light and the state of hope shine again.

There is no doubt that the need of a nap is mistaken for the longing to die. Instead of the immortality of the soul, business men and working women want regular and systematic doses of dozing, and after a money bank in the shade of an old oak that succeeding seasons have converted into a tenement of song birds, there is nothing that can approach a big sofa or a low, long couch placed in the corner, where tired nature can turn her face to the wall and sleep and dose away the gloom.—Hall's Journal of Health.

The Princess' School Days.

The Princess Kaiulani was educated quite democratically in an English boarding school. Harrowden Hall was the name of the institution, and Mrs. Sharp was the name of the mistress of the establishment.

Mrs. Sharp permitted the neighboring town of Willingborough to see very little of her royal charge. Kaiulani was very little trouble and remarkably like any other schoolgirl. She went through the school curriculum of accomplishments in the ordinary way, showing much aptitude, but no very lively enthusiasm. Full of fun, natural, gracious, affectionate and very much addicted to catching up slang phrases, the princess made herself extremely popular with her schoolmates, who called her Kaiulani with all the numerous endearments beloved of schoolgirlhood.

It has been stated that she is beautiful, and she is certainly very good looking, with a pair of glorious dark eyes, clear olive skin and a great quantity of wavy hair. Her photograph is in the possession of a great many of the Harrowden Hall girls, given by herself, nearly always with affectionate words on the back, together with her signature.—London Queen.

Mrs. Lamb's Faith In American Women.

The late Mrs. Martha J. Lamb had the greatest faith in and respect for the work of her American sisters in the fields of literature, art, music, drama, science, education and philanthropy.

"I don't see," said she on one occasion to a writer who was getting up something about "Monuments to Famous Women," "what you want to go out of America for."

"You have 'George Eliot'—far less worthy than many others not named—and you have left out your own Emma Willard—one of the foremost educators and women of her time, founder of the Troy seminary for the higher education of women, and of a school in Greece, as well as a prolific author on educational subjects.

"If," she continued, "we are to ever have statues of 'famous women' in our public places, let us first exhaust our list of Americans and then cross over the ocean."—Exchange.

The Smart Petticoat.

It is one of the axioms of good dressing that we should be smartly petticoated. A pretty woman without a front row in a walking error. If rustling is a quality of mark and the correct material beyond one's reach, a substitute may be found in one of the ting rooms. There are times by the many shot fabrics or the more sombre alpacas. Take one of the gray greens or a plain black and garnish the bottom with a lot of saucy looking silken frills pinked or scalloped and you have a lightweight skirt that is charming.—Buffalo News.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," SATURDAY, APRIL 22, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING LAST EVENING.

Petitions Presented—The Dog Tax Fixed at Two Dollars—Special Marshals Appointed—Bids Received for Crushed Stone—Mayor Saunders' Warning Concerning the Street Railway—Other Matters.

At the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council last night all the members were present. The reading of the minutes was on motion dispensed with.

Petitions.

Mr. H. A. Woodruff and others petitioned Council to repair Brook avenue from Elm place to Sandford avenue. The petition was referred to the Committee on Streets.

A petition was read from Mr. H. B. Manger of Washington avenue requesting the laying of a stone cross walk at Washington and Willow avenues. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Property owners on Myrtle avenue, who propose to build dwellings on that thoroughfare, reported that there was no water main on that street and therefore no protection in case of fire. The matter was referred to the Street Committee with power.

A petition was presented, signed by Mr. W. H. Pangborn, asking that Chatham street be macadamized from Somerset street to Brook avenue, and referred to the Street Committee.

Miscellaneous Business.

The bond of Mr. H. N. Spencer as collector was referred to Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Elections.

James D. Anderson, secretary of Warren Engine Company, No. 1, notified Council that Mr. George Schlereth had served seven years as fireman and was entitled to exemption papers. The matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel.

Mayor Saunders said he wished to call the attention of the Council to the matter of seeing to the laying of the street railway tracks on Somerset street. He said that a friend had called his attention to the matter, and that he would suggest that Council appoint a competent person to supervise the work and see that it is finished and put in proper shape. The borough should profit by the lesson Plainfield had been taught in letting the company leave the roadbed in the shape they did on West Front street.

Mr. Neal from the Street Committee reported favorably the petition of Mr. Joseph Bintz and others for the repairing of Greenbrook road; also the petition of Mr. Charles Debele for the repairing of Rock avenue; and also petitions for crosswalks on Westervelt avenue at Summit avenue, Summit avenue at Grand street; Washington avenue at Linden avenue; and Washington avenue at Park place.

The bids for crushed stone were read, and are as follows:

From Smalley Brothers—Dust, 75 cents per ton; No. 2½ 70 cents per ton at the crusher. They offered to deliver it for 15 cents per ton.

From J. H. Wilson & Co. Dust or No. 2, 90 cents; No. 2, 97½ cents; No. 1, $1; stone drawing, $1.07½; or all sizes at $1. This included carting.

From A. C. Johnson—Dust, 90 cents; nut, 90 cents; No. 2½, 85 cents; slabs, 75 cents. 17 cents per ton was included in this bid for carting.

The bids were referred to the Street Committee.

Resolutions.

By Mr. Connolly: Resolved, That Mr. George H. Fairchild be and is hereby appointed chief of the borough fire department. Adopted.

By Mr. Howell: Resolved, That the dog tax be fixed at two dollars per year. Adopted.

By Mr. Needham: Resolved, That the following persons be and are hereby appointed special marshals: Israel Jones, John Stark, Peter Strong, James Stewart, Jacob Kettenring, Samuel Moore, John Mackey, Richard MacDonald, William Conroy, Henry Bodenheimer, Horace Pangborn, Peter Doeringer, Israel Compton and Charles Debele.

By Mr. Connolly: Resolved, That better accommodations be provided for the press representatives and that another table be procured and placed inside of the railing for their use. Adopted.

By Mr. Neal: Resolved, That Greenbrook road, Rock avenue and Brook avenue be repaired at a cost not exceeding $300. Adopted.

By Mr. Neal: Resolved, That cross walks be placed at Westervelt and Summit avenues, Summit avenue and Grand street, Washington and Linden avenues, and Washington and Park place.

Council then took a recess.

On re-assembling the borough assessor matter was brought up. The opinion of Borough Counsel Reed, concurred in by Attorney General Stockton, was read. It held that as Assessor Cooley had been elected by the Mayor and Council for a term of three years, the new law, providing for the election by the people, did not affect him, and his term would not expire for two years yet. The opinion was received and filed.

The following bills were ordered paid:

The Street Committee, on motion, was empowered to employ a competent person to supervise the work of the railway company on Somerset street.

Mr. Crossley was appointed borough magistrate for the ensuing year.

The Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Elections was authorized to inquire into the matter of fixing a regular salary for the borough magistrate, and report at the next meeting.

Mr. Neal reported, for dirt sold by the Street Committee, the sum of $52.65. This amount, he said, had not been accounted for in any of the reports. The Auditing Committee was instructed to investigate the matter.

Council adjourned.

RECEPTION AND ENTERTAINMENT.

An Enjoyable Time at Vincent Chapel Last Evening.

At the combined reception to the pastor of the M. E. Church and Epworth League entertainment at Vincent chapel last evening a very fine program was given. The opening piece was a violin solo by Mr. Charence Mills. Then followed, in order, a reading from Mark Twain, by Miss Whitney; a recitation, by Miss Raybert, who was recalled; a selection from Holmes, "How the Old Horse Won the Bet," by Mrs. Sminck, a selection from James Whitcomb Riley, by Mr. Joy; violin solo, by Master Mills, and a reading from Lowell, by Miss Schaeffer.

A number of tables were placed in different parts of the room and were presided over by Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Jenkins, Mrs. Cokefair, Mrs. McNaughton, Mrs. P. M. French, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. Joy, Miss Brown, Mrs. Lyons and niece, and Miss Whitney. At these tables were served tea, coffee, chocolate and wafers.

INJURED WHILE AT WORK.

An Employee of Mr. L. A. Rheaume Hurt Yesterday.

One of Mr. L. A. Rheaume's employees, named Prugh, while at work yesterday, in his planing mill on East Fourth street, was struck on the head by a piece of timber which fell from the top of a pile of lumber.

He was knocked down and rendered unconscious by the shock. Dr. Rushmore was summoned and upon examination it was found that Prugh had received an ugly scalp wound. He was taken to his home on Mannion avenue, North Plainfield.

BREVITIES.

—To-night a song service will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

—"Special" prices on lace curtains and chenille portieres at Edsalls.

—The Board of Governors of the Crescent League held a meeting last night.

—"How do you pronounce it, 'crinoline' or 'cremoleen?'" "Neither; just a nuisance."

—The annual meeting of the American League of Amateur Photographers will be held on Wednesday evening, April 26th, at eight o'clock, at Nos. 111, 113 and 115 West 28th street, New York.

—The Society of Christian Endeavor is growing rapidly in Plainfield. The young people of the East Third street mission propose to form a society there to-morrow evening when Miss Alice B. Spangenberg of Netherwood will speak. Meeting begins at 7.45 o'clock.

—It is a risky thing to allow inexperienced electricians about your house, when you want electrical work done. It is one line in particular where the best is sure to be the cheapest. This fact has become gradually known to Plainfield people who have had their houses wired by Mr. Joseph Sohl of 69 North avenue, one of the most skilled and tasty electricians in the State. His advertisement appears in another column, and he has the very highest testimonials from those in this city for whom he has done work. You will save money by consulting him, if you have work in his line to do.

Plainfield Has a Right to Boast.

The Somerville Unionist Gazette, in comparing Plainfield and Somerville, says:

"Somerville is far ahead of its sister towns of Plainfield and Flemington where the citizens are now agitating the question of sewerage. We have happily gone through with all the unpleasantness of having pipes laid through the principal streets and the future healthfulness of the town is ensured because of an effective system of sewerage. Plainfield has made great boasts of its superior advantages as a place of residence, but this is a serious defect. We challenge any place in New Jersey to point out greater attractions than Somerville as a place for homes. With the conveniences of a city water supply from the pure Raritan; gas and electricity for lighting purposes; a sewerage system to protect from disease and the parent of peace; a trunk line of the main lines what more could be asked. A little more money expended on the streets and Somerville will be a model town."

AGREE TO PAY THE FULL AMOUNT.

The Case of Mr. Runyon vs. the Central Railroad Settled To-Day.

The number of Plainfield cases to be tried at the next term of court, beginning May 1st, was to-day reduced by one. The case of Henry C. Runyon vs. the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey was settled by the company agreeing to pay the full amount demanded by Mr. Runyon and the cost of court. Mr. Craig A. Marsh was counsel for Mr. Runyon and Mr. Joseph's New York law partners had charge of the case for the other side.

Arlingtons vs. Gorhams.

The Arlingtons and Gorhams played a game of ball on the Park avenue grounds, this morning. The Arlingtons won by the following score:

Arlingtons	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
	3	4	0	4	0	3	2	1	7—25
Gorhams	1	1	3	5	0	2	3	3	4—29

The Arlingtons made 18 base hits and four errors, while the Gorhams made 19 base hits and eight errors.

"TWO DAYS OF PENTECOST."

Yesterday's Meetings at the Salvation Army.

The following officers arrived yesterday at the Salvation Army to help conduct the "Two Days of Pentecost" meetings:

Captain Stevens, Perth Amboy; Captains Waldron and Elsg, and Lieutenants Stewart and Tweedy, Jersey City; Lieut. Sunster, Hackensack; Capt. McLean and wife, Morristown; Major Bown, Staff Capt. Merrill, Capt. Lyons, Capt. Meyer, Mrs. Bjerken, New York City; Capt. McTier, Jersey City; Capt. March, Boston.

Services were held as follow:

11 A. M.

Staff Capt. Marshall opened the meeting by song and prayer, after which Col. Evans took charge. Staff Capt. Marshall then read from the sixth chapter of Joel. Song "Thou hast the power to make me whole." Capt. Whiteman of Trenton made an address. Song, "Joy, Wonderful Joy." Solo by Prof. Trumbull. Captain Davis of Trenton then made a few remarks. Major Perry sang a solo, entitled, "Thou art a Mighty Saviour." The Commander then sang his latest composition, "Blessed Redeemer," after which he addressed the assemblage and the meeting closed.

3 P. M.

The meeting was opened by Col. Evans of New York by singing "Cleansing for Me." The Commander sang a solo, after which Capt. Stevens prayed. Solo, by Mr. Bjorkden, well celebrated tenor singer. Capt. McLean spoke next, then all sang "Come Brethren Dear that Love the Lord." Capt. Richards next spoke. He was followed by a solo by Ensign Agnew, "Power Divine." Capt. B. Nelson spoke next, after which all sang, "Thou Hast the Power to Heal Me." Solo by Secretary Hallimond. All sang, "He Breaks the Power, etc." Commander Booth spoke for some time, commenting upon the fifth chapter of John. The meeting was closed by Ensign Agnew.

7.30 P. M.

Commander Booth opened the meeting by singing from the Soldiers Soloist, after which Adjt. Hunter and Staff Capt. Kritz prayed. All sang "He Lives I Know He Lives." Capt. King spoke and Col. Evans led all in singing "Thou Hast the Power to Heal Me." Ensign Marshall spoke followed by a solo from Mr. Bjorkden, entitled, "Joy Wonderful Joy." Secretary Hallimond then read from Luke 10-22. Song "He Breaks the Power of Cancelled Sin." Commander Booth addressed the meeting and Ensign Agnew spoke a few words.

PERSONAL.

Miss Moore of Philadelphia, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Cruikshank, of Netherwood.

Mr. C. G. Cokefair of Crescent avenue returned home yesterday from the South.

A reception will be tendered the Rev. Herbert F. Randolph, the new pastor of the Grace M. E. Church, at that church to-night.

The Rev. J. E. Sagebeer of Flemington will exchange pulpits with the Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, to-morrow.

The Park avenue Baptist church, at both the morning and evening services, to-morrow, Miss Grace Tallman of Philadelphia will sing several solos.

Rev. Henry Pierson who for the past ten days has been conducting meetings in the Park avenue Baptist church will speak at the Y. M. C. A. meeting to-morrow at 4.15 p. m. All men are invited.

Miss Carrie Covel of Brooklyn is the guest of Mrs. Taft of West Front street. Miss Covel has just returned from a three months trip in the South, which included Florida and Old Point Comfort. She stopped off to visit Mrs. Taft on her return.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brooks gave a children's party, yesterday afternoon, at their home on Crescent avenue, in honor of the celebration of their son, Lester's, tenth birthday. Many of his little friends attended and spent an enjoyable afternoon.

Word has been received from Chicago, where the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis has been visiting his son, Mr. Edwin Lewis, that the clergyman is suffering from injury to his eyes. Dr. Lewis was handling a breech-loading gun, which seems to have been defective, and an explosion burned his face, causing special damage to his eyes.

The B. and O. Bridge Partly Burned.

Sparks from a locomotive set fire to the grass in the marshes beneath the Baltimore and Ohio bridge over the Arthur Kill near Elizabeth on Thursday evening, and the flames ignited the yellow pine of which the trestle is composed. It burned fiercely. The fire department at Elizabethport was called out and together with the fire brigade of the Bourne & Seymour oil works, began to fight the fire.

About 100 feet of the bridge approach is more or less burned, and traffic over the structure will be stopped until the damaged portion is rebuilt.

Passengers Rescued from a Swamped Train.

The storm Thursday night caused a washout on the Elizabeth and Newark branch of the New Jersey Central road, stopping all traffic. The train that left there at midnight ran into the brook and was brought to a halt when the water reached the level of the car floors. The passengers were rescued on [illegible] hand car which was sent from Newark.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Were they the Narcosic's Dead?

London, April 22.—A despatch from Vanidem, Holland, states that a fishing boat that has arrived there reports having seen adrift in latitude 56° north, longitude 5 east, a boat which had painted on its side a name which as far as could be made out read "Norna."

In the boat were four dead men, their bodies being tied to the seats.

A high sea was running at the time the boat was sighted and this prevented the fishing vessel from running close up to the drifting boat.

It is conjectured here that this small boat came from the ill-fated Naronic, which sailed from Liverpool for New York on Feb. 11 last and has never since been heard from.

No date is given on which the boat was seen. The position where the boat was sighted is a little to the westward of the middle of the North Sea.

Ten Policemen Catch Two Rioters.

New Brunswick, N. J., April 22. (Special)—The policemen raided a disorderly house here last night. It has been patronized exclusively by prominent people and a big haul was anticipated. Some one gave the occupants a "tip" however, and only a house-keeper and a "bouncer" were caught.

$850,000 in Gold Gone.

New York, April 22. (Special.)—More gold was ordered at the Sub-Treasury this morning for export. Heidelback, Ickelheimer & Co., took $700,000. This is in addition to the $700,000 taken by them yesterday. Besides, $150,000 more was taken for Canada.

The Escaped Murderers Still at Large

Simo Sing, April 22—(Special.)—No trace of Roehl and Pallister, the two murderers who escaped from the prison early Thursday night, has up to noon today been discovered.

To Review the Harris Case.

New York, April 22.—(Special.)—Gov. Flower has appointed George Raines of Rochester Commissioner to take testimony in the case of Carlyle W. Harris.

A Decision of Importance.

A decision of vital interest to all interested in building contracts has been handed down by Judge Dixon of the Court of Errors and Appeal. It affirms the decision made some time ago by Judge Rice in the case of Hall agt. Pimlott, holding the owner of the house to be liable for the cost of the building material used in the building of the house in the man to whom the contract was given.

Pimlott, who lives in South Amboy, contracted with Builder Sylvester for the erection of a house. Pimlott filed the contract in the county clerk's office, but neglected to file with it a copy of the specifications. John Hall furnished the building material for Sylvester, who failed to pay for it. Pimlott, not absconded without settling with his creditors, Hall entered a law against the house, and brought suit against Pimlott to recover. Under the statute which provides that the specifications must be filed with the contract, Judge Rice held that Contractor Sylvester could not be held, and that Pimlott was responsible for the material used in his house.

The Fraudulent New York Senate.

[From the Brooklyn Eagle (Dem.)]

A proportion of seventeen Republicans to fifteen Democrats was created for the Senate by the voters of the State. Those proportions were exactly reversed, and seventeen Democrats and fourteen Republicans were placed in the body by the methods indicated. The substitution of a Senate by manufacture for one by election has been a public calamity and a political scandal. The process has stamped its character on both houses, making them reckless, willful and senseless, with the result of bringing them constantly in conflict with the upright public opinion of all parties.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There are people who love harmony so well that they are ready to fight for it any day.

Swinburne has not done himself much glory in the verse-making line recently. But the poem he was inspired to write about the Chicago exposition is equal to his best. Not in years has he given the world anything so good as the ode beginning, "Sunset smiles on sunrise; east and west are one."

The Irish begin to be indignant that the monkeys and monsters in zoological gardens always receive some Hibernian name. Says one gentleman from the green isle: "I tell you, brothers, it is an infamous degradation to call sea lions and baboons and chimpanzees and hippopotami after our brothers and sisters in the dear old country." The Irish gentleman is right. Let all the animals be rechristened and let the biggest monkey be named Ward McAllister.

Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones of Chicago, who evidently has some Welsh blood in him, has proposed a new way to destroy slums and sweater shops. He would have brilliant electric lights placed in every dirty alley. Next he would tear down every high board fence which shuts off filthy, disease breeding tenements and yards from the public eye and lay bare all the foulness and pollution. Then city governments would have to take cognizance of the matter or there would be a change of administration.

Inward Illumination.

That moles, scars, tumors, cancers, etc., can be removed by the application of an electrically heated wire the public is already more or less aware. That the interior of a man's body may be so lit up that he will present somewhat the appearance of an old fashioned lantern with a dim light burning inside has also been asserted frequently, but the process of accomplishing this is not familiar.

It is done by electric lights which, on a small scale, are like those that shine upon poles and towers. A small electric light bulb at the end of a long tube is inserted into a patient's stomach. The button is pressed, and his stomach becomes luminous. By an arrangement of mirrors the physician is able to see the inside coats of the stomach itself and determine what kind of dyspepsia that man has, whether it was brought on by free lunches or overindulgence in hard work.

Whenever the blood is perfectly healthy it is bright red and clear. If the hand is held up before a light, the light will shine through it clear and semi-transparent unless there is some wound or eruption; then the fingers will look dark, and the semitransparency will not be manifest. So the unhealthy stomach looks thick and dark and will not let the light shine clear and red through it. This is true of every part of the body. Wherever there is a cancer, tumor or anything that thickens and darkens the bright red muscular tissue, or wherever there is a foreign body in the stomach, it can be discerned in a moment by this searchlight of the human anatomy.

A Municipal Experiment.

The city of Cleveland had 13 boards, and the municipal administration was not conducted in a highly satisfactory manner either. Then the voters decided that the boards must go. They applied for and got a new city charter, which reduced the number of their city departments to six. There was one man at the head of each of these, and he was appointed by the mayor. The city council has the veto power over the mayor's nominations, however. The argument in favor of five departments and no boards at all was that it would make one man responsible for the good or ill working of his department, just as is the case in business houses, and that one man could be pinned down and made to give the reason in case of extravagance or mismanagement.

Cleveland's mayor, Mr. Rose, has made the first report of the workings of the city government under the new charter. Following are some of the items from that report. Most of the departments have been run with less money than under the old system. Little pickings and stealings were unearthed all along the line. In the fire department there were short weight of coal and short measure of horse feed, and the contractors were brought to time handsomely. In the water works department such a surplus accumulated that rates were lowered. When did such a thing happen in any city before?

There was not enough fat in the gas company's plant to oil the wheels of administration any more. After a contest in which the city was inexorable, the gas company lowered the price from $1 a thousand to 80 cents and pays into the city treasury besides 6% per cent of its gross receipts. Gas consumers save $150,000 a year, and the city treasury is richer by $40,000 a year than it was before. The tax rate has meantime been lowered all around. The saving of money and increased efficiency of city government have been due to two things—first, the great frtcrest which all the citizens have taken in the new order; second, to the one man power, in which a single individual is held directly responsible for the administration of his department.

A STORM SWEPT COAST

The Shore Wreck Strewn From Barnegat to Biddeford.

DAMAGE BY WIND AND WAVE.

The Long Island and New Jersey Coast Lines Still Pounded by Huge Waves. Many Small Crafts Blown Ashore—Wind Played Havoc In the Interior Too.

NEW YORK, April 22.—The damage done all along the North Atlantic seaboard by the recent storm is hardly to be estimated, and the huge breakers are still thundering on the coast.

Many smaller craft were driven ashore on the treacherous Jersey coast and along both sides of Long Island, and up the length of the New England coast there were scores of wrecks.

From Long Island came some thrilling stories of the sea's ravages. A number of sailing vessels anchored in the Great South bay were driven ashore and several were wrecked. The high tide flooded a number of buildings along Bayview street, Oyster Bay, besides washing away a quantity of lumber and several small buildings.

The fleet of the Sowanahaka Yacht club at Center Island was wrecked. Nearly 200 feet of the causeway over the meadows between College Point and Flushing, L. I., was washed out, carrying with it a section of the track of the electric railroad running between the two places. The docks along Flushing creek were covered to a depth of two feet. Several piles of lumber and a quantity of other material were washed away.

The ocean steam tug Taurus, which reached this port in safety yesterday afternoon after a terrific struggle with Thursday's gales, brought to her a story of shipwreck, peril and perhaps death. According to Captain M. J. O'Brien of the Taurus four big ocean barges were wrecked by the storm. These four barges contained forty-two numbers in all. Dispatched from Barnegat indicated the rescue of the crews of two of the barges.

Damage on Long Island.

Four sheds full of lime in Long Island City were burned by the water slacking the lime. The sheds burned for seven hours.

The houses of the Williamsburg Yacht club and Astoria Athletic club at Bowery bay were considerably damaged by the high tide. Several yachts ready for launching were wrecked from their supports and roughly handled. The sloop yacht Breeze, owned by Robert Anderson, had a big hole stove in her bow, and a steam launch owned by the Daimler Motor company was stove in. All along the shore front boats and bathhouses were wrecked. The tide was higher than it is ever known to have been before.

The high tide and heavy surf at Rockaway beach kept a large force of men busy all Friday and Saturday night. The surf breakers wrecked everything within reach. The new buildings being put upon the iron pier were completely demolished. Four sections of Bares & Wainwright's switchback were carried away, together with George Craigs' small hotel. The Oakley Park hotel and Hanover House were badly damaged by water. The heavy wind caused some delay to the railroad trains crossing the mile of trestle over Jamaica bay.

Families Driven Out by High Water.

NEWARK, N. J., April 22.—The heavy rain and fierce wind caused an unusual high tide, which overflowed the meadows on the east side of the Passaic river and caused considerable damage. A large portion of the river bank near Third street, Harrison, was washed away and the water rushing in overflowed the railroad track and inundated the lowlands, where a number of small shanties occupied by the families of men employed on the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad company stand.

The washout occurred shortly after midnight, and the families of Thomas Keller, Thomas Breslin, Benjamin Few and the Widow Greenan were forced to take to the high ground, where they spent the remainder of the night.

The people who were driven from their homes had chosen the low land for their residence places, confident that the railroad embankment would serve as a barrier to the water in case of the overflow of the river.

The main damage was done at Alfred Dreyer's Lamp Black works, south of the Pennsylvania railroad tracks. The water entered in on the lower floor of the factory, where reat quantities of the lamp black were stored ready for shipment. The loss will reach about $3,000. At the Campbell Black works the engine and boiler rooms were flooded and the night engineer driven from his post.

Cattle and Sheep Killed.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., April 22.—The windstorm which travelled in this section caused about $2,000 damage in this town. The roof of the City Opera house was torn off and the scenery and interior decorations ruined.

A large barn on the farm of George Isham, near Rodman, this county, was blown down and 30 cows buried beneath the timbers. Ten cows were killed in a similar manner near Polaski, Oswego county. Reports of great damage to buildings and loss of cattle and sheep are being received from all parts of this county.

Great Damage In Vermont.

RUTLAND, Vt., April 22.—Special dispatches received from many towns show that the wind and sleet storm was one of the most severe in the state in several years. Many barns, houses and buildings have been blown down in all towns from Swanton to Bennington, live stock killed and valuable trees uprooted. The damage will amount to thousands of dollars. The wind was especially severe in towns next to the Green mountains, and later details will show great destruction of property and possibly of life.

A Boston Yacht Ashore.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., April 22.—The schooner yacht Gitana, owned by George W. Wield of Boston, ran ashore on the shoals in Duboy sound in a storm and spent 17 hours pounding before a tug took the party off. Those aboard were Captain George W. Wield, Boston; Harold W. Maxwell, Greave Providence; Dr. Z. B. Adams, Farmingham; D. B. Dalton and W. R. Hammond, Boston.

Expect to Float the Eagle.

NORWALK, Conn., April 22.—The steamer Eagle of the Norwalk and New York Steamboat company, which grounded on Long beach sandbar while en route to New York during the storm, will, it is expected, be floated. Long beach is inside the Norwalk islands, and the vessel has been in no danger from either wind or seas, as erroneously reported.

Barges Went Ashore.

BARNEGAT DEPOT, N. J., April 22.—Captain Ridgeway of station 17 discovered two barges drifting ashore on North beach. He managed to board them and brought the crews ashore. The barges broke loose from a tug. The first one that struck went to pieces. The second one broke in two.

High Tide Set Fire to Lime.

NEWBURG, N. Y., April 22.—C. J. Rezer's storehouse on Cold Spring wharf was burned. Loss, $6,000. The tide in the Hudson was so high that the water rose above the wharf and made its way into the storehouse, resulting a quantity of lime on the first story. This caused the fire.

Small Boats Destroyed.

NYACK, N. Y., April 22.—The storm along the Hudson did much damage. It destroyed hundreds of small boats and tore down scores of small docks. The damage in a distance of five miles will amount to thousands of dollars.

Drifted Onto the Rocks.

BIDDEFORD, Me., April 22.—Schooner Inflex, from Philadelphia for Saco with a cargo of coal dragged anchor, drifted onto the rocks and sank in 15 feet of water. The crew was taken off by the Biddeford Pool Life savers.

In New York State.

TROY, N. Y., April 22.—A storm of wind and sleet reported the heaviest in 20 years, prevailed here in this county. A large number of barns were blown down, several cattle were killed and a number of horses badly hurt.

Driven on Jersey Flats.

NEW YORK, April 22.—The bark Sunny South, anchored off Redlon's Island, was driven ashore on the Jersey flats.

Will Not Receive Mr. Judd.

VIENNA, April 22.—Count Kalnoky, the Austrian premier, has given notice to American Minister Grant that the Austrian government will not grant its exequatur to Mr. Max Judd of St. Louis, appointed by President Cleveland consul general for the United States at Vienna, Count Kalnoky on the ground that Judd is an Austrian by his former allegiance, and is engaged in the immigration business.

Twenty-five Negroes Poisoned.

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss., April 22.—News has been received here of a wholesale poisoning of negroes who attended a negro wedding on Col. Duke plantation. Twenty-five negroes are lying at the point of death and the physicians have little hope of saving one out of them. The poisoning was accidental. It was caused by eating boiled custard that had stood in a new tin can.

Commissioner in the Carlyle Harris Case.

ALBANY, April 22.—Gover Flower has appointed George Raines of Rochester as a commissioner to take testimony in the case of Carlyle W. Harris. Mr. Raines will begin his work on Monday morning in New York city. This action on the part of the governor does not necessarily act as a stay of execution.

New Use of Carrier Pigeons.

CLEVELAND, April 22.—The use of carrier pigeons on the lakes is being successfully inaugurated by a Fairport fishing company. Pigeons are sent out with each boat going to lift nets. The boat comes ashore with the information as to the quantity and variety of the catch, which can then be wired to marketmen.

No Russians For Hamburg.

HAMBURG, April 22.—As a precautionary measure the senate, elected by the authorities of Hamburg will exclude from this city hereafter all Russian emigrants. No distinction will be made between Russians intending to live here and those intending to emigrate to America.

Edwin Booth Very Ill.

NEW YORK, April 22.—The condition of Edwin Booth, who has been sick at the Players' club, changed for the worse yesterday. Late last night it was feared that a crisis had been reached, and the patient was declared to be in the greatest danger.

Fireboat Caught and Confined.

MILWAUKEE, April 22.—The police have at last succeeded in capturing the fireboy who has been terrorizing the city for months, and whose daring acts have caused losses of millions of dollars. The prisoner is Matthew Thomett. He has confessed.

Consul Risley Seriously Ill.

NEW YORK, April 22.—John E. Risley, the newly appointed minister to Denmark, is seriously ill at his residence here. Mr. Risley intended to leave for his post the first week in May, but his illness will probably delay his departure.

Tongue Slashed With a Butcher Knife.

BELFAST, Me., April 22.—Ephraim Robbins slashed Oliver Bowlton and Monroe Norton, local toughs, with a butcher knife at a dance in the suburbs. Norton will recover, but Knowlton may die. Robbins is at large.

Decision Against Lennon.

TOLEDO, O., April 22.—A writ of habeas corpus in the case of James Lennon, the Lake Shore engineer, who was fined in United States court for refusing to handle a Ann Arbor freight, was refused by Judge Ricks.

Universal Suffrage Becomes a Law.

BRUSSELS, April 22.—The Belgian senate has approved the compromise granting universal suffrage, accompanied by plural voting, based on education and property, as adopted by the chamber of representatives.

A Mine of Quicksilver.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 22.—A ledge of what is said to be cinnabar has been discovered in the southwestern part of the city. A specimen of the ore assayed by plural 36 per cent quicksilver, or $400 a ton.

Killed on the Track.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., April 22.—A south bound engine on the New York Central and Hudson River railroad struck and instantly killed an unknown man about 60 years old a mile west of this place.

Charged With Wife Poisoning.

TOLEDO, April 22.—Hugo Wayler is wanted by the police on the charge of poisoning his wife. His object is said to have been to secure an insurance of $5,000 which the woman held.

Royalty at a Horse Race.

ROME, April 22.—King Humbert and Emperor William, with their wives and suites, attended the Italian derby.

No Vote For Canadian Women.

HALIFAX, April 22.—In the house the Woman Suffrage bill was killed in committee of the whole.

HE HAS NOT RESIGNED.

Secretary Carlisle Says He Does Not Intend To.

CABINET SQUABBLES DENIED, TOO.

There Is a Difference of Opinion Between Mr. Carlisle and the President, Though, Concerning the Gold Question—The Reserve Melting Away.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The members of President Cleveland's cabinet were disturbed by the inquiries as to rumored dissensions in the cabinet and resignations therefrom as a result of those dissensions. It was stated with great circumstantiality that the president had declared in favor of a bond issue, and that Secretary Carlisle had announced his intention to resign from the cabinet. This story was denied absolutely and unqualifiedly by Secretary Carlisle and other members of the cabinet, who declared that it was nonsense and absolutely without foundation.

Secretary Carlisle when asked as to the truth of the report that he had resigned from the cabinet was disinclined to discuss the reports by a denial, but said: "It seems hardly necessary to take up the time necessary to deny such absolutely baseless errors. There is no truth whatever in it."

Another member of the cabinet said: "The story is absolute nonsense. There is no division between the president and the secretary of the treasury, and so far as I have observed between any members of the cabinet. There were the same stories afloat about the president and Mr. Manning. Mr. Carlisle has never declared any intention of resigning. All these stories about one man saying in cabinet when the bond question was discussed, 'I stand so,' and another man, 'I stand so,' are nonsense. Cabinet don't work in that way—at least none of which I know."

It is hard to trace the origin of the story, but it seems to have been based largely on the delay in issuing the statement given to the press by Mr. Carlisle and its failure to state a definite policy for the future.

The Reserve Still Melting Away.

The reports alleged that Mr. Carlisle's statement as originally prepared had been more definite, but that certain matters had been eliminated as the result of differences of opinion between the president and Secretary Carlisle. It is quite probable that the president and Secretary Carlisle, each having views of his own, have not agreed entirely on things to be done in view of the exports of gold, but it is stated authoritatively that these differences of opinion have never assumed serious lengths and that there has been harmony of action. The president was inclined toward a bond issue, while Mr. Carlisle was disposed not to resort to one except in the very gravest emergency, and from this fact seems to have started most of the rumors of cabinet dissensions.

Large amounts of gold taken for export yesterday absorbed all the treasury's free gold and forced it to take one further step in outlining its policy. It was observed: The substantive fact in the developments is that the $100,000,000 gold reserve has been invaded and a part of this gold accumulation used to meet the demands caused by the exports of the precious metal. The reserve now stands in round figures at 098,200,000.

The announcement that the gold reserve also establishes two other points in treasury policy—first, that there will be bond issue as soon as the free gold is exhausted; second, that further shipments will be stopped on silver notes as a result of the gold reserve having to be encroached upon.

The Czar Signed the Treaty.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Secretary Gresham received information from St. Petersburg that the czar had signed the Russian extradition treaty and that its ratification had been exchanged by the United States minister with the foreign office at the Russian capital. It met with much objection raised to this treaty, because it is said to make it possible for Russia to extradite political offenders. In its original form it was sent to the senate during President Cleveland's former administration, but for various reasons hung fire until finally ratified by the senate in modified form.

Baseball Passes For the President.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—President Cleveland received evidence of fortune's favors when Secretary Nick Young of the National Baseball league called on Private Secretary Thurber and presented to him a handsome book entitling the president to go out to the ball games and sit in the grand stand free of charge. He also left a pass book for Mr. Thurber and each member of the cabinet. Last season President Harrison paid an occasional visit to the grounds of the Washington Baseball club and Secretary Tracy and Charles Foster were frequent attendants.

The Fusionists Win.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The poolrooms have won in their fight against the Mushback antigambling law passed by the Virginia legislature to break up the turf exchange which had sprung up in Jackson City, opposite Washington, and in other parts of the state.

Death of the Earl of Derby.

LONDON, April 22.—The Earl of Derby died at 2:30 o'clock last evening. The Right Hon. Edward Henry Stanley, Earl of Derby, was secretary of state for India, with a seat in the cabinet, and it was under his superintendence that the management of the British Indian empire was transferred from the board of directors of the East India company to the government of Great Britain. Upon his father's death the late earl became a member of the house of lords.

Shot a Western Terror.

DENVER, April 22.—Jack Taylor, a noted desperado, was shot and killed by Constable Daffer while attempting to break into a store. Taylor was known as a terror from Silverton to Creede and is wanted in 100 different places for horse stealing, highway robbery and burglary.

During South American Sailor.

PANAMA, April 21.—An eccentric navigator named Bowman proposes to make a trip to Chicago in a 25-foot boat, and actually sailed away from Valparaiso on March 12 on his long voyage. He expects to arrive about the middle of June.

Death of Asa Gillson.

HARTFORD, April 22.—Asa W. Gillson died of heart failure. He was 70 years old and a general agent of the Hartford Fire Insurance company.

Postmaster Charged With Embezzlement.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Peter L. Fredricks, the postmaster of Glendale, L. I., was arrested, charged with embezzlement.

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon of Piqua, O., says the Physicians are Astonished, and look at her like one risen from the dead.

Long and Terrible Illness from Blood Poisoning

Completely Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent lady of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible sores broke out on her head, arms, fingers and breast. Her hair all came out, she weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says: "I became perfectly cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one risen from the dead."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Bodies in a Box.

JERSEY CITY, April 22.—A box which arrived at the Adams Express company's pier at the Pennsylvania railroad docks, this city, emitted such a peculiar odor that the fact was reported to Acting Agent Herbert Temple. He consulted the way bill and found that the box was said to contain books. When the box was opened instead of books it was found to contain two human bodies. The bodies afterward proved to have been medical subjects intended for a Vermont college.

Fought Four Fierce Rounds.

NEW YORK, April 22.—A stiff fight to a finish took place on the outskirts of Brooklyn between Jack Leary of England, and a opponent Tommy Duffy of Williamsburg. Four very fierce and bloody rounds were fought. Leary proved the better man and in the fourth round knocked his man out. Both sides claimed the stakes.

Mrs. Green Adjudged Insane.

RALSTON, N. Y., April 22.—The commission of three physicians to examine into the sanity of Mrs. Carrie Green, indicted for the murder of her little niece, Florence Gallor, reported that she was irresponsible at the time of the crime. She was sent to the state asylum for insane criminals at Matteawan.

A HUNT FOR MURDERERS

Detectives by the Thousands Search For the Convicts.

ORDERED TO SHOOT THEM ON SIGHT.

The Dramatic and During Escape of Robie and Pailliot, Condemned Murderers. From the Death Cells, Causes a Big Convict Hunt to Be Started.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Under cover of a storm of unequaled severity, one of the most sensational escapes from prison occurred at Sing Sing. The wind was blowing a hurricane, while rain fell in sheets, forcing the guards to keep within the watch towers in the walls. During this fearful war of the elements Thomas Pailliot and Frank W. Robie, condemned to death, overpowered their guards, offered to liberate the other men in the death chamber, and on being rebuffed, made their way out into the darkness to liberty. Across the storm swept prison yard they went, opened one of the gates and disappeared.

The whole detective resources of the state were called into requisition. Governor Flower offered a reward of $250, and the state detectives followed every clew, aided by keepers from the prison and a detail of 25 men from police headquarters in this city. So desperate and lawless are the escaped murderers that Warden Brown ordered his men to shoot them if they showed the slightest signs of resistance.

With Orders to Kill.

"Do not give them a chance," he said. "Be sure of their identity, then shoot to kill and bring them back in boxes." And every one of the keepers and detectives is armed with either a Winchester rifle or a brace of revolvers.

Warden Brown organized six searching parties. He sent Keeper S. E. McNeal, 28 miles northeast of Sing Sing, to Brewsters.

Three railroads, the New York and New England, the New York and Northern and the Harlem division of the New York Central, run through Brewsters. McNeal was instructed to have the three roads watched until further orders.

A second searching party went due west, through Whitsons and the surrounding country, along the New York and Northern railroad.

A third party, under the charge of H. J. Decker, started north. W. J. Ford, James Sharkey and William Murphy crossed the river and started through the country back of Haverstraw, Nyack, Stony Point and Congers.

The Whole Country Aroused.

After starting the searches out Warden Brown sent out a general alarm all over the country. He notified the police of every seaport of any size, from New Orleans to Portland and from New York to San Francisco. He also sent telegrams to Montreal and Toronto.

State Detective Jackson communicated at once with Superintendent Byrnes, and early in the morning detectives from Inspector McLaughlin's staff dropped into the towns on either side of the Hudson river. Four of them were in Tarrytown at noon. They disappeared toward the east.

The country back of Nyack and Haverstraw was very closely searched. The fact that the boat was stolen caused Warden Brown to think that the men crossed the river and struck across the country for the West Shore railroad.

The warden was inclined to believe that the fugitives would try to reach the seaport and leave the country. He did not think they would travel by day. They probably lay hidden throughout the day.

All the searchers are heavily armed and were instructed to take no chances, and if they meet either of the men to bring him in dead or alive.

The Pope to the Belgians.

ROME, April 22.—The pope gave an audience to 500 Belgian pilgrims. His holiness in receiving the pilgrims said he had heard with deep concern of the recent events in Belgium which had threatened public peace and safety. In order to prevent the recurrence of such troubles good Catholics should not allow themselves to be deceived by evilly disposed workingmen. They ought to act in harmony with employers under the guidance of their pastors.

Home Rule Bill Passed Second Reading.

LONDON, April 22.—There was a division in the house after the second reading of the home rule bill. When the Hon. Mr. Balfour had spoken Mr. Gladstone commenced his summing up of the debate. The question was then put and carried by a majority of 43. The vote stood—Yes, 347; nays, 304. When Mr. Gladstone, after the division, returned to the lobby he received a tremendous ovation, and the enthusiasm was almost unprecedented.

Cruel Hazing by Girl Students.

DELAWARE, O., April 22.—At the Ohio Wesleyan university some of the young women students caught the hazing spirit, and about 20 young women, on the same evening the boys suffered, got a strong solution of nitrate of silver and proceeded to brand six or seven of their school friends on their cheeks, breasts and hands.

Charged With Swindling Spreckels.

PHILADELPHIA, April 22.—Algernon Grover, giving his residence as 58 Pine street, New York, and his business as general mining, was arrested, charged with obtaining $1,800 worth of sugar from the Spreckels Sugar company on fraudulent representations.

LAND PARADE PREPARATIONS.

There Will Be Many Soldiers Ashore and a Big Second In Probable.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Mayor Gilroy received a letter from Captain John C. Bayley, chief of brigade of the Massachusetts State Naval reserve, accepting the invitation to be present with 500 men at the naval review next Thursday.

A communication was also received from Rear Admiral Ghermardi, to the effect that the landing force from the United States fleet on April 28 would be in excess of 1,200 men, and that it was quite possible all the visiting squadrons would land their men, several of them had not yet signified their intention.

Adjutant General Josiah Porter sent the acceptance of Governor Flower to attend the naval parade. The governor's party will consist of himself and wife, his daughter and her husband, and Mrs. Flower's maid. He will stop at the Windsor hotel.

With His Last Breath.

MOBILE, April 22.—Joseph Cook, a clerk in a store at Scranton, Miss., was assaulted and the safe robbed of $1,500. Cook was found with three bullet holes in his body. Before he died he stated that he was assaulted and robbed by James F. Smith, O. Rolla and Charles Taggart. The guilty parties were arrested while taking a train for Mobile. The money was found upon their persons. The jail was guarded to prevent the populace from lynching the perpetrators. The guilty parties are connected with some of the best families in Mobile.

Easthquake's Damage In Zante.

ATHENS, April 22.—The details of the casualty that has befallen the island of Zante show that since the beginning of April there have been a total of 100 earthquake shocks, averaging five every day. When the terrible shock came on Monday morning last the city was practically wholly destroyed. There are not in the city 50 houses that are safe for the people to live in. It is now known that 123 persons lost their lives in the disaster, and this list is likely to be added to when the ruins are cleared away, if this is ever done.

Burned In Their Beds.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., April 22.—A fire in a tin store here was followed by two terrific explosions, which scattered the fire in all directions. The explosions were occasioned by the bursting of two barrels of gasoline. The fire spread to the store of M. A. Corbet & Co., the dwelling of John Wittenberg, all of which were destroyed. Mr. and Mrs. Mashleau slept in a room over their tin store and were burned to a crisp.

Wrecked by the Wind.

CINCINNATI, April 22.—The high wind was responsible for a singular wreck on the Cincinnati Southern road, Train No. 1, south bound, when at Petro, Tenn., encountered a freight car, which had been blown upon the main track. The entire train except the rear sleeper was thrown from the track and the engine turned over, but no one was hurt.

Sold Coin Salted and Bills In Ashes.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 22.—An express car on the Atlantic and Pacific at Hancock was destroyed by fire and three safes dragged out of the ruins, containing nearly $100,000 in gold and the same amount in greenbacks, were brought here. A large quantity of the gold was melted together. There is nothing but ashes of the currency.

Mine Cut Off by Fire.

BUTTE, Mon., April 22.—By a fire in one of the shafts of the Butte and Boston company nine miners were cut off from escape and either burned or suffocated. All hope of their escape is abandoned. The origin of the fire is not known. It may have been started by a candle stuck in the timbers.

Mahany Will Stay In Quito.

PANAMA, April 22.—United States Minister Mahany of Quito, Ecuador, asks a denial of the statement of a Panama correspondent that a banquet had been tendered him by President Cordero on the occasion of his leaving that capital for Washington. He is not going to leave Quito.

A New Way of Holding the Bouquet.

Carrying the large and frequently heavy bouquet is no trifling tax upon brides and wearied society women. An arrangement is here figured showing a new way of holding the shower bouquet, which represents a welcome improvement of the season. It consists of a crescent handle at the back of the bouquet through which the hand is passed. This method is not only less fatiguing, but the flowers can be held more gracefully and quite close to the dress.

AN IMPROVED SHOWER BOUQUET.

A new bouquet which is more in the old fashioned round shape is loosely arranged with bows of handsome ribbon so softly intermingled with the flowers that the effect is that of careless grace. It is also so shaped at the back that it does not require "holding away" from one, like ordinary bouquets. A choice example is composed of mauve orchids, brown orchids, fine foliage and mauve ribbons.

The greatest variety of little capes that are scarcely more than collarettes are to be worn when wraps become too heavy. The dearly is of black velvet plaited very full to a collar band. It just covers the top of the shoulders and extends in a point to the waist, back and front.

EXTINCT MONSTERS.

Remarkable Forms of Animal Life In the First Ages of the Earth.

Nature surpassed man's wildest imaginings when she produced the horrible animals of earth's early days—the fish lizards, sea serpents, pterodactyls, dinosaurs, etc. An English naturalist has just given us in a work on "Extinct Monsters" some very vivid pictures of these strange forms of life. Of the sea serpents we are told that they were from 25 to 75 feet long and some of them as bulky in the largest part of the body as an elephant. They probably swam quite deep beneath the surface, raising their heads many feet upward to the air. It is considered barely possible by some naturalists that varieties of these sea serpents may have survived to this day and that the oft recurring story of the modern sea serpent may be founded upon the actual existence of lonely and wandering descendants of creatures that once swarmed in the waters.

Perhaps as monstrous and revolting as any types of life in the mesozoic or reptilian age were the dinosaurs. There were dinosaurs of many kinds and to the unscientific eye very unlike save in the prevailing horribleness of their aspect. The majority of them were giants of 20 to 80 feet in length, though there were some little creatures not larger than a cow. It is a curious fact that the greater number had quite tiny heads, comparatively speaking. This perhaps gives us an inkling of how it was that they finally succumbed to adverse circumstances. With their small brains they were unable to cope with the wiles of better endowed creatures. Brute strength did not avail against the bigger brained mammals just at that time putting in an appearance. Mr. Hutchinson remarks that they died of overspecialization. The dinosaurs were literally improved off the face of the globe. Most of them hopped about upon their hind legs like gigantic and weird kangaroos.

GIGANTIC ARMORED DINOSAUR.

Along the back of the huge armored dinosaur pictured here were plates 2 feet in diameter, and the four pairs of sharp spines in its tail were often as much as 2 feet in length. This dinosaur was supplied with two brains, one in its insignificant head, the other in its haunches, and this latter is supposed to have controlled the movements of the formidable tail as well as those of the massive hind legs. This variety of dinosaur is estimated to have been of the height and weight of an elephant and 30 feet in length.

Mr. Hutchinson tells also that in the same strange age with the reptiles lived a gigantic bird 9 feet in length which possessed teeth.

Photographing Letters by Telegraph.

Professor Jacques is said to be of the opinion that letters can be photographed by telegraph by the use of a comparatively simple apparatus. He has frequently sent photographs over the wire. The Industrial World says: "His laboratory consisted of only two rooms, in one of which was an ordinary photographic camera, a small developing closet and a small cubical box, in one side of which was a slit of sufficient size to receive a postal card. Six inches in front of the camera, where it is brightly illuminated by an electric lamp. The button of the camera is then pressed, and the operator takes the plate holder to the developing closet and soon reappears with a hastily made negative, which he drops into a slit of the cubical box on the table in the middle of the room. On going into the adjoining room the operator finds issuing from the corresponding box on the table in the middle of the room a thin piece of paper the size of a postal card, upon which the note is reproduced in its entirety. Professor Jacques holds that the sending and receiving boxes, being placed and properly connected, one in Boston and the other in New York, for instance, letters written in one city could be instantaneously photographed to the other and beat the mails by several hours."

Wire Nails Compared With Cut Nails.

"Within a few years nails and spikes made of round wire have come into general use and are preferred by many to the old fashioned square cut nails, perhaps on account of the greater ease in driving them. Some interesting tests were recently made at the Watertown (Mass.) arsenal to determine the holding strength of the two varieties. The nails used were selected from market stocks, those of the wire being of corresponding size with the cut nails both in weight and length.

"In testing a wire nail and a cut nail were driven side by side the same distance into a spruce plank, and the force required to pull them out accurately measured by the testing machine. The result was that the superiority of the cut nails in every instance, their holding power averaging about 20 per cent more," says Popular Science News. "But for light work where this is not of particular importance the wire nails still possess some advantages."

The Falcon as a Carrier.

Lieutenant Smoloff of the Russian army has trained the falcon to carry messages in lieu of the pigeon. For the falcon are claimed several advantages over the ordinary carrier. A pigeon easily flies 100 leagues at a speed of 8 to 10 leagues an hour, but a falcon can as easily cover 15 leagues an hour for 15 hours, whereas the pigeon rarely accomplishes such a feat.

GOOD HEALTH

ELECTRICITY AND FATIGUE.

Insulation of the Human Body Suggested as a Source of Rest.

Professor Tarchanoff of St. Petersburg has been experimenting upon the electric currents of the skin. He connected the skin of various parts of the body, by means of nonpolarizable clay electrodes, with Meissner's galvanometer. He noticed then the various stimuli of the skin, such as light tickling with a brush, heat, cold, a needle prick, sound, light, taste and smell. In all these cases a strong deflection of the galvanometer needle was observed. Merely opening the eyes after they had been closed for some time produced a considerable deflection, and mental efforts, like calculation, also had a similar effect. Concerning the foregoing a writer in The Electrical Review says: "These currents, if they exist, are called by the learned scientist, none pass off with the moistened deposits which are being constantly expelled, and a new supply of electricity would have to be found and developed in the same way. Hence the question arises perhaps in the decomposition of metals, taken in the food we eat and the air we breathe, must of necessity entail upon the organism a continuous strain in its production. It may be that from such causes the body becomes fatigued after a few hours of exertion, and absolute rest becomes necessary for recuperation. Should these experiments prove true there is no doubt that, by the proper insulation of the human body, much therapeutical value would be its outcome."

"Stumping" In the Chair.

Grown people and children alike are inclined to fall into a very bad habit of sliding down in their chairs and sitting for hours with the spine bent almost in a half circle. That this is injurious thousands of people who indulge in it never so much as dream, but a New York Commercial Advertiser asserts that those who have investigated the subject are well aware that it is the cause of many serious ills. The continual strain falls upon the spinal column, with the corresponding compressions on the other, gives rise to nervous difficulties and affections of the brain. Dizziness, nausea and blinding spells are not infrequently the result of this practice. While the strictly upright position is undoubtedly the most healthful, it seems rather hard work to persuade the young and indolent to maintain it. Lazy people and those who love luxury have a habit of "slumping," so to speak, into their chairs and remaining in a semirecumbent position, with the spine so nearly telescoped as may be. That portion of the human anatomy generally known as the backbone was intended to be worn in an upright position, and the constant pressure of the sections of the vertebræ upon each other is productive of various ills.

To Remove a Mote From the Eye.

Let the person close the eye gently, as in sleep, then with his thumb and forefinger take firm hold of the lash of the upper eyelid and pull the lid out from the ball far enough to clear the edge of the lower lid. Now, while he lid is held in this position, let him give the eyeball a rotary motion from above in toward the nose. This will be best accomplished by keeping both eyes shut and rubbing the eye first down, as if looking at the feet, then out, then up, and lastly toward the nose, repeating this motion until the mote is no longer felt in the eye. Quite often it may be found in the inner corner of the eye and may be removed by wiping it out with a clean handkerchief.

ETIQUETTE

AN AGREEABLE GUEST.

Practical Suggestions For People Who Are Entertained by Friends.

Some people are well known as "pleasant visitors," and others as "a bore in the house." They seem to know instinctively just where lies the line which divides a graceful "making one's self at home" from unwarrantable familiarity and freedom in the house of another. Everybody unfortunately does not possess the quick intuition that brings about this happy state of affairs, but any thoughtful person will avoid many social stumbling blocks when once they have been brought plainly to view. As an aid in this direction Good Housekeeping gives some practical suggestions to guests, among them the following:

No considerate guest will make unnecessary work, even for servants. The room should be kept as neat as possible, not only as an indication of the occupant's habits, but that it may not take from other persons, time and effort which they can ill afford to bestow consistently with their other duties.

Above all things conform to the customs of the house as to meals. If the family breakfast at an early hour, do not let the liking for a morning nap put the entire household to inconvenience, and perhaps embarrass the work of the housewife for an entire day. If the family are "early to bed and early to rise," the guest should not pervert in keeping late hours; or if that be considered indispensable to a good night's rest, let them be kept in the guest chamber and not in the common apartments.

A guest should always exercise the fullest courtesy to these from whom entertainment is received, failing in cheerfully with their plans in no instance, so far as can be done conscientiously. But doing as Romans do when we are in Rome does not mean doing those things which we do not regard as right, proper or best for us to do. No reasonable host or hostess would expect anything of the kind or would misconstrue a polite declination, accompanied with an explanation of the reason.

Do not forget that whatever relates to the interests of the household is to be sacred to the members of the family. Never seek to pry into the affairs of others; if in so doing the sorrows or troubles of another may be lightened, sacredly accept confidences, extending all sympathy that is needful, and tendering advice if it be requested—but not otherwise. In the same line, pay no attention to the letters, manuscript or personal papers of another; do not handle books, musical instruments or other household property unless it has been specially designated as a means of passing the time, and even then only under rare circumstances when others are present.

Nor should a guest feel under obligation to accept every proposed courtesy and entertainment. There are good people who in their anxiety to provide an enjoyable time go to such length in that they need to be restrained for their own welfare as well as that of their friends.

THE MOUND BUILDERS.

A Brief Account of This Vanished Race of Long Ago.

It is generally believed that the Mississippi valley and the Atlantic coast were once populated by an agricultural and partially civilized race quite different from the nomadic Indians, though possibly the progenitors of some of the Indian tribes, and that after centuries of occupation they disappeared—at least a thousand and perhaps many thousand years before the advent of European. The theory has been advanced that these people migrated from Asia, that they passed over Asia to Siberia, across Behring Straits, down the Pacific coast of America from Alaska and to the Mississippi valley, and down to Mexico, Central America and Peru.

The remains of the mound builders, as this vanished people are called, are scattered over most of the states of the central and lower Mississippi valley, along the banks of the Missouri and on the sources of the Allegheny. They are most numerous in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, Florida, Texas, and are found in the western part of New York, and in Michigan and Iowa. These mounds vary greatly in size, in some instances of very extensive and elaborate, by intricate, notably those of the Licking valley, near Newark, O., which cover an area of two square miles. In other localities there are some which reach a height of 90 feet.

It is not believed that these people had any written language, as no inscriptions or tablets yet discovered indicate this. Many of these mounds have been found to contain skeletons, numerous implements and ornaments, usually composed of stone, sometimes of copper—in its native state—and occasionally shell and bone, also coarse and rude pottery of curious design. In substantiation of the belief that these people came from Asia is the fact that in Siberia mounds have been found similar to those in the Mississippi valley.

Oldest Settlements In the United States.

In 1565 the first permanent settlement in the United States was made at St. Augustine, Fla., by a party of Spaniards under Melendez. Between the years 1540 and 1593 Francisco Vasquez de Coronado, Captain Francisco de Coronado and Don Antonio de Espejo explored New Mexico and occupied temporarily various points in that region. In the latter year Don Antonio de Espejo took possession of a native pueblo, or town, called Tuasa or Toas, and named it La Ciudad de Santa Fe, which was identical in site with the present capital of New Mexico. Between 1580 and 1595 forts, colonies and missions were established in New Mexico by Juan de Onate. In 1607 the first permanent English settlement was planted by the London company in Virginia at Jamestown, which was so called in honor of James I. In 1614 the Dutch planted an infant settlement on Manhattan island, which they called New Amsterdam, and in 1615 a settlement was made at Albany by the same nation.

Which Was First Admitted?

It will never be known which was admitted first—North or South Dakota—says the Detroit Free Press, when mates the explanation: "When the two proclamations were presented for the president's signature, somebody raised the question of priority, and the president, finding it hard to decide which to sign first, ordered the documents, which were exactly alike, to be covered down to the blanks left for his name. They were turned face downward and rapidly changed about until nobody could tell which was which. After this they were turned over, and the president wrote his name on each. The ink was allowed to dry without the use of blotting paper, and then the documents were again turned down and again shuffled about. They were then taken up and the covering removed. One of them came into the Union before the other the length of time it took the president to write his name."

Salutation.

Our term "salutation" is derived from the Latin term salus, and similar expressions are found in other languages. The Ottomans cries, "Be under the guard of God!" in Arabia, on the first meeting of the day, the proper salutation is, "Good morning, or your morning!" or "May your morning be good!" The Persian begins his polite address with "I make prayers for thy greatness." The salute to a sheikh in the orient is sometimes not only religious, but nonsensical. If an Arab is directly asked about his health, he responds, "Praise be to God!" hearing his condition to be inferred from the modulation of his voice. If the form of the query is, "Is it well with thee?" the answer is, "God bless and preserve thee!" The Zunis exchange the prayer, "May the light of the gods rest with thee!"

English Definitions of Pluck.

Moral backbone.

Fighting with the scabbard when the sword is broken.

That which keeps a man up when he is down.

The offspring of courage and the mother of success.

The courage to do the right thing at the right moment.

Irrepressible stout heartedness.

That which enables one when fighting against adverse circumstances and knocked down to rise and try another round.

The force which converts an ordinary man into a hero.

Fearlessness free from foolhardiness.

The Tallest Trees.

A correspondent in Popular Science News says that the tallest three trees in the world are believed to be a sequoia, which is found near Stockton, Cal., and is 325 feet high, and two eucalypti, found in Victoria and estimated to be 435 and 450 feet in height respectively. Contrast this with the following fact: On the summit of Ben Lomond may be seen the smallest tree that grows in Great Britain. It is known as the dwarf willow and is when mature only about 2 inches in height.

Roast Peacock.

What roast swan is to roast geese such is roast peacock to roast turkey. Many owners of country houses who keep peacocks and let them run wild and rest in their woods and shrubberies take little trouble either to fatten or cook the pea chicks. If they did, they would perhaps take more pains to rear these birds for the table. The meat is very white and of exceedingly fine and close grain and has the true game flavor, with none of the stringiness of the common turkey.

Four Different Standpoints.

"Literature," said the sad eyed, stoop shouldered pilgrim with his baggy trousers, "is an attractive and ennobling thing, but considered as a business it doesn't pay."

"You have a kind word of sympathy in that line perhaps," observed the comfortable looking party in the new spring overcoat.

"Yes," echoed the other.

"As a publisher or as a dealer in books?"

"Neither. As a writer. I have tasted the joys of authorship. I am the father of a successful novel. It went through eight or ten editions, and papered all parts well of it. And what do you suppose I made out of it? Seven hundred and fifty dollars. Three months' labor and waiting and waiting and $750! It may have netted the publisher more than that, but that's all I got out of it."

The sad eyed pilgrim was silent, and the other attempted to ask:

"Are you still writing novels?"

"Oh, yes. I've got one or two on hand, but I am in no hurry to publish them. What's the use? There's more money in running a good grease tank, only I don't know how to run a grease tank."

"You are engaged in literary work of some kind, I presume?"

"Yes, I write an occasional newspaper 'special.' I have had articles accepted by the magazines when I hope for success in print if I live long enough, and I assist in keeping the books during the busy season at one of the big book stores. Altogether I manage to make a fair day myself and family of six children, but that's about all."

"My experience," said the man in the new spring overcoat, "is somewhat different from yours, and I am in the same line of business too. I make about $5,000 a year with my pen."

"Writing books?"

"Writing books? Great Scott, no! I do those nice little newspaper stories that turn out to be puffs for patent medicine after you've begun to get interested in them."—Chicago Tribune.

Enough.

"Dear me!" cried mamma. "What is the baby crying for?"

ONE ON EACH SIDE.

A Runaway Team Stopped by a Tree This Morning.

A team belonging to Mr. F. A. Pope and used to draw a water wagon for sprinkling the streets made things lively on Fourth street, about eight o'clock this morning, by running away.

Preparatory to drawing water from a hydrant at the corner of Fourth and Sycamore streets, the driver stopped his team and had dismounted to connect the hose to the hydrant when the horses started on a run. The sudden start broke the pole. The team crossed Park avenue at a rapid rate and continued down West Fourth street.

At the corner of Central avenue, there seems to have been a difference of opinion between the animals as to which side of a tree they should go.

As they could not agree, each went his own way and the result was that their heads collided on the other side. The shock knocked one of the horses down, but otherwise no damage resulted.

THREATENED TO STAB HIM.

Jacob Tucker, While Drunk, Attacks Henry Windham.

Quite some excitement was caused on Front street late Saturday night by Jacob Tucker, who threatened to stab Henry Windham. Tucker was drunk and caused a disturbance in Windham and Crowley's Hotel. One of the proprietors ejected him, and Tucker attempted to retaliate by drawing a knife and threatening to kill him.

An officer came along and took Tucker to the lockup. A sentence of $15 fine or 60 days in the county jail was Judge Coddington's decision this morning. Tucker will probably take the sixty days.

The Old Folks Concert at Vincent Chapel To-Morrow Evening.

The "Old Folks Concert" will be repeated at Vincent chapel Tuesday evening. When given before it was such a decided success that many requests were received by the committee in charge to repeat it. They decided to do so. To-morrow evening another chance will, therefore, be given the public to see the fashions of 1801 and earlier, and so get points on the style for 1894. Some of the hats worn are curiosities.

Prof. W. H. McClymont and Mr. L. S. Reed will have charge of the musical portion of the evening's programme.

A Bill Board Sold for a "Board" Bill.

A large bill board, 100x8 feet, at the corner of Richmond street and Cottage place, was sold to-day to satisfy a chattel mortgage held by the New Jersey Land and Improvement Company. It was sold by Constable Moffett. Mr. George Kyte of Fanwood was the purchaser. It was sold for non-payment of rent.

RECEPTION AT GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

The Rev. Herbert F. Randolph (For mally Received as Pastor.

The congregation of the Grace M. E. church tendered a reception to their new pastor, the Rev. Herbert F. Randolph, at their cozy little church Saturday night.

The address of welcome was made by Dr. H. K. Carroll, to which the pastor responded in an appropriate manner. He congratulated the church on its rapid growth, and thanked the members most heartily for their kind welcome to him.

There was duet singing by the Misses Carroll, and selections by a quartette. Ice cream and cake were served after the music.

The Reception Committee consisted of Mrs. W. H. Griffen, Mrs. T. W. Powell, Mrs. H. K. Carroll, Mrs. T. R. Crossley, and Mrs. Ezra Loomis.

The Committee of the Official Board were: Messrs John Valiant, A. A. Taft, Ezra Loomis, L. A. Hummer, and J. S. Langer.

The Refreshment Committee were: Mrs. J. Carney, Mrs. J. Valiant, Mrs. Ezra Loomis, Mrs. L. A. Hummer, Mrs. J. S. Langer, Mrs. S. A. Stephens, Mrs. W. H. Langer, and Miss Alice Carroll.

POWDER IN THE EXCELSIOR.

Isaac Jones Injured While Starting a Fire.

As Isaac Jones, a coachman in the employ of Mr. W. A. Lord, of Netherwood, was starting a fire in the furnace, last Friday, he was severely burned about the face and hands by an explosion of powder which, it is supposed, had been placed in the furnace along with the excelsior with which he was kindling the fire.

Doctors Rushmore and Adams attended him.

PERSONAL.

Mr. R. C. Treadwell, Superintendent of the Baptist Sunday-school at Scotch Plains for a number of years, has moved to this city.

Mr. W. H. Foristell, one of the C. Y. M. L.'s best bowlers, returned yesterday from Michigan, where he has been visiting his mother.

Mr. Frank L. C. Martin and Kelsey Wyckoff of this city have applied for membership in the New Brunswick Board of Trade.

Mr. Harry Stockton of Eighth street returned Friday from Chicago, where he has been in the interest of an exhibit at the World's Fair.

A quartet has been formed in this city composed of Elmer E. Runyon, first tenor; Frank Knight, second tenor; Robt. Gorton, first bass; Will Runyon, second bass.

Mr. Edwin H. Lewis, formerly of this city, but now of Chicago, has a very interesting article in the last issue of the Sabbath Recorder, on "Spenser's Treatment of Temperance."

There are to be special services in the chapel of the Park Avenue Baptist church to-night, and Wednesday and Thursday evenings, at eight o'clock, conducted by the pastor, Rev J. W. Richardson.

The Gwynettes Have their Furniture.

Last week Constable Moffett, of this city, and Sheriff Hicks, of Elizabeth, went to William A. Kelly's storage warehouse, at Westfield, where Actor Gwynette's furniture has been stored for some weeks past, held there for general indebtedness and upon Sheriff Hick's orders Constable Moffett after trying to obtain the key from Kelly, and being refused took a pick and broke the lock. Frank Randolph immediately commenced loading his three furniture vans that had been standing there and the goods were removed to Chases farm on the Rahway road in Fanwood township.

A New Tribe Instituted.

Great Sachem Abram A. Cunningham and staff Saturday evening instituted Omenti Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, at Elizabeth. Sixty-five pale faces were adopted into the mysteries of the order. Among those who were present from this city were Great Representative Norman C. McJunt, District Deputy Andrew J. Stiglitz, Past Sachem Richard Seaman, Senior Sagamore John H. Carney, Scout Joseph Wycoff, and Chief Trust, who were well pleased by the excellent manner in which they were entertained.

PLAINFIELD AMUSEMENT COMPANY.

The Annual Meeting of the Stockholders Saturday Evening.

The stockholders of the Plainfield Amusement Company held their first annual meeting, Saturday evening, at No. 3 North avenue. The following were present: O. L. Jenkins, B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Charles A. Reed, C. A. Marsh, R. H. Keller, A. J. McCardell, Geo. J. Tobin, J. A. Demarest, Geo. F. White, H. W. Marshall, F. L. C. Martin and C. M. Ulrich. Others of the stockholders are: John W. Murray, Jr., James Taylor, W. R. Codington, W. M. Rider, G. W. Endicott, A. VanDerveer, W. G. Brett, G. F. Leggett, E. S. Hooley, S. G. Smith, T. S. Davis, W. W. Pearson, W. C. Strong, C. A. Lee, D. C. Adams, S. St. J. McCutchen, W. J. Boome, C. R. Thiers, Asa Collier and J. H. Cooley.

A Board of Directors was chosen as follows: C. A. Marsh, O. L. Jenkins, F. L. C. Martin, B. A. Hegeman, Jr., John W. Murray, Jr., W. W. Pearson, J. A. Demarest, Andrew McCardell, Thomas H. Keller, and Charles A. Reed. Those present of the above then elected the following officers:

President—Charles A. Reed.
Secretary—James A. Demarest.
Treasurer—O. L. Jenkins.
Manager—T. H. Keller.

The president was authorized to have fences moved and other necessary work done to take in the additional ground secured by the company, and a committee consisting of the president, secretary and manager was appointed and requested to report to the board as early a date as possible, the cost, etc., of building a three-mile bicycle track.

A CARELESS MOTORMAN.

An Electric Car Barely Escapes Collision with a Wagon.

If the motormen on the electric cars are not more careful the Street Railway Company may have a nice little sum to pay for damages some day. The motorman was supposed to sound their note of warning by ringing a bell, as they near a street crossing, to warn people of their approach. At times they do this, but, it is said, there are more times that they do not.

A couple of the "do not" instances was witnessed yesterday by a number of people who expected to see a team and wagon dashed into by one of the cars. Mr. Edward White, the dry goods merchant, was driving along East Second street, and did not notice the approach of an electric car as he neared Peace street. Just as he was in the act of driving across the track a car was approaching only a few feet away. It was going with such rapidity that it was impossible for the motorman to stop it, and a collision seemed inevitable.

Mr. White gave his horses a crack with the whip causing them to spring quickly forward. As the rear wheel of his wagon left the track, the car grazed it. This is not the first narrow escape that has been reported, nor will it be the last unless the men follow more closely the rules of the company.

AGAINST LAW AND ORDER PEOPLE.

Chief-Justice Beasley Decides in Favor of the Race-Track Men.

The suits instituted last week by the law and order people of Elizabeth against Michael F. Dwyer and thirty six bookmakers were practically ended Saturday by a decision of Chief-Justice Beasley ordering the discharge of Morgan, one of the defendants. Morgan was arrested on Tuesday, and on Thursday Lawyer Samuel Kalisch applied for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that he was deprived of his liberty under the provisions of an act which he claimed was unconstitutional.

The act under which Morgan and the other bookmakers were arrested was one passed in 1876 prohibiting a lottery. The complaints claimed that bookmaking was such and caused the arrest of Messrs. Dwyer and McIntyre and thirty-six bookmakers to secure possession of over one million dollars in fines for violating the law. Chief-Justice Beasley heard the argument of Lawyer Kalisch on Friday and Saturday ordered Morgan's discharge, practically upholding Kalisch's point that the law was unconstitutional.

The fifteen under arrest applied for similar writs to-day.

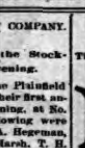
Base Ball Notes.

The ball team that the Plainfield Amusement Company will put in the field this season to represent this city, is about completed, and it is, as it stands, in many particulars superior to that of last year.

"Chic" Hofford will be captain and catcher, and in addition, the crack catcher will be found out in right field, from where he can be called in to relieve Hofford if necessary. Sneeden will be the leading pitcher, but on May 13 a left-handed twirler, who can also play anywhere else, will join the team as a change pitcher. Jones, who played first base in such an excellent manner last year, will again cover that position. Smith, of last year's Providence team, will fill Bonner's place as short stop. He is said to be one of the best in the country. The new infielders, Bowen and Heckman, will no doubt prove satisfactory, as they come to Plainfield well recommended. And then, with Leidy and McIlodge at centre and left field, the new Crescents will be invincible.

THE CIRCUS COMING.

The Great Barnum & Bailey Show Soon to be Here.



BARNUM & BAILEY'S Greatest Show on Earth will arrive here on Wednesday, May 3, and spread its mammoth waterproof tents, and the great exhibition this year is of a character entirely new.

To briefly mention some of the prominent features would occupy considerable space. Suffice it that three rings, two elevated stages, a huge racing track, and another stage 400 feet long are required to show the varied entertainment comprising this year's show. There are menageries, hippodromes, triple circus, horse fair, mystifying illusions, and other features not in addition the great historical spectacle of Columbus and the Discovery of America, the latter alone representing 1,200 characters, all of whom are on view at one time. No other amusement enterprise carries so many people and such complete arrangements for their keeping. Of course hundreds of people will be there to see the canvas go up, and get a free glimpse of the elephant as he marches with majestic tread from the railroad tracks to the grounds.

There are many reasons why the exhibition this year is better than any other that has preceded it, as the menagerie is almost entirely new and boasts every strange and curious zoological specimen, from the newly named to the only genuine zebra that has ever basked beneath the stars and stripes. There is also in the collection the largest Bengal tiger ever seen in America, and he has been from his native jungle less than seven months. The cage of lions has three male specimens, from the face of one of which Sir Alexander Pope made his painting, which is now on exhibition in the National Gallery of Art in London.

Of the circus performance there is also much to be said, and its strongest claim is probably that the performers are all champions. Among the artists that have been brought over are the most dashing and accomplished equestriennes ever seen in this country.

The brilliant harmony of colors and artistic groupings of "Columbus" will cause to recur to the minds of the thousands who witness the show pleasant memories of the greatest triumph of modern theatrical productions. When it is known that Imre Kiraly has trained the ballet it will be known that it is better done than any other manager in this country could have done it. There are crowds of well-trained girls and men, presenting every type of beauty, who perform graceful evolutions in the dances. There are costumes that have the look of the 15th century about them and which, high authorities have said, are duplicates of those worn when Columbus was pleading before Ferdinand and Isabella.

The Barnum and Bailey show has come to be one of America's permanent institutions, and merits more than the smiling reference called out by the ordinary circus. It is worthy of serious thought—not only for itself, but more when one considers what exceptional ability a man must possess who controls the entire army of men and women who give the exhibition.

Annual Meeting of the Boys' Club.

The Boys' Club Association held its annual meeting Friday night. An amendment was adopted to the constitution whereby the executive committee of seven ladies and gentlemen is changed to an executive committee of five gentlemen, with an auxiliary committee of fifteen ladies. Officers were elected as follows:

Executive committee—W. B. Wadsworth, president; W. H. Murray, treasurer; D. O. Tiffany, secretary; Henry M. Maxson and A. W. Duxbury.

The following report was received from Superintendent Boyce:

Total membership at present date 306. Lost by death during the year four boys, two of them having died from injuries received while riding on coal trains.

Average age of the boys, thirteen years; the youngest one, five, and the oldest nineteen years. The club has been open 266 nights, total number in attendance, 13,212; average per evening, 50. The largest attendance on any one evening was 131; the smallest, 14; number of fathers on boys, 64; number of mothers on boys, 19; number of orphans, 8.

Mr. Bond said he wished to thank the ladies and gentlemen, also the "Needlework Guild," for donations of clothing, games, books, papers, etc. Also Messrs. Ayres & Co. for use of chairs at our entertainments, and the daily papers for the use of their columns for club matter.

The club has had nine entertainments, the average attendance being 125. Number of boys admitted, 2; number of books taken home, 295; number of visitors, 338; number of family visits, 580; number of visits to jail, 5; number of visits to sick, 15.

The Roads to Paradise.

[From the Boston Globe.]

There are 142 separate and distinct religious denominations in the United States, including the Christadelphians, the Winebrennerian Church of God, the Dunkards and the Schwenfeldians. It may be a surprise to some to know that there are thirteen different kinds of Baptists, seventeen kinds of Methodists and a dozen kinds each of Presbyterians and Mennonites—each convinced that all the other kinds are wrong.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Still at Large.

STEN STEN, N. Y., April 24. (Special.)—Neither Roehl nor Pallister, the condemned murderers who got tired of waiting for the time when they should be executed according to law and quietly walked out of the prison by way of the roof, had been recaptured this morning.

Mr. David P. Hall Appreciated.

[From the Westfield Standard.]

Mr. David P. Hall, of Fanwood, has just been made aware in a very emphatic way that his removal to Plainfield is looked upon as a public misfortune. A few days ago he was the recipient of a beautifully engrossed set of resolutions, bound in Russian leather, in which testimony was borne to the valuable assistance he has been in all matters pertaining to the public school, especially in the matter of the erection of the new school building. The Futile Library Association, after passing resolutions of deep regret at losing him as their president, and devising means of keeping him as one of their body, and last night a party of citizens of Fanwood assembled at the house of Mr. T. J. Nicholl, in order to express their sentiments in a suitable manner. Coming to make an evening call, Mr. Hall found himself surrounded by friends and before he had time to grasp the situation, Dr. Parks had him by the hand, and was telling him of the esteem, appreciation which his long and unwearied efforts in behalf of the township had won, closing his remarks with the presentation of a handsome gold watch as the inscription inside the lid said to "David Prescott Hall, from friends in Fanwood Township, N. J., in appreciative remembrance of his many valuable labors in their interest. April 18th, 1893."

Mr. Hall's remarks, in accepting the watch were eloquent and well chosen, speaking of his regret at leaving such warm friends and determination to keep up his association with Scotch Plains.

A charming little supper and converse finished a very pleasant evening.

Mr. Hall is a well known member of the New York Bar; but he says he never opened a case which gave him so much satisfaction as this one does.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS FROM CAR AXLES.

Satisfactory Trial of the Young-Muskowits System on the Central.

A highly satisfactory trial trip of the car lighted by the new Young-Muskowits railway car lighting system was made last night over the Central Railroad from Newark to Roselle with the car which was equipped with the necessary lights and machinery and has already been run over three thousand miles of track as a test. It is an ordinary railroad passenger coach, in which there are twenty five eight candle power incandescent lamps, one of which is in the dynamo room, the small apartment ordinarily used for toilet purposes. During the trip which were clear, white and steady and the motion of the car in no way affected them, sufficient light being given to fully illuminate at least two such coaches.

The Elevated Structure in Use.

At 11.31 this morning the first elevated passenger train on the Pennsylvania Railroad was run through Elizabeth. The east-bound Philadelphia express had the honor of opening the structure to travel. The last east-bound train that run at grade through that city was the Cape May express.

After it passed the east-bound track was torn up, so as to enable the trestle to be extended out over the ground. It is thought that in about three weeks the track will be laid on the trestle for west-bound traffic.

"Aye, but science's the thing!"

Half the people are foolish enough to suppose that H-O is a package of ordinary oats partially cut or rolled, and nothing more. There is as much difference between H-O and ordinary oatmeal as between cake and dough. H-O is a strictly scientific preparation, retaining the valuable and rejecting the undesirable properties of the most nourishing cereal known.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Grand Naval Review.

We are all glad and proud that our country is so large, and there are those who hope to tell if they see it bigger yet. But there are always a few inconveniences attached to greatness of every kind, and one of our inconveniences just now is the impossibility of even a thousandth part of the people of this great country seeing the magnificent naval pageant which will be displayed the last days of this month all the way from Hampton Roads to New York harbor. April 27 the vessels will perform their evolutions in New York bay and the Hudson river.

The old countries of Europe are so glad Columbus discovered America and gave them a spot on which to dump their surplus population that they will join heartily in the review, proceeding to Hampton Roads for that purpose. The first to arrive on the ground was the Russian flagship Dmitri Donskoi, and she gave a salute of twenty-one guns, which included one gun for almost every thousand Jews we have taken off the czar's hands. Brazil and Argentina will be represented, because on their part they are so glad Columbus discovered a continent where great republics could be founded and every man of common blood, if he had brains, could have a fighting chance for the best this world has to give. Yes, the guns ought to be soon long and loud, over the waters and through the hills. Let the eagle scream!

More than 40 war vessels will participate in the review, besides scores of small craft. The largest vessel built for travel will be the monster British protected cruiser Blake, 9,000 tons. There, too, will be the quaint little "caravels" Santa Maria, Pinta and Nina, built in imitation of the vessels constituting the fleet of Columbus. Eight of our new cruisers, all named for cities in this Union, will take part, besides the combined dynamite cruiser and harbor defense vessel, the Vesuvius. It is safe to say that the Vesuvius will be the ship of the American navy which will attract the most attention from foreigners, she being of a type that is unique. The flagship will be the Philadelphia, and in this Admiral Gherardi will lead all the rest, home and foreign. Our gunboat Yorktown, Concord and Bennington will also be in the show.

The grandest sight of all will be witnessed in New York harbor. There all the ships will draw up in two lines. Between them will pass the huge monitor Miantomonoh, having on board President Cleveland, and as he passes each vessel will fire a salute until 800 guns have burned their powder in honor of this glorious nation and its president. It stirs the blood to think of the booming guns, the waving flags, the splendid ships. The Union forever!

To persons of artistic tastes one of the rarest displays at the World's fair will be the collection of laces from Italy. It is a twice told tale, how when sweet Queen Margherita came to the throne she was troubled sorely over the poverty and distress she found among the peasant girls and women of Italy. On some of her visits to them she found in a poor hut an old fisher wife knitting lace. It was of a pattern for which Italy's shops had been famous centuries before. Queen Margherita undertook to restore the lost industry and give paying employment to the poor girls and women. She assembled a number of girls in a little school and had the old woman teach them lacemaking. These in turn taught others, and new patterns were devised. For years gentle Margherita worked at her chosen task with enthusiasm. The result has equaled her expectation. The poor women have paying work; Italy is becoming again famous for her beautiful laces. The collection sent by Queen Margherita is the most valuable in the world. It includes not only the priceless crown laces, heirlooms and Queen Margherita's own purchases, but also specimens of all the varieties of old Italian lace that can be found. To compare with the old will be samples of all the kinds known to the revived Italian lacemaking industry.

There will be at least one man whose traveling expenses in connection with World's fair preparation no man will grudge. That is Professor Fernow, chief of the United States bureau of forestry. He has gone to Germany to procure a forestry exhibit for the exposition. Germany takes care of her forests better than any other nation, and Professor Fernow's exhibit will illustrate to Americans how this is done. The administration of forest government and the methods of replanting, thinning and preserving woods will all be laid before us in an object lesson that none should fail to take in.

The popular doctrine that money must be used plentifully to influence legislation has been terribly shaken up by the results of the trial of the French official bribe takers. It is a satisfaction to know that the outraged Panama stockholders will at least get back of their money the $73,000 which Baihaut, the minister of public works, took as his share of the spoils.

Now that we begin to have a navy we must have seamen enough to man it. It will be only reasonable, therefore, the pension bills will be made to congress next session to increase the navy's enlisted men from 7,000 to 12,000.

THE SOLDIERS POISONED

The Latest Sensation In the Hawaiian Capital.

PEAS OR ROYALIST PLOTTERS?

A Conflict May Occur at Any Time—Rumors That the Queen Is to Be Restored Disturb the Islands—Mr. Blount Says He Is Not Troubled by Rumors.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—The barkentine Irmgard arrived from Honolulu, bringing advices up to April 12. The news bears out the previous advices and shows that matters are really in a dangerous condition on the islands, and that any day may bring about a conflict between the provisional government and the royalists.

The latter have received large additions from the white element that has become hostile to the new government, and the most serious phase of all is that the provisional government is not sure of its own men.

The leading event since the last news was the supposed wholesale attempt to poison the soldiers and members of their national guard. On the night of April 11 80 soldiers in the barracks were taken with violent vomiting spells. Surgeon Rodgers was hastily summoned and found that the men showed symptoms of poisoning.

A report came from the government building where Company A of the National guards is stationed, to the effect that a number of the men there were suffering also. Dr. Day was summoned and relieved the men as speedily and effectually as possible. The men laid the blame to eating boiled tongue and did not hesitate to announce some one in the employ of the royalists of an attempt at poisoning, but when they were questioned further they admitted eating green peas which might have been diseased.

Canned Peas or Poison?

Others thought the poison had been placed in the tea or coffee, but several men who had partaken of the liquids mentioned and who had not eaten anything but cake or bread say they felt all right. Afterwards it was found that no canned peas but dried were served at the meal, leaving the matter still unexplained.

Five Chinamen are employed in the kitchen at the government building, but no suspicion is attached to them. In all about 60 men, 30 at the barracks and 30 in Company A of the National guard were rendered unfit for duty, but most of them recovered and none are likely to suffer permanently. Much mystery surrounds the affair, and it has caused a great sensation. The royalists are very indignant, and deny the existence of a plot to destroy the government forces in this murderous manner, and there is so far no general desire or intention to hold them accountable.

The flutter of excitement caused by the return of Paul Neumann and Prince Daiell, envoys of Liliuokalani, to Washington, has passed away and has left nothing apparent as the substantial result of their mission. Three times in as many days the report has been circulated that the envoy and hour had been fixed for the restoration of the queen, but up to the present writing the throne lacks an occupant, as it has the youthful Jan. 29.

The queen's party do not appear more hopeful with the continued delay, but still insist that the only thing which the United States can do is to restore the status quo. The letter of Commissioner Thurston to ex-Minister Colburn, urging the latter to do all in his power to forward the annexation cause, is being quoted by them as evidence of weakness. Thurston, it is now expected, will remain in Washington as the Hawaiian minister to succeed Morse Smith, whom the provisional government has asked to resign. Chief Clerk Hastings of the foreign office is prominently mentioned for the consul generalship at San Francisco.

Blount Is Sarcastic.

The published statement that United States Minister Stevens would relinquish his position and return home May 24 is a further source of gratification to the anti-annexationists. The name of his successor is awaited with interest, many professing to believe that Commissioner Blount will be appointed.

A correspondent called upon the commissioner and asked him if there was any truth in the report that he intended leaving for home on the steamship Alameda, which leaves here April 26. Mr. Blount replied that there was no truth in it whatever.

"My length of stay here is indefinite. It may be two months—it may be three months. If I was in the states," he continued, "I frankly say to you I would talk freely; but here I do not wish to assist in propagating rumors."

When asked if his position was more clearly defined it would not assist to prevent more rumors, he said he was not giving himself any trouble about that.

"I suppose," he said with some irony, "I should have made a speech at the lowering of the flag, but I am not making any speeches or issuing any pyrotechnic proclamations." The commissioner would not insinuate the character of the report he would formulate, and said he had no statement for publication and would make none.

Said Booth's End Was Near.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Dr. Ferdinand Smith and Dr. William Stanley were called in and held a consultation on Mr. Booths' condition. The result of their conference was to the effect that the tragedian's recovery was scarcely to be hoped for, and they were of the opinion the end would probably come within 48 hours.

Murder at Coal Creek.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 24.—Floyd Pask, superintendent of the Knoxville Iron company's mines at Coal Creek, where convicts are working, was shot and fatally wounded by Charles Vallalee, a free miner. The shooting was the result of an old grudge. It is feared there will be further trouble.

Killed a Labor Leader.

CAMDEN, N. J., April 24.—During a fight among five young men Michael Burk, an Irishman who had been prominent in local labor matters, was shot twice in the head and fatally wounded. The police arrested Harry A. Johnson and Michael Creighton. Burk died from his injuries.

The Typhus Under Control.

CITY OF MEXICO, April 24.—The typhus fever epidemic in the City of Mexico is almost under control, and the board of health expects to have it stamped out in a few days more.

St. Paul's Big Theater.

ST. PAUL, April 24.—The monster Auditorium building, with its 6,000 seating capacity, now in process of erection, is declared to be used for theatrical purposes.

RIOTING AT HULL.

The Police Had a Hard Fight With Strikers Before They Were Driven Off.

LONDON, April 24.—The police in Hull arrested a drunken docker between 11 and 12 o'clock p. m. A mob of strikers stopped them on their way to the station. The police fought them off and sent for re-enforcements. When the police re-enforcements arrived more than 2,000 men had gathered, armed with clubs, stones and a few revolvers. The police clubbed right and left and divided the mob so that the three officers with their prisoner could proceed to the station.

After this the rioters charged the police repeatedly. More police were called out and more strikers were attracted by the uproar. The wounded men on both sides were carried away and the strikers obtained a new supply of pokers, boathooks, cudgels and split planks. The police formed the men back gradually into the immediate neighborhood of the docks. Dockers who had gone to bed hurried half dressed from their homes to join in the fight. Windows were smashed and doors were battered down. At the Drypool dock the mob charged the Yorkshire steamer Blyth. Fifty police defended it for 40 minutes, and then with the aid of 30 more put the rioters to flight. The fight lasted well into the morning. Only six strikers were arrested.

The Pope and Emperor William.

ROME, April 24.—Emperor William of Germany and his consort have paid a visit to the Vatican yesterday afternoon. At the door of the Yellow chamber the emperor and empress were met by the pope. He led them to three chairs which had been placed near the middle of the room, sat down with them and conversed with both for fifteen minutes. Then the emperor was accompanied by the pope, contrary to this etiquette of the Vatican, through the antechamber to the throne room. As they parted the emperor made a movement as if to kiss the pope's hand. The pope quickly withdrew his hand, then grasped the emperor's and shook it cordially three times. The pope presented to the empress a mosaic made in the Vatican workshops. The emperor gave to the pope a colored photograph of himself, the empress and their children in a group.

Orange Riots in Belfast.

LONDON, April 24.—Orange riots broke out in Belfast and were especially severe in the notorious Shank Hill district. At midnight an Orange mob attacked a tavern kept by a Roman Catholic. They looted the storeroom and liquor vault, drove out Connolly and his family and endeavored to burn down the building. The police drove the mob off and extinguished the flames. The whole district was in such a riotous mood that a company from the Derbyshire regiment was brought up. The police refused to accept their assistance and soon afterward the mobs were dispersed by means of some heavy clubbing. Twenty or more rioters were arrested.

Exciting Capture of Burglars.

LANSING, Mich., April 24.—After an exciting chase the police captured a portion of the notorious Bentley gang of burglars. The officers surprised Bentley and another of the gang in a saloon here, and several shots were exchanged without result except that City Marshal Sanford received a slight wound on the neck. At the gang's headquarters a large amount of plunder was seized.

Knox and His Wife Sentenced.

CITY OF MEXICO, April 24.—Robert Knox, the young American, who was arrested here several months ago under the charge of obtaining $12,000 worth of jewelry from local dealers by means of a forged check, was sentenced to four years and four months' imprisonment and $800 fine. His wife, who is charged with being his accomplice, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and $225 fine.

Ancient Tin Mines Discovered.

GUANUATO, Mex., April 24.—There is a big stir in mining circles here over the discovery of extensive and rich deposits of tin south of this city in this state. The find was made by Frank Gordon, an American prospector. The new tin properties bore evidences of having been worked by the Aztecs centuries ago.

The Oldest Bank Cashier Resigns.

PORTLAND, Me., April 24.—Edward Gould, who is the oldest bank cashier in the country, has sent in his resignation as cashier of the National Traders' bank, to take effect next Saturday, which will be the sixtieth anniversary of his continuous service in that bank.

Exhibitors Working Day and Night In the Big Buildings.

TO CELEBRATE THE FAIRS BIRTH.

What Is Going on at Jackson Park—A Weekly Illustrated Chinese Paper to Be Printed There—A $2,000,000 Apartment House Being Built.

JACKSON PARK, CHICAGO, April 24.—The attendance on the last Sunday before the opening on which flowers will be on exhibition was very large, but not so large as last Sunday, on account of the somewhat inclement weather. There was little cessation of labor. Exhibitors are working day and night, and if it is possible to get exhibits in place before the opening day it will be done.

The calm of an Arctic night has fallen upon the Eskimos, and all their troubles, for the time being, are left in the village Thursday night are going to remain out, the other six families who refused to quit have concluded to stay with President Daniels. They will remain throughout the fair in their present village and show themselves clad in their native skin garments during the continuance of the fair.

The Fair's Birthday Anniversary.

Tomorrow will be the third anniversary of the official birth of the World's fair. On that occasion Edward Kreismer's bronze statue of Christopher Columbus will be unveiled in the Lake Front park opposite the auditorium. Mayor Harrison, Director General Davis and President Palmer will participate in the ceremonies.

Secretary Wilson announces that during the fortnight beginning June 4 a Russian choir, under the direction of Miss Ragnild Lindell, will give eight concerts in Festival hall. The choir numbers 30 people, both men and women. Its repertoire is characteristically Russian. The folks songs of the people will be sung in costume.

By special permission of the war department of France the band of the Guard Republique of Paris will be the guests of the exposition during the month of August. The band, numbering 80 players, will give daily concerts. Every other day a special programme will be given in Festival hall.

The Alley Elevated Extended.

Another rapid transit avenue to the World's fair grounds was opened when the first section over the Alley elevated from Congress street was run to Madison avenue and Sixty-third street. The distance was covered in 21 minutes, and the train, consisting of the locomotive, tender and three cars, ran with ease and without a jostle.

More than 500 men will be needed to handle the tickets and attend the gates at Jackson park. These men will have to perform one of the most arduous duties of the big fair. The ticket sellers will each day take in immense sums of money and every precaution has been taken to guard against loss. Each ticket seller will be under bond of $2,000.

A Weekly Chinese Newspaper.

CHICAGO, April 24.—The first American newspaper printed in Chinese will make its appearance in this city in a few days. It will be known as The Chinese Weekly News.

The incorporators of the Chinese News company are Wong Chin Foo, John W. Heuing, a Chicago lithographer, and Charles S. Stanton of Chicago. Chin Foo has a half interest in the enterprise and has secured the financial backing of J. S. Hoy and Donald McDonald of Albany.

The platform of the new publication is given by Editor Foug in three words, "To Americanize Chinese." He explained this in detail when he said: "To influence every Chinaman in this country to become an American citizen, to speak the English language, to wear American dress and to enter into politics the same as any other Irishman."

The Chinese Weekly News, it is claimed, will be the literary wonder of the Chinese Mongolian exposition. It will be an eight page illustrated publication, issued every Saturday. Chicagoans will be given a chance May 6 to see one grand laundry bill covering several square feet of tinted newspaper.

A Mammoth Apartment House.

CHICAGO, April 24.—Another mammoth apartment house is to be erected on the South Side. It is to be the largest and most expensive in the world and will be known as the Drexel, and will occupy an entire block, being bounded by Drexel boulevard, 39th and Oakenwald avenue. When complete the building will have cost more than $2,000,000. The structure will be nine stories high, surmounted by a picturesque tower 216 feet high in the central pavilion.

Nine Men Probably Lost.

CHEBOYGAN, April 24.—Wreckage from the schooner N. A. Eddy shows that the boat must have foundered. She had 10,000 bushels of wheat aboard and a crew of nine men. It is now believed the latter do not take kindly to this proposition.

Streets Under Water.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., April 24.—The streets are almost impassable and every basement in the city is full of water owing to the high water in Red river. The railroad bridge has been anchored by cables and the tracks are under water.

The Color Line In the Cemetery.

FLEMINGSBURG, Ky., April 24.—The local cemetery association has refused to sell more plots to negroes. The white people offer to buy a tract of ground for their colored brethren, but the latter do not take kindly to this proposition.

Catarrh, Heart Failure, Paralysis of the Throat

"I Thank God and Hood's Sarsaparilla for Perfect Health."

"Gentlemen: For the benefit of suffering humanity I wish to state a few facts: For several years I have suffered from catarrh and heart failure, getting so bad I could not work and

Could Scarcely Walk

I had a very bad spell of paralysis of the throat some time ago. My throat seemed closed and I could not swallow. The doctors said I was caused by heart failure, and gave me to understand that I could not live long, but it did not seem to do me any good. My wife urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, telling me of Mr. Joseph C. Smith, who had been but was entirely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. After talking with Mr. Smith, I concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken two bottles I felt very much better. I have continued taking it, and am now feeling excellent. I thank God, and

At Death's Door

Hood's Sarsaparilla

and my wife for my restoration to perfect health." HARVEY HEED, Laceyville, O.

CLEVELAND'S POLICY.

The President Talks Frankly on National Finances.

FAVORS GOLD REDEMPTION ONLY.

He Declares That There Is Absolute Harmony Between Himself and His Cabinet.

The President Contemplates Moving His Business Office From the White House.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The president has at last outlined his policy on national finances. He gave out this statement to the press:

"The inclination on the part of the public to accept newspaper reports concerning the intentions of those charged with the management of our national finances seems to justify my emphatic contradiction of the statement that the redemption of any kind of treasury notes except in gold has at any time been determined upon or contemplated by the secretary of the treasury or any other member of the present administration.

"The president and his cabinet are absolutely harmonious in the determination to exercise every power conferred upon them to maintain the public credit, to keep the public faith and to preserve the parity between gold and silver and between all financial obligations of the government.

Redemption In Gold Only.

"While the law of 1890 forcing the purchase of a fixed amount of silver every month provides that the secretary of the treasury, in his discretion, may redeem in either gold or silver the treasury notes given in payment of silver purchases, yet the declaration of the policy of the government to maintain the parity between the two metals seems so clearly to regulate this discretion as to dictate their redemption in gold.

"Of course perplexities and difficulties have grown out of an unfortunate financial policy which we found in vogue, and embarrassments have arisen from ill advised financial legislation confronting us at every turn; but with cheerful confidence among the people and a patriotic disposition to co-operate, threatened dangers will be averted pending a legislative return to a better and sounder financial plan. The strong credit of the country is still unimpaired, and the good sense of our people, which has never failed in time of need, are at hand to save us from disaster."

WASHINGTON, April 24.—It is said that the president is seriously considering the question of moving his office for the transaction of executive business from the White House to suitable apartments in the state, war and navy departments buildings. It is proposed that the suite of rooms on the second floor of the war department, in the north wing of the building, formerly occupied by the secretary of war, shall be converted into a business office for the president. They are handsomely decorated, admirably adapted for the purpose, and the only objection being their northern exposure. There is a large anteroom, a general reception room or business office and also an adjoining room for private consultation. The latter would give the president and some of his callers an opportunity for a few words of confidential conversation, a privilege not enjoyed under the present arrangements at the White House.

President Johnson Set the Example.

There are said to be precedents for such a course and the case of Andrew Johnson, shortly after the death of Abraham Lincoln, is the most recent citation. Mr. Johnson, instead of taking possession of the official apartments in the executive mansion and transacting his business there, established a private office in the western wing of the treasury department in the rooms now occupied by the comptroller or the director of the mint. There he received his business callers and transacted the bulk of his business.

The same question arose during the last administration when the suggestion of an official residence for the president was under discussion. Ex-President Harrison once remarked that he had no objection to living in the same building in which his office was located, but as he walked from his sleeping apartments into his public office he was frequently reminded of the merchant who resided in the back part of his shop.

Each Office Seeker Answered.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—In one respect at least all applicants for public offices are treated alike by President Cleveland and that is the reception by them of an answer to their petitions. To every application that is received at the White House a neat type written reply signed by the private secretary is returned. Visitors to the official portion of the White House observe great stacks of letters, most of them applications for office and a force of clerks is kept constantly employed in directing replies.

Did Not Attend Church.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—There was a large attendance at the First Presbyterian church, many persons no doubt having come in the hope of seeing President and Mrs. Cleveland, who have decided to make this their church during their residence here. They were disappointed in not seeing them, however, for they failed to put in an appearance. In the afternoon the president and his wife accompanied by Colonel Lamont went out for a long drive in the country.

Ran Over the Fireman.

SYRACUSE, April 24.—Edward Dougherty, a fireman on the Central railroad, while his freight train stopped in the yards went under the engine to take out the cinders. Unaware of his position the engineer started up. Dougherty's body was frightfully mutilated.

The Sultan Invites the Prince.

VIENNA, April 24.—The Tageblatt says that the sultan of Turkey will receive Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria and his bride when they reach at Constantinople on their wedding trip.

Affairs Serious In Siam.

SINGAPORE, April 24.—The Franco-Siamese difficulty is regarded here as serious. Siamese traders fearing fighting have ceased importing rice, and dealers are hoarding it.

Must Vote or Pay Poll Tax.

KANSAS CITY, April 24.—Every male citizen of this city will either have to vote or pay a poll tax of $2.50. This provision of the new city charter has not been enforced before.

Killed by a Falling Wall.

MONTREAL, April 24.—Bowen & Co.'s wholesale liquor establishment was damaged $100,000 by fire. A falling wall killed Fireman Desmels and severely injured two others.

A REAL INDIAN FIGHT.

Cowboys and Navajos Have a Skirmish on the Colorado River.

DENVER, April 24.—A scrap from Green river, Utah, says: Reports have come in from Dandy Crossing, on the Colorado river, of a serious fight between Bluff City cowmen and a band of 30 Navajos. These renegades from time to time raid the Elk Mesa cow outfits to obtain supplies of beef. One of these parties came across the San Juan and commenced the usual depredations.

Word reached Knowles & Co.'s outfit, and several of their cowboys started north to round up the Navajos. The job proved too big for them, and two of their number were shot. Kid Johnson, the cowboy leader, was shot through the body and may die. The Indians got off apparently unhurt and retreated across the San Juan river, taking with them a herd of cattle. About a week ago a shooting scrape occurred between a freighter named Cornell and some Indians on Dirty Devil creek, in which two Indians were killed and Cornell badly wounded. There is considerable bad feeling between the Indians and the whites who are going into the country.

The Liberty Bell Starts.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—The Liberty bell will be escorted to its specially constructed car by a parade consisting of the city regiments of national guards and civic organizations. The car is an open gondola with Pullman trucks. The bell will be protected by a canopy and will be inclosed by 13 posts, symbolic of the original colonies. Pennsylvania's post has a keystone and is surmounted by a miniature liberty bell. Four reserve officers will be the guard. The car will leave Philadelphia Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. It will pass through the principal towns in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana. At Indianapolis ex-President Harrison will deliver an address. Mayor Stuart and a joint committee of councilmen will accompany the bell and will occupy Pullman sleepers and parlor cars, which will be attached to the train.

Secretary Herbert's Rumored Marriage.

MEMPHIS, April 24.—A special from Washington says: "The gossips of the capital are telling a pretty story about Secretary of the Navy Herbert and Mrs. Manning, widow of Daniel Manning, secretary of the treasury under Mr. Cleveland's first administration. The story is to the effect that these two will be the contracting parties in a wedding shortly to take place. Mrs. Manning is now on the Dolphin, as the guest of Secretary Herbert. Secretary Herbert is a widower."

Funds of the Veterans Missing.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—Colonel Clark E. K. Royce, treasurer of the Veterans' Home association, is said to be short in his accounts at least $20,000 and it may be $40,000. A week ago he was found in a room at a hotel unconscious and nearly dead from wounds about the head and has since been in a critical condition, but he is now improving. Royce now confesses he attempted suicide, fearing exposure.

They Want Harmony.

PITTSBURG, April 24.—Officers of the Amalgamated association, together with several leading officials of the new Finishers' union held a conference at Youngstown. The conference continued five hours. The latter would attempt an early settlement of the differences should be made and all work together in harmony.

Struck by the Express.

WARSAW, Ind., April 24.—In Jackson township, nine miles southeast of this city, the Cleveland express train on the Nickel Plate railroad, while rounding a sharp curve, struck a wagon containing John S. Smith, his wife and three small children. All were instantly killed.

The Grand Chiefs Are There.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 24.—H. R. Garretson, grand senior chief of the Order of Railway Conductors, and A. B. Younger, assistant grand chief of the Engineers Brotherhood, have arrived here to adjust the trouble between the terminal railroad and its employees.

Banker Cannon Selected Again.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Henry W. Cannon the banker of New York city, has been invited by the president to again represent the United States as one of its delegates to the international monetary conference which adjourned to meet at Brussels May 30 next.

The Theosophical Convention.

NEW YORK, April 24.—The convention of the American section of the Theosophical society met at Aryan hall. There was a fair attendance, delegates being present from a number of the principal cities of the country and from England.

Barks Like a Dog.

ALTON, Ills., April 24.—Mrs. Richard Isom, colored, 10 years ago was bitten by a dog. Now she barks at intervals and before being tied crawled about on all fours. The authorities are at a dilemma to know what shall be done with her.

Scalded In a Car.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 24.—A freight train dashed into a stock train at Eureka Crossing. One engine turned over and scalding steam was let loose, killed the baggage car of a telegraph construction train, four men were badly scalded.

The Duke Attended Mass.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The Duke of Veragua and party went to St. Joseph's church on Capitol hill, where Mgr. Satolli celebrated pontifical high mass in the presence of an extremely large congregation.

Left an Infernal Machine.

LONDON, April 24.—An infernal machine, designed apparently to be operated by electricity, was found in the garden of a house in Tottenham Court road. A foreign couple recently disappeared from the house.

Children at Shakespeare's Grave.

LONDON, April 24.—The anniversary of Shakespeare's birthday was celebrated at Stratford-on-Avon. The school children placed flowers on Shakespeare's tomb and covered it with lilies.

A House For Aged Germans.

CINCINNATI, April 24.—The newly built German Old Men's home, known as the Altenheim, was dedicated with impressive ceremonies.

Mint Vote or Pay Full Tax.

KANSAS CITY, April 24.—Every male citizen of this city will either have to vote or pay a poll tax of $2.50. This provision of the new city charter has not been enforced before.

Killed by a Falling Wall.

MONTREAL, April 24.—Bowen & Co.'s wholesale liquor establishment was damaged $100,000 by fire. A falling wall killed Fireman Desmels and severely injured two others.

"I get them in Brooklyn. I know a place there which gives you as bad a fit as you can get in London."—Harper's Bazar.

FASHIONS

AN AFTERNOON GOWN.

A Black Satin Gown Lined With Cobalt Blue.

Here is a French gown for afternoon wear which is at once unique and stylish. The gored skirt is of black satin, lined from the hem to the knee with crinoline. It is trimmed with creamy Venetian lace in bands which extend from the waist to the bottom of the skirt. A few inches from the hem the lace is trimmed with fine jet fringe.

WITH THE CRINOLINE.

The bodice tucks in beneath a black satin belt. It is a charmingly delicate affair. There is a full vest of pale green chiffon outlined with black velvet bands. Beyond the velvet are graduated revers of the venetian lace which form frills over the shoulders.

The sleeves are a novelty. They are fashioned of black chiffon over pale green silk and arranged in three huge puffs which tumble over one another artistically. From the elbow to the wrist is a tight fitting cuff of black satin. The green yoke is an adjustable affair, so that other shades of chiffon or silk may take its place.

Ladies who are always on the lookout for the "fashions of tomorrow" are exchanging the plain fourreau skirt for the full balloon dress of the time of Louis Philippe; but those who are less attracted by such sudden changes adopt a medium course and content themselves with giving a little more fullness at the back to the gored skirt; some even introduce a few plaits over the hips.

Trimmings are of two styles, either forming a striking contrast or a perfect match to the material of the dress. Thus a dress of havana cloth is trimmed with green velvet round the skirt, while the short jacket, sleeves and belt are of the same velvet. Another of the same tint is trimmed with braiding and silk embroidery of graduated shades of the same color. As a rule, trimmings are put on in plain bands and borders; but, on the other hand, narrow flutings and ruches are very fashionable. They are put on round the extreme edge of skirts, jackets and bodices.

A Similarity.

"That was the second time I've fallen today," remarked a New York gentleman to a friend during the recent slippery weather. "Did you fall before?"

"No; I fell the other way."

"Humph! You remind me of a bank cashier. You lost your balance, and then you fell behind."—Texas Siftings.

REVIEW IN NEW YORK HARBOR.

Description of the Principal Vessels of the United States, Great Britain, Spain, France, Germany, Italy, Russia and Brazil—President Cleveland to Pass Them in Review—A Festival of Peace.

Unless all signs fail and all naval authorities are at fault, New York city is soon to witness the most unique naval display noted in history. Not in size nor in magnificence will it be unique. The Spanish Armada was very much larger. Ordinary naval reviews of European fleets are more impressive in the number and armament of the vessels. Yet it will be unique and interesting be cause the picked vessels of many nations will join in commemoration of the quadricentennial of Columbus, and the president of the great republic will pass in review the warships of the world.

In a sense it will be a peace congress of the world's navies. No such assemblage has hitherto been, and it is much to be feared that no such array of naval armaments in friendly rivalry will soon be seen again. The United States, Great Britain, possibly Russia, and Spain, Italy, Brazil, Germany and France will be represented in the order named, so far as warships go, while the United Netherlands, Argentine Republic, Portugal, Denmark and others will be represented by one, two or three ships each. Taking it all in all, at least 60 of the grandest warships in the world will arrive and anchor in the lower bay on April 25, move up and anchor in the Hudson on the 26th, and on the 27th the great review will take place.

Of course the United States will lead in place as well as in number of vessels, and briefly told here is the list, together with the cost of each vessel that will participate:

BRITISH FLAGSHIP BLAKE.

In addition to these it is probable that the new cruiser, the New York, which has proved herself to be the fastest cruiser in the world at her trial trip off Delaware breakwater, will be ordered to join the American forces.

And still this cold array of names and figures gives but a faint idea of the solid magnificence of the new American navy. The reader who has not kept himself informed of our progress for the last 10 years can have no idea of the rapidity with which our reproach among nations has been taken away, and how near we are to our old pre-eminence in the time when Decatur thundered against Algiers, and Hull, Lawrence, Porter and others boldly challenged the mistress of the seas. But a few figures on this point will be given later.

Next in display to the United States will come Great Britain, of course. She has in these seas eight great warships, but only five are certain to be in the review. Of these the greatest—and, as some English authorities have maintained, the best in the world, all things considered—is the Blake. In tonnage she outranks all United States ships. She is a protected cruiser and is of 9,000 tons displacement. She is 375 feet in length, with a beam of 65 feet. She floats in 26 feet of water and has 14,450-horsepower engines, capable of sending her along at a speed of 19.5 knots an hour.

Her armament consists of two 9.2-inch 32-ton and ten 6-inch 5-ton breechloading rifles, with a number of other light arms carried by the United States cruisers. She carries a crew of 574 men, and the arrangement of her engines is claimed to be scientifically perfect. She is propelled by twin screws, driven by four distinct sets of triple expansion, inverted cylinder engines, placed in four separate compartments, two sets being coupled together on the port and starboard sides respectively for driving each screw. No damage to one set in action can interfere with the other, and similarly each gun has its own independent supply, so that the explosion of one can have no effect on another. Imagine, if you can, this vast floating fortress of 9,000 tons vomiting over 600 pounds of solid metal from each side at every shot and nearly as much more from bow and stern.

After the Blake the other British ships seem small indeed. But among them is the armored cruiser Australia of 5,600 tons, a handy and fast vessel, fitted with 14,400-horsepower engines and a battery of two 9-inch and ten 6-inch breechloading rifles. She has a bulkhead armor of 16 inches in thickness and a side armor of 10 inches, also the Magicienne, which has 2,950 tons displacement, a length of 265 feet and a beam of 42 feet. She has 9,000 horsepower and a speed of about 18 knots. Her main battery consists of six 6-inch breechloading rifles. The Tartar has a displacement of 1,770 tons. She is 220 feet long and has a beam of 42 feet. With 9,000 horsepower she steams along 17 knots an hour. Her main battery consists of six 6-inch breechloading rifles. With these come some smaller vessels.

It will surprise most Americans to learn that Spain claims naval pre-eminence in these waters next to Great Britain, and that our old ally, France, has paid very little attention to this affair. Nevertheless France has sent the Admiral Rousard and Jean Bart. The Amiral Rousard is a wooden ship of the old style, with a projecting ram. She is 277 feet long, with 44 feet beam and 22 feet draft. She steams under favorable circumstances about 13 knots an hour. She is a handsome looking vessel, but so far as fighting is concerned is just as obsolete as a flintlock rifle. The Rousard is another old fashioned craft, but the Jean Bart is comparatively modern and efficient.

This is as it should be, for she is named for the greatest naval genius France ever produced, a fisherman's son who fought his way up to the rank of an admiral, and of whom stories of dauntless greatness are still told by French sailors. One of them runs thus: He had the Prince de Conti as passenger and beat off an English attack so that the prince congratulated him on their escape from capture, whereupon he replied that there had been no danger at all of that fate, as he had taken the precaution to send his son to the powder magazine with a match, ready to blow up the ship as soon as he gave him the order.

FRENCH FLAGSHIP ARETHUSE.

Spain sends the Reina Regente (Queen Regent), which was, or was thought to be, the fastest and most efficient cruiser afloat, but that honor is now claimed for the latest United States cruiser New York. The Duke of Veragua, sprung from a branch of the royal house of Spain, will command the Spanish fleet, and the Reina Regente is his flagship. She is of 5,000 tons displacement and is 310 feet in length. She draws 26 feet of water, and with her 11,000-horsepower engines can steam 20.7 knots an hour. She carries six 16-centimeter and as many 12-centimeter breechloading rifles.

Next in size in the Spanish contingent comes the Infanta Isabel, a sloop gunboat of 1,130 tons. She is 250 feet long and has a beam of 32 feet. She can do her 14 knots an hour and carries four 12-centimeter and two 7-centimeter rifles. The Infanta Isabel took part in the October Columbus celebration in New York harbor under the auspices of the municipal government. Last in point of size of the Spanish vessels comes the gunboat Nueva Espana.

Italy sends three protected cruisers, the Giovanni Bausan being the flagship. She is 375 feet 7 inches in length and is of 3,068 tons displacement. She can whirl along at 17 knots with her 6,500-horsepower engines. She carries two 8-centimeter and six 15-centimeter breechloading Armstrong rifles. Here companions are the Etna, 982 feet long and 3,650 tons displacement, and the Staffetta, which is of 2,030 tons, is 260 feet long and can do 19.60 knots an hour with her 7,600-horsepower engines. She has as a main battery six 6-inch breechloading Armstrong rifles.

No finish for the great naval powers, or at any rate those best been represented in this display. But several others will be fairly well represented. Germany will send a protected cruiser and a composite gunboat. The cruiser is the Kaiserin Augusta, which is of 6,052 tons displacement. She is 353 feet long and can steam 20 knots an hour with her 12,000-horsepower engines. She has a main battery of twelve 15-centimeter and eight 8.7-centimeter rifles. The Schwalbe is a little composite gunboat of 1,300 tons and is 208 feet in length.

ITALIAN CRUISER GIOVANNI BAUSAN.

Brazil sends two vessels. Her flagship is the turret battleship Aquidaban, a vessel which formed one of the Brazilian squadron which came to America two years ago, after the fall of the Emperor Dom Pedro, to announce the new republic. Brazil's other vessel is the Jaguanderi, a 270-foot-long protected cruiser. The United Netherlands send one vessel, the frigate Van Speyk. The Argentine Republic also sends one, the Nuevo de Jolio. Portugal, Denmark, China and Japan have also notified our government that they will be represented, but have not signified the name and style of their vessels. Altogether not less than 60 of the greatest warships in the world will be present.

At the head of the line, as the fleet sweeps up New York bay, will be the cruiser Philadelphia, flagship of Admiral Bancroft Gherardi, who will be director general of the review. On the 26th the fleet will move up to the review anchorage in the Hudson river, where small buoys, numbered, will mark the anchorage of each ship. The anchorage will extend from Thirty-fourth street to Eighty-ninth street. During the afternoon of the 26th all final arrangements will be completed and the last orders issued. At 9 A. M. on the 27th all the vessels will hoist colors and "dress ship" in unison. At 10:30 a. m. President Cleveland will go aboard the Dolphin at the Twenty-fourth street landing, and the review will begin.

As the Dolphin moves off she will fire her signal gun, and the Miantonomoh will respond with one of her 8-inch guns. All the yards will be manned on all the vessels, and the Dolphin will move up through the fleet. As she comes even with each ship in turn the order will be given: present arms, sound four flourishes, officers and crew salute, and the band plays the national air. At the last flourish begins a 21-gun salute. After the Dolphin has passed the flag and commanding officers will leave their ships to pay their respects to the president on the Dolphin when she anchors. Fifteen minutes before the president hails from the Dolphin a preparatory signal will be made from the ship, and as he leaves the ship every vessel in the fleet will fire 21 guns or all and fire a salute following the motion of the Dolphin. With the last gun the president's flag comes down, and the ceremonies of the day are over. In the evening there will be an exhibition of search-lights from 8 to 8:30 and of Very and Ardois' night signaling between 8:30 and 9.

Of course the entire width of the Hudson occupied by the parade will be patrolled by guardboats and traffic suspended for the time. The three Spanish caravels (reproductions of those Columbus came in), if they arrive on time, will have a place of honor. After the parade there will be many entertainments of foreign officers by New York clubs and much feasting and jollification among the sailors, and then—all hands ho! for the Chicago World's fair and "go as you please."

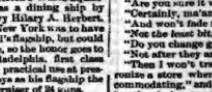
The Dolphin, on which the president will pass the fleet in review, is the dispatch boat of that is called America's White Squadron, and will be used as a dining ship by Secretary of the Navy Hilary A. Herbert. The armored cruiser New York was to have been Admiral Gherardi's flagship, but could not be finished in time, so the honor goes to the beloved old Philadelphia, first class cruiser of 39 guns. In practical use at present the admiral supports his flagship the Baltimore, first class cruiser of 34 guns.



SPANISH WARSHIP INFANTA ISABEL.

The Russian vessels designated for this parade are the General Admiral, of 4,604 tons and 285 feet long; the Dmitri Donskoi, of 5,893 tons and 356 feet long, and the Rynda, a small protected cruiser, of 1,322 tons and perhaps others are to be commanded by Vice Admiral Komakoff, and on his flagship will be the Grand Duke Alexis, whose foreign visit to the United States was the talk of the time.

On Denmark's flagship will be Prince Waldemar, son of the king of Denmark and brother of the Princess of Wales and Czarina of Russia. He will be one of the most prominent of the many distinguished men coming to honor the memory of Columbus and show their good will to the great republic. And at this point one is tempted to indulge in rhapsody as the American heart swells with pride as the nation's position. But as words are wanting to do justice to the subject, it remains but to wish the happiest results from the great Festival of Peace.

Trouble About a Sign.

"Inside Boots Blacked Outside."—This nearly caused a riot. Scores of people gathered around it, and casual remarks were made about lynching. The Italian became alarmed and pulled in the sign. The next day this appeared, "Boots Outside Blacked Inside." There was a rumbling sound heard as of an earthquake in the throes of composition at the Italian's shop. It swelled into a roar that seemed as if it were about to sweep everything before it, when the Italian ran for his life. When next he appeared, he proudly pointed to his new sign:

☞ On Rainy Days Outside Boots Shined Inside.

That Italian says that "this is one great country for making the mon, but one dam country for the crank," for the police made him take that sign down.

The newest sign reads:

"Within The Store, On Tempestuous Days, Boots Will Be Cleaned, Blackened and Polished, by the Brush Manipulator, without Extra Charge."

It has been allowed to stand. It was composed by a wandering Boston man.—Art in Advertising.

Who It Was.

One day Miss Goode stopped her lesson, and while the hum of childish voices was coming from the other seats began to tell the class about the "Shut In Society." Her stories of the little sick ones and the aged invalids who were spending a ray of light from their sweet ministry interested the children, and Mary Brown was seen to turn her head away. Then Miss Goode went on "I'm sorry to tell you that I won't patronize a store where they're not more accommodating," and she walked away, leaving the clerk a wreck behind her.—Detroit Free Press.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, APRIL 25, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

BREVITIES.

—Friday will be Arbor day.

—So, sis, of Barnum & Bailey's advertising cars arrived in Plainfield to-day.

—The "Ys" have secured the Rutgers Glee Club to give a concert in All Souls' church, Thursday evening of this week.

—Wednesday is designated for observance as the seventy-fourth anniversary of the founding of Odd Fellowship in America.

—Minpah Lodge, I. U. O. of I. O. L., held a well attended and interesting meeting, last evening, in Odd Fellows Hall, West Second street.

—The man who discards his overcoat and flannels at this season of the year runs a slim chance of ever posing as the oldest inhabitant.

—Every man uses his best efforts to encourage the beautiful habit which is slowly gaining favor among femininity of removing the hat at the theatre.

—O. A. Campbell of Netherwood avenue, has secured the agency, for this vicinity, for New Jersey Homes, a monthly publication issued in the interest of New Jersey real estate.

—The third game to decide the series between the C. Y. M. L's of this city and the Holy Cross Lyceum of New York will be bowled next Saturday night, on the Lyceum alleys on Sixth street.

—The express that usually passes through here at 8.03, was nearly an hour late this morning. The fireman was unable to keep steam up, and the train had to run very slow in consequence.

—An exchange says: "A few days ago, Charles Reiner shot a seal on the bank of the Hackensack River, near Jersey City. The seal weighed 300 pounds. How it got so far up the river is a mystery."

—The trustees of the North Plainfield school council meet to-night as previously announced on account of unforeseen difficulties, but will call a meeting for an early date, which will be advertised.

—Two match bowling games will be played by the Park Club this week. The first with the Roseville team to-night on the Park alleys and the second with the Union County Club on Friday night on the latter's alleys.

—Mr. Goldman, a West Front street merchant, while at work in his store yesterday, slipped and fell, severely spraining his ankle. Mr. Goldman has just opened business here, being recently from New York.

—Stephen Meserer, a jeweler of Newark, has made a clock with 102 dials, which tells the time at a glance in that many different parts of the North American Continent. The dials are set into a map of North America.

—Hereafter all teachers in New Jersey are required to average at their examinations seventy per cent. of the questions in each branch of studies now taught in the public schools of the State, and not a "general average" of seventy, as heretofore required.

—The Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church, on Craig place, will give a sociable and entertainment on Thursday evening, April 27th, at eight o'clock. An interesting programme has been provided and refreshments will be served after the entertainment. A cordial invitation is extended by the ladies to everybody to attend. Admission free.

—The large tug "Stoney" has been engaged by the Society of Amateur Photographers, to go down the New York bay to meet the fleet of warships tomorrow. This trip will probably afford a better opportunity for photographing than on the day of the naval parade. The "Stoney" will accommodate about 25 persons. The boat will leave foot West 11th street, North River, at 8:15 a. m.

Paying Off Its Mortgage Too.

The Trinity Reformed church was triumphant, last Sunday, over the annihilation of the last mortgage, and the Weaker sister church of Trinity, the German Reformed church, has no less reason to be thankful for the fact that the treasurer has a receipt in his hands for $600, which amount has been paid on the mortgage of $1,700 held by the Board of Dominion Mission, reducing the debt to $1200.

Five hundred dollars appears to be a very small sum for a church, but those who are acquainted with the circumstance know that it means a good deal for the German church. Besides it is only a little over five years ago that the church was dedicated.

Meeting of the Sons of Temperance.

The quarterly session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance will be held in Green's Hall, Summit, tomorrow. There will be a morning, afternoon and evening session, the morning session opening at 10 o'clock. The morning and afternoon sessions will be devoted to the transaction of the regular business of the order and in the evening a large temperance mass meeting will be held. Several eminent speakers from various parts of the State have volunteered to address this meeting. The evening session will be called to order at 7:45 o'clock.

A large delegation will attend from Dowell Division of this city.

Tournament Games.

Six games were bowled last night in the head pin tournament of the Crescent League, with the following result:

	Won.	Lost.
Tall	1	0
Ulrich	0	1
Dunham	0	1
Thurston	1	0
Sears	1	0
Sears	0	1

To-night's bowlers, as scheduled, are Thiers, Lyman, J. Doane and J. H. Doane.

TO ENTERTAIN G. A. R. MEN.

Winfield Scott Post to Have Visitors To-night.

About 50 members of James A. Garfield Post, G. A. R., of Newark, are expected to arrive in this city to-night and pay a fraternal visit to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73. The Post will be accompanied by its drum corps.

The Post is making preparations to receive its guests in good style and treat them royally. One comrade is to be mustered in.

The Woman's Relief Corps will have charge of the collation and they are preparing a repast such as they have always been noted for—one of the best. The Relief Corps always furnishes a big share of entertainment to visiting Grand Army men, in its collations. The corps was organized into a committee of the whole for the occasion, with Mrs. Westphal as chairman.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Foster of Mercer avenue delightfully entertained a few friends last evening at her home.

Mrs. James W. Jackson and Mrs. Clifford Wharton of Crescent avenue, returned yesterday from Atlantic City.

Mr. Andrew E. Kenney, who recently resigned his position at the freight depot to accept one with the Catholic Benevolent Legion, will start Thursday for St. Louis.

Civil Engineer F. A. Dunham of this city, has opened an office in Pittsburgh, Pa., for general engineering work, and as headquarters for his sewer and street work in that vicinity.

The Developer devotes a page to an illustrated article on the lantern slide mat of the Plainfield Camera Club. The idea is unique, and is due to the invention of Mr. George H. Babcock, vice-president of the club.

The dance to-night, at Hulett's Hall, will be the third this season given by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps. The committee in charge of the affair consists of Messrs. H. G. Adams, chairman; T. A. Kurzhals, S. C. Terry, W. Force and A. Wilson.

Two plays are to be given at the Casino, Thursday, May 11, in which Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mrs. J. P. Mason and Messrs. Runyon, Cock and Pelletier will take part, for the benefit of the manual training fund of the Boys' Club. The plays are: "Barbara" and "Second Thoughts."

The Crystal Maze.

Crystal Maze, which was thrown open to the public on Saturday evening proved a great novelty. It is located on Broadway and Thirty-eighth street, New York. The visitor passes along a zig-zag passage walled entirely by mirrors and the passenger is reflected on every side so bewildering that one seems lost in endless avenues. Von Prittwitz Palm, the inventor of this, has arranged the mirrors so scientifically that one is robbed of all previous knowledge of direction. The task is not an easy one, by the bull. When this is done the egress is found to be more difficult than ingress. The place is open from one o'clock in the afternoon until eleven p. m.

The Tire Came Off.

A little girl riding a safety came to grief at the corner of Front street and Park avenue about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. As she turned the corner the front wheel caught in a piece of board, in such a way as to twist the tire off. She dismounted and stood holding the bicycle in the middle of the street apparently not knowing what to do in her predicament. A colored youth went to her assistance, the tire was replaced and the cyclist mounted and rode away as if nothing had happened.

"Got Into Trouble and Had to Leave,"

When a Park avenue barber arrived at his shop yesterday morning, instead of finding his employee there, as usual, he found the shop closed.

The proprietor was unable to account for his employee's non-appearance, until he happened to spy a note on the small table in the room. Opening it he read the following:

"Have got into trouble and have had to leave town.

"HARRY APGAR."

This explained his non-appearance.

The Olde Folke Concert at Vincent Chapel this Evening.

The Olde Folke Concert will be repeated at Vincent chapel this evening. There will be a chorus of about fifty voices. Great preparations have been made. Old-fashioned gowns have been brought out, wigs re-curled and buckles polished. Hoop skirts may be viewed. And the admission to see and hear it all is, so reads the advertisement elsewhere, only 25 cents.

A Meeting of the "Ys."

The "Ys" will hold their last business meeting for this year, in their rooms in the Crescent Block, Monday afternoon May 35, at four o'clock. The officers are to have their annual reports for that meeting. Any friends of the cause are cordially invited to be present.

Minister Runyon to be Banqueted.

Ex-Chancellor Theodore Runyon, the new Minister to Germany, is to be banqueted at the Hotel Waldorf, New York, next Thursday night. The party will comprise many people of prominence in the State.

RAILROAD REPORTS.

THE STATE COMPTROLLER'S FIGURES OF DEBT, EARNINGS AND EXPENSES.

The Central's Bonded Debt has been Increased The Cost of the Road and its Income also on the Increase.

The State Comptroller's figures of the debt, earnings and expenses of the railroads having their terminal in this State are as follows:

The Central Railroad of New Jersey's bonded debt has been changed from $45,689,822 to $44,498,822.11. There is also an increase in the cost of the road, the amount being $25,715,625.45. The total income was $8,601,596.15, against $7,988,-966 22 of last year.

The New Jersey Southern Railway's bonded debt, $1,750,000, their other debt, $750,000. Last year the earnings were $710,303, and this year they are $751,103.-52. Their expenses were $676,226.

The Lehigh and Hudson Railway has a debt of $1,142,737. The other debt has been increased $923,894. The income was raised from $227,067 to $231,934.70. The expenses were $193,754.16, the Lehigh Valley Terminal has a bonded debt of $10,000,000. The road and equipments have increased from $10,398,520 to $11,022,-159.70. The Eastern Amboy Railroad's capital stock is $6,000,000; its bonded debt $6,000,000. Its earnings last year were $2,469,556.45. This year they are $2,918,819. The expenses are $1,875,-334.04. The National Dock Railway has increased its general debt from $13,000 to $14,672. Its income was $33,112.37. Its expenses were $21,255.

The West Shore Railroad has 425 miles of tracks; its capital stock is $10,000,-000; its bonded debt $50,000,000.

The Northern Railroad of New Jersey increased its bonded debt from $643,-000,000 to $654,000,000. It decreased its other debt from $365,595.10 to $178,-181.06. The income of the road is $430,720.57; they paid in dividends, $40,000,000 in cash. The New York and Long Branch Railroad has thirty-eight miles of track in New Jersey; its capital stock is $2,000,000; its bonded debt has been increased from $1,500,000 to $1,562,-000.

The Pennsylvania, Poughkeepsie and Boston Railroad's capital stock still remains at $2,000,000 and its bonded debt at $2,000,000, but the other debt has been increased from $1,280,765.20 to $1,459,495.-48. Its total income was $190,578.86. The expenses were $217,260.

The Port Reading Railroad makes a much better and fuller report this year than it did last. It has twenty miles of road in this State; its capital stock has been increased from $1,500,000 to $1,505,-000; its bonded debt now is $1,500,000; the cost of the road and the equipments is now put down at $1,505,000. Its total income was $208,254, and its expenses were $97,305.49. The West Jersey Railroad now has 189 miles of road. Its bonded debt has increased to $3,342,900, its other debt is $285,000. Its income was $1,565,968.51: its expenditures were $1,101,471.95. The Freehold and Jamesburg Agricultural Railroad makes no change in its capital stock, bonded debt, and shows evidences of its prosperity by increased earnings and a declaration of two dividends of three per cent. in cash. Heretofore it has been paying none. The income from passenger traffic was $125,-767. The cost of the operating of the road was $128,434, against $113,116.66 last year.

"AGE OF CONSENT LEGISLATION."

The Rev. Dr. Lewis will Read a Paper at the Social Purity Congress.

The World's Congress on Social Purity, to be held in Chicago, June 2, 3 and 4, under the auspices of the World's Congress Auxiliary, called by the New York Committee, in co-operation with the Federation for the Abolition of State Regulation of Vice, will listen to papers from a number of Americans, among them being Rev. Dr. W. T. Sabine, of the Reformed Episcopal church of New York, on "Social Vice and National Decay;" Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of the Seventh Day Baptist church of Plainfield, a paper on "Age of Consent Legislation," and he may possibly give an address; Mrs. C. T. Cole, of Iowa, a paper on "The Double Standard of Morality," and it is thought that Dr. Emily Blackwell will prepare a paper upon the medical aspect of Regulation. The National Christian League for the Promotion of Social Purity will be represented by addresses or papers by its president, Mrs. E. B. Grannis, by Mrs. Francis J. Barnes.

Wheeling Notes.

A German physician claims to have discovered a new affliction of the throat which is caused by excessive bicycle riding.

In the Irvington-Milburn race this year the contestants will be permitted to choose their prizes in the order in which they finish. Three special time prizes will be awarded which must be won within the limit of 1.25.

The usefulness of the bicycle is becoming better appreciated every day. The management of the great Barnum and Bailey show have engaged the services of two expert riders to carry dispatches, etc., to every town that the show visits during the coming tenting season.

G. W. Coffin of Newark is the first rider to enter for the Irvington-Milburn race.

The hundred-mile course from Newark to Princeton is becoming so popular for century runs that there is talk of abandoning the Newark-Philadelphia course.

STATE CHARITIES AID.

The Annual Report of the Association Just Prepared—The Work Being Done.

The State Charities Aid Association's seventh annual report has been issued, and it contains much that is interesting. The condition of the prisons has been very thoroughly examined, and the report of the managers of the association says:

In speaking of the work done in the almshouses, the managers report that a good many aged and infirm persons have been removed from these institutions, where relatives were found able to care for them. The fact that many illegitimate children are born in almshouses calls for legislation to prevent women from returning after the first time.

The examination of the county insane asylums showed them to be under good management, and the kind care and good treatment is producing a large proportion of recoveries.

The keeping of the insane in a number of the county and town almshouses of the State can not be too strongly condemned. Without proper medical treatment, with no chance of recovery, they are kept on from year to year in a helpless condition, a trial to themselves, a terror to those who take care of them and an expense to the county.

That there must be some change in the laws which govern jails has become so apparent to the association that they have taken the matter under very serious consideration and intend to make a report which will cover the details of the system, with suggestions, after considering the laws which govern jails in other States.

Under the present system commitment to jail is not dreaded. The jail is not looked upon as a place of punishment. The very large number of commitments for minor offences increases every year. The Essex County Committee report that one woman has been going in and out of jail, convicted of minor offences, for nearly fifty years.

The probation system, now in successful operation in Massachusetts, deserves immediate consideration, in the hope that if such a law could be passed in our State it might prevent the increase of crime and repeated conviction. The report calls attention to the necessity for providing trade schools for pauper children. The State Prison and Reform School management was found to be satisfactory.

To Stop Litigation.

An application has been made to the Circuit-Court for permission to the Reading Railroad to surrender the possession and operation of the Eastern and Amboy Railroad and the Lehigh Valley Terminal Railway, these being the lines belonging to the Lehigh Valley Railroad in New Jersey. It is understood that the legal advisers of the Reading and of the Lehigh Valley reached the conclusion that a continuance of the litigation is unadvisable. The Easton & Amboy Railroad will hereafter operate both these lines.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Mme. Alberti's Great Honor.

New York, April 25.—(Special)—The great Columbian celebration this week may be said to formally begin to-day with the hoisting of the "Paul Jones" flag on the "National Flag Pole" at the Highlands of the Navesink.

A former Plainfielder had a most important part of the celebration programme. At 1.30 p. m. a poem written for this ceremony by Rev. Josiah Butterworth, was read by Mme. Alberti. Mme. Alberti has host of friends in Plainfield who will be pleased to hear of the honor shown her.

Court Adjourns.

Somerville, N. J., April 25, (Special.) The court adjourned this morning at eleven o'clock, to Tuesday, May 2, on account of the death of Prosecutor Steele's father.

Killed by a Falling Scaffold.

Oxford, N. J., April 25—(Special.)—Lewis Taylor was killed and Charles Howell seriously injured by the falling of a scaffold at the Champion mines.

A Fleet of War Ships.

Spring Lake, N. J., April 25, (Special.)—Twenty-three war vessels were off Spring Lake, N. J., at 11.40 a. m., bound North.

The Anti-Pool Room Bill a Law Now.

Albany, April 25, (Special.)—Governor Flower has signed Senator Saxton's Anti-Pool Room bill.

THE EPISCOPAL DIOCESAN CONVENTION.

Rector Jennings' Case One of the Most Important to be Adjusted.

The 108th annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey is to be held in Christ Church, New Brunswick, on May 8th and 10th.

Bishop Scarborough of Trenton will preside. There will be about 200 delegates present, which number will include about 120 rectors of different parishes, 125 lay delegates and about 50 ministerial representatives from various societies and institutions connected with the Episcopal Church.

The days of the convention proper will be on Tuesday and Wednesday, but on the preceding Monday the preliminary business of the convention will be commenced with meetings of the standing committees and councils with the Bishop. There will probably be two sessions each day, with special sessions each evening.

There may be such a press of business as to require an extra session on May 11. One of the important matters that will come before the convention for adjustment will be that of the case of Rector Jennings, of Westfield.

The delegates from Plainfield and North Plainfield to the Convention are: Grace Church—John B. Dumont, William E. Lowe and Charles P. Bull. Holy Cross —Clarence L. Murphy, Geo. F. Edwards and Joseph A. Platt.

A Chance for Bright Students.

A competitive examination for the free scholarships of the New Jersey State College, a branch of the Rutgers Scientific School, will be held in the Court House in Elizabeth on Saturday, June 3. Each Assembly district in the State is entitled to one free scholarship, and all students residents of New Jersey, are eligible to appointment.

Those wishing to obtain such scholarships should communicate with the local or County Superintendents of Schools. Each student who shall pass the entrance examination will receive from the State Superintendent of Education a certificate of appointment to scholarship at the State Agricultural College.

A Decision by Chief Justice Beasley.

By a recent decision of Chief Justice Beasley, no action can lie against any city of this State for damages sustained by personal injury on account of the unsafe condition of any street. This he decides on the ground that no statutory right exists upon which to base an action for damages against a city in such cases. In common usage and according to our statutory nomenclature, the term road denotes a township or county highway. "It is consequently entirely plain," his opinion concludes, "that it can have no application to all accidents occurring in consequence of a municipal street being out of order."

EDITORIAL NOTES

"A panic expected never comes," says R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly trade review.

The pallet of Dr. Schliemann will present a large number of his Trojan relics to the United States National museum at Washington.

An able editorial on the Mormons says that the recent war against polygamy has entirely changed in this respect the "cannons" of the church. Great guns!

Lawyers, poets, historians and novelists who want to draw on the Behring sea arbitration case for facts and fancies are informed that the material is now at their disposal. They can read through at any time the printed report of all the particulars in the case. There are only 14 volumes of it.

What is the American national bird? The turkey. What is the American national flower? The corn tassel. This emblem of our greatest agricultural product is as graceful and picturesque an object as art can lay hold of for decorative purposes. Let us see it used for such at the World's fair, carved in wood and stone and painted in wavy, shining luxuriance upon doors, frescoes and panels.

Outdoor Work For Women.

Mary E. Spencer writes for The Globe-Democrat a paper on this subject. It is so full of the flavor of ripe strawberries, the hum of bees and the perfume of honey and roses as to make one long for the fullness of life that comes only from existence passed in the open air. Mrs. Spencer believes that it would be for the improvement of the race all round if women's girls were put into flower and small fruit culture and lived more out-doors. She says:

> Our homes will be more abounding in health, and society will be the better for womanly independence. A woman who fears to do what is economical and wholesome and invigorating helps in degenerating the stock. If I were now a young girl, I would go to the Pacific states and engage in horticulture. I would have my berry gardens and my bees and assert my independence. I see no reason why a girl should crowd her way into public employment. What she needs for the full development of her nature is the open air and the sunshine. Horticulture is particularly our natural industry. I do not say that men are out of place in this branch of production, but I do say that women and flowers go well together, and that they should undertake to control the greenhouse industries and the flower gardens in the suburbs of cities. In England laundry work is passing into the hands of women, where it belongs. Horticulture belongs to us. I said a young woman would do well to go to the Pacific coast —that is, it is always to be expected that the farther west we go the larger the freedom and the less the bondage of prejudice.

It would not be necessary, however, for the women and girls who wished to engage in flower and small fruit culture to go to the Pacific coast. The business would be eminently successful if carried on wisely in the vicinity of any of the older cities of the Union. The only inducement to go to the far west would be the fact that women have more rights in the new states and are not bound down by conventionalism to the extent they are in the older portions of the country.

Mr. de Navarro's Plan.

New York people are nothing if not modest. Mr. Jose F. de Navarro sets forth in The Forum his plan for the keeping of gold and silver at parity. Briefly it is to have a sliding scale of silver values for United States money, controlled from day to day by the price of silver bullion in the gold market. A silver commission would settle every day at what rate the United States government should pay out silver next day for the redemption of silver notes, when it came to the place where the treasurer would have to redeem the silver notes in silver instead of gold.

The three commissioners should be appointed by the United States government, but they should be proposed—and here is where the characteristic modesty of New York comes in—one by the New York chamber of commerce, another by the New York banks' clearing house and the third by the New York Stock Exchange. How this jiggle-joggle scale would work in the paying of wages and the purchase of dry goods and groceries Mr. de Navarro does not take the trouble to explain very fully. He would, however, have the monthly purchases of silver by the government stopped, there being in his judgment a sufficient supply now on hand. He explains his idea thus:

> The United States legal tender silver notes now in circulation are payable on demand at all the subtreasuries either in gold or silver coin, at the option of the government. The secretary of the treasury is recommended in the act to pay them in gold as long as he can do it prudently, and he has always done so, but since he began the price of silver has been steadily going down, from about 60 cents in terms of the standard silver dollar, and people realize now that the secretary will be compelled soon to pay them in silver in order to keep the gold in the treasury. Now, my remedy is simply to amend this act of July 14, 1890, by adding that when silver is paid out it shall be paid on a gold basis, reckoning the silver at the government's gold price on the day of payment, as fixed by a commission to be appointed under the act.
> To take an example of silver conversion: A banker wishes to transfer to Europe $1,000,000 by shipment of specie in lieu of exchange and decides to send gold. He takes a certified check of $1,000,000 to the treasury to get the gold, as usual, but the secretary, contrary to his custom, declines to pay it in coin and hands him a silver check of $1,282,564 at 64 cents—$1,000,000 gold. The banker may decide to ship the silver, but he goes to his bullion broker and gets $1,000,000 gold by paying him with the silver check and in addition ½ per cent commission—$2,500—making a loss of ¼ per cent instead of a loss of 28 per cent as under the present law. The treasurer will always be ready to buy his own silver checks at the same day's price, and thus will complete the above double transaction. Thus every exchange embraces all the transactions precisely or to happen—namely, payment of notes in silver and purchases of silver in coin.

WHAT MR. CARTER SAYS

The Hawaiian Commissioner Leaves For the Islands.

THE QUEEN'S PENSION REDUCED

He Denies the Reported Strength of the Royalist Party in Honolulu—President Cleveland Receives Some Gorgeous Foreign Visitors—The New Souvenir Coins.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Commissioner Carter, representing the Hawaiian provisional government in this country for the past two months, after calling upon Secretary Gresham and notifying him that he had received the permission of his government to return, started for San Francisco today and will sail on the Belgic May 4.

Mr. Carter said before leaving that the situation in Hawaii was quiet and that he assumed the secretary was awaiting definite advices from Commissioner Blount before any further steps should be taken.

"It was my intention," said Mr. Carter, "to have started on a tour of the south but I have abandoned that programme for myself and will recommend to the provisional government that it send some one more competent to look into the prospects of negro immigration to Hawaii from the south. Commissioner Thurston and Dr. Smith will remain. The advices that I received indicate that the provisional government is not only strongly entrenched but is alert and watchful.

Cut Down the Queen's Allowance.

"The friends of the queen have stated openly that Mr. Blount intended to restore her to the throne. This I know is not true, but the friends of the queen have used the statement to keep the natives stirred up and in an uncertain frame of mind. It is not generally known in this country that the allowance for the support of the queen has been reduced to $500 a month, and that this is now only paid to her upon condition that none of it is to be used for treasonable purposes. Much of the money set apart for the queen has been up to this time used for the purpose of exciting the people and fostering an anti-American feeling. The natives are childish and impressionable, and although large numbers of them have become convinced that annexation is the best thing, these statements of the queen's friends have been utilized to hold them back from openly avowing their sentiments. A great number of those of stronger character have already joined the Annexation club."

The statement that the royalists have received large accessions from the white element is vigorously denied by Mr. Carter. "It is true," said he, "that the white population or any considerable part of it has deserted the provisional government. This I know from advices received."

Mr. Carter also said that the provisional government had determined to send a new minister to supersede Dr. Smith, and intimated that he thought it would not be in this country within the next month or six weeks.

Nobility at the White House.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The order of nobility paid its respects to Democracy at the White House when the Duc de Verragua called on President Cleveland.

The duke and his attendants were shown into the Blue room, where Mr. President and Mrs. Cleveland awaited them. The black frock coat which Mr. Cleveland wore contrasted strongly with the gold lace and brass buttons of the duke, the marquis, Don Saavedra, and Commander Diekens. Gold lace was a predominant feature in the uniform of the duke, while across his breast he wore a sash of watered silk in variegated colors and carried a chapeau in his hand. Hardly less brilliant was the costume of the marquis, while Don de Saavedra outshone both in the picturesqueness of a long cape of white doeskin reaching nearly to his heels. Four of the men wore swords, the duke's being heavily jewled, and in addition the duke carried a light cane with tassel attached.

The Souvenir Silver Quarters.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The director of the mint, with the approval of Secretary Carlisle, has determined on the designs for the souvenir quarter dollars and has forwarded to the board of lady managers for their opinion two molds of the head of Isabella, which will appear on the face of the coin, one representing her as a young queen, a very beautiful profile, and the other as a mature queen, a front face. The design for the reverse will consist of a very beautiful figure of a woman kneeling, holding a distaff, unwinding flax, emblematic of woman's industry. The lettering on the reverse will be, "Board of Lady Managers" above and around the figure, and below the words, "Columbian Quarter Dollar."

Mr. Olney Makes His Bow.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Attorney General Olney made his first appearance in the supreme court of the United States, save on the occasion of his formal introduction to the court by his predecessor. The occasion was a brief statement of the resolutions recently adopted by the members of the bar upon the death of the late Justice Lamar.

Chostaws Visit Secretary Smith.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—A delegation of Choctaw Indians, representing the Jones faction, had an audience with the secretary of the interior, and presented oral and written statements in behalf of Jones' claim as governor to the protection and support of the federal government.

The La Blanche-McCarthy Fight.

NEW YORK, April 25.—The articles of agreement for the glove fight between Billy McCarthy of Australia and George La Blanche of San Francisco were signed by Billy McCarthy and witnessed by Bob Paterson and Steve Brodie, the backer of Billy McCarthy. McCarthy and La Blanche fight for $2,000 in the Crescent club on May 13.

Has Been Sleeping For Six Days.

PEABODY, Mass., April 25.—A child of John Russell has been sleeping for six days and shows no signs of waking. The child is insensible to pain. The cause of the long sleep is thought by the attending physicians to be a low form of meningitis.

Burglars Pleaded Guilty.

JAMAICA, L. I., April 25.—Joseph Dobbs and Bernard Dougherty, members of the gang recently robbed several railroad stations on Long Island, pleaded guilty to the charges and were remanded for sentence.

Will Try Lizzie Borden Soon.

BOSTON, April 25.—No date has as yet been set for the trial of Lizzie Borden, charged with murder, but a time will be decided upon very soon.

BANKS TO THE RESCUE.

Gold Poured Into the Treasury and the Situation Made Brighter.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The treasury's stock of gold is rapidly rising. The banks are coming rapidly to its relief, and it is said that the supply of free gold available is now over $10,000,000. This result was brought about by large offerings received from bankers who as a rule took last Tuesday notes in return. The largest offerings came from Boston, which, through the associated banks, placed $4,350,000 at the disposal of the treasury. It is understood here that the New York banks, as a result of a conference with Secretary Carlisle, will put a large amount of gold to the credit of the treasury, and so high are the hopes rising that predictions are made that by the close of the week the treasury's gold balance will show an excess of $20,000,000 above the reserve. The western banks continue to pour in large contributions of the government and sent several millions yesterday.

The most gratifying feature of the situation is the tender of much gold from various sources. The offers were accompanied by the suggestion that if they proved to be insufficient further amounts would be forthcoming. Altogether the situation is much more encouraging.

The statement of President Cleveland has had a good effect, and it is understood to be his purpose for the president to authorize a bond issue in the event that it should be demonstrated by the occurrence of the present small concerning when the vessels steam slowly up the North river and get into place for Thursday's review by the president.

The Caravels Arrived First.

The caravels and the Spanish warships which accompanied them to Hampton Roads sailed past Sandy Hook and into the lower bay after dark last evening.

The Spanish gunboats had their colors flying as did also the caravels which they had in tow—the one the colors of the Spain of today, the other the royal colors of Castile and the one which Columbus carried at the mastheads of his vessels when he crossed the unknown seas on his voyage of discovery.

The man-of-war Infanta Ysabel, towing the caravel Pinta, was the first to arrive. They passed Sandy Hook at 9:45. It was three-quarters of an hour later when the second caravel and her accompanying warship were sighted off the Hook. At midnight all three boats, the Santa Maria, the Pinta and the Nina, anchored safely in the lower bay.

Sandy Hook Pilots Aboard.

The Sandy Hook pilot commissioners, in response to a request from Fortress Monroe, sent 10 pilots to Hampton Roads. The men were selected from the various boats in the New York fleet. More will follow, and the entire fleet may be piloted into Gravesend bay with absolute safety.

Every pilot will remain aboard the vessel to which he is assigned while the fleet remains here. They will receive as pay inward and outward bound pilotage and also a fee for each day's service. There are more than 100 pilots now off Sandy Hook and each of the foreigners will have a pilot. As the pilot fleet has in the neighborhood of 173 pilots, they will not be inconvenienced on account of the absence of the 10 in the parade. This is the first time in the history of the pilot service that the men have had so many requests at one time.

During the stay of the warships in the bay and the North river the marine bands will play aboard ship one time at the morning salute and again during the evening.

Visitors will not be permitted aboard the vessels until after the review of Thursday, unless the personal places are cleared in this respect. After that occurrence the excursion boats carrying visitors from the wharves to the cruisers will do a big business.

The Start From the Roads.

The fleet sailed early yesterday from Hampton Roads, and the sight was a beautiful one.

The Philadelphia moved off first, and the Newark was under way behind the Philadelphia. She was followed by the Atlanta. Then came the dandy San Francisco, the Bancroft, Bennington and Baltimore.

Then Admiral Walker's flagship, the Chicago, joined the procession. After her came the Yorktown, Charleston, Vesuvius and Concord. As soon as the Chicago dropped anchor the Nor flagship Blake got under way, and turning almost on her heels started down the roads to resume her position of honor at the head of the starboard column of the fleet.

The other Englishmen got under way at the same time and followed behind the Blake. As the Vesuvius, the last of the American fleet, passed into the line the Hollander, Van Speyck, trailed along after her. Then came the Germans with the Kaiserin Augusta and the Stosller. The Philadelphia at the head of the column proceeded for a mile and then rounding the entire fleet, started down the roads.

Then the Spanish squadron, which consisted of, besides the English ships, the Russian General Admiral and Rynda, the French Arethuse and Jean Bart, the Italian Minna and Governolo, and the Spanish Reina Regente and the pear was brought up by the Brazilian Aquidaban, Tirantes and Republica.

At 11 o'clock the whole fleet, in two regular lines, passed in review before the thousands on the wharves, boats and ramparts of the fort.

CHICAGO, April 25.—The committee on ceremonies for the World's fair have completed arrangements for the reception of President Cleveland and the Duke of Veragua on Saturday.

FLEET OFF SANDY HOOK

All Ready For the Big Naval Parade at New York.

LIVELY SCENE IN THE LOWER BAY.

A Sandy Hook Pilot Will Be at the Wheel of Every Vessel When the Start Is Made. The Philadelphia Led the Way Out to Sea From Hampton Roads.

NEW YORK, April 25.—Down in the lower bay almost early this morning a big fleet of small craft awaited the arrival of the warships. Tugs puffed and danced about on the waves. Yachts dunked and nodded their topmasts toward the rising sun, and a few excursion steamers with an early ringing, shrilled, but patient load of passengers, stood off and on. When the warships did arrive they were greeted with shouts and whistles.

The fleet was expected to come to anchor in the Narrows about noon, with the Philadelphia, carrying Rear Admiral Gherardi at the head of the port column, and the British cruiser Blake, with Vice Admiral Sir John Hopkins aboard, at the head of the starboard colomn.

Up town New Yorkers will not get a sight of the fleet until tomorrow, when the

HARRIS WILL BE SAVED.

Report That Governor Flower Means to Reprieve Him.

HIS SENTENCE TO BE COMMUTED.

It Is Said That the Governor Has Already Made Up His Mind to Save Carlyle Harris From the Electric Chair—The Prisoner and His Mother Said to Know It.

NEW YORK, April 25.—The Times this morning prints the following dispatch from Albany:

"It may be stated with semi official positiveness that Governor Flower will save Carlyle W. Harris, the convicted murderer, from execution. It may also be stated with equal certainty that this information has been conveyed not only to Mrs. Harris, but to young Harris himself.

"Today a man who occupies a position of close relationship with the governor said to The New York Times' correspondent: 'Rest assured that Harris will escape the death chair. The governor will reprieve him pending the report of George Raines, and mark my words, eventually the sentence will be commuted to imprisonment for life.'

"'Governor Flower is a very kind hearted man. He does not believe in capital punishment. He may believe that Harris is guilty, but the intercession of powerful political friends and the tearful wails of his mother have produced the desired effect and Harris will escape death.'"

Criticised by the Governor.

Governor Flower expressed his opinion concerning the course of District Attorney Nicoll.

"I am surprised," he said, "that the districts attorney of New York seems to be ignorant of the statute by which I have appointed a referee to take testimony in the matter of the application of Carlyle W. Harris for executive clemency. The statute is chapter 218 of the laws of 1887, and has been twice before taken advantage of under similar conditions—once in the case of Charles Gilbin and again in that of Samuel E. Wyman.

"This law authorizes me to appoint a person to conduct a hearing in the matter pertaining to an application for clemency, and empowers me to issue subpœnas to witnesses. It is not expected to try the Harris case over again, but merely to hear such additional evidence as may appear to the referee to be pertinent to the questions raised on the application for clemency.

Will Sift the New Evidence.

"Since the application for a new trial for Harris was refused by Recorder Smyth, I have received many communications from persons professing to know something of the facts regarding the death of Helen Potts which were not brought out during the trial of the case.

"In view of these statements, some of which were disputed, I determined to appoint a referee for the sake of sifting the additional evidence, and finding out exactly what it amounted to. I could not have taken any other course consistent with a conscientious consideration of the application for clemency. I have notified the district attorney to be present, either in person or by representative, to cross examine witnesses sworn for the defendant, and to introduce such evidence as he may deem necessary in reply. It is not expected that the hearing will occupy more than this week, and the referee is to report to me his findings of facts from the testimony presented. After that report I shall take up the case and decide it."

Great Iron Strike Expected.

PITTSBURG, April 25.—The Pittsburg Post says that the capitalists are said that the trade will witness this year one of the greatest strikes that has ever occurred in this part of the country. Certain it is to occur if the Amalgamated association is not prepared to pare down the figures in the next year's scale with no stinted hand. The manufacturers look upon a reduction of wages as an absolute necessity to the life of the business.

The Lorne Conspiracy Case.

CORNING, N. Y., April 25.—In the supreme court in this city the famous conspiracy case in which Henry B. Larus claims $250,000 from a number of well known people was commenced before E. William Rumsey. It is probably the most important case which has been tried in this section of the state in many years.

Persuaded by Their Teachers.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—The largest registration of Chinamen ever made in this country was in a Chinese Sunday school in Ontario hall. When completed about 175 Mongolians will have been listed. The registration law was explained to the Chinamen by the teachers of the Sunday school.

Suicide Morgan's Career.

HARRISBURG, April 25.—George H. Morgan, who cut his throat at the American hotel in Lebanon, was a well known journalist and lawyer of this city. He once attempted to kill himself at Steelton, but failed. Morgan was 65 years old and has had a checkered career.

Mother and Daughter Killed.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 25.—A terrible grade crossing accident occurred at a crossing of the Consolidated road in this city, when a mother and her daughter lost their lives. The victims were Mrs. Rose Dupont and her daughter Mary.

A School For Book Agents.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., April 25.—The canvassers institute of the Seventh Day Adventists closed after six weeks thorough drilling. Over 300 book canvassers are fitted for handling their work.

An Indiana Cyclone.

SULLIVAN, Ind., April 25.—A windstorm, approaching a cyclone in force, struck the town of Paxton and blew in the entire front of a brick building occupied by Mr. Emack as a drug store.

The Crisis In Norway.

CHRISTIANA, April 25.—The Norwegian storthing has decided to suspend its sittings sine die, owing to King Oscar's attitude of opposition to the storthing on the consular question.

A Truce In California.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 25.—Prince Roland Bonaparte and suite have arrived here. After seeing the state they will visit the World's fair.

Dunbar Democrats Victorious.

DANBURY, Conn., April 25.—The biennial city election took place here, and the Democrats won by an average majority of 900.

PECULIAR EVANGELISTS.

Queer Religious Fanatics Who Are Now Safe In Jail.

HACKENSACK, N. J., April 25.—Nine religious fanatics were taken to the Hackensack jail and placed in charge of Sheriff Albert Rogers. The leader is Hunaman T. Mason, the well known evangelist, who has been in jail before, once for enticing two young girls to leave their home and join his religious band. Four years ago Manson settled in Park Ridge and at once set about to form a band who would praise God in accordance to his own peculiar way. He became acquainted with the family of Herman Storms, a rich farmer. The farmer did not like the new arrival, but the new religious fakirs were forcibly impressed upon Mrs. Maria Storms, her son Harry and daughter Mary, both past their teens. The majority soon obtained control of the household, and Mrs. Jane Howell, Mrs. Minnie Stewart and Miss Berry were induced to join the band. Lately the band was increased by two long haired men, who called themselves Silas and John the Baptist.

A short time ago three of them were arrested for working on Sunday, and two served four days in the Hackensack jail for the offense. The whole band has been arrested, charged with conspiracy to cheat and defraud Herman Storms out of his property. Garry Storms was to have the property and the other Storms should receive $200 and board and clothing for the remainder of his days. When they met in Justice W. B. Smith's office to witness the signature to the agreement they were all placed under arrest and given a hearing immediately afterward. The affidavit in part states that the conspirators deny, ridicule and curse all regular religion and religious customs; recognize no Sabbath and set up a false God of their own, declaring the said Manson to be the only true and living God; wherein unseemly revelry often occurs and disorderly reigns, and the laws of society, church and state are defied and reviled to the scandal of the neighborhood and great injury to public morals. Several people testified against the evangelists at the hearing before Justices Smith and Wortendyke. The evangelists were held to await the action of the grand jury.

The Liberty Bell Started.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—No event since the bicentennial in 1887 has created such widespread interest and enthusiasm as the transfer of the bell. The streets through which the procession passed was crowded by thousands, and cheers and waved handkerchiefs as though the historic relic was a thing of life. The bell was mounted on a huge truck tastefully trimmed with flowers and flags and drawn by six bay horses. The bell was guarded throughout the night by the four stalwart policemen who will accompany it to Chicago and remain with it until the close of the fair.

Enforcing the Blue Laws.

PITTSBURG, April 25.—The new Law and Order society, organized for the purpose of making the blue laws odious, has notified the bricklayers employed in the Pennsylvania Avenue Iron mills to stop working on Sundays under penalty of arrest. These men are employed on Sundays in making repairs about the mills, and if not permitted to work on Sundays it will be necessary to suspend operations during the week. Law and Order officials expect to inaugurate the crusade next Sunday, when all persons engaged in worldly employment will be liable to arrest.

The Rev. Friday Is Missing.

PITTSBURG, April 25.—Last September the Rev. Friday A. Ovelton (or Welton), colored, came here from Virginia to fill the pulpit of the Methodist church on Penn avenue and Twenty-first street. He left last Monday unexpectedly, and the total amount of his defalcations, it is thought, will be about $800. This amount covers collections for coal, the church dues, borrowed money, house rent and household effects. He is supposed to be in Washington.

A Course In Politics.

DES MOINES, April 25.—General J. B. Weaver has made public a proposition for the establishment of an "independent school of political science" in Des Moines. He says such a school is necessary, because every patriotic citizen "realizes that the adversaries of human liberty—those who rob and enslave the world—are full handed and have the attention and control of the masses of the people."

An Offer of Gold.

PITTSBURG, April 25.—Park Brothers, steel manufacturers, handed Postmaster McKean, custodian, a certified check for $200,150, the final payment for the old post-office site they purchased from the government for speculation. The firm has offered to send the amount in gold to Secretary Carlisle if he will pay express charges.

Busy Mr. Latham Disappeared.

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., April 25.—John A. Latham, one of the most prominent citizens of this town, has disappeared. Latham was the manager of the water, gas and electric light companies and secretary of several savings funds, and engaged in the insurance and real estate business. Experts are investigating his accounts.

Moved Many Tons of Coal.

POTTSVILLE, April 25.—The Reading company did an enormous business during Sunday from Palo Alto shipping station. Forty loaded coal trains were sent out to Tidewater, and 50 trains of empty cars were received. All told, 32,000 tons of coal were shipped, requiring 1,433 cars.

St. Louis Wants Fame.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—A committee from St. Louis appeared before the directors of the International Navigation company and asked that one of the steamers now being built for the American line by the William Cramp and Sons company be named after their city.

Wholesale Butter Thief Sentenced.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., April 25.—Seward Gernert, a wealthy farmer, found guilty of stealing 1,000 lbs. of butter from commercies throughout this and Berks county, was sentenced to three years' imprisonment at hard labor.

Woodhull Won the Cup.

NEW HAVEN, April 25.—W. S. Woodhull of Orange, N. J., is the winner of the silver cup offered by the Yale graduates for the runner making the best showing in a series of seven long distance handicap races this spring.

May Day Strike Threatened.

PITTSBURG, April 25.—A strike of all the coal miners in this district—after and railroad—is threatened on May 1.

Carpenters Would Not Strike.

CHICAGO, April 25.—The strike ordered by the Central Council of Carpenters at the World's fair was a fizzle.

New Use Found.

The night lunch wagon is a product of the nineteenth century. Its advent has been hailed by thousands of weary night workers, and cheek-to-cheek frankfurter and hot roll have carried joy and comfort to myriad hearts and stomachs. Now, Tom Carroll is one of the men to whom the night lunch is a thing of beauty and a rejoicing forever. The other evening Tom came into the Sanitarer's room, munching at his heart's content, with the end of a frankfurter in his hands.

"Where have you been?"

Tom smiled as he swallowed the last bite. "Been out dining a la carte."—Boston Budget.

FASHIONS

DONKEY EARS.

Will They Be Worn by the Fashionable This Season?

As a proof that American women have the courage of their convictions may be cited the fact that the jacket shown herewith has actually been worn by a young woman who has always been acknowledged as a sensible girl.

STARTLING REVERS.

The idea of revers which spread out slightly over the shoulders is a pretty one, but when they are increased to the extent here shown they are not, only startling but disfiguring. The costume is fashioned of soft plaid wool of dark brown, crossed with lines of tan and dull green. The skirt is made plain and full, with three bands of dark green velvet around the bottom.

The jacket of the plaid is three-quarter length and is open in front to reveal the dark velvet vest. The enormous sleeves seem almost small in comparison with the epaulette-like growth by which they emerge. They consist of a loose puff, which extends to just beyond the elbow. Here it joins a tight fitting cuff of the plaid, over which is an extra cuff of velvet.

Around the waist is a green velvet belt, which slips in and out through the jacket and is fastened with a Roman gold buckle.

But the jacket most in favor just now is the "Garcon de Cafe," which is made either of velvet, silk or woolen material. It is extremely short at the back and remains widely open in front, terminating in a slight point on each side; deep revers are turned back over the points all the way down from the neck. The sleeves are full to the elbow, thence tapering down to the wrists. This jacket is worn with a full chemisette of cashmere or foulard and with a wide sash draped round the waist. It may be either of the same material as the skirt or of a plain color.

HATS AND BONNETS.

WHAT IS WORN, SIMPLE, DAINTY AND EXTRAVAGANT.

In Lace Straw Dept to Suit Pretty Faces, Tip Tilted, Birds, Jewels, Fads, Everything Is Used to Add to the Beauty of Women.

There is a delightful airiness and grace about the black lace hats which are to be worn during the coming season. They are bent by the hand into shapes most becoming to the wearer, so that no two brims are exactly alike. Here is a pretty trifle of black chantilly lace in fan shape. It is adorned with a Prince of Wales plume in dark purple.

A LACE CAPOTE.

Bonnets of the poke and "begum" species will most assuredly be worn in Paris during the coming season, but the smartest are very tiny—smaller than they ever were before. Those good ladies who in the last epidemic of miniature headgear wore just a velvet bow for economy's sake need not plume themselves, however, on these good times coming again. The bonnets are to be small indeed, but they will also be costly and exceedingly perishable. The latest trimming consists of fans of lisse, blond or silken tulle stiffened and plaited. These are flecked over in jeweling of all sorts of colors—amethyst, turquoise, emerald, diamond, ruby, garnet—in every possible shade and color. As a rule this bright and shimmering powdering is of the same hue as the lisse, though when that is black, white or cream color, turquoise, jet, amethyst or emerald jeweling makes excellent effects. The fans are arranged sticking outward in somewhat Japanese fashion, and the crowns of the bonnets are made of fancy chips and sometimes bound with velvet. The newest hat trimming consists of donkey ears of velvet, usually arranged in natural fashion, one at each side. Some women consider it less personal to call them hare ears.

The great elegantes in Paris, London and Vienna are already going in for bonnets incrusted with precious stones, and Countess Potocka appeared a few evenings ago at a concert wearing a very tiny "begum" or medieval "coiffe" made of cloth of silver trimmed with large pink pearls and literally covered with a design executed in diamonds, pink rubies and turquoises. It was of course very lovely, but unfortunately there are few women who can afford to indulge in such a glittering and dazzling extravagance. Another very chic but also costly fantaisie of the moment is the so called "humming bird" bonnet. It is made entirely of the breast feathers of these delightful little creatures and is edged with a treble row of green wings across the front.

Another jaunty style is shown in fi-hatteridon, being of neapolitan straw faced with velvet and trimmed with the donkey-ears so much used of the same. The finishing is in bending and tip tilting it to suit the face.

Salad Set of Doilies.

A set of doilies for salad consists of one large mat for the bowl and two small ones for the oil and vinegar cruet. They are made of fine grass linen and are circular in shape. The design embroidered upon them is of olives and olive leaves. Another appropriate design for a salad set is of nasturtiums in natural colors, and now that chrysanthemums are among the salad vegetables they may form a fitting adornment.

What Water Will Do.

The source of many disorders, which might in most instances be prevented if proper attention were paid to ordinary measures of precaution, is constipation. Irregularity in eating and exercising is the most common cause of this trouble. If persons occasionally troubled with headache, indigestion and other minor complaints would remove the cause, the effect would soon pass away. What a headache results from constipation, a glass of cold water taken just after rising will do more toward removing the trouble than the local application of preparations to the head. Opinion is divided as to the merits of the use of hot or cold water for this purpose, but cold water (not ice water) is here recommended because it is not so apt to produce nausea.

Our Umbrella.

A stylish umbrella is of brown silk with a pointed handle of ivory, through which a silver ring has been inserted. A propos of spring umbrellas, these are several inches smaller than the winter ones and are seldom seen in simple black, a combination of navy blue and black being the favorite colors

HIS SPRING HAT.

He Was a Trifle Sensitive About the Shape of His Head.

Williams bought a spring hat the other day. He is naturally one of the brightest and most cheerful men in New York city, but from the day that he put on that hat he wore a melancholy look which would have given hope to a man who has had a case for property damage against the elevated road for 13 years. He shunned all his friends; he never smiled; he refused to go to the theater; the World's fair had no charm for him—he was a gloomy, sour faced, hopeless, desperate looking man.

A week after he bought his spring hat he met Jones. Jones is always telling about things which have happened to him. Begin to tell him about a ride you took, and he will give you an account of his journey across the plains on horseback. Let him know about your having bought a house and he will explain about his famous real estate speculation in the dim past. Well, this trick of Jones undoubtedly saved Williams' life.

"Say, Williams, what's got into your hat, too," said Jones. "How do you like the new style?"

"Oh, I like the style well enough," answered Williams in a gloomy voice.

"Say," said Jones, speaking of buying new hats, did you ever notice how those machines that fasteners use to get your size and so show up your head?"

"What has that to do with the new style?" said Williams sharply.

"Oh, nothing, only"——

"It looks as if spring were about ready to come in earnest, doesn't it?" asked Williams.

"Yes, but about the shape of one's head"——

"It's been about as quean a spring as I have known," Williams went on.

"Now," said Jones, "when they put that machine on your head"——

"I'll be glad when summer gets here," Williams insisted.

"Have you tried those machines on"——

But Williams was determined to discuss the weather.

"I can't get too warm for me," he said energetically.

"See here, Williams," said Jones, getting red in the face, "why in the world do you insist on talking about the weather? I want to tell you about those head measuring machines."

"Say, Jones," said Williams desperately, "let's go to the theater tonight. Let's go and get luncheon. Let's take a walk. Let's do anything."

"Great Scott, man!" cried Jones. "What are you so excited about? I just want to tell you about"——

"See here, Jones," said Williams sternly, "I don't want to hear another word about your infernal machine. I'm not going to listen to you. I won't do it," he said, shutting his teeth.

"And I'm going to tell it to you," said Jones, getting mad enough to fight, "if I die for it. What I want to say is this. When I looked at the shape of my head the other day, it was something awful—something awful, I say. Yes, sir," he continued, looking earnestly at Williams, who had unconsciously taken off his hat while he held one hand in a frightened way to his head. "Yes, sir, my head looked like an idiot's. That's what it looked like.

"'Cheese's ghost!' I said to the man, 'you don't mean to say my head is shaped like that!'

"'Why, no,' he said, 'this machine doesn't really show the shape of your head; it only brings out certain points to help us fit you.'"

Williams looked dazed with surprise.

"'You say, you ought to have seen the kind of a head that thing gave me. Now'——

"'Look here, Jones,' cried Williams Joyfully, gaining his speech again, "come and have a drink. Come and have a bottle—come and have anything. Oh man, you've taken a terrible load off my mind. I looked at the shape of my head when I bought this hat. It was the first time I'd ever looked at that outline. Well, it nearly stopped my heart. From head to toe I never saw anything like it. Talk about your head! Mine looked like a flounder with a broken back and two twists in it. There were bumps and curls and holes and patches in it. I knew that if I had a head like that I was in danger of becoming an idiot any minute. There was no use to try and get around it. I almost made up my mind that I was an idiot already. And now, come and have a drink, old man. That's a load off my mind."—New York Tribune.

The Courtesy She Expected.

"When I was down in North Carolina last," remarked the old drummer, "I met a mountaineer beauty in Asheville for a day's sightseeing. She was tall and angular, and her calico dress and limp sunbonnet of the same material clung to her as if they had no other support in the wide world. Her face was freckled. I met her in the railroad station waiting for a train, and she spotted me on sight.

"'Ain't you a drummer?' she inquired.

"'I'm a traveling salesman,' I replied. 'What will you have?'

"'I want to know about my train, an ther ain't nobody round that seems to know anything. Drummers know it all,' she laughed.

"I told her what she wanted to know, and then she branched off.

"'I was over thar in the town's side uv the deepot awhile ago,' she said, 'lookin round, and when I went in ther every man was smokin, and the way they treated me was real hawdlin.'

"'You didn't expect them so stop smoking when you came in, did you?' I asked. 'That's their waiting room, you know, and they have the right to smoke.'

"She tapped the floor with the toe of her big calfskin shoe for a moment.

"'But they might have been polite,' she contended weakly.

"'What did you want them to do?'

"'Well, some uv 'em,' and here she pouted, 'might 'a' axed me to smoke.'

Then I offered her my cigar case, and she took all I had, and I smiled."—Detroit Free Press.

THE TRAMMELS OF SOCIETY.

Mrs. Brown-Jones, a society leader.
Mr. Jones, her husband.
Mrs. Brown-Jones—Will you give me your undivided attention, please?
Mr. Jones (gallantly)—Any mathematical process that might affect my attention when you are speaking, my dear, would be only multiplication.
Mrs. Brown-Jones—Please don't be silly. It's a question of society.
Mr. Jones (faintly)—Silliness!
Mrs. Brown-Jones—No, no. Here we have an invitation from the Batchby-Pokedyes, and one from the Hicks-Parkers, both for dinner.
Mr. Jones—Are we going to have the invitations for dinner?
Mrs. Brown-Jones (ignoring the remark)—Now, I don't know which to accept.
Mr. Jones—So thoughtful in you to ask me. I say neither.
Mrs. Brown-Jones—But we must go.
Mr. Jones—A dictum of society, ha! They accept both.
Mrs. Brown-Jones (wearily)—How can we when they're both for Wednesday night?
Mr. Jones (triumphantly)—Why, you go to one, and I'll go to the other.
Mrs. Brown-Jones—Impossible!
Mr. Jones (calmly)—Not at all. We can demonstrate.
Mrs. Brown-Jones—We can demonstrate nothing. Society is not given to demonstrations. I want to ask you to which shall we accept?
Mr. Jones—Toss up a penny—heads, the What-you-call-'em's; tails, the Hickses.
Mrs. Brown-Jones—The Hicks-Parkers—the legislature gave them the right to use the hyphen.
Mr. Jones—Very kind in the legislature, I must say. What did it cost?
Mrs. Brown-Jones—Society accepts, but never questions. Now——
Mr. Jones—Another dictum. I should advise, then, that we accept, as suggested before. And as there are no questions asked, we can stay at home.
Mrs. Brown-Jones (severely)—You would try a saint.
Mr. Jones—Never, my dear, never. They wouldn't accept me on the jury if a saint was to be tried.
Mrs. Brown-Jones (sadly)—Have you an answer?
Mr. Jones—Certainly. Which of the two will give a better dinner? By the way, is the hyphen in the What-you-call-'em's legally sanctioned? We'd better dine with the Hicks, so as to be on the safe side.
Mrs. Brown-Jones (ignoring the latter part of the remark)—We do not accept invitations with a view to——
Mr. Jones—Gastronomic attractions!
Mrs. Brown-Jones—With a view to the cuisine.
Mr. Jones—What then? Family? Wealth? Mrs. Brown-Jones—We consider society.
Mr. Jones—But society doesn't consider, my love. It's a flock of geese—sheep.
Mrs. Brown-Jones (reflectively)—I think we'd meet more people at the Batchby-Pokedyes.
Mr. Jones—Then there might be less to eat. Let's go to the others.
Mrs. Brown-Jones—But we are more in fashion to the Hicks-Parkers.
Mr. Jones—(in what way, my love? I've never borrowed a dollar from them.
Mrs. Brown-Jones (tearfully)—Why do you set so foolish?
Mr. Jones (gravely)—Let me see the invitations. [Reads them and smiles.] Why, my charming wife, do you consult me? [Actually grins.] One is for Wednesday, the 14th, and the other for Wednesday, the 21st.

Mrs. Brown-Jones (penitently)—Don't you see how easy it is for you to answer—If you try!—Harper's Bazar.

HOW TO BE HAPPY THOUGH FAT.

A Medicine That Solves the Problem of Girth If You Follow Directions.

An enormous man waddled into a drug store and tried to get up a row with the proprietor. He had taken some fatness drops, as they were called, and although they were warranted to reduce his weight 30 per cent. within a short period he had grown stouter and stouter.

"Just paid a nickel to have myself weighed," he began, "and"——

"That was a swindle," interrupted the drug man condescendingly. "The very best machines only cost a penny these days."

The fat man glared viciously. "That's neither here nor there," he retorted. "It isn't a question of how much I paid. The question for debate is, Why did you sell me drops to reduce my weight that don't reduce it?"

"I suppose you haven't followed the directions on the bottle," put in the druggist.

"Directions on the bottle be blowed! I simply took the draft three times a day, as you said."

It was a superior smile that the agent for fatness drops emitted. "Why, of course you get fatter," he said. "There are certain rules to be observed, and unless you observe them the medicine won't work at all."

Then he took up a pamphlet telling all about fatness drops.

"Now, here, in the first place," he remarked, "it says that all who want to be benefited by the drops must run ten miles at least before breakfast every morning. Have you done that, sir?"

"I have not," the fat man confessed, beginning to look confused.

"Now, here on page 9," the agent proceeded, "it says that the patient who takes the medicine must not eat more than a small slice of toast for the first meal of the day nor drink anything but one cup of weak tea. I suppose you observed that rule, didn't you? It is highly important."

Was to be tried. I suppose you observed that rule, didn't you? It is highly important."

Mrs. Brown-Jones (ignoring the latter part of the remark)—We do not accept invitations with a view to——

Mr. Jones—Gastronomic attractions!

Mrs. Brown-Jones—With a view to the cuisine.

Mr. Jones—What then? Family? Wealth?

Disconcerted.

Patrick and Michael went out hunting one rainy day—it was the only day that they could get off. All went well with them until, when they were several miles from home, they discovered that neither one had brought a cartridge, and that not a shot could be fired.

"Begorra," said Pat cheerfully, "what's that to do with the huntin'? Is the want of a cartridge any raysun to prevent a man from huntin'?"

"None at all," said Michael.

So they continued to hunt. By and by a rabbit started up close to Pat, and then came to a stop, curiously watching the hunters. Pat instantly brought his gun to his shoulder.

"The gossoon that ye sir!" exclaimed Mike. "What ye shoot him without a cartridge?"

The rabbit hopped away.

"What's that?" Pat angrily, "there ye go, spittin the sport wid yer blatherin tongue!"

"Patrick! An yer gun was not loaded!"

"Sure, ye spalpeen. But the rabbit would niver 'a' known it if ye'd 'a' kild yer blather!"—Youth's Companion.

FIRE BUGS AT WORK.

ANOTHER INCENDIARY FIRE AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

John G. Cook's Barn Burned—Firemen Work Hard and Save Several Adjoining Buildings — Wallace Again Arrested.

There was another incendiary fire at Scotch Plains last night. A barn belonging to John G. Cook was burned to the ground. The fire was discovered by George Johnson who gave the alarm.

The firemen responded and did nobly. The burning building was too far gone to be saved but the firemen worked hard and succeeded in saving Collin's barn also Elliott's blacksmith shop, and several other buildings located close by.

Mr. Cook succeeded in getting out his horses and wagons, but some hay and straw were consumed.

Blacksmith Elliott, fearing his building would be consumed, took his horse out and tied it to a tree. The animal became so frightened that it reared and getting tangled in the rope, fell and broke its neck.

Lawrence Wallace, who was accused of being the fire bug and who was released under bonds was arrested and brought to this city and placed in the lockup about two o'clock this morning.

Dr. Wescott, chief of the Scotch Plains Fire Department, made a complaint against Wallace, this morning, before Justice Nash, charging him with being a fire bug and disorderly, and hindering the firemen last night. Wallace will be given a hearing to-morrow morning at ten o'clock. A peace warrant was also issued against Wallace on complaint of Special Officer Hand, who says Wallace threatened to kill him.

BREVITIES.

A New Store "The Leader."

Mr. M. Goldman, until recently a New York merchant, has located in Plainfield, and opened a "Ladies and gentlemen's furnishings" store at 32 West Front street. He has given it an original name "The Leader" and says he will have not only the newest and best goods but will sell them at the lowest market prices. See adv.

Squeezed Between Bumpers.

Richard Savage, a brakeman on the Central Railroad was squeezed between two freight cars at Cranford yesterday morning, and one of his legs injured. He was taken to the Elizabeth Hospital. His wound was dressed, and Savage went to his home, 606 Houston street, Philadelphia.

A SOCIAL AND ENTERTAINMENT.

The Pink Ribbon Society Entertains its Friends.

The Pink Ribbon Society held its last social of the season at the East Third street Mission last evening. A large number of the society's friends gathered to enjoy the pleasing program, which was as follows: Cornet solo, W. Frazee; recitation, Miss Etta Raybert.; vocal solo, Miss Sarah Manning; piano solo, Miss Ida Randolph; vocal solo, Miss Hattie Manning; cornet solo, W. Frazee; vocal solo, George F. Randolph; duet, the Misses Manning, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Buckley; duet, zither and banjo, Mr. Van Epe and Master Van Epe. After refreshments, the programme concluded with a recitation, by Miss Etta Raybert; duet, the Misses Manning; piano solo, Miss Ida Randolph; solo, Geo. F. Randolph; piano solo, Miss Ida Randolph.

The East Third street mission is growing rapidly, and in order to accommodate members a partition is to be torn down in their meeting house which will make the two rooms into one.

As a result of the meeting held last Sunday night, conducted by Miss Spangenberg, a society is to be formed to be known as the Christian Endeavor Workers.

PERSONAL.

A little daughter arrived at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Hedges of Broadway last night.

Miss Florence Huntington of Franklin place entertained a few friends yesterday afternoon.

Miss Georgie Howell died at her home on West Front street, yesterday, after a lingering illness from consumption.

Charles Moffet of Newark, a nephew of Constable Moffett of this city, was among the guests of Winfield Scott Post last night.

William Sullivan and Ross Connors are to be married to-morrow night at the home of the bride's parents on Third street.

It is said that Rev. Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut and family will soon remove to New York from their present home on East Fifth street.

Mr. B. A. Starr, Jr., of Franklin place has rented Mr. Hagaman's house, corner of Park place and Mercer avenue, and will take possession May 1st.

Dr. Chauncey B. Ripley of Westfield has been appointed a member of the Advisory Council of the World's Congress Auxiliary on Farm Culture and Cereal Industry.

Miss Katie, the eldest daughter of Mr. G. Satterlin of Greenbrook road, who was recently stricken with scarlet fever, has now fully recovered and the quarantine has been removed from the house by the Board of Health.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Van Emburgh are visiting old friends, the Rev. Dr. Pryor and wife, in Kearney. On Friday while crossing the bridge over the river from Newark, Mrs. Van Emburgh tripped over the stringpiece on the bridge and crushed the ligaments at the knee of the left leg. A doctor was called, and the sufferer is doing as well as can be expected.

Contesting His Father's Will.

On behalf of John R. Maynard, of Boston, Mass., one of the sons of the late James Maynard, who died in this city recently, Counsellor Geo. W. DeMeza of this city has filed a notice of appeal from the decree of the Surrogate of Union county, admitting to probate what purports to be the last will of the said James Maynard. The case will now be tried on appeal before the Orphans' Court at the next term. Among the grounds of appeal are the facts that his father was in the last stages of pneumonia when the document said to be his will, was executed, and that his eldest son, Edward F., used undue influence and induced his father to leave the bulk of his property to him.

A Chance to Help the Poor.

It has been a hard Winter, as everybody knows, even for those in comfortable homes. How much harder has it been for the poor.

The friends of the Plainfield Relief Association have realized the situation and, up to this time, have contributed generously. But the association's funds are now exhausted, while there are some persons who yet need and will continue to need help until more settled weather.

Any one willing to aid in the work of this charity may send contributions to the treasurer,

MRS. H. P. REYNOLDS,
71 Washington avenue, North Plainfield.

Spring Meeting of King's Daughters.

The Spring meeting of the "Plainfield City Union of King's Daughters" will be held in the Park avenue Baptist church parlors, Friday, April 28th, at three o'clock p. m. All members of the order, even if not belonging to a circle, are most cordially invited to be present.

The Union was organized a year ago for the purpose of bringing together the different circles of King's Daughters, so as to avoid the repeating of work by the several circles. The first annual election of officers will also take place.

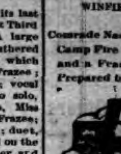
Shot a Young Bald Headed Eagle.

"Lew" Wyckoff, a resident of North Plainfield, yesterday shot what he said was a young bald headed eagle. From tip to tip of its wings measured five feet two inches. Mr. Wyckoff will have the bird stuffed and mounted.

VISITING VETERANS.

JAS. A. GARFIELD POST GUESTS OF WINFIELD SCOTT POST.

Comrade Nash Mastered in—An Open Camp Fire in the G. A. R. Rooms, and a Feast in the Rooms Below Prepared by the Ladies.



DELEGATION composed of Commander Atwood and Comrades Westphal, Mattox and Hustington of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. met the members of James A. Garfield Post, No. 4, of Newark last evening, as they alighted at the North avenue depot from a special car attached to the 8.05 train. The post was accompanied by its drum corps, which furnished the music as the veterans marched to the G. A. R. Hall on East Front street.

After the regular business had been transacted Comrade Vincent W. Nash was "mustered in."

An open camp fire was then held and the ladies of the Relief Corps invited in.

Speeches and recitations were then in order and a pleasant entertainment enjoyed. Among those who made speeches were Major Morris, the Commander of James A. Garfield Post, Comrade Russell and Chaplain Cadmus of the same post.

Major Morris' address was exceedingly interesting. He spoke of the historic Washington Rock, of Somerset county, and of the close alliance between the counties of Essex and Somerset during the war, there being no Union country at that time. Garfield Post, he said, had an auxiliary of 160 ladies, and they would have accompanied the Post, but for the fact that they had not received the invitation in time. He also spoke of the hard trials women had suffered during the war, when their husbands and sons were torn from them and of the grief and worriment they had endured.

Chaplain Cadmus was also an interesting speaker. He told among other things, of a woman at Bridgeport who took her son to the officer in charge and said she wished to have him enlisted in the army, as her husband and two other sons were in the fight, she had decided to let the three go to the front. They were not to be killed, not one of them being left to comfort the grief stricken mother. This, he said, was the case of a family, and where women were made to suffer by the war.

After more speechmaking and recitations they were all invited to the room below where the ladies had prepared a feast.

There were more speeches here and the festivities had to be brought to a close as invitations had to take 11.28 train home. Before leaving, however, a cordial invitation was extended to Winfield Scott Post, by the visiting veterans, to meet with them at their rooms in Newark.

The Woman's Relief Corps forms an important part in the Grand Army camp fires, for they always prepare a bountiful, palatable repast, but last night's supper might be justly termed a feast, for about 125 people were served with eatables and still there was food to spare.

Among the ladies to whom the credit belongs of making the affair one long to be remembered were Mrs. Morse, Mrs. Westphal, Mrs. Brewster, Mrs. McVoy, Mrs. Applegate, Mrs. Dobbins, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Summers, Mrs. Smalley, Mrs. Brokaw, Mrs. Keddie, Mrs. Mattox, Mrs. Corwin, Mrs. Howlett, Mrs. Cortell, Mrs. Stephens, Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Huntington.

The Drum Corps Dance.

About fifty couple assembled at Hulett's hall, on West Front street, last evening, to enjoy the third and last dance of the series, given by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps. Dancing was commenced at nine o'clock and continued until about four o'clock this morning, with an intermission of an hour from twelve to one o'clock for supper. It was one of the most successful dances the Corps has given and the guests expressed themselves as delighted with the evening's entertainment and congratulated the young men of the Corps for the excellent manner in which the affair was conducted.

The committee to whom the success of the dance is due consisted of H. G. Adams, chairman; A. Wilson, W. Force, T. A. Kornbaki and S. G. Terry. Prof. O'Reilly furnished the music.

The Olde Folks Concert.

An Olde Folke Concert was given in Vincent chapel last evening.

Financially it was a success.

The proceeds are to be used in church work.

The chorus had but one rehearsal, and none at all in one piece. The costumes were unique.

The solos, recitations and a duet were warmly received.

Miss Tealle, Miss Lockey and Miss Pond recited. Mr. Will Holmes and Master Davitt sang several solos and Miss Davis and Mr. Bond sang a duet.

Prof. W. R. MacClymont presided in his usual masterly way at the piano and Mr. Bond wielded the baton.

Scale Keys and a Bicycle.

Edward Love reported to Chief Grant this morning that his father's store, corner North avenue and Peace street, had been broken into early this morning, and that a Premier bicycle had been stolen. Entrance was effected through the cellar. All the keys in the building were also taken from the rack. One of Mr. Love's employes is suspected of the theft as he left his home to attend work and did not put in an appearance at the store.

SURELY UNAPPROACHABLE.

The Greatest Show on Earth Without a Doubt, and Truly Incomparable.

MANY prominent attractions are this year presented by Barnum & Bailey, all of which will be seen in this city on Wednesday, May 3d. From the list, the wonder is how it can all be shown for the ridiculously small price of admission.

There are the largest tents ever manufactured. Of this fact, claimed by so many, one has only to see them to be convinced. Within the big tent are three rings, two elevated stages, a vertical-cobweb of aerial apparatus, a tremendous racing track, and the stage 420 feet long for the ballet in the spectacle of Columbus and the Discovery of America, besides comfortable seats for 12,000 persons. There are in all twelve tents, which in linear feet would cover nearly a mile, and which occupy fully two acres of ground. Every one of these tents are water proof, and the only ones rendered impervious to rain now in existence, and no other show has any like them.

There are elephant and menagerie tents, museum tents, horse tents for 400 fine bred horses, tents for the dressing room, side-show, blacksmiths, barbers, dining rooms, and other necessities.

Then two herds of elephants all trained to perform the cleverest tricks.

There are two menageries containing wild and trained beasts of the finest and most expensive species.

There are positively three big circus rings for the display of the champion equestrians.

There are two elevated stages for the grand exhibition of Olympian sports.

There is a tremendous racing track for the hippodrome contests and gladiatorial feats.

There are innumerable and daring aerialists, whose performances in midair are wonderful.

There are tumblers and leapers without numbers, whose somersaults and ground acts are a delightful surprise.

There are dashing races by male and female jockeys, and wild thundering chariot races by expert charioteers.

There are scores and scores of beautiful ballet girls, especially selected in the capitals of Europe for the great spectacle.

There are fully 1,300 people employed, all of whom are to be seen in the rings at once in the grand spectacle of Columbus.

There are 100 circus performers who are seen in as many novel and intrepid acts.

There are expert jockeys and brawny hippodrome riders.

There are the finest champion horseback equestrians.

There are the champion lady riders of the world.

There are beautiful magic illusions whose like has never been seen, and which proves a charming feature to every one.

There is the finest railroad equipment ever seen.

There is enough elegant scenery to cover two acres of ground, and worth $250,000.

There are fully 5,000 elegant costumes, worth at least $200,000.

There is the Roman street parade and the longest.

There are 100 cages, chariots, band wagons, and other four-wheeled wonders.

There are over twenty celebrated clowns.

There are hosts upon hosts of trained animal clowns.

There are forty calcium lights.

There are five advertising cars.

There are the cheapest excursion rates from everywhere.

Milliken—Plummer.

At the Madison avenue Baptist church, New York, yesterday afternoon at four o'clock Miss Alice Blackington Plummer, eldest daughter of Mr. John F. Plummer, formerly of Netherwood, was married to Mr. Charles Stevens Milliken, a son of Mr. David Milliken, a New York banker. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and lilies. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry M. Saylor, pastor of the church, the Rev. W. H. P. Faunce, pastor of the Fifth avenue Baptist church, pronounced the benediction. The bride wore a gown of white satin made with full skirts and ruffled past the way down into the waist. The bridesmaids, Miss Edith Plummer, sister of the bride, and Miss Adele Spaulding, a niece of the bride, two young girls not yet out in society, Miss Annie Lamont, Miss Carrie Ewell were all dressed alike, in white chiffon and silk with Gainsborough hats. The maid of honor, Miss Kalbfleisch, wore a gown of similar fashion. Mr. David Milliken, a brother of the groom, was the best-man. The ushers were Messrs. Cyril Quard, of London, England; George F. Milliken, a brother of the groom; Henry W. Hayden, John F. Plummer, Jr., and Franklin Plummer, brothers of the bride, and J. Howard Ford. A very small reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, No. 65 East Fifty-third street.

In Honor of Ericsson.

NEW YORK, April 26. (Special)—The Swedish flag is flying over the City Hall to-day in honor of the unveiling of the statue of John Ericsson. The various departments of the city government are open for business to-day, but to-morrow they will be closed, the day being a legal holiday. On Friday there will be little public business done on account of the above parade.

Fear It is Cholera.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 26, (Special.)—Mrs. Margaret Goodwin, of Park avenue, this city, died yesterday, and her husband and three children are violently ill. Several of the attendants upon the afflicted family have been prostrated, and there is fear that cholera is the cause.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.

A District Gathering of Teachers and Ministers at Springfield.

Fifteen Sunday-schools of Essex and Union counties were represented at the district convention held in the First Presbyterian church at Springfield Monday afternoon and evening. The afternoon session was begun soon after three o'clock by the presiding officer, Rev. E. M. Cobb, of Elizabeth.

After the opening exercises Rev. E. M. Ferguson, secretary of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association, delivered an address on "The Teacher's Opportunity." The speaker illustrated the influence teachers have with their pupils, and suggested plans for keeping children interested in the study of the Bible.

When R. W. Woodward, superintendent of the Third Presbyterian church Sunday-school of Elizabeth, concluded his address on "Lesson Preparation," Miss Juliette Dimock, of the Central Baptist church, Elizabeth, delivered an address on "The Sand Map in the Infant Class." A large sand map was placed in front of the pulpit. The map illustrated the Holy Land, and Miss Dimock explained the history of each city or town, and the Biblical events which occurred there. Then questions for the State secretary to answer were prepared, and the session adjourned.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

[Contributed.]

Bishop John H. Vincent, than whom none is better known in religious and literary circles, has the following to say of our far-reaching organization and its leader: "I am a hearty believer in the W. C. T. U. I do not indorse every move it has made nor everything said by all its representatives, but there are spots on the sun. Possibly where I differ from some of the leaders of the W. C. T. U. I may be right and am wrong. As for the work as a whole accomplished by the union, it is beyond praise. I believe in it and advocate it. As for its president, Miss Willard, I regard her as the best illustration of the famous thirteenth chapter of Paul's first letter to the Corinthians I ever knew. I am a prohibitionist and a Prohibitionist, and have been both for years."

We are glad to publish the above from this noted leader of Christian workers, because honest praise from such a source has its attendant inspiration.—Union Signal, April 20th.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is important to note that scarcely any of the physicians or nurses who attend cholera cases have the disease. Of the staff of doctors and nurses in the public health department of Hamburg the statement was made recently that not one had taken cholera. In the same city hundreds of men are employed night and day conveying cholera patients to hospitals and removing infected clothing, handling it constantly, yet none of these have been attacked. Even among more than 250 gravediggers in the Ohlsdorf cemetery, where the cholera corpses are buried, only one took the disease, being a smaller proportion of the men than would have been attacked had they been living the ordinary life and taken their risks. The case of the doctors and nurses may perhaps be explained by the well known fact that persons of more than ordinary intellect and intelligence who are engaged in some work that occupies the mind are not so apt to become victims of an epidemic disease as other persons are. But the ambulance drivers and grave diggers are common people, except that they must be unusually brave to stick at such seemingly dangerous occupations. Perhaps this very courage in presence of danger is what keeps them safe from the plague. While persons thus constantly exposed seem exempt from the contagion, on the other hand the disease occasionally breaks out in its most malignant form in quarters entirely isolated and far removed from infected neighborhoods. The explanation of these facts has never been found.

State Care of the Insane.

Under the new law passed in New York the care of insane persons is taken entirely out of the hands of county authorities and turned over to the state. A state tax of one-third of a mill was levied for this purpose. It will yield $1,350,000. New York and Kings counties, in which are situated the cities of New York and Brooklyn, choose to remain outside of the combine and provide for their own insane. These counties, however, contribute their share of the state tax.

Insane patients in New York are to be turned over to the state hospitals, where they will be duly cared for by superintendents appointed by the state. In connection with them is a state commission of lunacy, to whom the superintendents are responsible. Each month the superintendents meet the commissioners for a conference.

Governor Flower, first class financier that he is, is particularly impressed with the favorable economic aspects of the new law. At his suggestion a provision was incorporated in the bill requiring that all supplies to be purchased for the asylums should be vised monthly in advance by the state commission. This he believes will place the buying of supplies upon a strict business like and economical basis and result in great saving to the counties over the former method.

Sir Humphry Davy, who diedin 1829, really discovered the arc method of electric lighting practically as it is used today. He describes how if two pieces of charcoal are placed near together and an electrical current is brought to bear on them there will be produced "a most brilliant ascending arch of light." But, like so many other discoveries of vast commercial importance, the production of this brilliant arc light remained only an interesting scientific experiment. Edison made the experiment commercially valuable, and Edison is as great a man as Sir Humphry Davy. If that renowned scientist can now look down upon some of our illuminated cities at night, how angry he must feel at himself for the chance he missed!

Some of the legislatures have been lately considering the feasibility of repealing the laws making it a criminal offense to conduct prizefighting exhibitions within the borders of the state. To legislators in favor of such repeal we commend the following item from a current news dispatch. "George Goodrich a colored prizefighter was instantly killed in the exhibition ring Goodrich slipped upon the bloody stage and fell striking upon the neck dying immediately." Is not that an edifying news item for the Sunday papers in a civilized Christian country?

The American School of Archeology that is maintained by voluntary subscriptions at Athens fully justifies its existence and does honor to the United States. Its students and professors are now making explorations at the temple of Hera, near Mycenæ. They have lately made a rich find in unearthing the foundations of an ancient temple which Greek historians say was burned 423 years before Christ. The work of excavation is performed by 200 men in the employ of the American School of Archæology.

The policemen about the presidential mansion will hereafter wear their uniforms when on duty. But there ought to be a special White House uniform of some neat and tasteful design. Then visitors would not feel quite so much as if they were under arrest.

What's the matter with Philadelphia? It is getting as wicked as New York and Chicago. The mayor in his annual report says the police force of Philadelphia is totally inadequate.

A NAVAL PAGEANT

The Warships Pass Into North River.

GREETED BY LARGE CROWDS

New York Noisily Receives the Formidable Fleet.

The Boom of Cannon and the Music of Military Bands Now Common In New York Waters—Story of the Arrival of the War Vessels and How They Anchored in Gravesend Bay—The Unveiling of the Ericsson Monument at the Battery.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The fleet of warships which arrived yesterday in the lower bay and which swung at anchor there all last night got under way again this morning and moved up into the North river to take their positions for tomorrow's review. At sunrise there was a deafening boom of cannon from the three dozen formidable looking vessels. This was followed before the smoke had cleared away by a burst of music from the military bands on the various ships. Gravesend bay was alive with small craft even at that early hour.

The fleet tripped anchor shortly after 9 o'clock. Leading the way in were two police patrol boats, which cleared the way. The ships moved on in two regular columns, with the Philadelphia at the head of the right hand line. Behind the Philadelphia came the foreign war vessels. This gave an opportunity for the crowds which thronged the wharves to get a close view of the visitors.

A sight well worth seeing it was, too, for a grander naval pageant has never been seen in American waters.

In the city all streets seemed to lead to the water side. The booming of guns and the shrieks of the whistles echoed clear across Manhattan island and hastened the steps of the crowds that began moving toward the North river docks soon after breakfast.

The Ericsson Statue Unveiled.

At the Battery the crowd was immense. It was here that the dedication of the Ericsson monument took place. The exercises opened shortly after 10 o'clock and while the fleet was still swinging in on the Staten Island reach.

On a large grand stand facing the monument were the members of the Swedish diplomatic and consular corps, the mayor, the aldermen, Admiral Warden, who commanded the original Monitor, and many of the old crew.

There were also present 200 marines and blue jackets from the navy yard and the members of the 18 New York Swedish societies.

The ceremonies began with singing by the Swedish societies under the direction of Professor Josef Hagstrom. Prayer followed by the Rev. Maurits Stolp. Mr. Ashley W. Cole read the act of the legislature which authorized the erection of the statue, and Miss Ercilinda Ericsson unveiled the monument. As this was done the monitor Miantonomoh, which was anchored just off the battery, fired a national salute of 21 guns. Mr. Cole formally delivered the statue to the city, and President Paul Dana of the park board accepted it on behalf of the municipality. Then the Swedish societies sang "Hor Oss Sven" and Colonel W. C. Church delivered an oration. Miss Anna Wallberg read an ode, and the ceremonies ended with the singing of "Vartland" and "Hail Columbia."

The Arrival of the Fleet.

QUARANTINE, N. Y., April 26.—Promptly on time, with every prearranged detail carried out with marvelous exactness, the combined naval squadrons of the old and new world took possession of the lower bay of New York harbor. Shortly before 1 o'clock the lookout in the "crow's nest" of the vicious looking double turreted monitor Miantonomoh, which was lying anchored midway between Sandy Hook point and the Narrows, signaled the fleet in sight. The fleet came moving along at the rate of fully 10 knots an hour in double column, perfect alignment, distances accurately marked 250 yards between each ship, six hundred yards between each squadron.

Entirely and majestic sight. The big white flagship of Admiral Gherardi, the Philadelphia, headed the port column, the huge black British cruiser Blake, Admiral Hopkins' flagship, led the starboard column, all according to the programme, the other vessels following in regular order. On the port side the flagship Newark, Admiral Benham, followed by the Atlanta, San Francisco, Bancroft, Bennington and Baltimore, then the flagship Chicago, Admiral Walker, followed by the Yorktown, Charleston, Vesuvius and Concord; after them and bringing up the rear of the column the Dutch warship Van Speyk and the German cruisers Kaiserin Augusta and Seeadler. The Blake was followed on the starboard column by the other vessels of the British squadron the Australia, Magicienne and Tartar and by the Russian vessels General Admiral and Rynda.

The belated flagship of the Russian squadron, the Dimitri Donskoi, with the Russian admiral, Kossakoff, on board, awaited them at anchor off quarantine. Next came the Italian vessels Etna and Bausan and the Brazilian squadron Aquidaban, Tiradentes and Republica.

How They Came to Anchor.

As the Philadelphia in the lead neared the Sandy Hook lightship the fog whistle of the lightship gave a series of welcoming toots, but the big white flagship swung round in majestic silence, and crossing the line entering Gedney's channel at the pace at a good 10½ knots an hour, the Newark following close in her wake, and the Atlanta the regulation distance behind. Once the fleet passed the Philadelphia signaled the fleet to proceed without reference to formation. The vessels of the starboard column slowed down and allowed all the American fleet to round the lightship first. Then the Blake and the other Britishers followed, safely crossing the bar before flood tide.

Then the big guns of the Miantonomoh boomed in welcome, but the Hook was passed in silence.

When Gravesend bay was reached the Philadelphia opened the salute by firing 21 guns in honor of the Russian admiral and his flagship, the Dimitri Donskoi, the band on board the Philadelphia playing the Russian national air. The Russian promptly acknowledged the salute. The Philadelphia fired one gun as a signal to come to anchor and the Newark caused the signal to the other vessels of the squadron, which leisurely move to. A fleet of guard boats under Captain Rogers kept the anchorage ground clear, while numerous yachts and tugboats and crowded excursion steamers circled round as close as permitted. The Philadelphia let go her anchor right off Craven shoal buoy and swung round with the strong flood tide with her nose pointing for Sandy Hook.

The Night Run at Sea.

The voyage of 100 miles from Port Monroe to the anchorage was a most delightful one. The predictions of rough weather, based on the northeasterly winds, which whipped into temperamental waves the usually placid waters of Hampton Roads failed to be realized. The ocean was as smooth as the typical mill pond, and the wind, though cold and fresh, did not at any time blow with force sufficient to cause discomfort.

No accident occurred and there was no hitch in the programme at any point, save in the inability of some of the foreign vessels to maintain even the moderate speed set by the Philadelphia. When the fleet sailed out of Hampton Roads it consisted of 27 ships formed in two columns. In this position and with the rich bottle green turpentine boat Cushing, looking like a cork under the port quarter of the Philadelphia the combined fleet passed out to sea.

The Brazilian vessels were the first to be left behind, and it was not long before only the topmast of their ships were visible.

Four Noble Columns.

The fleet sailed in double column till nearly Cape Henry, and extended on the bugle. Signals were then made for each column to double, and then four columns almost the ships settled down for an all night run.

The night scene at sea was brilliant. The numerous masthead and red and green lights of the men-of-war studded the sky as if an array of gigantic planets had been sprung into being, while shored and white electric lanterns of the Ardois signals twinkled and died like stars.

A couple of steam yachts that had followed the fleet ran along without apparent effort. No other ships were in sight. At a instance of occasion Admiral Gherardi had laid a course which carried the ships 10 or 15 miles further out than the usual course from the Capes to New York, and this afforded the fleet an opportunity for the freedom from interference on the part of passing vessels which the fleet experienced. At 9:30 o'clock in the morning the American and foreign vessels were signaled from the Philadelphia to fall into line similar to that which they presented on leaving Hampton Roads. This evolution was accomplished most creditably, not only by the United States vessels, which might have been expected to act well together, but also by the foreign men-of-war.

How They Looked at Rest.

It was fully 5 o'clock before the Brazilian fleet got into its place at the foot of the starboard column and the Miantonomoh got into her berth at the rear of the port column. Each national salute was answered by Forts Wadsworth and Hamilton in turn firing their 13-inch smooth bores and 8-inch rifle guns.

What a racket the saluting all made. The sharp boom of the cannons from ships and forts rolled over the water in a rumble that broke into a crash when the sound waves met, and made the air quiver. The noise seem like an extra sharp crash of thunder, such as often interrupts the steady roar of a hard thunder shower.

Not one of the vessels were at rest and the roar of the salutes had died away it was seen that the Americans had by far the best looking fleet, the John Barry, the Argentine Republic the fastest and most graceful vessel, the Nueve de Julio, the Brazilians the only battleship, the Aquidaban; the finest model, the Italian Etna, vessel in the fleet, the Kaiserin Augusta, and so the naval honors went. But in the magazines of all these vessels was a capacity for destruction which every one forgot, but which if let loose would make an excellent sideshow for that kind of choor Chapman's Amusement. Shortly before the Governor Flower started on her trip Dr. Jenkins received a telegram from Governor Flower expressing the latter's regret that he was unable to leave Albany in time to be present at the trial trip of his namesake.

The new craft is a beauty. She is 98 feet over all, 19½ feet beam and 9 feet depth of hold. Her engines are of the compound type. Her horse power has not yet been tested, but on her brief trip also she developed a speed of 18 knots. On a preliminary run a few days ago she covered the distance between Fire island and quarantine, 53 miles, in less than three hours.

The Governor Flower visited the Columbus caravels Santa Maria, Nina and Pinta, swinging at anchor in the North river, and afterward the fleet in the lower bay. There was only after some argument that Dr. Jenkins was allowed to go on board the flagship Philadelphia.

Dined Ambassador Runyon.

NEW YORK, April 26.—About 200 New Jersey men, irrespective of political affiliations, attended the farewell banquet tendered to Minister Runyon at Hotel Waldorf, previous to his leaving Saturday noon to be present at the trial trip of his namesake.

AT TOUCH OF A BUTTON.

The World's Fair Will Spring Into Throbbing Activity.

THE GIANT ENGINES FIRST TRIAL.

Steam Turned Into the Locations Which Is to Furnish Motion to Thousands of Wheels—Everything Ready For the Presence of the President's Touch.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Steam was for the first time turned into the receivers of the Corliss engine at the World's fair grounds that is to furnish the Niagarallis power which President Cleveland will next Monday press into activity at the touch of a button. The wheels of the giant machine revolved in a style that was declared faultless. Except for a few details the plans for the opening of the exposition are now settled, promising a simple but majestic spectacle.

The multitude of spectators passed on the square in front of the Administration building or looked on from the bridges of the lagoon swell see the president of the United States lay his thumb on a button. Instantly will arise a great roar in Machinery hall and the turrets of the great building will seem to tremble as the machinery begins to turn. Then from every flagstaff the banners of the nations will swing loose and stream out under the sky in scarlet, yellow and blue. The display of flags of the Manufactures building, magnificent as it was during the dedication last October, will, it is said, be paltry compared with the thousands that will be flung loose in response to the touch of Grover Cleveland's thumb.

At the Tower of the Horizon.

All winter the flag makers have been working on the bunting, and they have turned out millions of feet of colors which will be hung upon the staffs to await the signal.

The fountains in the basin will begin to spout and the sweeps of the roving girls in the Midway Plaisance will be seen for the first time lie in the water. Down at the end of the basin French's figure of the "Republic" is standing, now sheathed to a wooden shaft. Before Friday the sheathing will have been removed and drapery substituted for it. When the button is touched this drapery will part, and the "Republic" will stand forth serene and majestic. All this is to be done with one touch of the button. The work of making it possible is about the biggest development of electrical science that has been shown on the grounds. A perfect lace of wires was laid up to the stand in the afternoon and thence to the buildings, the fountains and the figure of the "Republic."

A salute of guns will be fired when the president reaches the grounds, and probably another salute will be fired when the machinery starts. Then Mr. Cleveland will go straight to Manufactures building and take his stand in the American section. Before him will be the commissioners of the foreign nations.

Governor Altgeld has issued a proclamation setting forth that the consideration of the industrial interests of the country at the exposition and the great event of which it is a commemorative and the further fact that it is located within the borders of Illinois, the opening day shall be a legal holiday within the limits of this commonwealth.

Mayor Harrison will emphasize the occasion with a similar official declaration applicable particularly to the city of Chicago.

The Sunday Opening Question.

Yesterday afternoon the World's Fair national commission assembled for the initial session of its final meeting. The Sunday opening question was the burning question before them, but the discussion or action was indulged in, the gathering being merely formal and adjournment being taken till today. It is not the intention of the commission to attempt to force a discussion of Sunday opening, but it is expected that the matter will come up in the form of a fresh resolution from the local directory and will be the subject of a heated debate. The matter of opening the fair evenings will also be called up.

The programme of ceremonies to be given at the opening of the Woman's building has been completed. The exercises will take place in Central Music hall next Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The opening prayer will be offered by Miss Ida Hultin, after which Miss Frances Elliott of London will give a dramatic overture. The addresses of the day will be made by Mrs. Potter Palmer, president of the board of lady managers. Addresses will also be made by Mrs. H. H. Bosch of Boston, Countess De Waragan of Spain, Countess Da Brazza of Italy, Mrs. Bedford Fenwick of England, Duchess of Aberdeen of Scotland, and Princess Schaschofsky of Russia. At the conclusion the hymn "America" will be sung.

Arabs Tribe In New York.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The British steamship Cynthiana arrived here with a tribe of Arabs numbering more than 200 on board. They have with them camels, dromedaries and horses and a large stock of weapons of warfare. They are to go to Chicago for the World's fair. All the horses are pure Arabians and trained in the tricks of eastern warfare, of which the Arabs will give many illustrations.

Thinks They Are In New York.

SIOUX CITY, April 26.—Superintendent of Prisons Austin Lathrop thinks that Roehl and Sharp are now with friends in New York and that it will be useless for the prison guards to continue the search through this part of the country unless some definite trace of them is discovered.

Evarts's Election Probable.

BOSTON, April 26.—Unofficial figures from all towns and cities in the Seventh congressional district indicate the election of Dr. William Everet, Democrat, by a plurality of 14 over Hon. William E. Barrett, Republican.

An Old Failure Recalled.

PROVIDENCE, April 26.—Receiver Greene of the Franklin institution for savings, which failed 20 years ago, has announced a final dividend. There were originally about 8,000 depositors, but a good many have died off.

Ship Lost, but Crew Saved.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 26.—The American ship Alaska is lying at the bottom of the ocean, off Trinidad, on the northern California coast. The captain and crew of 15 arrived here on the schooner Mahtenbon.

Rev. Mr. Williams Heartily Endorses Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We are pleased to present this from Rev. A. A. Williams, of the Silsbee street Christian Church, Lynn, Mass.:

"I see no reason why a clergyman, more than a lawyer, whose honors cannot be spoken, should hesitate to approve an

Article of Merit

and worth, from which he or his family have been signally benefited, and whose commendation may serve to extend those benefits to others. I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla. My wife has for many years been a sufferer from

Nervous Headache

for which she found little help. She has tried many remedies, but none did her so much good as Hood's Sarsaparilla. It seems surprising to me that a few bottles of this medicine did so much for her. The effects of headache decreased in number and severity from week to week, and finally, when her general health has been improved, Her appetite has also been better. I am glad to add my experience with

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I have no hesitation in endorsing its merits." A. A. WILLIAMS.

Overripe Plums Fall.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The following appointments were announced at the White House:

L. F. McKinney of New Hampshire, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Columbia; Thomas L. Thornton of California, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Brazil; George William Childs of Pennsylvania, to be associate president and consul general of the United States to Portugal; John M. Wiley of New York, to be consul of the United States at Bordeaux; Harvey Myers of Kentucky, to be a commissioner from Kentucky to World's Columbian commission; J. C. Shelton of Georgia, to be an alternate commissioner from Georgia on the World's Columbian commission; Edward Franklin White, to be associate justice of the supreme court of the territory of Arizona.

Cruelties In an Asylum.

ALBANY, April 26.—The commissioners of the state board of charities, who investigated the State Custodial Asylum for Feeble Minded Women at Newark, Wayne county, have filed a report in which they say: "From all the evidence we find that the superintendent, the matron and the first assistant matron have practiced the infliction of corporal punishments upon the defenseless patients under their care, and that said punishments have frequently been of grossly cruel and inhuman character, and we recommend radical remedies even to the reorganization of the internal administration of the institution."

Refused to See Father Flaherty.

ROCHESTER, April 26.—Rev. Charles Flaherty of Mount Morris, who was convicted at Geneseo on Friday, arrived here accompanied by about 100 of the members of his congregation. The party came here to petition Bishop McQuaid to permit Father Flaherty to continue as rector of St. Patrick's while the appeal which he has taken from the verdict of the jury is pending before the higher court, and the court of appeals. An audience with the bishop was denied. The bishop said that he would take what action was proper in the case at the proper time.

Evangelists In Jail.

PARK RIDGE, N. J., April 26.—The nine evangelists of Park Ridge, who are in Hackensack jail, charged with conspiring to cheat Herman Storms out of his valuable farm at Woodcliff, will, it appears, spend the greater part of the summer behind the bars. Herman Storms offered to bail out his wife, but she refused unless the others could be released. It has leaked out that Stiles and Mason had a fight just before their arrest because the former had been making love to Mrs. Minnie Stewart without the consent of Mason, the leader of the band.

Trouble at Baron Hirsch's Settlement.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., April 26.—The trouble over farming at the Baron Hirsch settlement, Woodbine, between the dissatisfied farmers and the committee that govern the affairs of the society will be taken into court today, and the result is anxiously waited by the people of the colony. The suits are brought by the farmers, who have received warrants of ejectment and who will be evicted at once if the company wins the suit unless they comply with the rules and conditions of the company.

A Complicated Case.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., April 26.—John W. Rigney, pension attorney and ex-justice of the peace, was recently arrested on the charge of forging a decree in a divorce suit brought by Mrs. Cornelius Sanford against her husband. She charged that he was a lunatic. Sanford's father now brings action in the supreme court on behalf of his son for divorce from Mrs. Sanford on the ground that his son was of unsound mind at the time of the marriage.

Created a Scene In Court.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 26.—George Allbow was sentenced to three years and two months in state prison and fined $250 for negotiating the sale of green goods. He tried to commit suicide while on his way to jail and declares he will kill himself. He created quite a scene in the court room while struggling to get a pitcher of chowder to assault some one, no one knows when.

Bicyclists Want the Law Changed.

HARTFORD, April 26.—Colonel Burdett, president, and members of the League of American Wheelmen, want the antipool law amended so that it will not interfere with bicycle races or other athletic sports.

NO GOLD FROM NEW YORK

Terms of Wall Street Bankers Rejected by the Cabinet.

BONDS WILL BE . . . T RESORT.

Offers of Gold, However, Are Coming In From Many Sections of the Country. That Mysterious Conference of Mr. Jordan's—Canada's Discount on Our Money.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—At the cabinet meeting Secretary Carlisle brought up the proposition of the New York bankers to supply, under certain conditions, the treasury department with gold. It was very thoroughly discussed and finally rejected. What this proposition was is not known here, as Secretary Carlisle declined to make its terms public. It was not, however, considered advantageous to the government. This was the culmination of several propositions submitted, one of which was declined last Saturday. A counter proposition was then made by the bankers to the secretary of the treasury, which was received last Monday. This was also rejected, and in turn the secretary submitted a proposition to them, which they also refused to accept.

All negotiations, therefore, between the treasury department and the New York bankers are off, at least, for the present, and Secretary Carlisle will look in other directions to continue to replete the treasury gold. The administration does not desire to issue bonds and will not do so except as a last resort. That time, in their opinion, has not yet arrived, and if their efforts to obtain gold are successful will not soon be reached.

Representative Wise of Virginia called on the president and presented a petition signed by bankers and business men of Richmond asking the president to issue bonds to relieve the financial situation. The president received the petition, but gave no indication of what his intention will be in the direction of following the suggestions made therein.

A Big Lift From Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, April 26.—President Douglas H. Thomas telegraphed Secretary Carlisle that the Merchants National bank is willing to put at the disposal of the government $100,000 of gold, nearly one-half of the gold which the bank holds. The offer was accepted. President Thomas said that he was prompted to his action by the statement of President Cleveland that it is the intention of the present administration to maintain the parity of gold and silver as far as possible, and that the treasury coin notes presented would hereafter be paid in gold, as has heretofore been the practice. This bold utterance of the president, said Mr. Thomas, has had a reassuring effect in financial circles and has done much toward restoring confidence, which is so much needed in the existing feverish condition of the monetary situation.

Where the Gold Goes.

MONTREAL, April 26.—The large shipments of gold coin from New York to Canada during the past few days have caused considerable comment in financial circles. It is learned that the amount generally believed to have been brought into Montreal has been greatly exaggerated, the whole sum probably not amounting to more than $1,000,000. The greater portion of this was required to strengthen the banks' reserve, which had been depleted by withdrawals of special time as well as demand deposits. The manager of the Bank of Montreal said that his bank had not brought any gold into Canada, and that there was no likelihood of its doing so.

Mr. Jordan Remains Silent.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Mr. Jordan declined positively to say anything in relation to his conferences with bank presidents and other financiers or about the reported proposition of Mr. Carlisle which he laid before those gentlemen, and their responses thereto. It was reported that Secretary Carlisle would visit this city and would meet the leaders of the associated bank presidents.

Discount Our Paper Money.

TORONTO, April 26.—The city banks will accept United States silver certificates only at a discount of ½ per cent. The banks also ordinary American green backs at par from their customers, but will not accept them at all from strangers. Business houses have placed a discount of 8 per cent on all American bills.

St. Louis Lends Gold.

ST. LOUIS, April 26.—The Bostman's bank of this city telegraphed Secretary Carlisle, offering him $250,000 in gold. The offer was accepted by telegraph, and they turned over the metal.

How "Red Austin" Escaped.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., April 26.—It has been discovered that an accomplice of P. H. Danforth, alias Red Austin, the bunko man who was in prison here for swindling farmer Crowley out of $5,000 a year ago, has very cleverly bamboozled the sheriff and undersheriff out of their notorious prisoner. About two weeks ago a man who said that he was a United States marshal called on Undersheriff Goodale at Newburg and asked for Austin, who, he said, was wanted in New York for slippery work. He wore a shield and had a warrant. They let him take Austin, as there were many requisitions to turn him over to other counties when Orange county was through with him.

The Dr. Buchanan Verdict.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The jury in the case of the people against Dr. Buchanan for the murder of his wife was locked up at 12:15 o'clock this morning, being unable to reach any decision. Buchanan was removed when he heard the news. It was reported that the jury stood 9 to 3 for acquittal. The attorneys on both sides are confident they will win the case. The jury went out at 7:30.

Her Brother Does Not Know.

ST. LOUIS, April 26.—Mr. W. A. H. Lathrop when asked about the death of his sister at Jamestown, N. Y., under the assumed name of de la Tour said: "She was not a young woman, and the taking of another name was one of her peculiarities. She has not lived in St. Louis for some years, and we are as much at sea as to the cause of her death as you are."

Must Pay Their Own Way.

BOSTON, April 26.—The committees on railroads, on military affairs and on finance leave for New York today. The first named committee starts out on its examination of railroads, and takes in the naval parade as an incident of the travel, while the other committees named are understood to pay their own expenses.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

MONKEYS.

Their Life in the Forests—One Plan For Capturing Them.

The monkey is a favorite with most little people, who enjoy watching his every movement and laugh at his funny tricks. The monkey has an absurd face and long arms. His tail is also long and very strong. He makes use of it when he climbs.

MONKEYS IN A FOREST.

The monkey comes from hot countries. He must be taken great care of here or he will catch cold and die. He lives in the forests and can climb from branch to branch of a tree quickly. He is full of tricks, but it is not always safe to play with him, for he has sharp teeth and is spiteful when irritated.

The monkey is very fond of watching what men do and then mocking them by doing the same things himself. In the countries where monkeys live men sometimes catch them in this manner. They bring basins with water and spy about till they see some monkeys. When they see that the monkeys perched on the tree are watching what is going on, the men begin to wash their hands in the water they have brought. The monkeys all the while keep looking on. When the men have washed their hands over and over again a great many times, they go away and take their basins with them. But under the trees in which the monkeys are seated they leave other basins filled with pitch.

As soon as the men are out of sight, down come the monkeys from the trees. In a little while they thrust their hands in and try to wash them, as the men have done. When once they have dipped their hands into the pitch, it will not come off again. The basins and the pitch adhere firmly to their hands, and the men, who have hidden themselves behind the trees, rush out, and the poor monkeys are taken captives. Some of them are sold for pets, but the most of them are placed in shows and museums, where they finish out their lives behind the bars of the great cages that confine them.

A Very Queer Family.

There was once a farmer who had a young pig That could stand on its hind legs and dance a Scotch jig.
He also possessed a remarkable cow That played the guitar—well, I hardly know how.
The farmer had, too—though it seems quite absurd—
A talented cat that could sing like a bird,
A squirrel that really was quite a good drummer
And a dog that could whistle "The Last Rose of Summer."
What wonder, indeed, that with all these together
The farmer cared naught for the state of the weather!

Poor Jack-in-the-box.

Frighten the children, do I? Pop with too sudden a jump?
Well, how do you think I felt, all shut in there in a lump?
And didn't I get a shock when the lid came down on my head?
And if you were squeezed up and locked in, wouldn't you get ugly and red?
If you think I'm so dreadful, my friend, suppose you just try it yourself.
Let some one shut you in a box and set you away on a shelf,
And then when the lid is unhooked, if you don't leap out with a whack
And look like a fright when you spring, I'll give in or my name isn't Jack.

KEEP ACCOUNT.

Girls Should Early Learn Correct Business Habits.

Whether a woman is poor or rich it behooves her to acquire methodical business habits, keeping her little accounts accurately and knowing to a cent just what she does with her money, whether she has 10 cents or $10 to expend on her own little personal wants, says the New York Recorder. An allowance is the first step toward this end, if at the same time it is impressed upon her that every sum spent should be set down with unfailing regularity. In black and white one notes how much more easily the money can be spent, how quickly it goes and just what foolish little nothings have lured it from our pockets.

Without setting down each item it is ten chances to one that you will conclude you must have lost some money when you cannot see how that $10 bill went when you only bought such a very few things. The neat little figures are a curbing restraint, besides instilling a habit and system that will be of great value if fortune ever smiles and a great estate comes to your hands, and still greater if economy is a necessity and the dollar has to be forced into doing duty for two.

Unless the accounts are kept accurately and the cash made to balance every evening you had better not attempt any bookkeeping at all, for slipshod methods are worse than none and only confuse everything rather than help matters. If anything is worth doing at all, it is worth doing well, and there is nothing so productive of future good as the habit of looking carefully out for the pennies when school days are the only trials and the allowance of 50 cents a week goes for candy and pickles. If this plan is once established in childhood, the girl will grow up womanhood with a clear knowledge of where her money goes and what she has to show for it.

To Disinfect.

All the powerful and really useful disinfectants corrode metal and stain crockery more or less. Copperas is the best for household use, 1 pound dissolved in 12 quarts of boiling water and used hot being more effective than cold. The valve should be open when it is poured down closets, so that it need not settle in the pan, which should be washed daily with a long handled dishmop kept for the purpose and strong scalding suds, when it will need no further disinfection. A large funnel should be set in the pipe of stationary washbowls, which, by the way, are unfit for human habitations and unknown in the best modern houses. When the fine Astor mansion was built up town, the owners positively forbade a single stationary bowl in the dressing rooms—an example which has since been followed in other high class houses.

Our Shoes.

Pointed toes are gone out of fashion, and the attempts lately made toward a return to square toes have not succeeded; the rounded shape is the one most in favor just now.

Shoes leaving the misty years uncovered, of patent leather or glazed kid, are the most pleasant for house wear; they have the Louis Quinze heel, wide enough at the base, however, not to be a cause of fatigue to the wearer. They are worn with stockings of silk or lisle thread. The latter are less expensive and much more durable, they are also very pleasant to wear, and many ladies, even among the most elegant, prefer them to all others, especially during the spring and summer season.

Bronze kid shoes have not recovered their former favor; they are rarely seen unless with hose of exactly the same color, which are pretty to wear with a white dress.

Little shoes of glazed or bronze kid, of patent leather or satin, are also worn with evening dresses, unless both shoes and stockings are matched in color to the dress. Black shoes have the double advantage of being less easily soiled than colored ones and of making the foot appear smaller. Need we add that with black shoes stockings should invariably be black also, even with light colored or white dresses? The only exception to the black stocking embroidered with miniature flowerets, matched either to the dress or its trimmings.

A Simple Tea.

An appetizing tea is as follows:

Pressed partridge.
Buttered toast.	Celery salad.
Saratoga potatoes.
Sliced orange.	Chocolate cakes.

The pressed partridge is prepared as follows: Clean the partridges and split them in two. Place them in a pan, the outside uppermost, and bake. Baste with melted butter. The partridges can be baked either in the oven or on top of the stove, covered with a second pan, if late in the afternoon and the oven is poor.

A Good Dinner.

Cream of green pea soup.
Shrimp Patties.
Roast Turkey. Currant Jelly. Oyster Sauce.
Potato Croquettes. Peas.
Barbecued Ham in Claret Di'n.
Bread Sticks.
Lettuce and French Dressing
Bent's Crackers. Cheese. Brie.
Queen Mab's Pudding.
Whipped Cream.
Coffee.
Fruit. Nuts. Raisins.

Breaded Eggs.

Boil the eggs hard and cut in thick, round slices. Pepper and salt; dip in beaten raw egg, then in fine bread crumbs and fry in nice dripping or butter very hot. Drain off every drop of grease and serve on a hot dish. Have ready some chicken broth, heat to boiling in a saucepan with a little chopped parsley, salt, pepper and 2 tablespoonfuls of cream to a cup of broth. Boil up and pour smoking hot over the eggs. Serve immediately.

Woman's Idea of Luncheons.

I heard a woman say the other day that she had been attending luncheons ever since the season opened, day in and day out, and said she finally, "Luncheon is a base ingratitude to breakfast and a premeditated insult to dinner."

SAID IN FUN.

"They lost my umbrella; what shall I do?" "Go to Smith's. He advertises 'umbrellas recovered while you wait.'"—Yale Record.

Small Boy—Hurry up, doctor! A fellow round the corner fired loose with his fist and hit a book agent a awful lick on the cheek. Doctor—Where is the book agent? "It ain't the book agent that wants you It's the fellow that hit him."—Life.

Chicago savagely)—Your head of a dog has bitten a piece clean out of my best Sharpie—Confound it! I wanted to bring him up a vegetarian.—Pick Me Up.

"I'd like," said the managing editor, "to have something about club life in this city." "All right," said the new reporter. "I'll interview every policeman I come across."—Washington Star.

Husband—What ever made you turn her off? She was so that you would look well. Wife (nervously)—I know it, but I think she was really insane. Husband—What made you think so? Wife—She only wanted one afternoon a week.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Young De Merritt—Miss Minnie, there is a little question I have long been wanting to ask you, but every time the words have risen to my lips there has been some interruption. Do you— Miss Minnie—Do n't hesitate, Mr. De Merritt—George, Young De Merritt—I was going to ask you, do you think a pug dog has any brains?—Harper's Bazar.

The Husband (on his deathbed)—My darling, when I am gone, how will you ever be able to pay the doctor's bill? The Wife—Don't worry about that, dear. If worse comes to worst, I can marry the doctor, you know.—Life.

He—Miss Giddygirl said she didn't believe in kissing the other day, and I distagreed with her. She—How did you settle it? He—We both put our heads together to find out.—Yale Record.

Marie—I am so sorry for Harry Perkins, Maud—Why? He's happy. Just engaged to Henrietta Marie—Yes; but what is that when he might have had you for the asking?—Harper's Bazar.

"We have had a good deal of rain lately," said the optimistic but proxy pulpiteer. "Yes," replied the man who was going to hear his sermon, "but I am expecting a long dry spell very soon."—Washington Star.

Baldheaded (and very homely) Old Gentleman to Photographer—Drat such pictures! Can't you make me look any better than that after five sittings? Photographer (thoroughly exasperated)—I think I can, sir, if you allow me to take the back of your head. It hasn't so much expression on the other side, but it's a blamed sight prettier.—Burlington Free Press.

"He is an artist by profession." "I know that, but what is he by occupation?"—Washington Star.

Mrs. Flutter—I hear the dealers are going to raise the price of sealskin sacques this winter. Mrs. Slimpurse—I hope they'll be more successful than I am. I've been trying to raise the price of mine for the past three years.—Binghamton Republican.

Waggier—Didn't you order a statue of the Venus de Milo? Staggier—Yes; but both arms were gone and I sent it straight back.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Pleased Him.

He—Don't you admire Miss Ripp's complexion? She—O, immensely. I'm a great lover of art, you know.—Club.

HE TALKED TOO MUCH.

The Story of a Little Chap Who Wanted to Get Aboard.

"It ain't no sign of bravery ter abuse folks over a high fence or from t'other side the river," said the captain, tilting the keg on which he was sitting so that his back might rest against the fish house. His companion sat by mending his nets. "Now when I was quite a lad," he went on, "I had an experience that showed me what unnecessary jaw politty it is to be too funny—even at a distance."

"How was that?"

"Well, I was put in alternate cap'n on one of them steamers that runs in Frenchman's bay, an bein young an tolerable successful I got to thinkin I knowed pretty much the whole of it.

"One day we was layin at the wharf loadin the freight on, an I see a little man walkin up an down waitin ter go aboard. He was a pompous lookin individual, an following an hangin on his words was two or three men that seemed ter consider what he said as golden speech.

"I kept thinkin that I wished it would come time ter start when he was way up t'other end of the wharf, an sure enough, just as I was much as a rod away it was time ter pull out.

"I pulled the whistle an waited full time, but he turned round mighty moderate an come toward the boat. Three men commenced ter haul it on, an we fell back from the wharf. Then he broke into a run an waved his hat an shouted.

"When we come close enough I hollered back, 'Hurry up, little chap, or you'll bet ter walk!' an a lot of tech talk, when I got a signal from the cook that was 'long side ter put back, an findin somethin unusual was up I had to.

"The man lowered the plank, an the little man walked on board an come right up ter the pilothouse an passed me his card.

"He was the owner of the whole line of steamers, an he says very slow an kind: 'Speakin of walkin, p'r'aps you'll better go ashore now 'fore they draw the plank in. We shan't need you on this trip.'"

"What did you do?"

"Do? Why, I went of course, an my assistant run the trip. The matter was fixed up, but when I makes joke now I take keer it's one that ain't comin home ter roost."—Youth's Companion.

At Last.

Suffering Customer—Have you anything that will cure neuralgia?

Druggist—No, sir.

Customer (with fervor)—Give me your hand! It's some compensation for 17 years of misery that I've found one honest man at last!—Chicago Tribune.

A Question of Size.

"I can always tell what a man eats by looking at him," said Jarley.

"Well, what do I eat?" said Hawkins.

"Judging from your ready appearance I should say seeds," said Jarley.—Harper's Bazar.

It Happens Every Year.

Oh, glorious spring! Oh, balmy air!
Full soon we greet you with a cheer
Our last year's summer underwear
Forth from the cedar chest.

We'll place it on our backs. Whooped
And then from users till night
We'll frisk about in transient glee,
Because we feel so light.

But when the doctor comes next day,
And we are sent to the bed
Our wives will shake their heads and say,
"There, now, I told you so!"

Just the Name.

Some years ago a Rochester clergyman in baptising a baby paused in the middle of the service to inquire the name of the infant, to which the mother, with a profound courtesy, replied:

"Shady, sir, if you please."

"Shady!" replied the minister. "There is a boy, and you mean Shadrach, eh?"

"No, please, your reverence, it's a girl."

"And pray," asked the inquisitive pastor, "how happened you to call the child by such a name?"

"Well, sir," responded the woman, "if you must know, our name is Bower, and my husband said as how he should like her to be called Shady, because Shady Bower sounds so pretty."—Quips.

A Contrast.

Governor Russell's little son Eustis surprised his mother one morning a short time ago by exclaiming, "Mamma, I want a black eye fixed." Mrs. Russell was at loss to know what he meant and demanded an explanation. "Well," replied the young hopeful, "last night you told Mary to give me a light supper, and I didn't like it. Now, mamma, please do let me have a dark breakfast."—Boston Globe.

A Good Plan.

"It would be to Chicago's interest to skip in and have New York's streets cleaned."

"Why so?"

"Visitors to the fair from foreign countries won't be able to get to Chicago. They'll get stuck in the mud in New York."—Harper's Bazar.

A HOLE IN HIS SKULL.

THOMAS MALONEY PROBABLY FATALLY INJURED LAST NIGHT.

He Attempted to Board a Moving Train and was Hurled against an Iron Girder—A Hole Crushed in His Skull, and His Right Leg Fractured.

Thomas Maloney of Dunellen is lying in Muhlenberg Hospital in a precarious condition owing to an attempt last night to board the train that leaves here at 4:58, after it had started and was under headway.

Maloney is employed by the railroad company to light the switch lights along the line between here and Dunellen. Toward evening yesterday, as was his custom, he left his home at the last named place and proceeded to attend to his duties. He reached here early and went to a Park avenue barber shop to get shaved before returning home. As he came out of the barber shop he heard a train stop at the depot and he started on a run for the station. The train started as he reached the corner of North avenue, so Maloney evidently decided to catch it anyhow, for he climbed the bank near the Park avenue bridge and prepared to jump on as the train went by. As the train passed, Maloney caught hold of the railing, and attempted to swing himself on the steps. His foot slipped from the step, and loosing his hold of the railing, he was thrown violently against the side of the iron girders of the bridge.

The back of his skull was crushed in, his scalp nearly torn from his head, and his right leg fractured. Baggage master Garretson and Policeman Kiely carried the apparently lifeless body to the depot and summoned Dr. Fritts, who, finding that Maloney was still alive, did all in his power to aid him. As soon as possible he was removed to the hospital. It took Doctors Frohaco and Long four hours to get the scalp together.

Maloney is about 35 years old, is married and has five children.

LOVE'S BICYLCE FOUND.

It was Taken by Clarence Rittenhouse who Merely Wanted a Ride.

Clarence Rittenhouse was arrested about one o'clock this morning, at the Electric Light Station, by Officer Lynch, charged with stealing Mr. Love's bicycle early yesterday morning. The boy was taken to the lockup. He acknowledged taking the wheel and told the office that he would find it at Hillside Cemetery. The wheel was found and brought back by Policeman Lynch.

Young Rittenhouse was released on $100 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Messrs. Lee Hetfield and W. Wallace Coriell went his bail.

Young Rittenhouse says he did not intend to steal the wheel but that he merely wanted a ride.

BREVITIES.

—Seats for the "Old Homestead" are now on sale.

—The Union County Board of Freeholders will meet at Elizabeth one week from to-day.

—The Pond Machine Tool Works shut down to-day to allow their employees to view the naval parade.

—The Rutgers Glee Club concert takes place to night, at All Souls' church. The leader will personate Patti and Levi and the entire programme is one to please all.

—Stelle's livery stable on West Sixth street has been bought by a Plainfield er. It is understood that the business will be discontinued, and that a private residence will be built on the site.

—The New Jersey Society Sons of the American Revolution at the meeting called for that purpose on April 15, 1893, passed a resolution instructing the proper officers to take the necessary steps for the incorporation of the society under the act of March 27, 1878.

—John F. Hoxge, a prominent property owner of Elizabeth, has applied to the Supreme Court of New Jersey for a writ of certiorari to stop the building of the elevated tracks there by the Pennsylvania Railroad. His declaration is that the contract made with the city is illegal.

The Accident to Dr. Lewis.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of the Seventh Day Baptist church of this city, returned Tuesday night from Chicago and allayed the fears of his friends concerning his recent accident. While hunting in Wisconsin, the breech of the minister's gun flew open and the shot exploded in his face. His eyesight was endangered, but his left eye is serviceable again. Hopes are entertained that he will entirely recover the sight of his right eye, which was burned. The accident is similar to the one which occurred to Mr. R. F. M. Chase of "Edgewood," Somerset street which injured one eye, and nearly cost him his life.

Dr. Lewis had a rather laughable experience in Chicago to which he hurried for proper medical attendance, although 90 miles away. A policeman, helping him across a street, and not noticing that his eye was bandanged until they had crossed, looked at him a moment and said, "How did the other fellow come out." The doctor could not help smiling. The doctor was duck shooting when the accident happened. A friend of his asked, "Did the duck get away?"

NUPTIALS.

Anderson-Burke.

St. Mary's church was filled with people yesterday afternoon to witness the marriage of Mr. James Anderson to Miss Rosa Burke.

The bridal party, consisting of the bride, leaning on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Frank Burke, preceded by the groom with one of the bridesmaids, Miss Josie Schaffer, and the best man, Mr. Michael Reagan, with the other bridesmaid, Miss Julia Burke, entered the church and proceeded up the aisle to the music of a wedding march played by Organist Lee.

The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of white bengaline silk trimmed with lace. The ceremony was performed by Father Smythe.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's mother, on West Fourth street, at which guests were present from this city and New Brunswick. They were the recipients of many handsome presents.

During the evening Miss Josie Schaffer delighted the guests with several solos, as also did Mr. James Stewart.

Dancing followed to music by Prof O'Reilly.

Storr—Schomp

The marriage of Mr. Frank P. Storr of West Front street to Miss Frances Schomp, daughter of Winfield Schomp of 208 West Front street, took place at eight o'clock last evening. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church. The ceremony took place in the parlor, and as the bridal couple entered a wedding march was played on the piano by Miss Miss Wyckoff.

The bride was attired in a gown of white silk, trimmed with lace. She carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses.

Among the guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. John Miller of Finderne, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Krymer of Hampden, Mrs. Peter Haberle of Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. John Henry of Bound Brook, Mr. and Mrs. John Hyler, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Leland, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Leland, Mrs. Rebecca Storr, the Misses Huff, Miss Williams, the Misses Wyckoff, Miss Amelia Krimer, Miss Hofman, the Misses Smith, Mrs. Dayton, Mr. George Van Ness, Mr. John Williams, Mr. Frank Wyckoff, Mr. Bergen Carter, Mr. Haberle, and Mr. Dayton.

The newly married couple left on the midnight train to spend their honeymoon at Williamsport, Pa. On their return they will reside on Oxford place.

Roberts—Rickert.

A quiet home wedding occurred at 208 West Front street, at 7.30 o'clock last evening, only the members of the family being present. The contracting parties being Dr. Alfred Percy Roberts of Elizabeth and Miss Minnie Rickert of this city. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, officiated. The wedding was made a quiet affair on account of a recent death in the groom's family. After a wedding trip to Washington, D. C., Dr. and Mrs. Roberts will make Elizabeth their home.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Craig A. Marsh of this city was one of the guests at the banquet to General Runyon at the Hotel Waldorf, New York, Tuesday night.

Lawyer Joseph W. Quinn has rented the Brokaw house, corner West Front street and Lafayette place. He will take possession June 1st.

Next Wednesday, Mr. Frederick S. Cutter and Miss Elizabeth Mulford, will be married at the home of the bride's parents on East Fifth street. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck will officiate. Miss Mulford is a daughter of Mr. Edward C. Mulford, the real estate agent.

The Old Homestead.

Another opportunity will be afforded for those who feel a longing to look in once more upon the beauty and home comforts of New England life, as seen in Denman Thompson's characteristic play, Friday evening, May 5th. On the occasion of its last visit here, it was greeted by a large audience.

FELLOWSHIP AND BENEVOLENCE.

Interesting Addresses at the Congregational Church.

The Congregational churches of the Northern New Jersey Conference have been combining the principle of fellowship and benevolence the past year, by special meetings, in which the addresses are made by pastors from sister churches. Such a service was held in the Congregational church last evening. Rev. S. L. Loomis of Newark and Rev. F. W. Baldwin of East Orange were the visiting clergymen. They spoke most interestingly. The former drew illustrations of the progress of Christianity from the contrast between the "Pinta" and the "Blake" now in the Hudson river, and showed how much wider a man's influence can be now than a hundred years ago. The latter spoke of the heroic in missionary history and of the inspiring literature that mission has given to the church. A goodly number of the church had gathered to listen to the speaker and all felt their interest in missions and also their feeling of fellowship with neighboring churches increased as they listened. The room had been made beautiful with flowers. Mr. Martin led in a song service which preceded the addresses.

A New Episcopal Edifice.

The Episcopalians have had plans for a $3,000 brick chapel and Sunday-school prepared. It is to be erected on Clinton avenue. The Episcopalians already have a chapel on Clinton avenue, known as the Church of the Heavenly Rest, of which Rev. Dr. Taylor of Park avenue was rector for several years, and which has been without a regular supply since he resigned.

The Concert To-Night.

Ho! all ye who love good music!

Especially all ye who could not, on account of the rain, go to New York as you expected to do.

The Rutgers College Glee Club will give a concert for the benefit of the "Ys" at All Soul's Church on Park avenue to-night.

Don't fail to hear them. It will pay you for losing the parade. *2

Salvation Army.

Capt. E. Marsh of Boston, formerly in charge of the local corps here, will speak at the Salvation Army to-night.

Capt. J. York, and Lieut. J. Buckland will start on Friday for New York where they will hereafter be located.

Wallace Fined Five Dollars.

Lawrence Wallace of Scotch Plains was fined five dollars, this morning, by Justice Nash, for being drunk and disorderly at the Scotch Plains fire Tuesday night. The charge made against him by Mr. Hand was withdrawn.

DELAY OF THE REVIEW.

Rain Causes a Postponement Until Two o'Clock this Afternoon

New York, April 25, (Special)—President Cleveland issued an order at 10 o'clock this morning postponing the review of the fleet of war vessels until two o'clock this afternoon.

The original intention was to begin the review at 10.30 o'clock, and long before that hour the invited guests had assembled upon the steamers set apart for their convenience.

In the language of the immortal Mr. Mantilini "a demned, miserable, damp body" is New York to-day, and a gloomy place, despite its gala attire and its heroic efforts to be blithesome and happy.

Secretary of War Lamont received a dispatch from Forecaster Dunn this morning, saying the rain would cease shortly after noon, and that the prospects for a fine day was promising.

The change in the hour for review was as once communicated to Admiral Gherardi, who notified Admiral Hopkins on the Blake.

The other commanders in the fleet were informed of the change by signals displayed on the Philadelphia and Blake.

The Women's Auxiliary Society.

The Women's Auxiliary Society of the Diocese of New Jersey held their annual meeting in the church of the Holy Cross yesterday. Delegates from all parts of the State were present, about two hundred in number. The celebration of the Holy Communion took place at 10.30 a. m. Bishop Scarborough was present, assisted by the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector, and the Rev. E. M. Rodman and Dr. Longford, Secretary of the Board of Missions. The Rev. Mr. Murphy made an address of welcome. Addresses were made by the Bishop, Dr. Longford, and Rev. Mr. Pott, missionary to China. Mr. Pott's remarks were very interesting. He gave a description of the manners and customs of the Chinese. Luncheon was served in the beautiful and spacious rooms of the parish building. The parish of Grace church and the Holy Cross provided for the entertainment of the guests. After luncheon the delegates re-assembled in the church and elected officers for the ensuing year and transacted other business pertaining to the society. The meeting was an exceedingly pleasant one and a complete success in every way.

New Electric Light Company.

Articles of incorporation for a new electric light company were filed Tuesday with the Clerk of Union County.

The company's business is limited with a capital of $1,000,000. Senator Marsh of Elizabeth, holds $10,000 worth of the stock, G. Harry Stokes of this city, $50,000, and Louis E. Howard of this city, $940,000.

The name of the company is the Royal Arc Company of the United States, and the objects are to carry on a general electrical machinery and electric business, and make and sell apparatus for producing and transmitting electric light.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Waiters' Mercy War.

The sympathy of the genuine American can [illegible] be on the side of the waiters who are fighting for the right to wear mustaches if they so desire. Another grievance they complain of will appeal still more strongly to the public. It is that they are paid low wages by their employers in the expectation that they will depend on the fee system to get a respectable living. The public will note that it is waiters themselves who desire to stamp out the fee system and sympathize accordingly.

The colored porter on the sleeping cars expects regularly a tip. The negro slave always expected a tip, and to this day in numerous hotels where negro servants are employed the departing guest must run the gauntlet between two lines of menials who expect him to drop more or less silver into their palms as he passes. It is a slavish custom and one against which any self respecting white man may well rebel with all his soul. A person can never respect as a man and a brother the individual to whom he flings a dime or a half dollar as he would a bone to a dog. Certainly, then, if waiters want to be respected, one of the first steps to this end will be to abolish of their own accord the feeing system.

Ridiculous, pitiable in its contemptible servility is the edict that waiters must be clean shaven. It is plain without argument that every table waiter, if he is a man, should have close clipped hair, and if she is a woman should either have short hair or wear a natty little cap. But, the mustache? When those who have started the crusade against it have been asked why the order went forth that waiters must be clean shaven, there seemed to be no answer except that nobody ever saw in Berlin a waiter with a mustache.

This is kin to that other notion which in some quarters requires coachmen to be clean shaven, to the actual danger of injury to their health by exposure in inclement weather while they wait on their boxes sometimes hours at a time. Their employers, whose slaves they are, choose to wear a mustache or beard; therefore the coachman must not. Down with this un-American foolishness and snobbery!

Good Idea.

Dr. Jane E. Robbins is a lady who has practiced medicine for years among city poor people. She knows better than most others their needs and how to help them. The greatest need of all she finds to be that of cleanliness and thrift. It is the result of their ignorance. Many of the slum people are unable to speak or understand English. The only communication between them and people who speak the language of the country must be through their children. At an early age these young ones learn English after a fashion, likewise their parents' native tongue.

Most of the children attend the public schools. In view of the possible visitation of cholera, Dr. Robbins proposes that these children shall be carefully instructed as to the disastrous effects of leaving accumulations of filth and decaying matter in houses and streets. Then they themselves are to be taught how to cleanse both houses and streets. Perfecting themselves into brigades, under the instruction of competent physicians and officials connected with street cleaning, school children from the poorest, dirtiest quarters of the city might do the work of keeping clean the streets in their neighborhood.

If the necessary methods of sanitation and cleanliness are explained to them, there is no doubt but they would enter upon their new task with all the child's enthusiasm and make a wonderful change in the slum streets and tenements in a short time. They would explain to their parents the requirements of the health boards every where and scrub and purify their own homes thoroughly.

The example of the Belgian workingmen will spread like wildfire now that they have succeeded in gaining manhood suffrage. It will make socialists and labor organizations still more hopeful; it will make nihilists and anarchists yet more defiant. While the Belgians were plotting there was a meeting of workingmen in Vienna in which approving references to their brothers in Belgium were wildly cheered. These things may well send a nightmare into the dreams of the Austrian emperor and cause the white czar to turn uneasily on his sleepless pillow. Republicanism is marching on.

The situation with regard to Hawaii is this: Jan. 17 the revolutionists formed a provisional government and raised the American flag over their headquarters. President Cleveland ordered the American flag hauled down, and this was done April 1, the president thus disowning the responsibility of the United States [illegible] for either the revolution or the new government, which latter, however, still remains at the head of affairs, its president declaring that it can hold out for a year. The American flag was hauled down, but the provisional government still waves.

NEW YORK, April 27.—When the sun sank over beyond the Palisades last evening there was such a hanging of guns in the North river and such a burst of fireworks and martial music as made it a wonder Old Sol did not turn back and take a peep behind him to see what the unusual racket was all about. It was the warships of 10 navies saluting the sinking orb. The New Yorkers who heard it experienced a cold wave of patriotic pride and went home to dinner.

The naval pageant had been a huge success, and although but preliminary to to-day's review it served to arouse a great deal of patriotic feeling. When the crowds saw the White Squadron in comparison with the war vessels of the other countries they shouted and hurrahed with delight.

Admiration for the port line was general. It was noticeable that white paint seemed to have the effect of lessening the size of a ship to the eyesight. This, perhaps aided by American eyes, made the white ships appear larger than all the others.

Passing Up the River.

The two leaders in the procession flew their national flags. The Philadelphia carried a blue peter at her fore and flew an immense American flag at her stern. The cross of St. George was rippling from the Englishman's fore, and an admiral's flag was over the stern. The other vessels in the fleet came along in the same style substantially.

All of the American vessels flew blue peters and American flags. The strangers flew the flags of their nations, and when an admiral was aboard that fact could be learned from a flag used to designate his rank. The leaders kept the distances assigned them with remarkable precision.

Following in the wake were a fleet of tugs and excursion craft, some of which were loaded to the guards and keeled over to dangerous angles.

While the Blake and Philadelphia got to anchor about noontime the rear of both columns were not in order for nearly two hours later. The heads of the columns were exactly opposite each other. The Blake anchored on the New York side about 150 yards ahead of the Philadelphia on the Jersey side.

When the fleet was finally in position, it extended from the point where the school-ship Chesapeake was anchored, about opposite One Hundred and Tenth street, to about opposite Thirtieth street, where the Republica swung in the stream. The Columbus carrack was were towed into position opposite Ninety-sixth street and at the head of the fleet.

Naval Officers at the Union League.

The reception given to the officers of the visiting naval fleets and the Duke of Veragua by the Union League last evening was a most brilliant affair. The Fifth avenue front of the club house was decorated with lines of red, white and blue electric lights, and an enormous star of incandescent globes was suspended above the entrance. The interior was likewise decorated with laurel and the rooms hung with a profusion of American flags. The big banquet hall was very elaborately trimmed with bunting and flowers. Perch were lowered half two lines of marines from the Philadelphia in full dress uniform were stationed. A detachment from the United States artillery, U. S. A., lined the grand staircase and added impressiveness to the scene.

In the assemblage who gathered to welcome the guests were representatives of the wealth and culture of the metropolis. Nearly 1,000 people were present. The army, the navy and civil life were all represented, and with the visitors formed one of the most remarkable gatherings ever assembled in this city.

Each Guest a Titled One.

The Duke of Veragua escorted by Cornelius N. Bliss arrived shortly before 10 o'clock. With him were his brother and his son. He was escorted to the library, where the visiting admirals from our own navy and army were presented to him. Fully half of the guests were in uniform. Great Britain was represented by Vice Admiral Sir John Hopkins, K. C. B., and staff, Captain Hamilton and officers of the Blake, Captain Holland and officers of the Australia, Captain Pipon and officers of the Magicienne, Commodore Fleet and officers of the Tartar. Officers from all the other foreign vessels were present also.

From the United States navy were Secretary Herbert, Admiral Gherardi, Rear Admiral Walker, Rear Admiral Benham, Commodore Erben, Lieutenant-Commander Richards, Rear Admiral Blaine, Captain Bartlett, Commander W. D. Whiting, Captain J. N. Miller and a score of other officers.

From the army were General O. O. Howard, General Tompkins, Major Wilpple, Colonel Charles L. Loughton and others. Secretary of Agriculture Morton was present. Among the club members present were Chauncey M. Depew, Horace Porter, J. Addams Bush and John R. Van Wormer, secretary of the club. A supper was served in the banquet hall, and the visitors were sent back to their ships shortly after midnight with a good impression of New York hospitality.

The President and Cabinet Arrive.

President and Mrs. Cleveland arrived from Washington late last night. With the president were the members of his cabinet, with the exception of Secretary of the Navy Hilliary A. Herbert, who reached the city just in advance of the squadron this today. The wives of several of the secretaries were included in the presidential party.

The Pennsylvania depot in Jersey City was hung with flags of all nations, streamers and bunting in honor of the arrival of so distinguished a party.

General Horace Porter, chairman of the reception committee, was absent and Perry Belmont was appointed a substitute to welcome the president. Lieutenant S. Spencer Wood, naval aid to Secretary Herbert requested that official and made a strong impression on the spectators with a display of gold lace and glittering swords.

The president and Mrs. Cleveland were the first to alight. There was a cordial reception on every hand. The entire party was escorted to carriages and taken to the Victoria hotel, where they will remain during their stay in the city.

President Cleveland excused himself from accepting the invitation to attend the banquet at the Union League club. The cabinet members were also compelled to decline similar invitations owing to the lateness of arrival.

How the Day Began.

At sunrise this morning there was more banging of cannons and more martial music which woke the echoes that the Palisades always keep in stock and sent them bounding over into the city. That was the beginning of the big naval review. From sunrise on until sunset there was to be a continual burning of powder and no one seemed disposed to be economical of noise or ammunition.

The city soon began to take on a holiday appearance.

Broadway and the avenues had been out in bunting the night before, and the morning breeze snapped out flags of all nations from a hundred thousand staffs and poles. From the big stores on State avenue especially bunting was thrown lavishly to the breeze.

The first official act of the day was when Secretary Herbert drove down the river and took up her position off the foot of West Twenty-third street. She went there to receive the reviewing party.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Mr. President Cleveland and his party, having finished breakfast at the Victoria hotel, got into carriages and were driven down to the river. There were the members of the cabinet, the justices of the supreme court and the committee having this part of the programme in charge. It was quite a procession which headed out of Broadway toward the wharf off which the Dolphin, with Secretary Herbert on board, was lying.

The Dolphin Passes Through the Fleets.

The moment that the president reached the deck of the Dolphin the big blue flag with the spread eagle on it was run up to the masthead, and the officers on the warships lining up by the river knew that the review was soon to commence.

The official notification came, however, in a short time from the Dolphin just as she tripped her anchor. This signal was repeated by the Miantonomah. Then came the one eventful moment of the day. The big review was about to begin.

On all the warships, foreign and national, there was a stirrill piping to quarters and calling of all hands. The decks, the fighting tops and, in the case of the square rigged ships, the yardarms were lined with object-loss. Every manjack, from the admiral to the smallest middy, was where he could see and be seen, with the exception perhaps of the gun crews, who stood at their posts below deck ready to feed the noise producing morsels to their hoarse voiced pets.

On the New York side there was a fringe of humanity that seemed to depend from everything along the shore. From the house tops to the wharves the spectators strained their eyes riverward.

Over on the Jersey shores the excursion steamers were keeled far over and looked ready to sink their loaded decks into the river at any moment.

Firing the Salutes.

Almost on time the reviewing squadron steamed into the space between the two lines of warships. Behind the Dolphin the Atlanta, Dolphin and Chicago followed by Boat Blake and then the cutter General Meigs, bearing other distinguished guests.

The Brazilian ship had the first turn at the salute as she was on the bow of the Dolphin reached a point opposite the Republica's stern the bands struck up, and at the last flourish the first of the 21 guns of the president's salute boomed out. All this time the ship's officers were bowing and lifting their hats to each other, and the officers were being saluted. This programme was repeated just 18 times.

At the head of the line the Dolphin came to anchor, and was at once surrounded by the launches and launches of the various warships which she had just passed. The boats contained the commanding officers of the ships, who were there to pay their respects to the president of the United States.

At 8 o'clock this evening occurs the celebration of General Grant's birthday by a big dinner at the new palace like hotel, the Waldorf.

At 11 p. m. tonight commences the grand naval ball to the visiting officers and their guests at Madison Square Garden. The officers of all the foreign and United States ships will attend in full uniform. President Cleveland will also be present. They will be entertained by a reception committee made up of the present Columbian executive committee, assisted by committees of five each from the army, the navy, the national guard and the naval reserves.

What Is Coming Next.

The programmia for the remainder of the week is as follows:

Friday—10 a. m.—Parade on land of foreign and American tars and marines, naval reserves of New York and Massachusetts and militia.

2 p. m.—Admirals and other high officers will arrive at city hall in carriages from the foot of Forty-second street and attend a reception given in their honor by the mayor and Columbian celebration committee.

12 m.—Departure of the president for Chicago.

3:30 p. m.—Junior officers of all vessels entertained at luncheon at the Waldorf by the chamber of commerce.

6 p. m.—Departure of Duke of Veragua and suite for Chicago.

8 p. m.—Admiral and commanding officers dined at Waldorf by chamber of commerce.

At close of parade, tars and marines entertained at a luncheon at the Seventh Regiment armory by the chamber of commerce.

Saturday—6 p. m.—Dinner by the Holland society to the officers of the Dutch ship Van Speijk at the Waldorf.

Hotel Waiters to Strike.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The strike has not been ordered yet among the hotel waiters. Mr. Mee, of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' National alliance, who is in Philadelphia, telegraphed that no waiters would leave that city to fill places of waiters here.

Dan Dickinson Declines.

DETROIT, April 27.—Hon. Don M. Dickinson, whose appointment as one of the government directors of the Union Pacific railway was announced by President Cleveland, states positively that he will not accept it.

Odd Fellows Celebrated.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The fiftieth anniversary of the introduction of the Order of Odd Fellows into the United States was celebrated by a street parade.

CABINET OFFICERS GO ALONG TOO.

They All Took a Special Train For New York and Will Not Return Until After Opening the Worlds Fair at Chicago—President Travels In an Observation Car.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—It has rarely happened in the history of this country that the seat of government has been entirely deserted by the president and his ministers. Such, however, is the case at present. The president and members of his cabinet have left Washington to witness the naval review, and it was in a special train on the Pennsylvania railroad.

A large crowd of citizens gathered at the station here and waited patiently for the arrival of the chief executive and his official family. Secretary Morton of the agricultural department appeared on the platform fully half an hour before the time of departure. He came alone and was soon joined by Attorney General Olney. Then came Mr. and Mrs. Carlisle, followed shortly afterward by Postmaster General and Mrs. Bissell. Secretary Lamont closely followed the postmaster general and Mrs. Lamont. HOOD'S PILLS cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion.

Secretary Gresham passed along bowing and shaking hands with numerous newspaper men, and last of all came Secretary Smith. The train, drawn by a ponderous engine, was made up of five vestibule cars, the first being the usual baggage and mail car, followed by the dining car Magdelin. Behind this came the double drawing room sleeper Charmion. The fourth car was the private compartment drawing room car Superb, which was occupied by the cabinet, and behind it the private observation and compartment car Wildwood, in which Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland found luxurious and comfortable quarters.

The President's Private Car.

The entire train is lighted by electricity, heated by steam and is altogether one of the finest in the Pennsylvania service. The dining car was tastefully decorated with cut flowers in which the lily and the rose predominated, and in the private car of the presidential party two large vases were filled with American beauties. In this car they will make the round trip to New York and Chicago.

Four minutes before the starting time President and Mrs. Cleveland drove up to the entrance where they were met and escorted to the train. As they approached the spectators fell back respectfully, taking off their hats and the President and Mrs. Cleveland bowed and smiled in return. Mrs. Cleveland was accompanied by Private Secretary Thurber.

General Schofield and Admiral Belknap will be the president's aids on the occasion of the review and will represent him on the steamer Meigs, which has been assigned to that duty. Besides the cabinet party Adjutant General Schofield will accompany the presidential party to Chicago, but will return to Washington immediately after the review.

The presidential train reached New York last evening at 10:30. On the trip to Chicago the party will be increased by the addition of the Duke of Veragua and party. They will leave New York Friday noon and reach the World's fair city the next day at the same hour. The train that left here will be used throughout the entire trip.

Conflicting News From Chili.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The state department is without any information regarding the reported surveillance of the United States legation building in Santiago by the Chilian officials with the belief that Holley and other refugees are sheltered by it. This is in direct contradictions to Minister Egan to the contrary. The latest news was to the effect that the two refugees had left the legation building.

The Jones' Parties Win.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The Jones governor's election case has been decided, but substantially won a victory in the appeal of the respective parties to the government. The Jones party are the de facto and the Brady party the de jure party, and the president took the view that as such he was compelled to recognize it, and could not therefore uphold the other side.

General Beal's Funeral.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The funeral services over the late General Beal will be held at his residence Friday morning. Hon. Levi P. Morton, Justice Field, Senators Sherman and Lodge, Representative Hitt and Judge Bancroft Davis will be the pall bearers. The remains will be taken to Baltimore later in the day for cremation.

No Protest Against Judd.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Secretary Gresham said that no protest had been received at the state department from the Austrian government against the appointment of MAX Judd as consul at Vienna.

A Town Under Water.

JACKSONVILLE, Ills., April 27.—This whole section of the country is under water, and fears of a repetition of last year's floods are entertained. A break on one side of the town has overflowed its banks and ruined a number of houses, and their occupants will have to be taken off on rafts.

After Physicians Failed, Hood's Sarsaparilla Perfectly Cured.

Great mental agony is endured by parents who see their children suffering from disfiguring humors like eczema, and for which there seems no cure. This is turned to joy when Hood's Sarsaparilla is resorted to, for it expels the foul humors from the blood, and restores the diseased skin to fresh, healthy brightness. Read the following from grateful parents:

DEATH OF CAPTAIN WILTSE.

He Was the Gallant Captain Who Commanded the Boston at Hawaii.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Captain Gilbert Wiltse, U. S. N., died at his home in this city of congestion of the brain. Thirty-eight years of his life (all but a few months) he spent in the navy, and almost continuously being the Boston, which he commanded during the trouble in Hawaii, and he led the marines who hoisted our flag, establishing a protectorate there. He was relieved of his command about four months ago and placed upon waiting orders. He passed most of his time ashore in the city. A week ago he attended the reception of the Duke de Veragua at the Hotel Waldorf. He could not sleep and was worse next morning. He grew worse rapidly until Saturday, when he rallied slightly and continued to improve until Monday, when he took a change for the worse, became unconscious and remained so until he died.

CAPTAIN WILTSE.

Captain Wiltse was born at Binghamton, N. Y., Nov. 29, 1838. He was graduated from the naval academy at Annapolis and was appointed acting midshipman from New York Sept. 20, 1855. He was made lieutenant Oct. 31, 1861, gained the rank of lieutenant commander Jan. 5, 1869, and that of commander Nov. 5, 1873. He was promoted to the rank of captain Jan. 26, 1887. He distinguished himself on several occasions in the navy during the civil war.

DR. BUCHANAN CONVICTED.

He Was Found Guilty of Murder in the First Degree.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Dr. Robert W. Buchanan, who has been on trial for the past few weeks charged with poisoning his wife, was found guilty of murder in the first degree. The jury had been out since Tuesday evening and their lengthy deliberation gave the defendant and his counsel the hope that they would at least disagree. The verdict was a surprise.

The Buchanan case has excited a good deal of interest, following so closely as it did the case of Carlyle W. Harris, and was similar in many respects to that celebrated case. Buchanan, like Harris, was a physician, and was accused of killing his wife by giving her morphine. He had married a woman much older than himself.

The woman, Anna B. Sutherland Buchanan, had amassed considerable money through her proprietorship of a disorderly house in Newark, N. J. The couple did not live very happily together, and when the woman died suddenly under suspicious circumstances, leaving a will in which she bequeathed all her property to her husband, an old admirer of the woman called the attention of the authorities to the case. An interview had been published in Buchanan's arrest, and his subsequent trial ended in his conviction. Counsel have given notice of the usual exceptions and an appeal.

Lorse's Damage Suit Thrown Out.

CORNING, N. Y., April 27.—Justice Rumsey has ordered judgments of nonsuit against Jennie O'Neill Potter, Oliver M. Warner, Charles Green, Charles G. Hutchison, William Richtmyer, John O. Adsit, Edward B. Youmans and Roswell R. Moss, defendants in the suit for $250,000 damages brought by Henry Belmont Lorse on account of his arrest and imprisonment at the Ovid Insane asylum, which he claims was done to ruin his business and social prospects. The judge said there was no evidence to make any of these defendants parties to the action.

Fish Pirates Captured.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., April 27.—Fish pirates and game constables had an exciting adventure on the Oswegatchie river, near Ogdensburg, Monday night, as a result of which Game Constable Hutchins and two assistants captured Edward Miller and John Langley while in the act of seining a net in the river for the purpose of catching fish. The men were sent to jail for 10 days.

The Sunday Opening Question.

JACKSON PARK, CHICAGO, April 27.—Sunday opening of the World's fair came up at the meeting of the national commission. A resolution looking to that end was introduced and after much debate referred to the judiciary committee. The members of this committee are opposed to Sunday opening, and this, it is thought, ends the matter.

LIKE A ROYAL WEDDING.

Nuptials of Miss Havemeyer and Perry Tiffany.

AN ARCHBISHOP TIED THE KNOT.

The Havemeyer Mansion Turned Into a Wilderness of Flowers—The Daughter of the Havemeyers Blazed With Diamonds and Priceless Stones.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The most gorgeous wedding of the spring season in town was that of Miss Marie Havemeyer, the fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer, to Mr. Perry Tiffany, a son of Mrs. William Tiffany, and grandson of Commodore Perry, which was celebrated at the magnificent home of Mr. and Mrs. Havemeyer.

The spacious and imposing entrance to the house was banked on either side with pots of hydrangeas of pink and blue and an assortment of fine palms. Entering the vestibule the scene was one of surpassing beauty.

A Wilderness of Flowers.

Over the stairway, leading to the second floor and running 140 feet, was erected a canopy of ivy, garlanded with white roses and lilies of the valley. The conservatory at the head of this staircase was decorated its entire length, 65 feet, with blooming plants and huge pots of palms and ferns. The white and gold ballroom was dressed entirely with white roses and lilies.

In the west side of the conservatory was erected a canopy of white satin and point lace, supported by four columns of gold and onyx. Under this canopy the marriage ceremony was performed by Archbishop Corrigan, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Connolly, his secretary; the Rev. Sylvester Malone of the church of Sts. Peter and St. Paul, Williamsburg, and the Rev. Charles Colton, rector of St. Stephen's.

The bride was escorted by her father. She wore a gown of white satin, covered with point lace, and a veil in which was worn a sprig of seven diamond stars, a gift from her mother. The front of the corsage was studded with many diamond pins and brooches, but the most conspicuous of the number was a fleur de lis of solitaires, also a present from Mrs. Havemeyer. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley. The bridegroom, with his best man, his brother, Mr. William Tiffany, stood under the satin and lace canopy ready to receive the bride.

Under a Satin Canopy.

The archbishop was attired in his pontifical vestments, and the assistants wore black cassocks and white lace surtanes. Two gold candelabra on a stand behind the archbishop were filled with lighted candles, and with the hundreds of electric lights and the elegant toilettes of the bridal party and guests assembled outside of the white satin ribbon, which was stretched across the room, combined to present a picture of rare magnificence. The bridesmaids, all in pink silk and white lace, formed an effective group at the sides of the officiating clergyman. Each carried a large bunch of purple violets.

The wedding gifts were not displayed, having been packed and sent to one of the deposit vaults. They represented several hundred thousand dollars in value.

Railroad Thievery at Reading.

READING, April 27.—The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company have suffered numerous losses in this city this spring by the depredations of thieves; a determined effort is being made to put a stop to these robberies. Upon information received Detective Denhard arrested Harry Hertzog, Edward Fry, Charles Ray and William Leighthaw, who are charged with stealing iron and lumber. The accused entered bail for a hearing.

Pugilist Sullivan In Troy.

TROY, N. Y., April 27.—John L. Sullivan appeared here last night. He was drunk all day and was ordered out of the Troy House. WOMAN AND HOME.

A FAMOUS DAUGHTER'S TRIBUTE TO A NOBLE MOTHER.

Women of Canada—Remarks About Linen.

The Burning of Waste Food—Work That Wealthy Women Do—Women Dress Now For Women—Points For the Stout.

Frances Willard says of her mother:

She never talked about woman's rights in the early years of her children, but we somehow felt and knew that she was a free spirit. She was "free born" as we would "free born." She went about her work with a certain dignity that could not be mistaken. A sense of self respect, but not of self assertion, must have impressed all who knew her. She accepted the circumscribed lot of women, but was perfectly aware that she had in herself the ability to have filled a larger place in the world. Yet, as she went about her household cares it seemed as if she understood what good George Herbert meant in those oft quoted lines:

A room well swept, as by God's laws,
Makes that and the action fine.

Only one occasion do I recall when the subject of woman's rights was mentioned between my father and my mother. About the year 1851 my father came home from the adjacent town which he visited almost daily and in which the rest of the family went but a few times a year. He was in remarkable spirits, and as he paced up and down the sitting room, according to his wont, while mother busied her swift fingers with the family mending, he said, "We heard today in the city that Neal Dow has carried out his ideas beyond what anybody supposed would ever be, and the law has been adopted."

My father was in political life and was one of the 19 Free Soil members in the legislature of Wisconsin who in 1849 voted for a similar law. Pausing in his swift career up and down the room, he said to mother, standing before her with his arms folded, "When do you suppose that our poor rum cursed Wisconsin will ever have a law like that?" Whereupon mother, dropping her needle and looking up into his face with a sudden glow of enthusiasm, replied, "I think, Josiah, there will be a law just like that all over the nation some day when women vote."

My father was a great conservative so far as the woman question was concerned, though progressive on most other subjects. He seemed much shocked, and putting on his look of irony which we understood so well and dreaded not a little, he said, "Perhaps you will be good enough to tell me how it is to be brought about that women shall vote?" Mother's enthusiasm was dampened. She looked no longer into his face, but into the glowing winter fire, and said: "I shall have to answer that question in Scripture language, even as Paul did when he said to his jailer: 'You have put us into prison, we being Romans. You will just have to come and take us out.'" They spoke no more upon the subject; but, sitting by, a little pitcher with large ears, I drank in and have never forgotten the suffrage speech made by my mother—the first and well nigh the last one I ever heard—until I began to make such speeches on my own account 21 years later.

When my mother was 93 and sat for her picture, Anna Gordon, wishing to induce that lighting up of the countenance on which the operator so much insists, stood where mother could see her, and, patriotically with her playful finger, "laid off" to mother her full belief that, old as she was, she would live long enough to vote. Several pictures were taken on that occasion, but the one in which Anna played this part has a smile most characteristic, one that shows how thoroughly that sunny nature loved the beams of light that fructify the mind and make up what we call progress.

The last time mother ever left the house except to take a morning ride was on a cheerless day of April before her death in August, when she, who had already taken part in more conventions than any, although the ballot was only permitted to women for school officers, went with other progressive women of Evanston, climbed the stairs to the public room where the ballot box was located and cast in her first and last vote. She wrote to me about it quite in detail and with great interest. That was the last letter of the hundreds I had received and cherished from her kind and faithful hand.

The Women of Canada.

Much comment has been made of late about the freshness and brightness of Canadian matrons. The climate, their rather regular, simple habits and various other reasons have been given for this, but one of the best explanations was recently voiced by a woman, an able physician, who has had an extended practice among the better class of women in Canada.

She says that these people eat enough pickles, preserves, sweets and rich food to their hearts' content, regardless of the average American. Their habits are simple in a way. Their diet is in many respects atrocious, but good health and strength, especially among the matrons and younger elderly women, according to this statement, is that when Canadian girls marry they accept the responsibilities that come with their new condition not only without protest but with a certain degree of willingness. They rarely war against nature, but take excellent care of themselves, and as a consequence have better health and better times than many of their American sisters. Being questioned as to the truth of this, a Canadian woman somewhat noted for her frankness and youthful appearance, although the mother of a large family of rollicking youngsters, said:

"When Canadian girls marry, they take it for granted that they are to have families the wisest thing for them to do is to make the best of it, take good care of themselves and try to make their children and their homes happy. Then the children are grown or partly so, the mother has an idea that she has earned a little recreation and pleasure. The older ones are taught to care for the younger, and in all well regulated Canadian households things would go on almost the same if the mother were away for a third of the year. The older girls and boys are taught to take responsibilities, look after the younger ones, attend to household affairs and know what is needed and where and how best to supply the lack.

"Instead of postponing the raising of their children or avoiding it by all sorts of injurious methods, these wedding cakes headed women feel a pride in having brought up an interesting family, then taking the leisure and time that in their younger days

Singing by a Quartett—"Didn't Spot the Wood".....Jerome
Glee Club.
Solo—"Postillion".....Mollett
Mr. Wilmot.
Duett and chorus—"Romeo and Juliet"....Berry
Messrs. Bragdon and Johnston.
Chorus—"That Song of Old".....Philp
Song—"Love and Spring".....Henderson
Solo.....Schuster
Mr. Bragdon.
"Chestnuts."
Glee Club.
Solo—"The Quaker Boy".....Bragdon
Mr. Bailey.
Medley—College Songs.
Solo—"Little Casey".....Bragdon
Chorus—"Give to Him and Tender"...Schumann
Closing Song—"On the Banks of the Old Raritan."

With several Rutgers songs. followed by the college yell, the programme was brought to a close.

That the audience was delighted with the entire programme was shown by their prolonged applause, and several encores were responded to to satisfy them.

The chorus to the solo "Freshman's Lament" was sung by the Glee Club in a side room. It was "Home, Sweet Home."

As an encore to "Didn't Steal the Wood," the audience was informed that "silently Steal Away" would be rendered.

The singers took their places on the platform, evidently to sing, and then quietly stole from the platform.

Another encore was an imitation to a steam calliope. The imitations of Madame Patti, and of a lady making her first appearance in public were given as encores and called forth well merited applause.

HOLMES GETS THREE MONTHS.

Hannah Clark Sent to the Reform School.

Martin Holmes, who assaulted young Patrick McClymont by smearing his face with black grease, about a month ago, was tried at Elizabeth to-day. Owing to the fact that Holmes committed a murderous assault on a fellow prisoner last Tuesday, his sentence was heavier. He received three months in the county jail. Mr. George De Meza of this city was his lawyer.

The case of Hannah Clark, the young girl who was arrested for larceny, and sent to the county jail with the recommendation that she be sent to the Reform School, was sentenced to the Reform School.

BREVITIES.

—The Somerset street roadbed is receiving a much needed scraping.

—James Daly, arrested last night for being drunk, was fined three dollars this morning.

—A fine line of ladies' square toe Oxford ties and shoes, may be found at White's, 18 West Front street.

—The sidewalks of West Fifth street are being cut down to grade, and many fine shade trees will have to be cut down to grade also.

—The proceeds of the Olde Folke Concert recently held at the Vincent chapel will be sufficient to refurbish the parsonage at 94 Grove street.

—A complete report of the Grand Naval Parade on the Hudson river yesterday and the gorgeous land parade today, with illustrations, appears on the second page.

—If you are planting a garden and are in need of seeds, a call at Mr. R. N. Spencer's, on Somerset street, and a look over his fine assortment of everything in this line will pay you.

—About half-past three this afternoon a horse ran away on Park avenue. The coachman was thrown out and run over. He was not seriously injured. The rig belonged to Mr. Stewart.

—Several members of the Plainfield Court of Independent Order of Foresters visited Court Columbus at Elizabeth last night. They returned gratified with the pleasant manner in which they had been entertained.

—If you have any business with a man of business, call at the hour of business, conduct your business like a man of business, then go about your business so that the man of business can attend to his business. That's business.—Ex.

—The special sales at White's, he says, have been very satisfactory, and that the public was pleased at the bargains he had secured as he was pleased at the public's way of showing appreciation. See his advertisement for the latest.

A SURPRISE TO THE PASTOR.

The Real Object of the Ladies' Aid Society Entertainment.

The entertainment given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church, last night, was a very pleasant one. Everything was well arranged, and in spite of the inclement weather a good many friends attended and the room was well filled. The programme consisted of music furnished by Messrs. W. Chamberlain and F. Back, recitations by Mr. John Carney, and a dialogue by Miss Zeiss, Miss Mohl, and Miss Bohsterle. All of which were excellently performed. Afterwards refreshments were served.

Without doubt everybody enjoyed it greatly, but the Rev. F. Koechli was no doubt the most delighted of all. During the evening Mrs. Schierenb presented to him, in the name of the Ladies' Society and the members and friends of the church, a package containing $65, as a present. He had not been informed of the nature and purpose of the entertainment, but was kept in the dark until the mystery was solved by a real surprise.

LOOKING FOR A HOUSE.

He Found One but he Did Not Rent It.

Yesterday afternoon Godfrey Fine, who said he lived in Easton and worked in Cranford, came to Plainfield, in search of a house, as he intended to move his family here. He visited the real estate agents and afterwards those who were not particularly interested whether he secured a suitable place or not for his family, but when Fine left them he was in such a condition that he secured a home for himself for the night. Policeman Kiely acted as agent and invited Fine to inspect a place he had to let. Fine accompanied him, and though he didn't seem to have very good use of his legs he managed to get there with help. He liked the place so well he stayed there all night.

Plain drunk was the charge made against him this morning before Judge Coddington, who suspended sentence, as it was Fine's first offense and he begged so hard to be let off.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Aaron D. Thompson will soon commence the erection of two houses at Netherwood.

Messrs. Joseph Malone and John Hickey, formerly of this city but now of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., are visiting friends here.

The Bound Brook Democrat says: "Clarence Carhart is about to remove to Plainfield, where he has a position in the Scott Press Works."

Messrs. Jeremiah Manning and Martin I. Cooley were re-elected trustees of the First Baptist church for a term of three years, Wednesday night.

The April number of Jersey Holmes contains an illustration of the beautiful grounds of Mr. R. F. M. Chase's "Edgewood," near the mountain.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis will occupy his pulpit in the Seventh-day Baptist church as usual to-morrow. His morning theme will be "Divine Investments."

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Buckley have removed from 13 East Front street to 39 North avenue. Mr. Buckley is the new delivery clerk at the freight house.

Mr. William Sullivan and Miss Rose Connors were married last night at the home of the bride's parents on West Third street. The Rev. Father Smythe officiated.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Hurlbut and family will move to New York in May. Charles is going to Columbia College and Miss Hurlbut will attend a seminary in New York and the change of residence is so that the young people may have the constant and full influence of home.

Last evening about twenty-five of the host of friends of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Smith gathered at their residence on Grandview avenue and spent a most enjoyable evening. The evening's entertainment consisted of vocal and instrumental music and dancing. Piano solos were rendered by Miss Lena Smalley, Miss Jenie Hargreaves and Miss Jennie Smith sang. A collation wound up the evening's festivities.

Under the heading "Has Sought Another Home," the Austin (Texas) Daily Statesman, says, in its issue of Friday, April 21st, of a former Plainfield: "Mr. C. H. Schermerhorn, who came to Austin some months ago, with the projectors of the Austin Sewerage Company, and has since been the engineer in charge of the work, left last night for Newberry, S. C., where he will at once begin to put in a system of Water Works. Since his arrival in Austin he has made many warm friends, who, while they regret his departure, wish him the greatest success in his new home."

Mrs. Yoss is Better.

Mrs. John R. Yoss, who has not only suffered affliction in the death of her husband and two daughters, but who was near death's door herself with the diphtheria, has recovered and yesterday the quarantine warning was removed from the house.

Sohl Withdraws His Suit.

The suit pending in Justice Nash's court, between Mr. Frank Sohl and Peter Hasted, has been withdrawn by the plaintiff, who paid the costs of the court.

RUNAWAY ON FRONT STREET.

Expressman Coddington's Team Cause Considerable Excitement.

A gray team belonging to expressman Coddington caused considerable excitement about 5.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, by running through Front street at a lively gait.

The team started from the corner of Richmond street, while the driver was in the house after goods.

There were several narrow escapes along Front street. Drivers had to handle their wagons up close to the sidewalk to give the runaways a clear road.

A man attempted to stop them at the corner of Plainfield avenue, by catching one of the horses by the bridle. The man was thrown to the ground but fortunately he rolled out of the way of the wagon wheels and escaped being run over.

A little further on as the team slowed up it was stopped without any damage being done.

An electric car was just ahead of the runaways and as they kept the track it was feared they would run into it.

TWO BOYS DROWNED.

They Were Carried Over a Dam While Fishing.

Charles Baldwin, who lived near the dam in the Bartian river at Bound Brook in company with his brother Edward, of Newark, who was visiting him for the day, and Fred Volkmar, a neighbor, were fishing above the dam yesterday, when their boat was carried over the dam and upset. Charles Fisher, living near, hearing the young men's cries, went to their assistance. By that time, however, Edward Baldwin was the only person in sight. He was taken in a boat in an exhausted condition. The two other young men were drowned. The body of Volkmar was recovered late in the afternoon, but Baldwin's body has not yet been found. Charles Baldwin was twenty-one years old, and Volkmar was nineteen.

Plainfield Photographers at the Naval Review.

The "Meta" was one of the boats chartered by the "Photographers Long Ago" for use of the members and their friends at the naval review yesterday. The tickets were $2 and $3 each, and limited to two hundred. Two dollars for the first 150 and $3 for the remaining fifty.

The "Meta" was in two collisions during the day. The first time a tug ran into her and the second time she struck a big freighter a glancing blow. No damage was done the first time, but as she slid along the freighter's stern the covering of the paddle wheel was crushed in. Several Elizabethan were among the wet but jolly party aboard.

Very pretty views were frequently spoiled by the numerous and fussy appearing tugs, which seemed to be everywhere. One tug with a shrieking steam whistle, which was operated by delighted. Rev. Dean McNulty is president half an hour after the review. The capabilities of that whistle, which was on full blast all the time, were fully recognized, if not enjoyed, by the "Meta's" passengers.

Catholic Total Abstinence Convention.

The twenty-third annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of New Jersey will be held at Institute Hall, Paterson, on Decoration Day, May 30th. The Union is composed of 25 T. A. B. societies from all sections of the State, all of which will be represented by delegates. Rev. Dean McNulty is president of the society, and Mr. Robert McCabe, of Paterson, is State Secretary. During the convention the delegates will be the guests of St. John's T. A. B. society of Paterson, which has about seventy members. The societies of this city will send delegates.

Mr. MacDonald's Purchase.

Mr J. Fred MacDonald of this city has purchased from the New Jersey Land Improvement Company a tract of 4,000 feet fronting on North avenue, in Netherwood. The land extends from about the depot nearly to Terrill road, and is about eight feet above the street. It will be improved for the location of residences. William E. Taylor, the well-known real estate auctioneer of Hackensack, who is a cousin of Mr. MacDonald, is interested with him in the purchase.

To Stop the Improvements.

Notice was served yesterday on the Mayor and City Council of Elizabeth, and also on the Central and Pennsylvania railroads, that next Monday in the supreme Court at Trenton, application would be made by John F. Rogge of Elizabeth, for a writ of certiorari to restrain the railroad companies from going ahead with the improvements at Elizabeth in connection with the depressing of grade crossings. It is thought that the court will refuse to issue the writ.

No Cause for Action.

For the third time the case of Griffen vs. Springer was tried to-day, before Justice Wadsworth and a jury, the two previous trials having resulted in a disagreement of the jurors. The suit was over a lease of a store in Pennsylvania.

Judge Coddington was counsel for the defendant, and Mr. Craig A. Marsh represented the plaintiff.

The jury brought in a verdict of "no cause for action."

OF SURPASSING MAGNIFICENCE.

A Stupendous Spectacle Presented with Historical Accuracy.

O HAT that children are delighted and instructed, incite charmed and amused, and all others really amazed and astonished, does not convey a tithe of the feelings created by a visit to Barnum and Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth. Every beholder of its wonderous features are thrilled and filled with astonishment at the brilliant magnificence. Its magnitude so great that its resources nothing so much as itself—a perfect world of wonders, ancient scenery, rare and costly exhibits, and tremendous historical displays. Its great popularity and success is owing as much almost to the fact that it is honorably conducted, honestly presented, truthful, moral and educational, as to the magnificent and historical worth of its performance. The vast number of its wonderful features and rare attractions also are a large factor in rendering it so successful, but taken in its entirety it stands unequalled in the world's history, the one shining example of the truth of the maxim, "survival of the fittest." To all its great circus in three rings, elevated stage performances, novel and daring hippodrome races, gallery of equitizing illusions, double menageries, herds of elephants, camels, 400 fine bred horses and ponies, curious quadrupeds, and other wonders, the show has been enriched by the additions of the most magnificent spectacle of the ancient ever looked upon. The stupendous historical piece, called Columbus and the Discovery of America, is an achievement in spectacular production almost beyond comprehension. Twelve hundred characters are represented with 400 of the most expert dancers from the leading theatres of Europe. The life of Columbus is illustrated from the period beginning with his residence in Portugal to the successful termination of his voyage of discovery, with all the principal events in Spanish history during that time. The Spanish sovereigns Ferdinand and Isabella, with their brilliant court, are reproduced, with real tournaments on foot and on horseback, combats, festivals, and triumphal entries. The siege of the ancient cities of Baza and Granada are represented, with the battles between the Spaniards and Moors. The life of the Moorish kings are accurately shown, with the feasts, revelries, dances, etc., given in the magnificent halls of the famed palace of the Alhambra. The dress and weapons of the soldiers, grandees, nobles, warriors and cavaliers, are all historically correct. The scenery, costing $75,000, shows the walls, turrets, castles, palaces, gates, battlements and monuments of the old cities of Spain, while the costumes of the dancers, ladies of the court, the nobles, priests, friars and military, are of the most brilliant character and cost $250,000. Ancient armory, with all the paraphernalia, arquebuses, cannon, emblems, triumphal cars, chariots and other objects cost $50,000, and the whole of the magnificent exhibit of surpassing worth, wealth and elegance. It will be here on Wednesday, May 3d, with the street parade at nine o'clock in the morning.

Plainfield.

[From Jersey Homes.]

There are few handsomer sub-metropolitan cities than Plainfield. Its growth has been very rapid for the last year or two and arises from two causes—the legitimate spreading out of its industries and the no less legitimate influx of New Yorkers who have discovered its beauties of air and scenery, the advantages it possesses in social and educational lines and what is fully as important, the fact that the business portion of New York may be reached as quickly and far more comfortably from Plainfield than any of the Central Railroad of New Jersey as from "up town" in New York over the elevated R. R. To such considerable proportions has the "New York population" of Plainfield grown that the Central railroad has put on elaborate fast train service, of which Jersey Homes will have more to say at some future time. A notable feature of the growth of the city has been the erection of handsome residences which will bear favorable comparison with those of any other suburban section. Within the past few months a very fine system of electric railways has been introduced. They are double tracked through a large part of the town and plans have been made for the extension of the line to North Plainfield. A franchise has been duly granted and the work of carting the rails has been begun, though there is likely to be some delay because of an injunction that has been served on it. In the matter of street improvements, electric lighting, etc., Plainfield is not behind, and the business portion of the city is improving to a degree fully commensurate with the improvement in the residence portion.

Another New Building for Front Street.

The frame building, No. 12 West Front street, owned by Mr. Andrew Love, and occupied by him as a grocery store until recently, is being torn down. In its place Mr. Love will erect a three-story brick building. The first floor will be used as a store and the upper floors will be converted into flats. Such a building will be an improvement to Front street and a credit to Plainfield.

Cut His Throat and Then Jumped from the Roof.

New York, April 28, (Special.)—James Buchanan, aged 32 years, a well known "ninth-warder" committed suicide at 5.45 o'clock this morning by jumping from the roof of his home at 112 Bleecker street. He was horribly mangled.

President Cleveland Injured.

New York, April 28. (Special.)—As President Cleveland was getting into his carriage on Broadway to-day he struck his head against the top of the door cutting a gash across his forehead. He was taken to his hotel where a physician attended him.

MORE TROUBLE FOR RACE PEOPLE.

Bookmakers at Elizabeth Served with More Writs of Attachment.

James R. Steen, Peter De Lacy's lawyer, Wednesday afternoon swore out a dozen writs of attachments in the County Clerk's office, Elizabeth, against as many bookmakers for $12,000 each and gave them to Sheriff Hicks to execute.

Patrick Coleman also swore out an attachment against Michael F. Dwyer and H. C. McIntyre for $22,000.

The Sheriff had to serve this also and he went to the track and put an attachment on Mr. Dwyer's interest in this property, which the latter said was $40,000 and also on his stable of thirteen horses which he valued at $6,000, making a total of of $74,000.

Lawyer Samuel Kalisch, counsel for the Jockey Club, was in the Sheriff's office when Steen rushed in with the writs from the County Clerk's, and he declared they were worthless, as Chief Justice Beasley's decision last Saturday in the case of Bookmaker George Morgan knocked the bottom out of the whole proceedings.

Lawyer Steen denied this, and called upon the Sheriff to do his duty.

Notes of the Wheelmen.

Charles Hoppe, the crack racer of the Bedford Cycle Club, is training hard for the Irvington-Milburn road race.

The Elizabeth Athletic Cyclers have chosen the following officers: President, Robert Gentle; Captain, H. L. Saltonstall; Secretary, James A. Wood; Second Lieutenant, Howard Marie; Color Bearer, C. F. Morrell; Flag Bearer, J. W. Price; Bugler, E. R. Tucker. The Club has now a membership of seventy-six.

The entry list for the annual Memorial Day Irvington-Milburn road race already gives evidence of being the largest ever received for this famous race. H. E. Raymond will act as referee and A. B. Barkman, the originator of the race, as official starter; F. P. Prial, the official handicapper of the L. A. W., has contributed his services as handicapper.

A Hustling Bicycle Agent.

Kelsey H. Wyckoff, manager of Frank L. C. Martin's branch bicycle house at No. 103 Church street, has a large stock of new models on exhibition at that place. He also has a repair shop fitted up with the latest improved machinery, and is ready to do the most difficult repairing, since he will have an expert bicycle machinist at his establishment to-morrow and for several days after.

Mr. Wyckoff is a very enthusiastic bicycle hustler. He has sold machines to the following prominent citizens within a week: Asher Atkinson, Judge Elce, John R. Clark, Nettie Hale, Howard Hatfie, Charles Furman, and Fred Hoe.—New Brunswick Home News.

Epworth League Convention.

The details of the Epworth League State convention, on May 10 and 11, are rapidly being completed. The meetings will be held in the Central M. E. church, Newark. Among the speakers will be Rev. Rev. W. H. Lewis, of Bordentown; General James F. Rusling, Trenton; the Rev. Dr. Henry Spellmeyer, Elkanah Drake, Rev. Dr. James R. Mace, New Brunswick; the Rev. Dr. J. Clement French, and the Rev. Dr. John Handley, Bridgeton. Large delegations are promised from every part of the State. The indications point to one of the greatest gatherings of this character ever held.

Also to Go in June.

Mr. Honeyman's Tours to Chicago are filling up, and, to accommodate many of those who are to be patrons of it, he announces that the free excursion will be June 28; the second July 7 and the third August 25. The first named is a new one, and the time is more favored by those who can leave home so early.

He also announces that the return trip will be by Niagara Falls, where a stop will be made.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Do not keep on scolding about the badness of the bad. It makes people tired. Praise the goodness of the good awhile for a change.

The United States was some time ago shown to be at the head of armor plate manufacturing nations. The tests of the Brown segmental wire wound cannon at Bridesburg, Pa., go to show that we can also make the strongest guns of any nation. Three shots fired from it in the presence of government experts prove that it withstood a pressure of over 70,000 pounds. The gun consists of a core formed of segments of steel 19 feet long, wound about with 37 miles of wire.

Difference of religion is at the bottom of the bitterness against home rule in Ulster. It is hard for an American to understand that in the north of Ireland Protestants and Catholics still regard each other with so much dislike and suspicion that a stranger might fancy the "siege of Derry" was not yet ended and that King James' followers were still fighting. In America the two creeds live peaceably side by side, and with the exception of an occasional outbreak, or "break" of somebody's tongue or pen, one may conclude that differences of opinion in theology have been sunk in the one absorbing aim of getting on in this world. In north Ireland, however, there are not so great possibilities in the way of accumulating wealth in this world; consequently the doughty Ulstermen turn their attention more to the next. There is no doubt many of them really believe that if the home rule measure were passed they would no longer be safe in the enjoyment of their religion. It is no credit either to Balfour, the Conservative leader, that he has done all in his power to arouse the flames of religious dissension.

Equalizing Gold and Silver.

One way of equalizing more nearly the supply of the two metals will be tried this year that has not yet been resorted to to any great extent. That is the working of the known gold mines for all there is in them. Silver has been depressed so long that except in uncommonly rich mines it does not pay to extract the ore. Consequently the attention of capitalists turns more and more to economic and improved methods of extracting gold.

This will be a great gold mining year if the present indications are justified. A new way of working quartz is called the cyanide of potassium process. By this method quartz that was formerly not thought worth anything can be made to yield a paying quantity of the yellow metal. Placer gold is the gold washed out of veins or lodes by the action of water. Recently attention has been given to inventions which bring out of the placer deposits much more metal than could be obtained under the old wasteful washing process. A powerful air exhaust pumping machine upon a flat bottomed boat brings up in great quantity mud and sand from the bed of streams where placer gold is found. Hydraulic machinery will now wash down whole mountain if necessary. On the whole, there need not be any great surprise if the beginning of 1894 finds the world's gold supply considerably increased.

Galapagos.

Unfortunately it was a little previous, so to speak—the announcement that a treaty had been concluded with Ecuador for the acquirement by the United States of a coaling station on the Galapagos islands. It is a thing that ought to be yet, however. Perhaps the story will bring about its own materialization like the famous lie Charles Lamb wrote to a friend in Australia. By the time the latter reached Australia the lie had ' come a truth, and the occurrence ' Lamb invented had actuall ' which

We have now two co ' happened, the Pacific besides ' ading stations in extremity of So ' ast at the southern Pago Pago, ' th America. One is at harbor, ' n Samoa the other, Pearl the ' s in Hawaii at the mouth of the ' river, near Honolulu. The ' ard we should by all means have on the Galapagos islands. These three would be points into which both merchant and naval ships could put for repairs and coal supplies. With our ever increasing commercial interests in the Pacific, we should have such stations within easy reach everywhere.

The Galapagos islands are under the equator on the direct route from South American ports to Honolulu. They are 700 miles from the South American coast and about 450 from Hawaii. This group is also on the direct route between San Francisco and Valparaiso. Chatham is the island that has been mentioned as the one most desirable for the location of a coaling station. One or two vessels of the new navy might linger around their personality if we had possession and be in easy reach of either Hawaii or the South American ports.

The Galapagos are uninhabited by any human residents, which perhaps is all the better. They ought to be studied both for purposes of science and romance. The flora and fauna present a rich field of exploration to the scientist, while the novelist might make them the scene of many a wild, weird and thrilling romance. The heroine of his story might, for instance, be attacked and nearly carried off by one of the monster turtles which are known as a survival of the prehistoric time.

TARS ON SHORE.

The Sailors of Ten Navies In Parade.

A BRILLIANT NAVAL BALL.

The Flower of the Nation Greeted the Admirals.

The Review Wound Up In a Grand Blaze of Powder—Warships Overrun With the Visiting Landsmen—The Flash Light Exhibition at Night—Mrs. Cleveland Was Taken Ill and Did Not Attend the Ball. The President Off For Chicago—End of the Great Columbian Celebration.

NEW YORK, April 28.—When the last warship sails out of the harbor what the average New Yorker will not know about navies, naval etiquette, equipment and kindred subjects will not be worth knowing. Since the decks of the war vessels were thrown open to visitors late yesterday afternoon the Hudson has been alive with the boats of money coining ferrymen and the anchored vessels have been surrounded by a pigmy fleet. By the visiting hours when the president and the admirals had commenced to toast each other in the cabin of the Dolphin.

Long after the launches with the commanding officers of the various ships had passed up the river the naval reserve and police patrol boats maintained the cordon about the fleet, through which no vessel of the merchant marine was allowed to pass.

It was not expected that the reception on board the Dolphin was well under way. Then the line was broken between the Dolphin and the New York shore, and the many hundred vessels of the merchant marine massed at the head of the fleets and between the Jersey shore and the American warships were permitted to make their way down the river.

Then followed one of the most remarkable sights ever before seen on the waters of the river or in the harbor. Each and every one of the many kinds of vessels seemed to have gone wild. They vied with one another in trying to make the most noise. From the big ocean steamer to the smallest of yachts it was all the same. The whistles of all continued shrieking and tooting salutes to the foreign ships. From the big excursion steamers came cheer after cheer. From the sailing yachts, with their sails furled and in tow of tugs, one gun was fired as each yacht came abreast of a foreign man-of-war.

The crowds on the excursion steamers were so great that the boats themselves seemed to be on the verge of capsizing, their port wheels scarcely touching the water.

For two hours the procession continued to pass and at times nearly blocked the littoral space in which they had to move. The three vessels that excited the most interest with the excursionists were the English ship Blake, the French protectest cruiser Jean Bart and the Italian protected cruiser Etna.

An incident of the parade happened as the towering ships were passing up the river. Just as the Monmouth, one of the Brazilian cruiser Republica the collision from the discharges of one of her guns broke nearly every piece of glass in the windows of the Monmouth's starboard side. For ' fortunately no one was injured, and ' a momentary scare nothing happened.

The Reception on the Dolphin.

The scene while the Dolphin was lying at anchor receiving the foreign admirals and diplomats was one of the most interesting episodes of the whole review. The Dolphin had dropped anchor very near the British flagship Blake, on the Riverside shore, and the coast guard steamer, also called the Blake, on which the diplomatic corps had been carried along—except some of the lady members of the diplomatic family, who had taken shelter in the Monmouth for greater comfort—also lay close inshore and near at hand. The Spanish caravels were just within hailing distance in the channel, and the innumerable tugs and pleasure steamers, released from further restrictions, circled around them, and the president's yacht, the Monmouth, and the American Blake, like flies around a honeypot. The similitude became still more appropriate as the myriads of tiny steam launches began to make their appearance, all aiming for the port side of the Dolphin.

First to appear was the British admiral, in full official uniform, and simultaneous with his embarkment Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, was seen to enter the launch of the American Blake and to steer for the Dolphin's hospitable bulwarks. Admiral Gherardi followed in the steam launch of the Philadelphia. Next came the admiral from the Etna, Arethuse, followed by the French ambassador from the American Blake.

A Convivial Time on Board.

The Russian and Brazilian admirals, with their diplomatic escorts, quickly followed, and then came the other two admirals of the American fleet, Benham and Walker, who needed no squeezing to introduce them. The remaining commanders followed, but it was noticed that the rapidity with which they made their way to the Dolphin bore no comparison to the manner of their exit, which was in every instance as prolonged as to suggest that there was a good time in progress on board. These ceremonial calls protracted the review far beyond the original limits contemplated, but doubtless added to the success as a manifestation of international good feeling.

Indications that this was the purpose of the managers of the parade were not wanting on board the Monmouth, where the invited guests found champagne much more readily accessible than ice water or other beverages.

At 4:40 the president disembarked from the Dolphin, and at the finish of the salute of 21 guns given him from the Philadelphia, the combined fleets honored him with a national salute, beginning with the Blake of the English fleet and the Newark of the American. Shot after shot followed in quick succession, the smoke becoming so dense as to hide the different ships. To add to the noise, back from the high shore of the Jersey side were flung the echoes of long reverberations that rolled up and down the shore.

The rapidity of the fire from the American ships was noticeable, differing very greatly from that of the others, which was much louder. In this regard the difference in the case of the Dutch cruiser Van Speyk and the Spanish ship Reina Regentaard for some three minutes after the others had ceased.

The President Goes Ashore.

When President Cleveland reached the land, with the cannon booming and the whistles shrieking, the crowd began to cheer and to wave hats and umbrellas. The president bowed and smiled before entering his carriage. As the carriage drove away through the lane of human beings the president bowed toward to his seat and bowed and smiled out of the windows with his hat off. His departure from the pier was the most conspicuous of all his movements since his arrival. A platoon of mounted police preceded his carriage and another followed it. It was whirled along at the head of the column, the police men galloping and shouting to men and vehicles to get out of the way.

His carriage dashed down the Riverside drive, with the carriages of the rest of his party some distance behind. The arrival at the Victoria hotel at 5:20 o'clock was rather earlier than was expected. Only about 1,000 persons were there to see him. Mrs. Cleveland did not return to the hotel with him. She left the hotel at 5 o'clock to take the 6 o'clock train for Washington.

The Flash Light Exhibition.

Inky darkness veiled the Columbian fleet at 8 o'clock last night and not a sound was heard by landsmen from the anchored battleships. Suddenly a ray of light shot upward from the Philadelphia. It was long, dazzling and seemed to pierce the sky. For a moment it remained stationary and then disappeared. That was the signal for the scheduled display of electrical search lights with which the war vessels are provided, some of them having 25,000 candle power.

Quickly following the Philadelphia's lead the American ships showed the many ways in which the lights are used in active warfare to protect themselves from attacks of those marine terrors—torpedo boats. At times the projected rays were concentrated at certain points on shore, then turned full up the Hudson, making objects plainly visible at a distance of five miles.

Following came another signal and simultaneously every light in the fleet was turned toward the zenith. Slowly the rays converged until they formed the apex of a brilliant silvery pyramid of inculculable height. Reports say it could have been 15 miles high for any one section. It was a sight never before seen and never to be forgotten by the land lubbers. In conclusion the operators gave some examples of high art, poetry, prophecy, and described various figures on the heavens.

The Grand Naval Ball.

The Columbian ball at the Madison Square Garden was, in respect to magnificence of decoration, rivaling in their magnificence and elegance anything ever before attempted in the great auditorium. The main entrance had been draped with a background of pure white, festooned with a delicate tracing of smilax and asparagus sprays, and cut flowers and rare exotics were profusely distributed through the place. Above the Blake, on which the diplomatic corps had been carried along—except some of the lady members of the diplomatic family, who had taken shelter in the Monmouth for greater comfort—also lay close inshore and near at hand. The Spanish caravels were just within hailing distance in the channel, and the innumerable tugs and pleasure steamers, released from further restrictions, circled around them, and the president's yacht, the Monmouth, and the American Blake, like flies around a honeypot. strews who got so far as the landing places to see the warships were disappointed. The sailors wanted to see the city just as much as the landsmen wanted to see the warships.

So the war vessels showed signs of life early this morning. There was a good deal of signaling and not a little saluting to be done before the time for embarking came. Soon after 9 o'clock the launches and ships' boats were to be seen swung along the ships' sides. On the white decks of the ships and marines were standing in massed ranks, ready to pour over the side into the boats. Finally the signal came from the Philadelphia and the bugle calls echoed up and down the river.

The Yare Disembark.

From the big English flagship Blake came boats filled with the red coated marines, from the French ship of their white and blue clothed tars with their queer caps into the boats soon after. From the ships of the beautiful white squadron over on the New Jersey shore came our own tars with their wide bottomed trousers and their round hats. The dark blue of the Spanish sailors filled several boats.

The sailors began making on Forty second street, where the seven regiments of the New York national guard soon after joined them.

There was quite a little delay in starting the line, but it finally moved off down Fifth avenue, and the land parade was fully under way.

First of all came the mounted police, followed by the Engineer corps. Then came the carriages filled with distinguished looking men in full dress uniform. Not since that a landsman has a chance to see a real admiral rigged out in all his gorgeous uniform. Just here was a whole group of them in cocked hats, epaulets, gold lace and all. True, they did not seem at home somehow in the open carriages, and the crowd would have preferred to see them standing on their quarter decks, but there was plenty of cheering.

Perhaps the spectators realized that they were nearer to a group of admirals at that moment than they might ever expect to be

Simply Awful

Worst Case of Scrofula the Doctors Ever Saw

Completely Cured by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"When I was 4 or 5 years old I had a scrofulous sore on the middle finger of my left hand which left a scar. I had the doctors cut the finger off, and later took off more than half my hand. Then I had a running sore on my arm close out on my neck and face on both sides, nearly destroying the sight of one eye, also on my right leg. I have had no sores since.

Worst Case of Scrofula

they ever saw. It was simply awful! Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Gradually I found that the sores were beginning to heal. I kept on till I had taken ten bottles, and declared: Just think of what a return I got for my investment! Over $500 I paid, you may be sure. For the past 4 years I have had no sores.

Work all the Time.

Before, I could do no work. I know not what to say strong enough to express my gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla for my particular case."—Mrs. Geo. Turner, Farmer, Galway, Saratoga county, N. Y.

again. There were the captains of war-ships, too, and their staff officers in the carriages.

But after one hasty glance at the occupants of the carriages the crowds turned their attention to the tars.

Marching Down Fifth Avenue.

They came along at a swinging pace and each one with a roll to his walk that marked him as no landlubber. The tars were evidently enjoying the occasion hugely. They looked at the thronged sidewalks, at the flag decorated residences and stores, and made side remarks to each other in many different languages.

At Madison Square a huge reviewing stand had been erected, and from it the invited guests of the day viewed the procession. The square was thronged with people, who grudgingly opened up a line for the procession.

In the following order the parade passed the reviewing stand:

Mounted Police.
Details from the United States Army and Engineer Corps.
The Admirals of the American and Foreign Fleets, with their staffs and commanding officers in carriages.
FIRST DIVISION.
United States Sailors and Marines.
SECOND DIVISION.
Sailors and Marines of the Foreign Fleet.
THIRD DIVISION.
Troop A, as personal escort; Brigadier General Louis Fitzgerald and staff; Signal Corps, Engineers.
The Provisional Regiment, composed of 12 selected companies from the state of New York.
Sixty-ninth Regiment.
Eighth Regiment.
Ninth Regiment.
Twenty-second Regiment.
Twenty-third Regiment.
Seventh Regiment.
Twelfth Regiment.
Seventy-first Regiment.
First Battery.
Second Battery.

Naval Reserves, State of New York.

Continuing on down Fifth avenue the picturesque line passed until the great white Washington arch was reached. Here the parade turned into Waverly place and marched through to Broadway. The march between the lofty business blocks was evidently a revelation to many of the foreigners.

At the City hall the lines broke up, and the admirals, the captains and all those who had been riding in the carriages were greeted by Governor Flower and Mayor Gilroy. The reception was still in progress at 2:30 p. m.

President Cleveland meantime had left the city. His special train, which is to take him to Chicago, where he will open the World's fair next Monday, is now on the way.

At 3:30 p. m. this afternoon the banqueting begins with a lunch for the junior officers of the United States and visiting fleets at the Hotel Waldorf.

SECRETARY MEETS THE BANKERS.

Carlisle Made a Frank Statement About Gold and Bonds.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Secretary Carlisle decided to have a talk with the New York bankers. After his arrival from Washington, he conferred with Assistant Treasurer Jordan and ex-Assistant Treasurer Charles J. Canda. As a result the secretary suggested that he meet the bank presidents and private bankers at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

The conference between the secretary and the bank presidents lasted somewhat over an hour. There was the utmost good feeling displayed and the secretary said he was there to make a frank, free and open statement of what he believed to be the financial policy of the government.

In the first place the secretary said that as issue of bonds just at this time might be an objectionable step, but it would only be temporary, and that it would be followed by disturbances in the money market, and would in the end retard the determination of the administration to repeal the Sherman silver law. The secretary said positively that there would be no bond issue except as a last resort.

Banquets in Grant's Memory.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The Grant Banquet Association, organized to celebrate the birthday of General Ulysses S. Grant, gave its annual dinner at the Hotel Waldorf. General Horace Porter, president of the association, presided. In Brooklyn a banquet in commemoration of the seventy-first birthday of General Grant was given at the Union League clubhouse.

Seven Prisoners Escaped.

CONCOCTON, O., April 28.—Thomas Norton, James Francis, Martin Fox, Mike Connor, James Norris and two others, all under sentence to the penitentiary, escaped from the county jail by cutting a hole through the floor. None of the prisoners have been recaptured.

Governor Russell Missed the Review.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Governor Russell of Massachusetts yesterday boarded the Monitor Monmouth in order to observe the naval review, but he was again attacked by his recent illness and was obliged to return to the Holland House.

Delmonico's Waiters Struck.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The waiters carried their threats into execution, by coming out from Delmonico's and the Grand hotel. The proprietors of the Fifth Avenue hotel and the Madison Avenue hotel acceded to their demands.

Fish Dynamiter Disappeared.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., April 28.—James Ambeliga, one of the men arrested for killing fish in the Mohawk river recently with dynamite, has disappeared and his bondsmen will have to pay $250.

Bell Casting Postponed.

NEWARK, N. J., April 28.—The Columbian Liberty bell committee has decided to postpone the casting of the Columbian Liberty bell from May 1 to June 8.

Spoiled the Apple Crop.

AN EXTRA SESSION SURE

The President Says He Will Call One In September.

NOT NEEDED EARLIER THAN THAT.

This Means That the Financial Situation Does Not Demand the Attention of Congress Just Now—The War Department Commanded From New York at Present.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—President Cleveland stated to Representative Kilgore of Texas that the call for an extra session of congress would fix the date for the assembling of congress in special session some time between Sept. 1 and 15, according to his present intention.

Mr. Kilgore had inquired at the White House on the subject before leaving for home, stating that he wished to bring his family here before congress convened and inquired for that reason. The president informed him he would not call congress in special session before Sept. 4 unless some now unforeseen circumstance rendered an earlier call necessary. He added that the date would probably be between the 1st and the 15th. This statement of course disposes of talk about a special session at once to consider the financial situation.

Acting Secretary Hamlin of the treasury department said that the financial situation continues satisfactory. The treasury received and accepted yesterday several offers of gold. The amounts were not large, but the offers came from divers points, showing a general disposition to help build up the treasury gold.

The Bank of the Republic of this city offered the treasury $500,000 in gold to assist in meeting the demand which is being made upon the government.

War Department Head In New York.

Secretary Lamont is acting as secretary of war with headquarters in New York. He is in telegraphic communication with the department, but as comparatively no business requiring his attention is being transacted very little telegraphing is necessary.

This state of affairs is due to the absence of Assistant Secretary Grant and General Schofield, who usually act in an emergency. Mr. Grant left for Hartland, Vt., where his wife is ill.

General Schofield will return to Washington from New York by Saturday and will then assume temporary charge of the department in accordance with an order issued by the president directing him to act at all times in the absence of the secretary and assistant secretary.

The Marsovan Outrage.

A telegram was received at the department of state from the United States minister at Constantinople reporting the settlement of the Marsovan incident—the burning of the American Ladies' college. The college was burned some weeks ago, and a protest was immediately made to the Turkish authorities by the United States minister.

Peary's Leave May Be Revoked.

It is the talk in navy circles that the leave of Lieutenant Peary may be revoked. This will necessitate either his abandonment of his projected polar trip and his return to his duties as a naval officer or his resignation.

Mrs. Cleveland Taken Ill.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Mrs. Cleveland left suddenly for Washington. She was taken suddenly ill on the Dolphin while the presidential boat was making the review ing tour. As soon as the Dolphin anchored at Ninety-sixth street Mrs. Cleveland, Postmaster General Bissell and Mrs. Bissell and Secretary Thurber were taken ashore in a naphtha launch and driven to the Victoria hotel. Mrs. Cleveland appeared pale, but was not violently ill. It was deemed best that she should not attempt the trials of the ball. An exaggerated rumor of Mrs. Cleveland's illness became current, and many inquiries were made at the Victoria.

Sheriff In Dwyer's Stables.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The New Jersey Jockey club served notice on Sheriff Hicks that the seizure by the sheriff of 13 horses in Michael Dwyer's stables was illegal, as the horses did not belong to Mr. Dwyer, but to other persons. A deputy sheriff is on guard at Dwyer's stables to prevent any of the horses being taken away.

Nikisch to Drop the Baton.

BOSTON, April 28.—Mr. Nikisch, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will lead that organization for the last time next Saturday evening. This is the end of the Boston series of symphony concerts.

Lieutenant Governor Sheehan Ill.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Lieutenant Governor Sheehan is still confined to his room in the Hoffman House. At the hotel it was said that while his condition was not serious, he would see nobody before Saturday.

Cyclone In Texas.

GAINESVILLE, Tex., April 28.—A report has reached here from Montague county of a cyclone that partially destroyed Bonita and Mt. Joe. One farmer was killed and his three children fatally injured.

Want the Pool Law Amended.

HARTFORD, April 28.—Over 2,000 signatures have been received in this city to the petition to have the antipool law amended.

BITS OF CONDENSED NEWS.

It was alleged that Mr. Gladstone narrowly escaped being shot by a man now under arrest in London.

Acting Pension Commissioner Murphy began overhauling his bureau and brought to light many cases of alleged fraud.

Many offers of gold were made and accepted by the treasury department.

Further reports of the Oklahoma cyclone show that nearly 50 persons met their death in it.

The wife of Captain Roberts and the wife of Chief Officer Wright of the missing steamer Naronic were driven insane by the loss of their husbands.

Keepers Hulse, Murphy and Glynn, who were on duty at Sing Sing when the two desperate murderers escaped, have been dismissed.

In a livery stable fire at Natich, Mass., 38 horses were burned.

The hotel waiters strike at New York was declared off.

Hon. J. Ballance, prime minister of New Zealand, died from heart disease.

An insane man in Providence, R. I., cut the throats of his mother, his cousin and a policeman who tried to arrest him.

The anniversary of General Grant's birth was celebrated at Galena, Ills.

ONE HUNDRED VICTIMS.

That Will Be the Total Number of Dead In the Cyclone Track.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 28.—The list of fatalities by the cyclone grows larger each hour. In the devastated district near Norman 34 bodies have been prepared for burial. Several more were found Thursday morning and half a score of people are still missing. One hundred and fifty persons were injured, six or eight of them will die. Near Purcell 11 people, all members of the Catholic congregation, are dead. At the town of Case the storm swept away nearly every building and eight people were killed.

At Langston 9 are dead. At Cimmarron City 4 are dead, 3 dying and 12 others injured. East of there two families, numbering 5 and 6 members respectively, perished, and in the extreme eastern part of Payne county it is believed that nearly a score were killed. The full list of dead will surely aggregate 100, the injured five times that many, and the loss of property will foot up nearly $1,000,000.

Did the Narcotic's Bullets Blow Up?

PITTSBURG, April 28.—John Lincck, an electrician in the employ of the Western Union Telegraph company of this city, may be able to throw some light on the loss of the steamer Naronic. He said his brother Robert was employed on the Naronic in the capacity of second engineer, and that just after the vessel arrived at Liverpool on its last trip he wrote a letter to his brother Thomas, who is located in Chicago, stating that the ship's boilers were in very bad shape and that they had had a hard time in going over from New York to Liverpool. The writer stated that unless repairs were made while the vessel was lying at Liverpool the return trip would very likely prove to be a dangerous one. Lincck was inclined to think that the boilers had blown up.

Opening Day at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, April 28.—The baseball season of '93 opened here most auspiciously. Previous to the game the Clevelands and Pittsburgs, headed by a brass band, paraded the principal streets, and all along the route the opposing teams were enthusiastically greeted. A band concert followed at the park. An hour before the umpire called out the fandom play ball fully 9,000 persons were present, and it was stated that the attendance would reach 15,000. A feature of the crowd was a delegation of several thousand newsboys and bootblacks.

Gladstone's Alleged Nemesis.

LONDON, April 28.—William Townsend, the man under arrest who is suspected of having had designs upon the life of Mr. Gladstone, went away from Sheffield on Saturday last without informing his wife or anybody of his purpose to go away. His wife says that he is jealous to the last degree and often absent from home for days at a time without his whereabouts being known. He has been subject to spells of deep depression, but has never shown any symptoms of homicidal mania.

Discrimination Against American Money.

MONTREAL, April 28.—No significance should be attached to the report that the Canadian banks are discriminating against United States treasury notes in offering certificates. The movement is absolutely confined to small banks with branches on the American border. These banks hope to extend the circulation of their own bank notes by forcing American currency out of the country.

Cannot Recognize Other Religions.

LONDON, April 28.—The archbishop of Canterbury has said that he and his brother bishops felt bound by duty to decline the invitation to attend the World's religious congress in Chicago because they felt that Christianity could not be made a member of a parliament of religion with, out the tacit admission that other religions had equal claims with it upon the faith of mankind.

Troops Leave James City.

RALEIGH, April 28.—The negroes at James City, who have been on leases for the lands of James A. Bryan, which they were occupying as squatters. There are 354 families in the place and they are to pay nominal monthly rentals of 50 cents, 75 cents and $1 for each lot for two years when Bryan gets possession of his property. The 500 troops leave today.

They Asked No Advance.

PITTSBURG, April 28.—Forty delegates representing the railroad engineers in western Pennsylvania met in convention in Pittsburg. Much to the surprise of even the delegates themselves it was determined to ask no advance in wages. The present scale will prevail for another year. Thus an anticipated strike will be averted.

In Memory of General Butler.

BOSTON, April 28.—A meeting in memory of General B. F. Butler was held in Faneuil hall, when eloquent tributes to his ability were elaborated and his services were paid by men who had enjoyed a personal acquaintance with the dead general.

Students Must Attend Church.

AMHERST, Mass., April 28.—The Amherst faculty decided that the present plan of required attendance upon religious services will be continued. The undergraduates demanded the immediate abolishment of compulsory church attendance.

Booth Reported as Recovering.

NEW YORK, April 28.—It was rumored in the Players' club that Mr. Booth was taking a decided turn for the worse. He is certainly weaker. Dr. St. Clair Smith said his patient was slowly improving and had practically passed the critical period of his illness.

Silver Resolution Passed.

OGDEN, Utah, April 28.—The trans-Mississippi congress took a vote on the silver resolution, passing it by a vote of 239 for free coinage and 40 against, the opposition coming largely from California and Missouri.

Reading Takes a Jump.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—The contemplated reshabilitation of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad caused a shock to be felt at a jump in the Stock Exchange. The shares, which opened at 13¼, closed at 15¾.

They Fear the Cholera.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 28.—Seventy-five county health officers of the state discussed the means of keeping cholera out of the state. They favor rigid examination of trains.

Paderewski Was Ill.

HARTFORD, April 28.—A dispatch was received from the manager of Paderewski, stating that the pianist was ill and would be unable to play in this city tonight.

Pittsburg Company Chartered.

HARRISBURG, April 28.—The Second Avenue Traction company of Pittsburg, with a capital of $7,000,000, was granted a charter at the state department.

PARIS STYLES.

French Modistes Are Forcing Sheet Bell Shaped Skirts a la the 1830 Fashions.

The fashions seem to be in a state of transition. The foremost Paris costumers are working experiments and trials to see what will take. There seems a tendency to return to the style of 1830, with round, short bell shaped skirts, very tight on the hips and very wide at the foot, the widths of material very much pared. This quantity of stuff at the base will form godets or rounded plaits. To keep these well in form, a band of crinoline or horsehair will be sewed between the lining and the silk lining. Models seen of this style of skirt measure 8 or 9 yards round the lower edge. Trimmings will be worn higher up on the skirt than they have been lately, and lace flounces put on flat one above the other nearly up to the waist as they were worn in the time of Louis Philippe, and this is what they are pleased to call la grande nouveaute.

GOWN FOR AN APRIL WEDDING.

The corsages will have round waists, and buckles are to appear again, but very handsome and artistic. Sleeves are immensely wide, often more than a yard across, from one extreme to the other, so that an unfortunate man sitting at a dinner table between two fashionably dressed ladies is quite loth to view between their wide gigot or balloon sleeves. But these sleeves are no longer high above the shoulder, but widen on a level with the head and fall evenly down the full sleeve is often made of tulle or very rich lace, or if of velvet or silk a lace ruffle falls from the end of it. Beads, spangles and embroidered galloons will be used as trimmings, and also a great deal of lace. In the cut are shown a wedding toilet, also a bridesmaid's gown. The former is in white satin trimmed with old honiton lace and white velvet. The bridesmaid's dress is in yellow cloth trimmed with guipure lace over yellow silk. Both toilets give evidences of the advance already made in widening sleeves and skirts.

AN ORDINANCE

For the assessment of taxes for the year 1893.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do ordain as follows:

SECTION 1. That pursuant to the statutes and ordinances in such cases made and provided, the sum of one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars be assessed and raised by tax for the year eighteen hundred and ninety-three, for the general purposes of the City, exclusive of Poor, Library, School, Fire and State and County taxes, the sum of which dollars, or so much thereof as may be deemed sufficient, shall be the sum of fifteen dollars to be expended by the Superintendent of streets; for the support of the City Poor, the sum of four dollars; for the Police Department, to be under the control and government of said city, the sum of three thousand dollars; and to be raised by the levying a license fee of 5 dollars to be paid by the owner of every dog within the City of Plainfield.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

LIBERTY BELL.

A Brief History of This Treasured Relic of the Quaker City.

Liberty bell was cast in London in 1753 by order of the Pennsylvania assembly for use in their statehouse. The bell reached Philadelphia the following year, but it cracked without any apparent reason when it was rung to test the sound, and it was necessary to have it recast. This was done by Philadelphia workmen, and in June, 1753, it was again hung in the belfry of the statehouse. On July 4, 1776, when the continental congress declared the colonies independent of Great Britain, the bell was rung for two hours, so the story goes, by the old bellman, who was so filled with enthusiasm and excitement that he could not stop. It was taken down when the British threatened Philadelphia in 1777 and removed to Bethlehem, Pa., but was returned to the statehouse in 1778, and a new steeple was built for it.

A few years afterward it cracked under a stroke of the hammer, and although an attempt has been made to restore its tone by sawing the crack wider it has been unsuccessful. During the world's fair in New Orleans in 1885 the bell was sent there for exhibition. It left Philadelphia Jan. 24 in the charge of three custodians appointed by the mayor of the city, who did not leave it day or night until it was returned in June of the same year. The train carrying the bell was preceded over the entire route by a pilot engine. The following words are inscribed around it, "By order of the assembly of the province of Pennsylvania, for the statehouse in the city of Philadelphia, 1753," and underneath, "Proclaim liberty through all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof—Levit., xxv., 10." Its weight is about 43,000 pounds. This famous bell will be viewed with interest by visitors at the World's fair in Chicago, where arrangements have been made for its proper exhibition.

The Original Locks.

The ancient Egyptians are credited with the manufacture of the original lock, which was simple in construction and by no means proof against the ingenuity of the primitive burglar. They were usually made of wood, with an occasional example of iron or copper. The warded lock was a further evolution, and during the middle ages, in which so much of mechanical work was associated with sacredotal instincts and objects, the products were characterized by elaboration and the highest style of finish, according to The Industrial World, which adds that the tumbler lock is Mongolian and has been in use in the Celestial empire for centuries. The ancient Chinese being artists in mechanical devices and by no means the blockheads so liberally scandalized on the outer lots and platforms of modern times. The combination padlock has also a venerable record and is attributed to the genius of a French locksmith, the opinion, however, being held by antiquarians that its inception dates back to a remote period.

The First Daguerreotype.

In a lecture before the Franklin institute of Philadelphia J. F. Sachse said that Robert Cornelius of Philadelphia was the first to produce a daguerreotype of a human face. This was in 1837. Daguerre, the inventor of the process, had previously experimented in France, but Mr. Cornelius was the first to take a successful likeness. The portrait was that of a member of his family, and a facsimile was exhibited by Mr. Sachse. The picture was taken in the open air, but the operation is said to have taken 15 minutes. Early in 1840 Mr. Cornelius established himself as a photographer at the northeast corner of Eighth and Lodge streets. He perfected a method of concentrating light upon the sitter by a series of reflectors and blue glass and instituted the silver plate process. In those days instead of going to a photographer and getting a dozen cabinets for $1.50 or 30 tintypes for 25 cents people were hooked a week ahead at $5 a sitting.

Foreign Moneys.

France, Belgium, Greece, Italy and Switzerland constitute what is known as the "Latin" union, and their coins are alike in weight and fineness, occasionally differing, however, in name. The same system has been in part adopted by Spain, Servia, Bulgaria, Russia and Roumania, but they have not joined the union. Francs and centimes of France, Belgium and Switzerland are respectively designated lire and centissini in Italy, drachmai and lepta in Greece, dinars and paras in Servia, pesetas and centimos in Spain, lei and bani in Roumania, leva and stotinkis in Bulgaria. Similarly the Scandinavian countries, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, employ units of the same weight and fineness, their names being also alike. Most of the South American states possess a standard coin equal in weight and fineness to the silver 5-franc piece, generally termed a "peso."

Almighty Dollar.

Almighty dollar is an Americanism for mammon, the love of gold, and seems to have been first used by so classical a writer as Washington Irving—"the almighty dollar, that great object of universal devotion throughout our land." Yet, after all, as Farmer points out, this is merely an old friend with a new face, for Ben Jonson used the term in his modern sense when speaking of money:

While that for which all'rtise now is sold,
And almost every vice, almighte gold.

The X In Xmas.

Many persons suppose that the X in the Xmas represents the cross and wonder that it is not written tmas. According to one writer, the X, however, has nothing to do with the cross. It is the Greek letter Chi, corresponding to ch or k in our language, and is the initial letter in the Greek name of Christ. The words Christ mass were written X mass long before Christmas became one word.

The Onion an Old Favorite.

The origin of the onion is lost in antiquity. As far back as we have trustworthy references to vegetables the onion has mention. The leek is frequently mentioned in earlier portions of the Old Testament, and it was most likely a native of Egypt. It enjoyed also the favor of the Romans centuries afterward and was doubtless brought by them to England.

Ipecacuanha.

Ipecacuanha is an Indian word. This emetic comes from a very humble shrub, and the root is the part used. When we take it in a large dose, it makes us violently sick; if in a smaller dose, it loosens a hard cough, and yet a less quantity is good for the appetite and digestion.

COOKING MACARONI.

A Delicious Dish Which Few Understand How to Make.

Macaroni requires abundance of water to cook it properly, at least three quarts of salted boiling water being required to half a pound of macaroni, says the New York Tribune. This abundance gives the paste a chance to swell. The water should boil rapidly, and the macaroni should be stirred occasionally with a fork to prevent the pipes from clinging together. It should boil at least 25 minutes for the small and three-quarters of an hour for the large macaroni. After the macaroni is cooked it should be drained in a colander. Then the colander should be set in the mouth of the pot in which the macaroni was cooked, covered up closely with a cloth, to allow it to steam dry while you prepare the tomato sauce.

Take a slice of carrot, a small onion, a leaf or two of thyme, a quarter of a bay leaf, two peppers, one clove and fry them in a tablespoonful of butter. Add a sprig of parsley and about an inch of celery stalk cut in bits. When the vegetables are well colored, stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour and let the flour brown. Add a quart can of tomatoes very slowly. Then set the saucepan on the back part of the stove and let its contents simmer very slowly for half an hour. Stir this sauce repeatedly while it is boiling, and when it is done strain it through a puree sieve, or a common flour sieve if you have nothing better. Add a teaspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of pepper and a teaspoonful of sugar. This tomato sauce will be enough for a pound and a half of macaroni, which will be sufficient to fill two large dishes. But the sauce will keep an indefinite time in the refrigerator, and it is just as well to make double the quantity you need at a time.

After the sauce is made and the macaroni is cooked take a large open vegetable dish, put a layer of macaroni in the bottom, season it with a more than picion of white pepper, put a tablespoonful of Parmesan cheese over it and moisten it well with the tomato sauce. Continue this till the dish is full and cover it with tomato sauce. It will take a pint of tomato sauce and about 6 tablespoonfuls of grated Parmesan cheese to a large dish of macaroni. Set the dish of macaroni in the oven for about 10 minutes and then serve it.

Something New.

The latest specialty is a hair doctor. She is a woman, the first and thus far the only doctor of her kind. She has studied the hair as other doctors study the lungs or nerves. Her lecture room is some up town drawing room. Her students sit on camp chairs in visiting costumes and the latest fashion and hurry from class to be present at teas. The doctor has a manikin and a microscope, and the lectures usually lends her own head for an object lesson. This is amusing and instructive. There is a special sort of massage for the head which is intended to stimulate the secretions and keep down gray hairs. There must be no hair washes. Twice a year only the hair is to be washed, and then with a simple soap and glycerin rubbed gently around the roots. All the rest is brushing and hard massage, a light mattress than that usually used, and the tender young hair plants which grow on the garden of the head.

The Latest Novelty.

The society girl needs it and has invented it to meet her requirements: The shoe drawer and the shoe bag are well enough for common shoes, but the shoe of the modern Cinderella is far too pretty to be hidden away. So she has ordered a cabinet with a glass front, and when she has hung it on the wall and adorned the shelves with the triumphs of the shoemaker's art the wall decoration speaks for itself. Every society woman with small feet and pretty shoes needs just such a case in her boudoir.

THE SLIPPER CABINET.

Housecleaning.

To clean your polished furniture take 1 ounce white wax, 8 ounces of beeswax, 1 ounce of curd soap, 1 pint of turpentine, 1 pint of water, first boiled and then allowed to get cold.

Marble may most effectively be cleaned with 4 ounces of very finely powdered pumice stone, added to a half pound of powdered soda, with 4 ounces of chalk, sifted through a sieve, mixed to a paste with water and rubbed over the stone, and afterward wash with soap and water.

Every mirror in the house would be improved by being carefully sponged all over with spirits of wine, then dusted with finely sifted powder blue and polished with an old silk handkerchief or soft dry cloth.

Salted Peanuts.

Do you despise the unpretentious peanut? Have you ever tried them in this way? Buy the green or unparched peanuts, parboil them, rub off the red envelopes, spread the blanched nuts on a tin dish, treat them to butter, then brown them for half an hour in a baking but not hot oven, and when they are a light snuff color take them out at once and salt them while hot. Do this and you will be mad to think that so much of your life has passed without your knowing how much better peanuts are in that condition than almonds.

A NEW YORKER.

He Was the Unmost Fare Article and Mighty Particular.

"From New York, eh?" queried an old farmer down in a New Jersey town where a railroad accident detained me week before last several hours.

"Yes, from New York," I replied.

"Waal, you've got a cur'ous lot o' critters up thar."

"What do you mean?"

"Too blamed particular for anythin! It's a wonder you don't want a different air from what we breathe down here!"

"Have you had a New Yorker down here?"

"I her, and if he's a sample of your crop I never want to see another. He was drivin' a team from Vineland and broke down and I staid with me over night. Begun to put on airs the very first thing. Thought he was too awfully nice to wash himself in the basin and wipe on the kitchen towel with the hired man and the rest of us. He wouldn't eat no fried pork for supper, and he jest tasted of the other things and shoved back and said he was tired."

"Yes?"

"We tried to make him feel to hum in the room, but he was mos'ezzy as a mule. One of the naybur's gals came in and sung seven gospel hymns while my own gal played the organ, but he didn't seem to know what to do. I offered him a chaw of jimdandy tobacker, but he didn't thank me fur it. Jest carried himself as if he was the salt of the airth and we the fifth. The pick wanted to make some biases candy, but he turned up his nose and said he never eat it."

"Have he was a New Yorker?"

"Oh, yes. We found that out fur sure. When he cum to go to bed, he pulled off the feather bed and throwed one of the pillars on the floor. When he got up, he kicked 'cause he didn't have water and towels in his room. We give him the best he'd brush in the house, but the blamed critter never used it. He borrowed the hired man's comb fur him, but he jest looked at it and laid it down! The old woman hunted herself to git a nice breakfast, but he didn't appreciate it. You could see what his bringing up was from the way he acted. He happened to git a fork with only one tine to it, and he asked the hired girl right out to change it for him! Even our preacher wouldn't hev done that. When I asked the blessing at the table, I had my eyes closed, and couldn't see him, but the hired man will sw'ar that he sort o' grinned all the time."

"I think he must have come from Brooklyn."

"No, he was a New Yorker straight 'nuff, and I guess a fair sample of the rest of you, from what I've heard. When he cum to go and I charged him $2 for meals and lodgin's, he flung the money down on the table and went off mad. Why, them seven gospel hymns was worth $600, to say nuthin of two meals and a bed!"

"From his actions I should say that he was from Jersey City. In fact, I know a man over there who"—

"You needn't try to sneak out o' it, stranger," he interrupted. "He was one o' you New Yorkers who think you own the airth and part of Mexico, and I'm tellin you that if this train has to stay here for a month I wouldn't take one o' you home with me short o' $3 a day. Even then you'd hev to sign a paper that you wouldn't turn up your nose at saleratus biscuits or kick at 'taters with their hides on!"—New York Mercury

Tired of It.

They have an amateur dramatic society in Conneaut, O., that played a tragedy the other night, in one scene of which Ronaldo throws his head out of the second story window of a prison and cries to Madeline, who is trying to get him out:

"Fly, dearest! Leave me to my fate!"

This was Ronaldo's first appearance on any stage, and he was considerably confused. When he came to the above scene, he lost his head and fell heavily to the floor. Raising himself partially up and gazing mournfully upon the audience, he said in a sad voice:

"By gosh, I don't want to act any more!"—Exchange.

On a Piano.

As a magnificent steamer, the ... of the Peninsular and Oriental ... was steaming into Southampton harbor a grimy coal lighter floated immediately in front of it. An officer on board the vessel, observing this, shouted:

"Clear out of the way with that barge."

The lighterman, a native of the Emerald Isle, shouted in reply, "Are ye the captain of th vessel?"

"No," answered the officer.

"Then spake to yer equals," said Pat. "I'm the captain of this."—London Figaro.

A Remarkably Good Boy.

Mother—How's Billy, Mrs. Jones? The teacher says you were not at school today, and the neighbors tell me you were playing in the street.

Little Johnny—Th' teacher said we mustn't go where we'll hear anything improper.

"What would you hear at school, I should like to know?"

"Th' teacher said that today we was to begin on improper fractions."—Good News.

Beating Dame Nature.

Drummer—It just beats all. I'm traveling for an umbrella house, and every place I've struck has been suffering from the drought.

Inventor—I am traveling with a rain producing apparatus, and every town I've struck was knee deep in mud.

Drummer—Say, let's travel together.—New York Weekly.

Ignorance Is Poverty.

Tattered Tom—Say, I'm dummed!

Ragged Robert—Wot's th' matter?

Ain't them soup tickets good?

Tattered Tom—I wisht I'd paid more attention to me studies when I was young. Here I've tramped 40 blocks to a soup-house, an th' woman inside says these tickets calls for soap.—Exchange.

A Penitent Culprit.

Magistrate—Then you admit having struck your wife on the head with a chair so violently that the chair was broken?

Prisoner—Yes, your worship.

Magistrate—Well, are you at least sorry for what you have done?

Prisoner—Certainly. The chair was as good as new.—Moderner Leben.

Appropriate.

He—What do you call that new gown?

She—I am going to name it after you.

He—Why so?

She—Because it has such long stays.—Club.

No Difference.

Teacher—Spell "slippers," Johnny.

Johnny—S-l-i-p-p-e-r-s.

Teacher—That spells "slippers."

Johnny—Same thing.—Harper's Bazar.

This Date In History—April 28.

1789—Thomas Beaurain, famous actor, died.
1758—James Monroe, fifth president, born in Westmoreland county, Va.; died 1831.
1778—Captain James Cook and Sir Joseph Banks and others landed on botany bay and named the country New South Wales.
1825—Street-fair at Oakland, Md., for a square mile learned over; loss, $2,000,000. Joseph Jefferson, comedian, actor and manager, died in Palm Beach, April 23, 1905.
1850—The supreme court of the United States decided the Iowa law for settling boundary in "virtual accord" with Wisconsin decision.
1861—The Chinese government notified United States of its disapproval of Burlingame, W. Blair as minister from the United States. The declaration of ex-President Hill of the Ninth National bank, New York, was made public.
1862—Thomas Jefferson Coolidge of Boston appointed minister to France.

The Chicago Side of It.

Beekman-Streeter—Let me see, didn't I meet you at the Paris exposition in 1889?

Broadweigh—Yes. I spent a whole month there.

"So did I. It was a pretty expensive trip for me, I can tell you. Cost me an even $1,000 from the time I left N' York till I got back."

"It was a costly trip for me, too—about $600—but it was worth it. It was a great show."

"Yes, it was worth it. By the way, you're going to the Chicago exposition, I suppose?"

"Yes, I expect to spend a couple of weeks there anyhow, though I don't like the stories I hear about the extortion everybody is getting ready to practice on visitors."

"I don't either. A friend of mine that has figured the whole thing up says it will cost as high as $35 or $40 a week if you see everything that's to be seen and stop at "first class hotels."

"That will make it—let me see—about $75 for a two weeks' stay, $40 for railway fare there and back, including sleeping and dining cars, and you'll have to spend something for cigars and incidentals while you are in Chicago, of course. Seventy-five and 40 makes 115, and—why, great Scott, you can't do the thing for less than $150 to save your life! I'll just be hanged if I'll do it!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Indication.

"This bump," said the phrenologist, "indicates that you are of a combative disposition."

"No," said the subject. "It indicates that my wife is of a combative disposition. That's where she hit me with a hairbrush this morning."—Harper's Bazar.

The Old Masters.

Art Patron—Only 900 francs for a genuine Rembrandt, signed and so well preserved, too, that it is really very cheap. What does the picture represent?

Broker—Can't you see? The battle of Sedan, per Bacon!—Mondo Umoristico.

A False Charge.

Magistrate—What is the charge?

Officer—Carrying concealed deadly weapons.

Prisoner—'Tis false, your honor. I had no deadly weapon. It was only a Pond dueling pistol.—New York Weekly.

An Indulgent Husband.

Bachelor—Is there any sewing on of suspender buttons now, old boy, eh?

Benedict—No, I wear a belt now. I've got no time to sew on buttons. Keeps me loafing to buy bread and better.—Tone Bitmas.

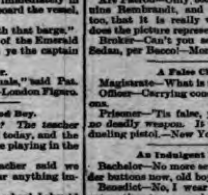
Head to Foot.



FROM HEAD TO FOOT.

That's what's the matter with the most of us. What's the cause? Poor circulation of the blood. The cause? The neglect of the feet. We have known severe cases of so called dyspepsia, neuralgia, sleeplessness, weak joints, backache, so familiar to females; disappear in a short time by the use of Anti-Tire. Get up good circulation, healthy action, so how quick your pains and aches will vanish. One foot bath of Anti-Tire will do it. Trial size, 15c. Family size, 25c. All druggists. BREVITIES.

—To night there will be a song service in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

—Jerusalem Lodge, F. & A. M., will hold a communication next Tuesday night.

—The Old Homestead" will be the attraction at Music Hall next Friday night.

—Have you seen what is in the upper right hand corner of The News? If not, look it up.

—The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club will be held on Tuesday evening, May 2, at eight p. m.

—"The Leader," the new store on West Front street, advertises a large assortment of ladies' and gentlemen's furnishings.

—Tuesday night the members of Warren Engine Company No. 1, of North Plainfield will hold their annual meeting for the election of officers.

—Leland T. Powers will render selections from "David Copperfield" in the lecture room of the First Baptist church on Monday evening, May 15th.

—Two carriage whips were stolen from wagons at Mr. Horace Martin's blacksmith shop, on Somerset street, within a week. Marshal Pancborn was notified of the theft and he succeeded in tracing the thief and getting both whips.

—The steam lighter T. L. Sturtevant will leave foot of West 11th street, New York, Sunday, April 30th, at 9.30 for a trip to and around the men-of-war. This will be a good opportunity for photographing, as there will be plenty of room for tripod cameras and stops will be made at each ship.

—A game of base ball was played this morning on the grounds of the Harned Academy between Leals No. 2 team and the Harneds, resulting in a victory for the Leals by a score of 17 to 15. The batteries were for Leals' Smith and Conder. For Harned's, Joquin Constance and Alphonso Constance. Leals knocked two pitchers out of the box.

—Thirteen Italians were added to the force at work on Somerset street railway yesterday. They arrived late in the afternoon and immediately joined the colony near the mountain, by way of Somerset street, each carrying his own baggage. One was fortunate enough to have a trunk, but the remainder had their belongings packed in bags.

—Court Dunellen, Independent Order of Foresters of Dunellen, gave an entertainment last evening. The Alert Dramatic corps, of Elizabeth, assisted and gave two one-act comedies. High Chief Ranger W. T. Bingham of Elizabeth and a number of High Court officials attended and Mr. Bingham made an address. Members of the court in this city were present.

—A big white horse that was assisting a mild mannered dark bay draw a wagon heavily laden with bricks on Somerset street, yesterday noon, balked. Coaxing and whipping did no good. The dark bay was willing to pull but the white wouldn't go with him. Finally another laden brick wagon, drawn by a team of light bays, came along, and the pole of the wagon was put against the tail board of the wagon in front. Then the light bays started. The white horse, at the same moment, was assailed with whip, feet and tongue, the wagon came against him in the rear, and he moved, but stopped again. The team in back and the dark bay and the whip, kept on working, and, after the balky white had been forcibly moved again a few feet, he evidently concluded the location was not favorable for a good, comfortable halt, for he settled into his collar and the team and the spectators went about their business.

THE PARK CLUB'S BANNER.

Last Night's Game Closed the Series and Won the Prize.

The series of bowling games between the Park and Union County Country Clubs that has been in progress during the Winter closed last night.

The Park Club was victorious and by winning last night's game another beautiful banner has been added to its list of prizes.

The banner is of white silk and bears the words "Union County vs. Park Club, Bowling Series 1892-93."

At the close of the game refreshments were enjoyed by the bowlers. The following is the score:

PARK CLUB.		UNION COUNTY.
Thiers	140	Wharton	137

Park Club winning by 98 pins.

Umpires for last half game, J. H. Brown, " " 2d " " B. A. Hegeman.

A Horse with the Blind Staggers.

Thursday afternoon as a horse belonging to John Banner of South avenue was being led along East Fifth street it was taken with the blind staggers and fell down. The animal was bled and after lying still for a few moments, it got up and walked off apparently as well as ever.

Thomas Maloney Improving.

Thomas Maloney, who was badly injured in trying to board a moving train at the Park avenue bridge, Wednesday night, and who is now in the hospital, is reported as improving to-day.

A NIGHT AMONG KNIGHTS.

Perseverance Lodge Entertains its Members and Friends.

Last evening the members and friends of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, met in their handsome Castle Hall and spent the time most delightfully. Chancellor Commander Samuel J. Robinson, in a few appropriate remarks, introduced Mr. P. C. Jones, who bid the guests a hearty welcome, then the Bingham brothers entertained with piano and violin selections. Master Ford recited "Sheridan's Ride" in a most capable manner and for recall gave "Candle's Cold." A soprano solo by Mrs. Norrie was delightfully rendered, followed by a duet by the Misses Bonser, which was excellent, then one of the order's popular members, Mr. Chas. Ulrich, gave an excellent description of the order and made many warm friends for himself and the order. This was followed by that popular "Dutchman," John H. Carroll, who kept the audience in a roar of laughter with his original wit and comicalities. Mrs. Charles W. Lines recited "Ostler Joe" which greatly pleased the audience. Miss Julia Grisely entertained them by a story of the "Little Kittens." After Mr. Jones recited "God Save the Flag," the audience were invited to the banquet room where a bountiful repast was spread. It was midnight before the guests retired.

IN THE CITY COURT.

Three Cases Disposed of by Judge Coddington This Morning.

Michael McCarthy, arrested yesterday afternoon at No. Two's Engine house, for being drunk and bothering the firemen, was fined three this morning by Judge Coddington. Policeman Kiely made the arrest.

Policeman Frodrickson last night arrested a tramp for begging on the streets. He gave his name as William Sellers when arranged in the court room, this morning. The Judge sentenced him to 40 days in the jail.

Susan Williams, colored, was the next prisoner. She was arrested about two o'clock this morning for waking around the streets with a suit of clothes on. She said she lived in Elizabeth. Judge Coddington sentenced her to 30 days in the county jail. She was dressed in a sack suit and wore a "stove-pipe" hat.

PERSONAL.

Mr. George Roberts of New York, formerly of this city, is visiting here.

The evening service at the Warren Mission chapel to-morrow will be conducted by Mr. McKelvy of New York.

Messrs. F. Bilyeu, C. W. Blaine and W. E. Mattison of North Plainfield have been appointed school census enumerators for the borough.

The work of laying the street railway tracks on Somerset street is progressing rapidly. The rails are now laid from Johnston's drive to Regent street.

Mr. Walter Scott of Scotland will give addresses for Christians especially, every evening during the week, to which all are welcome, at No. 6 East Front street.

Mr. Ira Riker of Mountain avenue, who has been sick for some time, first with lung trouble and afterwards with a disease of the kidneys, is able to be out again.

Special Policeman Hope received the news yesterday of his being made a grandfather. His son John, who is living at Milwaukee, after twelve years of married life, is at last a happy father.

A farewell reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. William J. Leonard at All Souls' church, on Park avenue, by the ladies of the church, last evening. Mr. Leonard has accepted a call as pastor of a Unitarian church at Bolton, Mass.

Mr. F. M. Hulett has been induced to take the agency for a new book, entitled, "Everybody's Law Book. Legal Rights. Legal Remedies and Useful Business Forms." He has it on sale at his music store on West Front street, where it may be seen. Mr. Hulett considers it the best book on the subject published, and is prepared to have every convince any one who calls to examine it.

A pretty home wedding took place at the home of the bride's mother on Harmony street, Thursday night. The contracting parties were Mr. Theodore B. Marsh, one of the members of the firm of Marsh, Ayers & Co., and Miss Emma Telfer. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church. Mr. and Mrs. Marsh have rented a flat and will start housekeeping on North avenue.

Used to Driving through the Mountains.

Policeman Kiely is stationed every afternoon at the corner of Park and North avenues to see that commuters as they hurry from the trains are not run down at the crossing by the throng of wagons that come down North avenue at this same time. But for this precautionary measure by the police accidents would no doubt be of daily occurrence. It was fortunate for two men that he was stationed there yesterday afternoon for it was owing to the policeman's quick action and strong arm that they were not run over. They were half way over the crossing when a horse driven by a Washingtonville youth, who was carelessly driving along, was almost upon them, when Mr. Kiely, who is always on the alert for such drivers, grasped the horse by the bridle and set him on his haunches, thus averting an accident. The boy was allowed to proceed after being warned to be more careful next time.

AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

STUPENDOUS ENERGY AND UNPARALLELED RESULTS.

Aladdin and his Magic Lamp no Comparison — Buildings, Roads, Gardens, Statues Made in a Day.

A Few Interesting Paragraphs.

[SPECIAL FROM CHICAGO.]

$14,000 to Keep a Roof Clean all Winter.

Upon the roof of the leviathan structure, called Manufactures and Liberal Arts, a few score of acts, moving about, look like so many crows. They are not. The mighty roof overshadows everything else in the city. Such are its proportions that at first, even on a near view, you do not realize its immensity. But wherever you go its towering outlines follow you. It always is and ever pervades the sky line. The crows are constantly before your eyes.

The practical Chicago man helps us to realize this vastness. "It is a pretty big roof," he exclaims, proudly, "that required an expenditure of $14,000 last Winter to keep the snow shoveled off it."

A Pointer for our Street Commissioner.

Where yesterday were muddy roads between the buildings to-day are paved streets. Two thousand men are scraping away the surface accumulation, pour tar, laying asphalt or artificial stone. This cavalcade advances like a host. Each regiment has a certain part of the process to perform. Its sweeps along at the rate of a mile an hour. Behind it is a finished road on which my lady from across the sea may walk with slippered feet, if she be not afraid of catching cold from the sharp winds which come over the lake.

A Gun that Costs $1,100 to Fire.

The great Krupp gun, now reposing on its carriage on the lake front, is visited by thousands. It really is worth seeing. It is forty-seven feet long, its diameter is six and a half feet, its weight one hundred and thirty-five tons, and it will throw a projectile weighing ten sixteen miles. Each time the gun is fired the cost is $1,100. These simple figures give you an idea of the dimensions of the greatest gun ever manufactured, but it is encouraging to know that our own navy and war departments are building guns at Washington and at Watervliet, near Troy, which have about the same effective force with one-third the weight and cost. The lathes for making these guns, cost $200 each, and were made at the Pond Tool Works in your own beautiful city of Plainfield, which has more space than any other concern in this country. The American goes in for "getting there," whether it is in guns or engines, and if he can accomplish his purpose with moderate dimensions so much the better.

$40,000 for a Pavilion Twenty Feet Square.

Some of the pavilions being erected or finished by private exhibitors are things of beauty. One, put up by a Connecticut firm, is of solid mahogany, and though only a little more than twenty feet square, is said to have cost forty thousand dollars. This one item is an indication of the large expenditures incurred by hundreds and thousands of exhibitors.

Throughout all the big buildings hundred of thousands of boxes are still scattered about, and more are arriving as fast as trains can bring them in. From the roofs to the cellars men are hammering, sawing, painting, gilding. Where was a bare floor last night a little palace rises this morning. Where confusion reigns to-day a semblance of order and finish will prevail next Monday. In the study of organized human energy this fair just now is the most splendid object lesson the world ever saw.

NINETEEN FROM NEW JERSEY.

And Two from Plainfield on the Roll of Graduates.

At the sixty third annual commencement of the College of Pharmacy of the City of New York, held at Carnegie Music Hall, last Wednesday night, there were nineteen New Jersey graduates, as follows:

Joseph P. Carroll, Bayonne; Bernard A. Cannon, Newark; Walter Huber, Jersey City Heights; Charles W. Messmer, Jersey City; David Nee, Paulsboro; Frank A. Willetts, Newark; John P. Powers, Plainfield; Thomas A. Russell, East Orange; Charles E. Sobanck, Asbury Park; Charles H. Schichter, Elizabeth; Wm. Schopfer, Newark; Berthold J. Schorr, Plainfield; William Spear, Belleville; Richard Specker, Union; William Stutzien, Newark; Charles B. Tiernan, Roselle; Henry Wrench, Montclair; William R. Zohn, New Brunswick, and Charles E. Zwingli, of Paterson.

The Father of Arbor Day.

The Father of Arbor Day was Mr. Morton, the present Secretary of Agriculture. It is estimated that 600,000,000 million trees have been planted throughout the West since the day was first inaugurated. But a larger and more important result is in the education of the rising generation in the importance of tree culture and forest preservation. This has probably led to the preservation from destruction of many more trees than have been planted.

ELIZABETH AND PLAINFIELD RAILWAY.

The Company Asks Permission to Lay Tracks in Elizabeth.

A meeting of the Street and Law Committees of the Elizabeth City Council was held Thursday night for the purpose of considering the application of the Elizabeth and Plainfield Street Railway Company for location of its tracks in streets and avenues in that city and to hear such objections from property owners along the streets through which it is proposed to lay the tracks as were presented.

Hon. Foster M. Voorhees appeared in the interest of the company and submitted a few papers. A few of the objectors to think as he did.

It was proposed to build the road, beginning near the depot on Morris avenue, the route to be up Morris avenue to Orchard street, to Grand street, to Jersey avenue to the city line, and so on through the several townships to Plainfield. Such a road would result in developing the suburban portions of the city and township.

It was extremely doubtful whether the proposed road would pay for years to come, but the company was willing to run that risk. The poles would not interfere with any one, because they would be erected as far as practicable to skirt the vision line and be 100 feet apart. The company had succeeded in obtaining the consent of the owners of the majority of lineal feet on Orchard street.

After considerable discussion the committee will hold another meeting and prepared its report, which will be presented to the City Council on Monday night.

The Fish Commissioners' Ultimatum.

The committee appointed some time ago to ascertain the position of the State Fish Commissioners in regard to stocking at the Raritan dam has received the desired information. It is to the effect that no fishing of any kind, except with hook and line, will be allowed within 900 feet of the dam. Notices relative to this matter have been posted.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

LAWYER VAN NESS CAUGHT.

Arrested in Brooklyn and Lodged in the Tombs.

New York, April 29, (Special.)—Lawyer John K. Van Ness, who skipped his bail in February on a charge of forgery and for whom the police of this city, Brooklyn and Jersey City, has been looking, was arrested last night in the Carlton Hotel, Brooklyn, by Detective Sergts. Trainor and Von Gerichten, of Inspector McLaughlin's staff. He was brought to the District-Attorney's office this morning and committed to the Tombs to await trial.

Van Ness lives in Plainfield, N. J., and has an office at 196 Broadway.

ONE KILLED; ANOTHER DYING

Two Children Buried Under Falling Building.

New York, April 29—(Special)—An old house which workmen were tearing down at the corner of Broadway and Beaver street, collapsed suddenly this morning and buried in its ruins two children who had been playing on the sidewalk.

One of these, a little girl, was dead when dug out of the heap of debris.

The other child, a boy, was so terribly injured that he will die.

Grand Division, Sons of Temperance

The Grand Division, Sons of Temperance, met at Summit, on Wednesday. There were about sixty representatives from the divisions present, representing all portions of the State, and among them were a large number of the older past officers, more than usually attend the Spring meeting. Howell Division of this city, was represented by Mrs. Mattox and Mrs. Reddin.

Among the prominent visitors was Rev. George B. Rich, P. G. W. P., of the Grand Division of New York. A pleasing feature of the session was the presentation to Henry S. Howell, a beautiful testimonial, very handsomely engrossed and embellished with the emblem of the Order of Sons of Temperance in colors, and placed in an antique oak frame.

Mr. Howell was Grand Scribe of the Grand Division almost fifty years, serving a portion of the time without salary, and at the January session declined a renomination. At that time a committee, consisting of Edward K. Drake, of Plainfield; Fred D. Woodruff, of Keyport, and J. D. Van Horn, of New Brunswick, was appointed to prepare a suitable recognition of his long and valuable services.

Railroad Accidents.

The statistics of railroad accidents in this State last year, now being prepared by State Comptroller Hoppenhimer, show that there were injured on the railroads 958 people; two thirds of them employes who met with accidents while at work. Two hundred and forty people were killed. There were injured by the coupler 309 trainmen, killed 71; injured while at work on the road 75, killed 18; injured while at work on the train 195, killed 37; injured getting on and off trains, 116, killed 16; injured driving across tracks 153, killed 37; those injured from other causes 70, and killed 15.

A Brick Building Collapses.

A three-story brick building, 20 by 45 feet, belonging to Jacob Brueckbacher, at 1,161 Elizabeth avenue, Elizabeth, tumbled down last night with a terrific crash, carrying with it the sides of a three-story frame building, while one of the walls fell on James C. Ogden's two-story furniture store on the south and wrecked it. The building then collapsed leaving a new foundation put under it. Six laborers and four masons had been in the building until a late hour yesterday, but had quit for the day fifteen minutes before the building fell. As it happened, no person was injured.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The People's Cause In Belgium.

Belgium is a constitutional hereditary monarchy. Two bodies, a senate and chamber of representatives, constitute its lawmaking power. Representatives and senators have been hitherto elected by the votes of male citizens 21 years old and over who paid annual taxes to the amount of about $8 of our money. This of course cut off nearly all the Belgian workingmen from voting. As a matter of fact, the Belgian legislature has been elected by vote of about 1 in 13 of the adult males of the country. The nation was practically run and owned by the rich manufacturers and middle class. King Leopold himself has been in favor of universal manhood suffrage, but the rich bourgeois would not permit it. They elected whom they pleased to the assembly, and their tools passed exactly the laws the masters demanded. The lot of the Belgian factory operative, mechanic or laborer was in consequence harder than that of any other of his class in Europe, except perhaps in Russia. No legislation shortening hours of work or fixing the duties and liabilities of employers could be passed.

This was the distinctive grievance of the common people in Belgium. A special session of parliament had been called to revise the Belgium constitution. The extension of suffrage was the burning question they had to deal with. The chamber of representatives voted against taking it up at all. Then the working people all over Belgium struck work and marched through the streets of the towns rioting, fighting and demanding a revision of the vote of the representatives under threat of revolution. There were fights between the police and the workingmen and women. The first martyr to the cause of universal suffrage was a woman in Jolimont, who was killed by a policeman's sword stroke while she was working for the right of men to vote.

Dynamite was brought to bear to enforce the strikers' demand for manhood suffrage. In staid old Ghent there was a tremendous riot. The strikers drove off the police who tried to disperse them, and it was not till a military troop arrived and charged them that they scattered. In Antwerp the very women and children left their homes and marched through the streets with guns in their hands to help the downtrodden workingman gain his rights. The only thing that at all detracts from the story is the fact that in many instances the downtrodden workingman got crazy drunk and acted shamefully.

There is scarcely a shadow of doubt that in a few days more a revolution would have occurred and Belgium been proclaimed a republic. But the members of the chamber of representatives, frightened out of their senses, huddled together in a hurry and decided that they would take up the question of suffrage at this session and do it immediately. Then, with a dynamite bomb practically under their seats, they quickly passed an act granting suffrage to all male Belgians 21 years old and over, but giving two votes to heads of families who own a certain amount of property and three to those who in addition to property have also a certain amount of learning. The politico-industrial strikers accept that for the present, and so one of the great historic steps in the march of human progress was taken. The strikers say they will agitate peacefully till they obtain the rest of their demands, which is plain manhood suffrage without any frills.

If the chamber of representatives had persisted in its refusal to revise the suffrage law, the streets of Brussels would have run with blood. An army of 25,000 desperate strikers stood waiting to enforce their right to vote by fighting for it. We congratulate the working people of Belgium on their great victory. We approve of all they did except getting drunk. It was a labor strike to gain political rights.

The law under which Secretary Carlisle may cease to give out gold certificates was passed in 1882. It provided that whenever gold coin in a sum of not less than $20 should be presented at the United States treasury the presenter should receive in return therefor treasury notes of a denomination not less than $20, certifying that on demand the treasury would again pay out the gold coin. These gold certificates, interchangeable with the gold, have circulated instead of it, thus preventing the wear and tear of the coin. The same law of 1882 provides, however, that when the gold reserve in the United States treasury shall fall below $100,000,000 the secretary shall cease paying out the gold certificates in exchange for gold coin. This provision of the act prevents speculators from draining the treasury of its gold and holding it for their own purposes.

There seems to be a general tendency among civilized nations to lower the birth rate. In Hamburg in 1892 there were 3,300 fewer births than deaths, not counting at all the deaths from cholera, which numbered 10,919, a terrible record for one city.

Since the middle of February, 1892, we have sent out of the country nearly $100,000,000 in gold. But we shall get considerable of it back during the World's fair this season.

NAVAJOS LOOSE.

Bad Indians Leave Their Reservation.

HAVE FOUGHT TWO BATTLES

Cowboys Found a Deadly Ambush In a Canyon.

Eight White Men Were Killed by a Flank Movement—A Desperate Band of 250 Navajos Start on a Raid Into New Mexico—Ranches South of Durango Besieged by Bloodthirsty Reds—Troops May Be Sent to the Scene—Three Thousand Indians Ready to Break Out.

DENVER, April 29.—The long threatened war of the Navajo Indians against the settlers of the country in the vicinity of their lands has come at last, and with it the death of eight settlers.

Such was the startling news received by Adjutant General Kennedy. Lieutenant Plummer, Indian agent of the Navajos, telegraphed that eight white men had been murdered by the Indians, who are now at war with the settlers. He declared that the situation is a very critical one and asked that the troops be called out to prevent further bloodshed. The telegram was addressed to Governor Waite, but he is out of the city, and the matter was referred by Secretary Lovering to the adjutant general.

NAVAJO IN FIGHTING TRIM.

Lieutenant Plummer stated that the people below Durango are in a wild state of excitement and grave fears are entertained lest the Indians should continue their warfare along the valley. In his message the lieutenant states that two battles have been fought already.

The first was early Thursday morning, when five men were killed—all settlers—while at another encounter three more whites lost their lives, and further bloodshed is anticipated.

Troops May Be Sent.

The adjutant general forwarded the information to the war department at Washington, and it is not unlikely that orders will be issued to-day authorizing the removal of the troops now quartered at Fort Logan. They can act outside of the state, and would be of more avail in a conflict with the Indians than state troops.

Adjutant General Kennedy was inclined to regard the situation with a good deal of concern, although expressing the belief that the trouble would not extend very far north. He declined to give copies of the telegrams received and sent by him, stating that it was contrary to orders. In speaking of the affair he said there are 250 bucks who are raising the disturbance.

"They are all mounted and equipped," said he, "with the best repeating rifles and have ample supplies for a long war. They are a bad lot and revel in plunder and murder. There has been ill feeling among them for a long time, and it has at last come to a head. The settlers down in that country and the Indians never could get along in peace. The Indians are continually plundering and stealing from the whites, who have submitted to the thefts until the past few days.

"The present conflict was precipitated by the resistance of the whites to the depredations of a band of warriors, who raided the stock of the cattlemen.

"They drove off a large herd of cattle, which they took to the mountains. This so incensed the stockmen that they organized a large force of cowboys and went to recover the cattle.

Ambushed In the Canyon.

"The Indians fled on the approach of the cowboys at first and the cattlemen were rejoicing in what they looked upon as a very easy victory, and after they had secured their cattle started to return to their ranches. They had proceeded but a very short distance, however, when they were attacked from the flank as they were passing through a sort of shallow canyon by the entire band of 250.

A NAVAJO AT HOME.

"A desperate encounter followed, in which five cowboys were killed and, it is believed, a number of Indians. The red men, of course, had the advantage and from their vantage points up above their adversaries fought with telling effect upon the cattlemen, who were finally repulsed.

"They took with them a portion of the herd which they had recovered and repossessed. The Indians by this time were thoroughly aroused and started on a marauding expedition across the country."

The reservation of the Navajos is a large one, covering some 12,000 square miles in the northwestern corner of New Mexico and northeastern Arizona, and extends up to the southern line of Colorado. On this there are thousands of Indians who are liable to go on the warpath.

The band of 250 started from the reservation over in Arizona, crossed the line into New Mexico, going due east to a town called Jennett, going thence on the San Juan river and are now in that vicinity.

Dispatches from Durango say: Three hundred Navajo Indians, painted, Tom White's trading post mission at Hog Back on the San Juan river near Webb's ranch. The homes of other settlers are surrounded by Indians.

James Hand arrived from the scene of action, which is about 70 miles south of Durango, and after securing a supply of ammunition for the settlers exchanged teams and returned at once. Agent Bartholomew visited the Indian encampment regarding the situation this morning, but as the Navajos are beyond his jurisdiction he can do nothing.

War Department Ordered Troops to Move.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—A telegram was received from Agent Bartholomew at the Southern Ute agency in Colorado, stating that serious complications were arising on the San Juan river between Navajos and the settlers, that Indian messengers had been sent to the reporting information that the Navajos had surrounded several white families some 70 miles southward of the Southern Ute agency. Agent Bartholomew states that the Utes chiefs offered them friendly offices to restrain the Navajos and asked whether he should take them with him.

The commissioner of Indian affairs replied approving this suggestion to accept the friendly offices of the Southern Utes chiefs.

Governor Thornton of New Mexico telegraphed from Santa Fe to Secretary Smith as follows:

Last week the Navajo Indians left their reservation and murdered Citizen Welsh in San Juan county. I notified Agent Plummer and asked his assistance. Have just received the following telegram signed by five prominent citizens:

The undersigned citizens of Farmington, by request of Lieutenant Plummer, Navajo agent, ask that you send military aid immediately to help suppress the outbreak in San Juan county. The lives of all our people are in immediate danger. Believing the danger imminent, we ask that the military be immediately sent upon the ground.

THORNTON, Governor.

These telegrams were immediately transmitted to the secretary of war by Acting Secretary Chandler with a request that steps be taken to afford military relief.

The war department has telegraphed General Cook, department of Arizona, to send troops immediately to the scene of trouble.

Bank Tracks Make a Forger.

JERSEY CITY, April 29.—Detectives have been watching the home of Henry Shaw, a bookkeeper for French & Wood, woolen importers, New York, and have shadowed their vigil. It is charged that Shaw and Henry Kevlon of South Brooklyn, who was assistant bookkeeper for French & Wood, by forgery and embezzlement, defrauded the firm out of $30,000. It is thought that Shaw and Kevlon are now on their way to Australia. Mrs. Shaw, the fugitive's mother, says she is able and willing to pay the $30,000. She attributes her son's downfall to race tracks.

Arms For the Militia Sent.

DENVER, April 29.—On advices received from Durango that the Navajo Indians were moving rapidly north from Farmington, N. M., toward the Colorado line, Governor Waite ordered a special train over the Rio Grande to carry 200 stands of arms and 50,000 rounds of ammunition to the local military company at Durango, which is ordered out. The entire 10 companies of the Colorado national guard have been ordered to report for duty ready to move at once to the scene of trouble.

Saved by Gallant Sailors.

FORT LEE, N. J., April 29.—Miss Lizzie Doyle, daughter of the telegraph operator here, was saved from drowning in the Hudson river Friday night by the men on the U. S. S. Chicago. The young woman had been rowed out to the warship to deliver the supper of one of the officers. At the foot of the gangway the boat was swamped. The man who rowed the boat clung to the girl until some of the man of warsmen came to the rescue. The girl's clothes exhausted when taken aboard the ship.

The Rebellious Waiters.

NEW YORK, April 29.—Already many of the managers and proprietors of hotels have acceded to the waiters' demands for increased wages, the privilege of wearing mustaches and one day off every two weeks. A notice was posted at the headquarters of the International Hotel Employees association yesterday that the following hotels were closed for members of the association: Holland House, Grand hotel, Hotel Brunswick and Delmonico's.

Civil Service Changes.

NEW YORK, April 29.—The state civil service commissioners have transferred, from the two-year eligible list of Mayor Boody, about 70 places in the Brooklyn civil service from the noncompetitive to the competitive class. The commission took steps toward creating positions in the state hospitals to prepare young physicians for the competitive examinations for assistant physicians in these institutions.

Engine Dashed Into the River.

CHICAGO, April 29.—Owing to carelessness an Illinois Central train dashed upon the Ninety-second Street bridge over the Calumet river, as the latter was turning to let a boat pass. John Jenson, the bridgetender, was in the river and nearly drowned. The engine and tender crashed through the bridge into the river, the engineer and fireman escaping by swimming ashore.

Demonstration at Dishler's Acquittal.

ROME, N. Y., April 29.—David A. Dishler, who has been on trial for aiding in the escape of Dancoes Thomas O'Brien from Keeper Brick of Dannemora prison at Utica on April 20 of last year, was acquitted. The jury was out three hours. This quashes the indictments found against him in Albany county. When the verdict was announced there was a wild demonstration.

The Gypsies Have an Heiress.

KANSAS CITY, April 29.—Ella Day, who when 3 years old, 13 years ago, was kidnaped by gypsies and who was not recovered until six years afterward, has again disappeared. The police believe she has again been kidnaped to obtain the fortune of $20,000 left her by her grandmother.

Relief Fund For Cyclone Sufferers.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 29.—The total number of persons who died in the cyclone now reaches 56 and the injured number about 250, about 10 per cent of them being fatally injured. Over $10,000 has already been subscribed as a relief fund.

Look Out For This Train.

FONDA, N. Y., April 29.—Superintendent Barrington of the Mohawk division of the Canal Hudson road notified all agents that the De Witt Clinton train would pass over his division Monday afternoon en route for the World's fair.

The Bank Suspended Again.

AMHERST, Ga., April 29.—The Bank of America has again suspended payment. The officers claim the embarrassment is only temporary, owing to a misunderstanding with their New York correspondents.

The National Republican League.

NEW YORK, April 29.—The officers of the National Republican League have completed the programme for the National Republican Reform convention at Louisville, beginning May 2.

DRIVES A GOLDEN NAIL.

Mrs. Potter Palmer to Complete the Woman's Building.

THE TURKISH MOSQUE DEDICATED.

The Telegraphic Key of Gold and Ivory Which the President Is to Press Arrives—Massachusetts the First State to Formally Open Its Building—Sunday Question.

CHICAGO, April 29.—Mrs. Potter Palmer will drive a golden nail into the Woman's building at the World's fair this afternoon to signify the completion of the building. In presiding at the meetings of the board of lady managers Mrs. Palmer has become expert with the gavel, and her friends think that the handsome lady president will be able to hit the nail on the head and drive it into the arch of the assembly room with exactly three well directed blows of the hammer.

The exercises will be simple. Mrs. Elias Richards of Montana will deliver the precious nail in its silver casket and also a gold and silver hammer, and Mrs. Palmer will thereupon proceed with her own fair hands to finish the Woman's building herself. As a matter of fact the golden nail will be immediately withdrawn and returned to its place in the breastpin of which it forms a part, and the pin will then be presented to Mrs. Palmer.

The Massachusetts State building, which is a reproduction of the Old John Hancock House that stood in Boston during the days when the town was making history, has been formally opened. Executive Commissioner E. C. Hovey, who has had entire charge of the building and the arrangements for the opening, issued a number of invitations to Massachusetts people in the city, World's fair officials and others. Yesterday afternoon they gathered in the spacious rooms of the antiquated looking structure and enjoyed the hospitality of the Bay state. Massachusetts is the first state to formally open its building, until it reached the mosque, when Hadji Selim, who officiated as muezzin, appeared on the portico of the minaret and welcomed the guests in the name of Allah. Then with bare tread the faithful entered into the sacred precinct of the edifice, where behind closed doors were performed mysterious rites unknown to any save themselves.

Feasting and merrymaking were then in order, and the faithful shuffled through the sand in their slippered feet to the door of the great bazaar, which was thrown open, exposing to view long lines of tables groaning with rare Turkish delicacies. Turkish national beverages flowed freely, confections were bestowed lavishly, and toasts were given and responded to.

The Gold and Ivory Key.

There arrived at Director General Davis' office by express the button which President Cleveland will touch on Monday to start the machinery of the exposition. It is in the shape of a modern telegraph key and is of solid gold, with an ivory button on the handle. It sits on a pyramid of blue, gold and plush 12 inches high. The colors represent those of the American and Spanish nations. On the base of the pyramid are the figures 1492—1892 in silver.

Seventeen Coreans who arrived caused much staring in the railway station. The party comprised 10 Corean musicians, a minister to Washington and his private secretary, a royal commissioner to the World's fair and his secretary and three attaches.

They all wore black flowerpot hats, and the majority of them wore long white gowns cut Turkish fashion, with sandals on their feet and white canvas wound around their legs. They are all of the blue blood of Corea and most of them can talk good English.

The trouble between the piano exhibitors at the World's fair and Director of Music Thomas is still far from being settled. The committee appointed by the national commissioners to settle the affair had another meeting for the purpose of hearing Mr. Thomas' side of the difficulty. The meeting was held with closed doors.

Guarding the Old Liberty Bell.

The old liberty bell has arrived. The train bearing the bell was met at the state line by a special train, on which was the reception committee and the city officials, and their car was at once attached to the return train. The welcome which the Chicago committee gave to the escort was all that could be desired. The members assured the Philadelphians that Chicago appreciated the honor that had been conferred by bringing the bell here and allowing it to remain six months; that they would guard it as carefully as they would their lives and homes and return it safe.

Some 2,000 people assembled at the Union depot to welcome the bell on its arrival, and their cheers attracted many thousands more from the streets. All during the earlier portion of the night people passed by in review. The members of the city council met the officials at the depot, and the entire party went to the Auditorium hotel, where apartments had been secured. A strong detachment of picked police were detailed to assist the Philadelphia custodians in guarding the cherished relic.

The City Filling Up.

World's fair visitors are filling the down town hotels. Delegations from all parts of the world are arriving to be on hand for the opening ceremonies. The vice president of the United States and family, and the governor of Illinois with his staff of 22 officers are at the Palmer House. At the Auditorium, rooms were refused to many during the day on account of the large reservations for the Philadelphia party that arrived last evening, and for the Ducal party that is to arrive today. At the other hotels the arrivals were extraordinarily numerous. Governor and Mrs. Altgeld have rooms next the Stevensons at the Palmer. Near his apartments are the quarters of his staff officers, nearly all of whom are now here. Among the arrivals at Richelieu who come to be present at the opening of the fair, was the Duchess of Buckingham.

The President In Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 29.—President Cleveland arrived safely from New York. Concerning the slight cut on his forehead received before startin., it was stated that the president did not feel it all.

Richard Storms In Jail Too.

HACKENSACK, N. J., April 29.—Richard Storms, a Rutger's college student and a son of Herman Storms of Park Ridge, whom Evangelist Huntsman T. Mnason and others of his followers conspired to defame and defraud, is in jail here, charged with petty larceny and assisting in the conspiracy. Richard left college and visited Mnason, who asked Richard to go to his home and bring to the jail some books and a sum of money hidden in the cellar. Richard did as requested, but before he left Park Ridge he was arrested. Richard expected to graduate in June, and he takes his arrest much at heart, despite the fact that Mnason says that such happenings are according to God's desires and for the best in the end.

Crafty Poolroom Men.

ALBANY, April 29.—The pool dealers have found a way to evade the law. About a month ago the Municipal Telegraph company filed articles of incorporation. The company includes all the big poolroom keepers, and now announces that it will transmit money or messages to any race track in the United States. The company as a safeguard further announces that it will not transmit any money if known that it is to be placed for betting purposes.

Saw Her Mother Attempt Suicide.

PATERSON, N. J., April 29.—Mrs. James Wiley, a young married woman attempted suicide by hanging herself in the kitchen. A butcher cut the rope. Mrs. Wiley's little daughter saw her mother hanging with an overturned chair near her feet. The child at once gave the alarm. The physicians think she will die.

Died and Were Buried Together.

JERSEY CITY, April 29.—Mrs. Adaline Pond, aged 71, and Miss Louise S. Pond, aged 50, were buried together from the home of Mrs. Pond's only son. Mother and daughter died within 24 hours of each other.

World's Fair Special Train Service.

SYRACUSE, April 29.—Grafton's World's fair special train service was inaugurated here. Ninety invited guests, many of them prominent New Yorkers, comfortably filled the train.

THE ESCAPED CONVICTS

Believed to Have Been Recognized In Massachusetts.

WALKED BOLDLY THROUGH TOWN.

Citizens Think the Men Were Roehl and Pallister, and That They Are Making For Canada Through the Berkshire Hills. Securing the Mountains.

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., April 29.—Two men, thought to be the Sing Sing murderers, boldly walked through Main street here and were recognized by citizens. Later word came from Alford that two men answering the same description had been skulking along near a wall on the outskirts of that town. It is thought that the men are making for Canada via the Berkshire hills.

Sheriff Heffstanger is unable to conduct the search of Mount Washington for Roehl and Pallister, the escaped Sing Sing murderers, but bands of hardy farmers and sturdy woodmen have scoured portions of the mountain sides and explored caves and thickets, but with no result.

Warden Brown Removed.

SING SING, April 29.—Warden Brown has been removed from the wardenship of Sing Sing prison by Superintendent of Prisons Austin Lathrop. It is said that it was on the strength of the story in the New York Times that Lathrop took this course. Principal Keeper Connaughton has full charge of the prison until Warden Durston arrives on Monday. Warden Brown denies The Times' story.

They Have Several Clews.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The authorities at Sing Sing stated that the search for Murderers Rohle and Pallister was still going on. Several clews have been received, but they have not resulted in the capture of the refugees.

The End of the Celebration.

NEW YORK, April 29.—The Chamber of Commerce banquet put an appropriate capsheaf on the festivities incident to the naval review. Among the invited guests present were the foreign and United States admirals and other naval officers, the secretary of the navy, the governors of New York and Illinois, the mayor of New York and members of the foreign legations. The banquet was held in the main dining room of the Hotel Waldorf, fronting on Fifth avenue. Covers were laid for about 400. When it is mentioned that the price set for the dinner was $25 a plate, it will readily be understood that the dinner was worthy of the occasion. The oratory was short, witty and pointed. International fraternity was the general burden of the speeches.

Science Progress

DIAMOND MAKING.

Genuine Diamonds Artificially Produced by a French Scientist.

Since 1889 Mr. Moisan has been considering the subject of the artificial production of diamonds. Not long ago in examining a Mexican meteorite he observed in it, besides microscopic transparent diamonds, some very small black ones, together with pieces of brown coal. He then burned particles of diamonds—a rather expensive experiment—and found in examining the ashes that the purest diamond contains traces of iron. Knowing that, like other metals, iron when melting dissolves a certain quantity of carbon, and knowing besides that iron as well as silver and water increases in volume in cooling from the liquid to the solid state, Mr. Moisan attempted to produce diamonds by using iron, with the help of a high temperature and an enormous pressure.

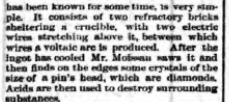
At the last sitting of the Academie des Sciences Mr. Moisan explained how he managed to produce black diamonds and very small white ones in using an electric oven heated to a very high temperature. He made two different series of experiments in using alternately cast iron and melted silver as dissolvents for carbon. From the former he obtained crystals thoroughly identical with a carbonado or genuine black diamond. From the latter resulted transparent crystals having the appearance and properties of genuine white diamonds, but these microscopic crystals were so few that he could not manage to gather more than fractions of milligrams.

His method of production is as follows: A cylinder of soft iron being filled up with charbon de sucre (coal of sugar) is thrown into a crucible which contains melting iron brought to a temperature of 3,000 degrees centigrade by means of an electric oven. Under the influence of such heat the cylinder melts at once and dissolves a large quantity of carbon. The crucible is then taken out of the oven and plunged into a pail of water. This causes a coating of solid iron to be quickly formed. When this coating has become of a dark red, it is taken out of water and allowed to cool in the open air. As the temperature of the iron (inside), still in a liquid state, lowers, it yields a part of the carbon, which it had previously dissolved, and as the dilation of this carbon is checked by the coating which keeps it imprisoned an enormous pressure occurs, causing that which was smore (sugar) to crystallize.

The electric oven (see illustration), which has been known for some time, is very simple. It consists of two refractory bricks sheltering a crucible, with two electric wires stretching above it, between which wires a voltaic arc is produced. After the ingot has cooled Mr. Moissan saws it and then finds on the edges some crystals of the size of a pin's head, which are diamonds. Acids are then used to destroy surrounding substances.

The Jewelers' Circular, in commenting upon the foregoing, thinks that if we consider that successful results have only been obtained on a small scale and at very great expense it is evident that the production of diamonds is for the present only interesting from a scientific point of view. Still Mr. Moissan deserves praise for having accomplished what scientists have been vainly attempting for years. In the first one Nos. 1 and 2 represent white diamonds more than 500 times enlarged, and Nos. 3 and 4 black diamonds more than 200 times enlarged, all produced by Mr. Moissan.



THE ELECTRIC OVEN.

Air as Fuel.

A revival of the interest in the practical use of air as fuel is remarked upon, and the process which is now claimed to be the most successful in accomplishing this end is described as neither complex nor costly. Starting with the well known understanding that air is mixed with coal gas and with hydrocarbon vapors, and the compound, when burned, generates a much greater heat than if the air was absent—a powerful air blast being also a great economizer in smelting and reducing ores—the important fact presented in this new method is that the fuel is the air itself, which in a powerful blast is directed upon an incandescent substance, as coal made white hot, pure carbon or any other materials that can be made to glow. Coal, hydrocarbons, etc., may be employed to give the initial incandescence, but once the blast strikes the luminous body the utmost intensity of heat is secured, apparently by the combustion of the air, and may be maintained for an indefinite period by merely pressing the incandescence of the surface. This latter, states The Safety Valve, may be done by manipulation of the surface beneath to incandescence and with some slight renewal of combonaceous material.

Fallacies Concerning Electricity.

The current fallacies as to electricity which are believed in by many unscientific people of course are not recognized by scientific electricians. Many persons believe and even assert that electricity will supersede steam, being ignorant of the fact that electricity requires some potent expenditure of power to generate it, and that the electrical machines or dynamos which produce these results have to be worked by some agency, such as a steam engine, a gas engine or by water power. One great advantage, however, is that the electrical energy, once produced, can be conveyed long distances through properly protected wires.

In Germany aluminium cravats are advertised as "silver white, featherweight, washing well and wearing forever."

GOOD HEALTH

CYCLING FOR CHILDREN.

At What Age Should a Child Begin to Ride?—How Far May He Ride?

The question whether young children between the ages, say, of 6 and 12 should be allowed to cycle and if allowed how much they may indulge in the pastime without incurring the risk of injury is one of considerable interest. This, like most medical questions, is one on which no strict or invariable rules can be laid down. But the following excellent advice has been given by Professor E. B. Turner in The Bicycling News:

While each case must be judged on its own merits, one fundamental principle may be clearly enunciated—namely, that no young child with any organic weakness, whether of heart, lungs, joints or nervous system, should be allowed to mount a machine under any circumstances whatever.

For most children the age of 6 is quite soon enough to begin to ride and too soon for many. Great care should be taken in choosing and fitting a machine to a young rider. Any old castoff crock will not do and may even produce disease and deformity. The machine selected should be light, of course, the gearing low enough to admit of a short crank throw (4 inches is generally simple for a child of 6 or 7) and the saddle and spring properly adapted to the weight and size of the rider.

But most important of all is the length of reach. This should be quite short. The child should be able easily to touch the pedal at its lowest point with the heel. Nothing is more injurious than a reach so long that the unfortunate boy appears as it riding on a rail, just touching the pedals with the tips of his toes.

Then the position must be carefully studied. Young growing tissues are easily distorted, and a saddle too far back and handles too far forward would certainly cause a permanent curvature in the person's hump. The peak of the saddle two inches behind the crank axle and the handles so brought round and back that the child can sit perfectly upright on the machines are two things that must be insisted on in buying either a bicycle or a tricycle for a young rider.

But when the child is pronounced fit and is provided with an ideal machine the very important question arises, How far may he ride it? The only thing that can be said is that anything more than moderate fatigue is injurious. A young growing child suffers much from overexertion. Though at the finish of a ride he may seem fairly fresh, still if he has done too much the results will be apparent soon after, and a sleepless night and distaste for food will show that the system is poisoned by the products of its own waste.

The great test as to the distance which is safe and right for a child to ride is to observe: How he sleeps the night after the ride. 2. How he takes his food after. If he sleeps well, eats well and is bright and lively the next day, the riding has not been pushed too far and has done good, not harm, but if he is feverish and restless during the night, or is languid, dull and thirsty the next day, then it is certain that too much has been accomplished, and that such ride, if persisted in, will lead to mischief.

Milk For Invalids.

The use of milk and eggs as a diet or an aid in building up a patient is often a trial to the nurse. Many patients will take milk slightly warm, or even hot, and digest it readily, when cold milk cannot be thought of. The taste left in the mouth of many persons after a drink of milk, especially a small quantity, often causes the patient to dislike it. To obviate this difficulty, that is an excellent plan to rinse the mouth with cold, cool or hot water, as preferred, before and after drinking milk. The secret of success in giving milk and eggs to those who would rather not take them is to prepare them in different ways. For a delicate stomach the white of the egg, well beaten, added to hot or cold milk and seasoned to taste, will often prove tempting when even the slight of the yolk with milk is unpleasant. After a time the yolk may be used, the white of the egg being added last, and not stirred into the milk, but left at the top of the glass for ornament.

ETIQUETTE

FOR THE WEDDING SEASON.

Matters Partly of Friendly Sentiment Connected With the Ceremony.

If a bride is still young and her maids less so, she may, according to Good Form, present them with gowns, hats, gloves and shoes for the wedding, but this is not obligatory nor even a favored custom. It is only a matter of personal preference and generosity.

For a large church wedding the bride furnishes her bridesmaids each with a few invitations in stamped envelopes for their own personal friends whom they desire to invite to witness the pageant. In these envelopes a bridesmaid places her visiting card. Further hospitality than this is a matter for friendly sentiment to arrange.

If the wedding is likely to attract a crowd of strangers, it is customary and proper to issue with each invitation a card of admission to the church and thereby prevent a crush. If admission cards are provided, these instead of invitations are furnished bridesmaids to give to their friends. Such cards are seldom required outside of large cities.

Sometimes the bouquets carried by the bridesmaids are the groom's gift, but such offerings from him are a thing of sentiment rather than usage. The bride's family provides them if the groom does not, also boutonnieres for the best man and ushers.

Items About Letters.

"The practice of writing letters or notes at hotels on paper with a view of the house is beneath comment," according to a feminine authority on etiquette. "No man or woman of culture would commit such an error. It is a convenience that first class hotels should furnish and is not of cheap advertisement that does no credit to the proprietor or the hotel patrons." Nevertheless it is a convenience of which not a few people, usually people as well bred, avail themselves. More generally practiced is the following from the same source, "When writing letters at a country house, stamp them before they are collected for the post; your host is not supposed to pay your postage. Out of town people usually have a heavy mail and can spare the time to attend to the minor details of their guests' correspondence."

How to Lace a Corset.

Those clever Frenchwomen have discovered a new way of lacing their corsets, or rather they have adopted it from the Russians. Of course it is horrid to lace tight, but if you will do it this new way is the only way that won't hurt, because it calls for three pieces of lacings, and there isn't the old torturing uniform pressure above and below the waist. You put the first lacing at the top down in the usual way on each side until you reach two eyelet holes above the waist. Do the same thing with the second, lacing from the bottom, leaving two eyelet holes free below the waist. In these four eyelets—four on each side—draw just the third lace, that which is to be drawn. Don't you see you can leave the upper and lower parts as loose as you choose, tying each to your forefort? Then that you can draw in your waist with the middle lacing quite independently. A woman lacing her corset this way once will never lace it differently. No matter how loose she wears it, this is the only proper method.—Anna Vernon Dorsey in New York Press.

The Dressing of Children.

There is a constant temptation to dress children in the fantastic garb which suits their style and adds piquancy to their beauty. Mothers would pause to reflect, however, that on of two things must happen—either the little one is morbidly sensitive and resents the conspicuous attire or it is inordinately vain and vapid. Either is unwholesome and dangerous. Probably these reflections account for the extreme to which many parents have gone in a reverse way, the mastery of Christian Scott-Siddons said recently, "A private park in a fashionable quarter will show nowadays amid the many groups of children that the majority are simply and tastefully dressed, and only a very small minority attract attention by any eccentricity of garb. Indeed when it comes, as it has of dropping a Dutch cap with flaring wings upon a little girl's head and an Oxford cap upon her brother's, common sense suggests that it is time to halt. —Philadelphia Press.

The Secret of Making Good Biscuits.

The secret of biscuit making is precision and dispatch. Laggards and lazy people are not successful biscuit makers. The best cooks always do the same thing three times—biscuits together, and certainly they are not long about it. The cause of success is that biscuits begin to bake before the effervescent gases have had time to escape or get exhausted. They are live biscuit and are as light and puffy as beaten eggs. The best biscuits are rather small. The very large ones are not likely to be quite so light. They should be baked in a rather quick oven, and to be perfect are a yellowish brown. They must be thoroughly done through, or they are the most unpalatable and unwholesome articles of the bread kind.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Early Home of a Painter.

Elizabeth Strong, the Boston animal painter, is a little, delicate featured woman, with masses of dark hair and keen, observant eyes. Her brother, Joseph Strong, whom Stevenson goes out of his way to praise in The Silverado Squatters, is, as Stevenson did not add, the novelist's brother-in-law. The old Strong home in Monterey, Cal., was a charming mixture of Bohemian whims and artistic tastes cast against a Spanish background. Among these bizarre surroundings moved the girlish figure between her two dear kept as models. Betsey B. used to say lovingly and languishingly, "Even Lizzie Strong can't paint such a picture as she is herself."—New York Times.
